Sound as are most of the various plans for promoting ownership of stock of American corporations by their own employes it is natural that, after the collapse in the securities market last fall, economists and business men should have endeavored to ascertain whether any considerable number of workers lost part of their investments, and also whether the policy of employe ownership maintains its popularity with corporation managers and employes notwithstanding the developments during the period of strain. The national industrial conference board undertook an inquiry into this important subject. The conclusion reached by it are given in a report which is at once illustrating and gratifying.

Of the 150 stock subscription plans for employes covered by the survey, four have been discontinued, but not as a result of the crash in the securities market. Three plans were being modified because of lessons learned in the crash. All the others withstood the ordeal remarkably well.

The stock ownership policy arranged for employes, it appears, is gaining steadily in popularity. It has not failed to yield the benefits originally expected of it. The impression that investors of this class have been selling their parcels of stock quite generally is declared to be false, as is the notion prevalent in some circles that employes and managers have grown skeptical of the economic or moral advantages of the policy. The truth is, according to the report, that owners of stock who are employes of the company issuing the stock are as a class more efficient and more keenly interested in the prosperity of the enterprise than are their fellow workers as a class.

There is good reason to believe that the return of normal prosperity will be followed by increased efforts to extend among workers the policy of owning stock in the companies which employ them. That policy cannot be regarded longer as an experiment.—Chicago News.

25 YEARS AGO

News Items as published in The Union and in The Banner, issues of Sept. 21, 1905

Two ears of corn were brought into The Banner office last Saturday by I. O. Retherford. They were grown by Jeff Stevens. The longest ear was 10 inches long and 11 1-2 inches in circumference. Mr. Retherford says it takes only 48 of such ears to make a bushel.

The lumber and planing mill of Duke Brothers in Clanton was destroyed by fire Saturday morning.

Mrs. E. A. Matthews and Miss Emmett left Tuesday morning for Marion, where the latter will attend school.

Miss Velma Debardeleben of Tuskegee is visiting her sister, Mrs. E. M. Pinckard.

Mrs. W. M. McDaniel returned home Tuesday from a visit to relatives in Montgomery.

The public school of Clanton continues to grow and flourish. The enrollment at present exceeds a hundred.

Vernon, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Parker died September 13.

The Banner of this date carried an advertisement of S. E. Norton, who was then a photographer, at Thorsby.

Clyde Davis, acting as Commissioner under the Probate Court, advertised the sale of the Gullahorn lands and estate for partition and division between Cliff and Mary Gullahorn.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Every once in so often I am reminded of what little consequence is a mere name, yet what a great thing it is to have a name that is honorable and honored, that really stands for something. "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," seems to express what I often feel in this respect. The other day a fellow was relating something to another, and attempted to tell him where he read it. After stumbling over the name of my column, he finally said: I read it in The Man Behind the Door.

I see lots of sights on the corner. If I were behind the door I doubt if I would see very much; but I guess you will agree with me that I would be sure to hear an ear full now and then.

A couple of nice looking young ladies, strangers in Clanton, drove a big blue Linco-mobile up to the curb in front of Calloway's, and ordered dopes. When they had assauged their thirst, they lit up (cigarettes) backed out, stepped on the wildcat, cut the corner in the courthouse square, and were gone. Nothing unusual about that.

Did you see that? one man asked another. What? Them girls smoking cigarattes. No. I never seed but one woman smoking a cigarette in my life, and that was a little nigger gal.

When I went to church Sunday morning, I noticed a distinguished looking elderly gentleman standing in front. As is my custom to meet and welcome strangers at church, I went over, offered my hand and my name. He took my hand, and also my breath, when he said, "my name is Daniel Webster." My excitement was soon over. Roland Taylor walked up just at the moment and told me Mr. Webster was here representing the Loudonville Flour Mills, of Loudonville, Ohio. I found out that Mr. Webster is a great church worker, being the leader of the choir for many years in his home church at Loudonville. He has been here near two weeks now, and has made many friends. Look him up. You will enjoy meeting him and hearing him talk.

Rumors have been going around this week saying that the recent election for Mayor in Clanton would not "hold water." I have heard a dozen different things that somebody was going to do about it one way or another. All of it sounds like foolishness to me. What difference does it make if a candidate for mayor did not file an expense account of his campaign? It is a certain fact that none of the candidates for Mayor created any corrupt practice by the use of money illegally in their campaigns. We have had the election. Let us abide by the result, and get down to business.

I notice that the grand jury last week offered some criticism of the way the people at the county poor house are being taken care of. I recall that this matter has been mentioned by a letter or two in this paper from citizens of the county recently. Chilton County is certainly able to take care of the unfortunates at the poor house in a decent and creditable manner. I hope the recommendations of the grand jury will be the cause of better treatment for those who are unable to take care of themselves.

Maurice Lande and Ben Margolis closed their stores Tuesday to go to Birmingham and celebrate the Jewish New Year. The Leader is putting on its Eleventh Birthday Anniversary Sale, beginning Friday of this week. "I believe in starting the New Year off right," said Mr. Lande, "and I am doing it by offering my customers the greatest opportunity of the season to buy merchandise at prices in line with cheap cotton." You have doubtless gotten out of your mailbox already one of the Leader's circulars announcing this great anniversary sale.

All agricultural authorities are agreed that the price of cotton in Chilton County would right now be one to two cents more per pound if we grew staple of one inch or more in length. I think it is important that our farmers look into this matter. Talk to your county agent about it. He knows some things that will make you see through this business, and can help you to select verieties of cotton that will grade longer staple.

Clanton now has a new crop of young doctors coming on. Sam Upchurch and Charles Moore are studying medicine at Vanderbilt University in Nashville. Arthur Johnson, Jr., left this week to take up his pre-medicine course at Tulane in New Orleans. By the time these young men get through college and ready to practice, there will doubtless be some gaps in the ranks into which they can step right into the practice of their profession.

The Wrangell (Alaska) Sentinel, of September 11, which has just reached us, tells of the death of James W. Pritchett, who was publisher of that paper. Mr. Pritchett died in a hospital in Vancouver, British Columbia, on Monday, September 8th.

James W. Pritchett was born in Fayette, Alabama, December 28, 1878. He was the son of a Confederate Army officer. Left fatherless when a lad, he was compelled to forego schooling in order that he might support his mother and sister. By working nights he prepared himself for college. Before he entered college he took up newspaper work. This vocation carried him to different parts of the United States and into Mexico.

In 1914 he landed in Alaska, stopping at Skagway about two years as foreman on the Skagway Alaskan. He went to Wrangell in 1916 and bought the Sentinel. He married Miss Eleanor Edmunson in 1918, in Seattle, Washington.

In Wrangell Mr. Pritchett served the community in many ways. He had been town clerk, secretary of the commercial club, member of executive board of the Red Cross, member of Methodist Church, Scottish Rite Mason, B. P. O. E., a Moose, and a Redman.

Before leaving Alabama Mr. Pritchett lived in Clanton for a while. He is remembered here by a number of friends who became acquainted with him.

THORSBY SECTION

(S. E. Norton, Manager)

The Ladies Guild of Thorsby will hold their regular monthly social at the home of Mrs. S. C. Wood on Summit Avenue.

Miss Beulah Russell, who is a student in the Thorsby Institute, received a visit during the week end, from her mother, sister and a young man friend who came along to drive the car. These people live at Pigeon Creek near Greenville, a community which has sent many pupils to T. I.

Mr. A. N. Laurell spent most of the week in Birmingham.

Mrs. Leonard Hayes gave a Bridal Shower last Friday in honor of her sister, Mrs. Walter W. Robinson, formerly Genie Collins. There were about thirty ladies present. The house was decorated with roses and zinnias. As the guests entered they were served to punch by Mrs. Littlejohn. Salad and iced tea were served later. There was a flower contest in which Mrs. McDonald Pearson won the prize in the form of a fine marbled cake. Many useful and beatuful gifts were presented to the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Brown and family spent the week end with friends in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Colley and family of Prattville spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Gray.

We must not forget to mention recent additions to our Thorsby citizenship. Rev. Lockhart announce the arrival of a baby daughter last Friday afternoon. They named her Janie Marie.

Saturday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Billingsley were made happy by the arrival of a seven pound boy, Allen Curtis.

Early Monday morning, word came to our friend Mixon, of the Bank of Thorsby, that his wife, who is with her mother at Union Surings, had become the mother of a seven pound boy. Name not given.

There might be others not yet reported to us.

The entertainment put on by the Ladies Guild of Thorsby at their annual reception for Thorsby Institute teachers students and friends, was unique in that the guests were prominent on the program which consisted chiefly of stunts. Twelve groups were formed, each group consisting of people present whose birthday occured in any given month. Since there were fully 150 persons present there was quite a contingent for each of the twelve months of the year. And plenty of leeway for a varied program. All did well!.

The Praise Service at the Congregational church last Sunday night was greatly enjoyed by all present. Under direction of Miss Thoroman and McArthur and with Gerald Smith to lead the Congregational singing, the singing was spirited, the selection was diginified, tone and quality good and volume excellent. Everybody seemedd to be singing for the joy of it. There is a great value added to church services where the people learn to sing well together.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Regan went to Birmingham for the week end taking with them, Margaret Peterson, for a visit with kinsfolk there. They returned Monday morning.

Mrs. Fred Howard and daughters, Mabel and Lucile, returned Saturday night from a three weeks motor trip. They visited several days in Chicoga, also Milwaukee and Green Bay, Wisconsin. They report having a lovely time and no car trouble during the trip.

We recently received from Fred Howard a present of some of his splendid Japanese Persimmons, which when fully ripe make excellent eating. He says he will have from now on some time an abundant crop of this fruit which once tasted is always enjoyed by most folks. One should see his trees now loaded with fruit.

Dr. G. W. Leslie and family spent Sunday in Thorsby, coming from Bush Hill in Birmingham, where they moved recently.

Miss Nell Shannon, sister of Mrs. Nels Petersen who has been her guest for several weeks, returned to her home at West Point, Georgia, Friday.

UNIVERSITY NEWS BUREAU

University, Ala., Sept. 22.—Dr. Robert E. Tidwell, former state superintendent of education, has assumed his duties as director of the extension division of the University of Alabama.

The new extension director is a native of the hills of Blount County, is a direct descendent of the first settlers of that region, and has been prominent in the educational program of the state during the past 20 years.

In selecting Dr. Tidwell to carry the University of Alabama to the state, Capstone officials have chosen a man who has first hand knowledge of the educational problems of every section of Alabama, they assert. His record is based not only on his experience as a student in the public schools of the state and the University of Alabama, but on 12 years in the state department of education, where he was promoted from one branch to another until he was elect- state superintendent in 1927 to succeed Dr. John Abercrombie, whose term had expired.

As the state superintendent of education Dr. Tidwell did much, it is said, to develop the elementary, junior and high school programs of the state. He also worked with other agencies to increase the annual appropriations for education in the state, and was given much credit for the $4,000,000 increase granted yearly.

Dr. Tidwell comes to the University directly from Columbia University, where he was connected with the faculty, having accepted this position while state superintendent of education.

His new position at the University is said to be one the most important of the University staff. At present there are 3,000 students taking work through the extension unit of the University. The credit gained by this channel is great enough to add another college to the University with a freshman class of 244 people. The records in the extension department show that there is no post office in the state which does not send mail to the extension division.

W. B. CORLEY WRITES ABOUT HEAVY TRAFFIC ON HIGHWAYS

Editor Union-Banner.

Had you noticed the wonderful amount of heavy freight vehicles that are passing over our state highway every day, and almost every hour of the day and night?

One driver of a double-header truck, that he was engineering over the road, told me he was pulling ten tons to the car, or twenty tons in all, while practically all of them carry from 5 to 15 tons.

What is going to be the enevitable outcome of this traffic?

When the winter rains put in their regular appearance, and the earth becomes saturated with water, as it always does, don't you know the concrete paving, of which everyone is proud, will be broken to pieces and the road become a nuisance and a menance, instead of a great convenience and pleasure to motorists.

The superintendent of this road told me some weeks ago that the north end of this road was already giving way to this heavy traffic, and was becoming far from a safe and satisfactory road to drive over.

The United States Supreme Court holds that these roads belong in fee simple to the tax payers, and that no bus line or freight line has anything but a legislative right on them. The roads are the individual and personal property of the people and their rights are permanent, and they possess the right to make rules and regulations governing the traffic, speed, etc.

Now can you tell why or how the person put in charge of these roads by the owners—the people—can allow these most valuable properties of their employers to be thus mutilated and destroyed?

Another thing I will refer to as a "sore spot" among the people is this "matriculation" fee pupils have to pay before they can take advantage of this mysterious "free school" the state boasts so much about. I have been asked any number of times, "What do they do with these fees?" I can not tell them and I wish you would. It is an indirect method of taxation but I don't know why, nor for what purpose.

One thing I think I do know is that the school laws and customs of Alabama are going to be renovated from the bottom up before many years. When I think of our "school doings" that old saying: "You can fool part of the people ome of the time; some of the people all the time; but can't fool all the people all the time."

One thing I would like to see, and that is if the legitimate school funds wouldn't finance a free school system but one month a year, I would like for our old state to do that much, and make it free really, than to howl so much about "our free school system," and then charge to patrons right on under a high sounding name that really amounts to taxation right on.

Don't think I am mad because they got a lick at me or mine. I am too old myself, and so are all my children, to be in line until they set another trap.—W. B. Corley.

One way to help the anti-noise campaign would be to induce Congress to go on a ten-year vacation.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

O'NEAL URGES FARMERS TO GROW BETTER COTTON

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association, is at present urging Alabama farmers to start now in preparing to grow better quality cotton next year. He is doing this because he says farmers of the state are being penalized about $7,000.-000.00 this year because of short staple and poor quality.

In a prepared statement Mr. O'Neal presents the following facts:

"One great problem in cotton production is to produce a quality product that the world demands. Our Experiment Station has shown us that we can produce in cotton a quality product. There are sections of the state that are producing 15-16 to one inch cotton. The Farm Bureau is securing these seed for the county organizations.

"The United States Department of Agriculture tells us that 44.8 per cent of cotton grown in Alabama in 1929 was less than 7-8 inch in length, and again they tell us that the last two years Alabama had the highest percentage of short staple of any of the cotton producing states. Formerly we grew cotton a fair length, which was accepted by the mills as supplying their requirements.

"Statistics show us that American cotton has not the demand as formerly in the world markets due to the poor quality and is coming in direct competition with India and other countries that are improving the quality of their cotton. Just to show you what our Alabama mills think of our cotton I am quoting you a letter that I received from Mr. Thad Holt, secretary of the Alabama Industrial Board, whom I asked to get this information for me.

"With has permission, I quote herewithwith a letter under date of January 21st, 1930, from Mr. J. Craig Smith, assistant, vice-president Avondale Mills, Birmingham.

"Last year the Avondale mills shipped approximately 30,000 bales of cotton from the Western states, and the freight averaged about $4 per bale higher than the freight on Alabama cotton. Just to give you an example of how Alabama cotton was penalized last year on account of staple, at the same time when at Boaz, Albertville, Cullman, Hanceville and many other points cotton was selling at 2c off the spot month F. O. B., shipping point, cotton in Tennessee, where the staple was 15-16 to 1 inch was selling at even with the spot month of 1-2c on. In other words, the farmers were netting from $10.00 to $12.50 per bale more than the Alabama farmers.

"This mill during the past season paid 250 to 450 points premium for cotton full 1 1-16 inch staple.

"This is given for your information and that of your membership."

Some authorities say that every bale of cotton produced in Alabama is penalized $10.00 due to poor quality. A large baleage of cotton of poor quality tends to depress the price obtained for the entire crop.

ALABAMA FARMERS POOLING COTTON

In the face of inclement weather Alabama farmers have during the past week pooled 15,000 bales of cotton with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association on which they have been advanced about $700,000.00, according to Allen Northington, general manager, and Edward A. O'Neal, president. This makes a total delivery of the season to the rise of 31,000 bales.

Due to short staple cotton and low grade cotton, caused by the continued rains over the state, the association has been forced to reduce its advance to its members to 8 cents per pound on cotton placed in the annual pool and 7 cents per pound on special pool cotton.

On September the 19th, Mr. Northington mailed a letter to the banks of the state in which he said:

"On account of such large percentage of the cotton that is coming in to us from some sections of the state being under 7-8 inch staple, and also on account of the low grade cotton coming in due to the recent heavy rains in some sections, we are forced to reduce our advance to eight cents (8c) per pound on annual pool, and seven cents (7c) per pound on special pool cotton.

"Our purpose is to advance the members 90 per cent of the value of the cotton, but to protect the Association from loss on account of short staple and also low grades coming in to us now the only way we can do this is to reduce the initial advance as above and adjust it with the member who has good grade of cotton and cotton that will staple 7-8 inch or better on the first general distribution we make.

"If a member knows he has good staple cotton and also that his cotton was picked before the recent rains if he will send us the bills of lading or receipts covering the cotton without the advance and have the samples sent us promptly we will class the cotton and get him the check out within a very short while for the full 90 per cent of the graded value."

Honey ranks high in energy value; the calorie value to the pound is 1,-485.

Poultry seems to serve better as a profitable sideline to cotton in years of low prices for the fleecy staple.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH BIG PECAN CROP?

Cooperative Effort Claimed to be the Only Hope of Avoiding Glut of Market With Big Crop

Alabama will produce 2,700,000 pounds of pecans this year, according to estimate of September 1st, made by Federal Crop Reporting Service, and released by F. W. Gist, statistician for the State and Federal Departments of Agriculture, at Montgomery.

This immense tonnage will make the present crop the third largest of record in Alabama. The crop of 1928 and 1926 alone exceeding the size of the present indicated crop.

The above authority further quotes that this year's crop in the 12 principal pecan producting states will amount to thirty and a half million pounds. This makes the national crop the fifth largest of record.

This estimate includes the immense tonnage of seedling pecans in the South and wild pecans in Texas. Texas usually produces from a third to a half of the annual crop, although their yield this year will be reduced.

The condition of the crop is estimated at 12 per cent better than last year in Alabama.

The problem confronting Alabama is the proper sale of this large crop; the pecan is a seasonal nut which cannot be readily sold after the holiday season. For this reason growers usually rush their crop and sell on a falling market.

According to J. Lloyd Abbot of Spring Hill, a prominent grower of the Gulf Coast and member of a number of National pecan organizations, the salvation of the farmer lies in cooperative processing, storing and selling of pecans.

NAME FEED CROPS FOR PLANTING NOW

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 22.—By planting immediately crops for fall and winter grazing, farmers in Chilton County, whose corn, hay, and other feed crops were damaged or destroyed by dry weather, can supply much of their shortage, according to Prof. D. G. Sturkie, of the Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Several crops can be grown successfully in Chilton County for this purpose. They should be planted in early fall. Suggestions from Prof. Sturkie follow:

Oats. Plant 2 to 4 bushels per acre of Red Rust Proof or Bulghum. Top dress with 100 pounds of soda at of soda when three weeks old.

Wheat. Plant 1 bushel per acre of Abruzzi, Southern, or Georgia rye. Top dress with -00 pounds of soda at three weeks old.

Rape. Plant 4 to 6 pounds per acre of Essex. Use 600 to 800 pounds complete fertilizer, such as 10-4-4, 8-3-5, etc., when planting and top dress with 100 pounds nitrate of soda at three weeks old.

Austrian peas. Plant 40 pounds per acre, inoculate, and use 400 pounds of basic slag or superphosphate per acre except when following cotton with heavy phosphate application.

Hairy vetch. Plant 20 pounds per acre; fertilize same as Austrian peas.

Burr Clover. Plant 4 bushels in bur or 12 pounds not in bur. Inoculate if not in bur. Fertilize same as Austrian peas.

Austrian peas and oats. Plant 40 pounds peas and 2 bushels of oats. Use same fertilizer and apply at same time as if planting separately.

If combinations of Austrian peas and wheat, vetch and oats, vetch and wheat, or any of the other combinations are planted the same amount of seed and the same kind and rate of fertilizer and time of application should be used as if planting separately.

Prices SLASHED

To Compare With the Low Price of Cotton

In our stores at Clanton and Jemison we have revised the prices on our merchandise to make them in line with the low price of cotton. This will mean a loss to us, but we know that it is necessary in order to make this merchandise move. We challenge you to compare these prices with any other store or mail order house in the country.

If they are not as low as you can find on the same quality of merchandise, we do not ask you to buy. This is not a special sale. It is a slash in the price of goods that will prevail during this season of low priced cotton. We ask you to visit our store and see for yourself and make your own comparison.

Good Foods' Largest Market

The miracle wrought by low prices

"Chain stores are of real benefit not only to the consumer, but also to the grower of foodstuffs . . . The chain store is raising the standard of food products at lower costs to the consumer."

No friend of chain stores said this. It was addressed by Dr. James E. Boyle, professor of rural economy at Cornell University, to a recent meeting of the Farmers' Marketing Conference in the University of Maryland.

Dr. Boyle, like everyone else who has studied the subject without prejudice, puts his finger on the point of vital importance to customers of A&P. They enjoy the highest standards of eating at lowest cost to themselves.

They raise the standard of food products by their steady buying of the best. So, too, their buying encourages ample supplies of the high grade food they demand and can afford to pay for in A&P stores.

That is why A&P stores are the largest market in the world for food only the few could buy if A&P did not cut the cost to the bone.

VERBENA HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

A very prosperous school year is predicted for the High School of Verbena, Alabama. The school opened with a large enrollment of enthusiastic pupils. Two new additions to the faculty are: Miss Wible, graduate of the University of Alabama and Mr. Wooten, a graduate of Howard.

Great interest is being shown in all school work, especially in the classes of physical education. The pupils enjoy the courses of physical training, advised by the State Board of Education, as there is a variety of games every one can enjoy. Everyone is working hard to get points for the point record system.

The various clubs of the school are being revived. The current events club began work immediately. The meetings, so far, have been business meetings. The English club will begin work soon. The two literary societies will be re-organized this week. Every member is looking forward to their opening.

Two sets of Encyclopedias and one set of O. Henry have been added to the library.

The P.-T. A. is to be re-roganized Thursday of this week. All the parents are invited to attend the meeting, which will be held at the Grammar School building at 3:15.

African Gorillas Going Like American Buffalo

The gorillas of the British hills of Africa are dying out, principally from the ravages of big-game hunters who kill for the mere pleasure of it. The animals are given some degree of governmental protection in some parts of the African continent, but on account of the difficulties of guarding the country the protection does not amount to much. The Nigerian groups are somewhat larger, but are being decreased rapidly by the hunters. The natives, as a rule, are not in sympathy with this slaughter, for they regard the animals with friendly interest. It is only on rare occasions that they show any inclination to attack humans. The gorilla units confine their movements to certain well-defined limits, and they roam about the country harmless and quietly. As a rule they keep to the country, which is somewhat inaccessible, and make excusions into the inhabited portions only when driven there by the unfavorable conditions existing in the high countries. The native regard for these animals may be based upon superstition to a certain extent, and it is quite common for the native tanner to refuse to touch the pelts brought to them by hunters.

Odd Beliefs Current Among Early Settlers

When Milwaukee was very young, its population consisted largely of those who came from Europe, although New England and Canada furnished considerable quotas. Most of the immigrants came from the British isles, Germany and the Scandinavian countries. Many brought with them superstitions and so-called wise cracks, though they weren't so called then.

Some of our first Norwegian sailors insisted that thunder was the voice of the Almighty. They said that if you joked about thunder you would incur wrath.

It is said that Frenchmen who were here with Solomon Juneau insisted that burnt brandy would stunt a dog's growth and that in this way poodles and rat terriers were originally created.

The Irish believed smoking a clay pipe would cure earache; a wooden one wouldn't help.

The evil eye notion came with our first immigrants from southern Europe. Even today ill luck is attributed by some of them to the fact that an enemy gave them the evil eye.

An early day Pennsylvania Dutchman, living on the West side, used to say, "Repeat the Lord's prayer backward outdoors on a dark night and you'll see the devil."—Milwaukee Journal.

Egyptian Ruler Thought to Have Record Reign

It is believed that the reign of Pepi II of the sixth Egyptian dynasty is the longest on record. According to James Henry Breastel, Pepi II ascended the throne of Egypt about 2566 B. C., when he was only six years old, and reigned 91 years. Some of the ancient writers estimate the length of this reign as high as 100 years. The reign of Louis XIV of France is the second longest on record. He ascended the throne in 1643 at the age of five and reigned until his death in 1715—a period of 72 years. Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary reigned nearly 69 years—1848 to 1916. Queen Victoria reigned longer than any other English sovereign—64 years. She ascended the throne in 1837 and reigned until her death in 1901. Henry III of England reigned from 1216 to 1272—a period of 56 years. The reign of Pedro II of Brazil was also a long one. He was emperor from 1831 to 1889—58 years.

Reveals Crocodile's Age

Even the big-game hunters of Africa, most of whom are deploring the disappearance of the country's game, have little to say in defense of the crocodile. They are vicious and destructive and valuable animals are liable to wander within reach of a "croc" without observing the latter's presence. Buffalo cannot escape. They are caught in the great jaws and dragged under the water and their bodies stocked in a "larder" under the banks until such time as the crocodile is in need of food. The stories of their long life is questioned by some but in the interior of one killed was found a bead of a kind not seen in the protectorate for at least 150 years; it was one of those used by the Stuart companies to barter for ivory, gold and slaves. Some indication of age!

Fire-Resistance

The word fireproof is probably a less appropriate term than fire-resistive. Buildings can be constructed so that they can withstand a complete burning out of contents without any collapse of structural members. There will, of course, be damage to finish and trim. They can also be constructed to withstand exposures from fires in adjacent buildings without communicating fire to the inside of the building, although here again there may be damage to facing material and window glass and shutters. Fire-resistive buildings greatly decrease the destructiveness of fires in providing less opportunities for fires to start, less likelihood of rapid spread, greater ease of extinguishment, and less hazard to neighboring structures.

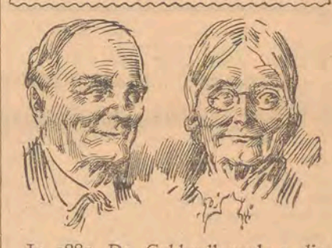
WATCHMAN WOUNDED IN GUN FIGHT AT CALERA

Arthur Seale, night watchman, was seriously wounded and three men were in the county jail at Columbiana as a result of a pistol fight Tuesday. Seale was taken to a Birmingham hospital.

Seale was shot after he arrested Gilbert Myers, 21, Kokomo, Ind., on a charge of attempting to break into a meat market here. After placing Myers in jail, Seale said, he was accosted by two men who fired on him after threatening him for "getting their buddy."

Seale said the first shot broke his right arm and he grappled with one of his assailants and was wounded by five other bullets.

Police Chief, Miller, led a posse of citizens which took up the chase of the pair and overtook them 18 miles south of Calera, where they surrendered.



They gave their names as Morris Hughes, Long Beach, California, and Ludrick Adams, 24, Kokomo, Indiana. The men had Seals' pistol in their possession when arrested, Miller said.

The three men were transferred to county jail at Columbiana by Sheriff Wooley.

Dr. C. O. Lawrence, who attended Seale, said his injuries are dangerous. All but the first shot took effect in his legs and hips, Dr. Lawrence said.

OLD DOCTOR'S IDEA IS BIG HELP TO ELDERLY PEOPLE

In 1885, Dr. Caldwell made a discovery for which elderly people the world over praise him today!

Years of practice convinced him that many people were endangering their health by a careless choice of laxatives. So he began a search for a harmless prescription which would be thoroughly effective, yet would neither gripe nor form any habit. At last he found it.

Over and over he wrote it, when he found people bilious, headachy, out of sorts, weak or feverish; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. It relieved the most obstinate cases, and yet was gentle with women, children and elderly people.

Today, this same famous, effective prescription, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is the world's most popular laxative. It may be obtained from any drugstore.

GRAGG IN RACE FOR SENATOR

Will Be On the Heflin-Locke Ticket In Autauga, Chilton, Shelby

According to a report from Montgomery in The Advertiser Tuesday morning, the name of Dr. V. J. Gragg, of Clanton, has been certified to the Secretary of State, John Brandon, as a candidate for State Senator from this district on the Heflin-Locke ticket.

It has been known for some time that Dr. Gragg has been considering entry into this race, and the announcement from Montgomery indicated that he has definitely consented to get into it.

This makes three candidates for the State Senate in this, the fifteenth senatorial district, composed of Chilton, Shelby, and Autauga Counties. Each of the three counties has a candidate, and each of the candidates is on a different ticket.

Mr. Duncan, of Autauga, is the nominee of the regular Democratic primary, and is running on the Miller ticket.

George W. Weaver, of Shelby County is the nominee of the Republicans, and is running under the Republican emblem. His name will be in the Republican column in Chilton and Shelby Counties with the other nominees for all county offices. His name will appear alone in the Republican column on the tickets in Autauga county, as there are no Republican nominees for county offices in that county.

Dr. Gragg will be under the Liberty Bell emblem in all three of these counties, which ticket will be headed by Heflin, Locke and Powell.

PRESIDENT DAWSON QUITS AS HEAD OF HOWARD COL.

Birmingham, Sept. 29.—Dr. John C. Dawson, president of Howard College since 1921 tendered his resignation to the Board of Trustees today. The resignation to take effect next February was accepted.

Dr. Dawson, beginning next September, will became head of the department of romance languages at the University of Alabama.

Desire to return to the teaching end of educational work was given by Dr. Dawson as his reason for resigning. Previous to taking over the presidency of Howard College, a Baptist institution, in 1921, Dr. Dawson has served as professor, dean and acting president of the school. He had been connected with the institution for the past 28 years.

Mr. A. D. Smith, president of the Board of Trustees, said no action had been taken toward determining Dr. Dawson's successor, and he anticipates no action for some time.

Dr. Dawson is a graduate of Georgetown University, Ky. He received his M. A. degree at Howard and his Ph. D. degree at Columbia.

Rube Miller of Wetumpka, Ala., was in Clanton last Sunday. He attended the Central singing at Friendship Sunday afternoon.

H. E. Ross Killed At Huntsville Home

Brother of Clanton Man Is Victim of Negro Intruder

H. E. Ross, Huntsville business man, and brother of L. C. Ross, of Clanton, was shot and fatally wounded by a negro in his home at Huntsville last Saturday night. Immediately after he was notified of the shooting of his brother, Mr. Ross left for Huntville.

Mr. Ross died at a Huntsville hospital a little more than an hour after he had been shot down in his home. He had been aroused by a noise in the room adjoining his bedroom. When he went and turned on the light his wife heard two shots.

Mrs. Ross ran into the room and found a negro backing away toward a door leading to the back yard. Mr. Ross was lying on the floor. Seeing this situation Mrs. Ross grabbed the negro by the arm and began to fight him and scream. He wrenched loose from her grasp and shot once at her. The bullet wounded her in the fleshy part of the leg.

The negro made his escape thru the door, leaving his hat in the room. Mr. Ross was shot through the head and through the chest. He never regained consciousness after being shot.

NEW SITE SOUGHT FOR VET HOSPITAL

Use of Land Near Asylum At Tuscaloosa Denied Bureau Institution

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Sept 20.—Denied use of property adjoining the Bryce Hospital for the Insane for location of the new Veterans Hospital, A. L. Warren, engineer for the Veterans Bureau, has returned to Washington with plans on 15 remaining sites to determine final location of the hospital.

The board of trustees of the Bryce Hospital at a called meeting adopted a resolution regretting that the property could not be utilized for the Veterans Hospital as plans are under way to build additional facilities for the asylum as soon as funds become available.

Expansion has been made necessary through an overcrowded condition at the asylum, the board held. It was indicated following the board's meeting that the crowded conditions will be investigated at the annual meeting of the trustees the latter part of October.

The meeting was attended by Governor Graves, C. B. Verner, Dr. E. S. Deal and Dr. George E. Denny, of Tuscaloosa; Dr. Charles A. Thigpen, of Montgomery; Dr. J. M. Acker, of Mobile, and Dr. W. D. Partlow, superintendent of the institution.

SCHOOLS WILL BE CLOSED ALL DAY MONDAY AND TUESDAY

All Schools of the county which have already begun their session will be closed next Monday and Tuesday on account of Teachers Institute at the High School in Clanton.

All the schools which have not already begun their session will open for class room work on Wednesday morning, October 8th. Patrons and pupils are urged to take due notice of this announcement, as it is very desireable that all students enroll on the very first day of school.

MISS NORA LEE LESSLEY AND MR. J. C. SEAY ARE MARRIED

A marriage of much interest to their many friends was that of Miss Nora Lee Lesley and Mr. J. C. Seay, which took place Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clok at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Lessley of Oak Grove.

The home was decorated in luxuriant ferns and cut flowers. The bride was beautifully attired in navy blue georgette with velvet trimmings and accessories to match, and wore a hat of blue French felt. The groom was well dressed in a blue suit.

Only a few friends and relatives of the immediate family witnessed the impressive ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Honeycutt of Jemison.

Immediately following the ceremony a bountiful supper was enjoyed by those present; after which Mr. and Mrs. Seay left for their home near Longview.

COUNTY SCHOOL NOTES

There is now being completed an additional room to the school building at Enterprise. The Mt. Pisgah school, with the teacher, Miss Nora Wood, will go to Enterprise this year.

The Mt. Pisgah School house was destroyed by fire a year ago. The house will not be rebuilt there, as it was decided that the better plan would be to consolidate that school with Enterprise.

The growth of the school at Maplesville in the last few years has made it necessary to have more room. To meet this need an additional room has been completed and is ready for use in this session of the school.

There are some repairs and improvements being made at the Jemison school, which will render the building better suited to take care of the needs of the boys and girls of the school.

A movement is under way to provide the stage at the County High School with a new curtain and other necessary equipment and conveniences.

New desks are being installed at the Union Grove School.

Although the County Board has been limited in funds, through the aid of the different communities concerned and the State funds, there has been spent in Chilton County during the last year more than $15,000 for building and repairs for schools.

The County Board of Education was in session last Friday for the transaction of its regular routine of business concerning the schools of the county.

Many Cases Called in Non-Jury Term Of Circuit Court Monday and Tuesday

The following are the cases on the criminal docket of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, which were called for disposal at the non-jury term of said court, by Judge George F. Smoot, Monday morning, September 29.

CORRECTION IN STORY OF HELTON CASE

In the report of the Helton case last week, it was stated that Mr. Helton remained in jail from the time he surrendered to the officers until the grand jury.

Our attention has been called to the error of the above statement, and we are glad to make this correction:

Mr. Helton was given preliminary trial before Justice Simpson on September 5th, and his bond was fixed at $750. This bond was promptly made and Helton was released to await action of the grand jury. The action of the grand jury rendered an indictment against him for manslaughter.

CHILTON HIGH BEAT HOLTVILLE

First Game of Season Is Won By Our Home Boys

Chilton County High School's 1930 model football team defeated Holtville High last Friday afternoon on the local field, 7 to 0. Chilton was slightly outweighed, but the Chilton goal was never in danger. Chilton scored the only touchdown of the game in the second quarter on successive bucks by "Bull Moose" Melton, after the oval had been worked to Holtville's 20-yard line on bucks, short passess and end runs. Chilton narrowly missed three other touchdowns, two of these coming on passes dropped by Tiffin and Cox with open fields before them, and the other when Sims failed at Guard from the 1-yard line on the fourth down.

Neither team showed much smoothness of action. Holtville showed a lack of coaching, while Chilton presented just about the kind of play one would expect of a team with a line of green material. Nearly every man in the Chilton line was getting his "baptism of fire" in this game. We have reason to believe that they will show up much better next Friday against Prattville, at Prattville.

Taylor, Chilton center, shows signs of developing into a good passer, playing all of Friday's game without a single bad pass, although it was his first game. Cox, at end, and Jesse Frank Foshee, at tackle, show promise of good material before the season is over. Melton, at full, is the same old "Bull Moose" he proved to be last year—Melton should be watched, as he will develop into a great "ball toter."

The Chilton line-up was as follows: Taylor, center; Maddox and M. D. Foshee, guards; Wagoner and J. F. Foshee, tackles; Cox and Littlejohn, ends; Sims quarterback; Sumner and Tiffin, halfbacks; Melton, fullback. Substitutions: Burdette for Tiffin, Miller for Cox, Poe for M. D. Foshee, Gowan for Maddox.

Coach Walker has been putting the fellows through a good week of training since Friday's game, and this with the experience gained in Friday's game should make them show well against Prattville tomorrow, Friday, October 3rd.

Remember, too, that Chilton takes on the Marbury High school team here on Friday, October 10th at the C. C. H. S. park, at 3:30. Come out and root for 'em.

EXCHANGE OLD BOOKS

Supt. Lawrene makes the suggestion that patrons of the schools of the county co-operate with each other in the exchange of old school books. The same books are being used this year as were used last year. Every time an old book is used over again it means a saving of money. In that way much can be saved over the entire county. If you have an old book which your child used last year, tell your neighbor about it, he may be able to use it this year.

Revival Services At Clanton Baptist Ch.

Meetings Every Morning At 10 O'clock and Every Night At 7

The revival services at the Clanton Baptist Church will continue this week till Friday night. Two services are being held every day. The morning service at 10:00 o'clock and the evening service at 7 o'clock.

Rev. Frank J. Fleming, of Ashland has been doing the preaching, and will continue throughout the meetings. He is a very forceful preacher, putting much vigor and power into the messages which he brings.

The song services are in charge of Mr. P. S. Rowland, of Birmingham. Mr. Rowland is one of the best Gospel singers we have ever had in Clanton. Assisted by great choir of good singers, Mr. Rowland is bringing to the people who attend these services a most inspiring song service.

The sunshine singers, a chorus composed of the children, is one of the best ever heard here. Mr. Rowland has demonstrated his wonderful ability as an organizer in the work of this group of singers.

Remember the services will continue to Friday night. You are given a cordial invitation to attend all the meetings. You will enjoy the singing, and the preaching will do you much good.

THE DIRECT PRIMARY

Calvin Coolidge says that a serious weakness of the direct primary is the cost of campaigning to the candidate. This is close to an admission by the ex-President that the big political expenditures now worrying a Senate committee and a good many other people also are unavoidable and inevitable, and, of course, they are. None the less, the large outlay of money, more and more becoming a commonplace of the typical primary election campaign, is a distinct evil even where it is honest and there is no effort to corrupt. The situation is dangerous and in the end is bound to have seriously pernicious effects.

But it is strikingly demonstrative of the inherent viciousness of the whole primary system that the swollen expenditures incident to its operation are, after all, a relatively minor evil among those that have arisen from its adoption.

Things much worse are the breaking down of party organization, the destruction of party authority and party responsibility with the substitution of personal demagogy and minority factionalism, and a deterioration of the quality of public service to a point which threatens the peace of the country and even imperils continuance of a Republican form of government.

The only road to safety for the United States is through the extirpation of the primary and a general employment of some form of the convention system.—Detroit Free Press.

Relief From Curse Of Constipation

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.—Upchurch Drug Company, Clanton, Alabama. 11-24-30.

ZACHARIAS AND ELISABETH: LIFE IN A PIOUS JEWISH HOME

LESSON TEXT—Luke 1:5-80.

GOLDEN TEXT—And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Helping to Make Our Homes Good.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Helping to Make Our Homes Good.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What I Owe to My Home.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Makes a Home Christian?

I. A Godly Husband and Wife (Luke 1:5-7).

The name Zacharias means "Jehovah hath remembered," and the name Elisabeth means "A covenant maker."

1. When they lived (v. 5).

"In the days of Herod the king." They lived in a day when godlessness was rife. The priesthood was corrupt, and the ruling classes most wicked.

2. Their character (v. 6).

Both were righteous before God. Many appear to be righteous before man who are not righteous before God. They were so mated that they walked in the commandments of the Lord blameless. The highest in wedded life can be attained only when both husband and wife are united in Jesus Christ. Their practical living was manifested in obedience to God's commandments.

2. They were childless (v. 7).

Though this godly couple were well mated and possessed the joy of the Lord in their souls, there was a real lack in their home. No home is quite ideal into which no child has come.

II. A Son Promised (Luke 1:8-23).

1. By whom (vv. 11, 19)?

Gabriel, a special messenger of God, appeared and made known the good news to Zacharias.

2. When (vv. 8-14)?

While officiating as priest this good news came to him. From verse 13 the implication is that Zacharias had been praying definitely about this matter. While he burned incense, which is typical of prayer, the multitudes without were praying.

3. Characteristics of the child (vv. 15-17).

(1) Shall be great in the sight of the Lord (v. 15).

Though the people did not greatly esteem him, he was highly esteemed by the Lord.

(2) Shall drink neither wine nor strong drink (v. 15).

He was to be a Nazarite, separating himself from sensuous things and dedicating himself unto the Lord (Numbers 6:1-6).

(3) Shall be filled with the Holy Ghost (v. 15).

The energy of the divine Spirit was needed to enable him to lead the people to repentance (v. 16).

(4) Shall go in the spirit and power of Elijah (v. 17).

In this power he was to prepare the people for the coming of the Savior, and the salvation which he was to bring.

4. Zacharias asking for a sign (vv. 18-23).

Although the aged priest was earnestly praying for the salvation of Israel, the gracious promise of the angel which was the beginning of that salvation staggered his faith. The angel gave him a sign. Because he refused to praise God in faith for this gracious promise, God caused his tongue to be silent until the promise was fulfilled. God wants us to believe his promises no matter how contrary to reason they may seem.

III. The Promise Fulfilled (Luke 1:57-64).

1. Neighbors and kinfolk rejoicing with Elisabeth (vv. 57, 58).

2. The child circumcised and named (vv. 59-63).

On the eighth day they circumcised the child and named him "John" (v. 13). By means of writing Zacharias made known the name which he would have by divine instruction.

3. Zacharias praises God (v. 64).

At this time God opened the mouth of Zacharias, and he offered up praise to God.

IV. Zacharias Prophesying (Luke 1:67-80).

1. Praising God for fulfillment of the promise of salvation (vv. 67-75).

This was according to covenant promise.

2. John to be called "The Prophet of the Highest" (vv. 76-79).

He was to go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways.

3. The growth of John (v. 80).

He grew and waxed strong in the Spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his showing unto Israel.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH THE CHURCHES IN OUR DAY?

By Wm. H. Evans, Semmes, Ala.

I have had it in my heart for some time to write a few lines on the above subject. My good brother and fellow worker, Dr. A. J. Preston, in his article of August 21st, gave us some important thoughts on the purpose of the church.

In this article he said, "There are elements of selfishness, and ambition in the churches." Now if that be true, I am sure that God is displeased with a selfish church. Then Bro. J. W. Joyner, of Sweetwater, in the same issue, gave us an able article on the spiritual condition of the country churches. In this article he gave a timely illustration by referring to (Bess) his milch cow.

A few days ago a preacher friend of mine was visiting my home and talking about the condition of his churches. He said, that the attendance is very poor, the finances in bad condition, and the people seemingly not interested, but crying out hard times; no money, and not able to pay the preacher and keep the church up. Everywhere you go in town, city or country, this is the tale you hear more or less, and more than less.

Now I come to you with this great question, "What is the matter with the churches in our day?"

In the issue of the Alabama Baptist of August 21st, our good secretary, Dr. Barton (bless his heart, he has my sympathy), in his message to the churches of the state, about the strenous times through which we are passing, says the solution lies in the hands of the pastors and the churches.

Will the pastors and churches listen to our good secretary? Did they listen to Noah? Hear the Master, as He says: "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matt, 24:27-38.

They were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, etc., and likewise now they are riding, playing golf, going in mixed bathing, dancing, playing cards, going to picture shows, wearing many fine clothes, but still crying out hard times, and they begin to economize by cutting off church expenses, and starving their souls. There are literally hundreds of churches pastorless, when there are many good men without churches, but they will not call them. They remind me of what I saw in a magazine in 1920. A man sold his home and bought an automobile. His neighbor met him and said, "You sold your home and bought you a car; well, what are you going to do for a home now? "Oh," said the man, "I won't need one now. I'll never be there anyway." I suppose that a good many folk feel that they do not need a pastor now, anyway; they'll never be there to hear him preach. Why call him and have all that expense.

"So they have shut the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps." II Chron. 29:5-7.

Men and women have corrupted the house of God. Read 2nd Chron., 31st chapter. Then what is the matter with our churches? May I venture to mention a few things which I think is the matter with them?

I. Worldliness. L et God speak. "If any man love the world, the love of the father is not in him." 1st John, 2nd chapter, 15th verse. Well, says one, what is worldly? Is it any harm to dance, joy ride, play cards, and many other things which church members do? In answer allow me to say that I believe that anything is either Godly or ungodly. And anything that is not Godly must be ungodly. Hence that is worldly, and we are responsible for our influence. A worldly crowd of church members can never have a spiritual Christ-like church.

II. Strange to say, but the most of churches need teaching, indoctrinating. In this enlightened age it seems that the members of the churches would know all the doctrines, rules and regulations but they do not take time to study and learn about them. Some of our Baptist people have never seen a copy of the church covenant; then how can they know their obligations concerning keeping house for God?

III. Over Organized. That Studebaker is a good machine but you will get absolutely no service out of it unless you can get a spark. You may have the car, all painted, and shining, plenty of gas in it, folk all in, sitting down, ready to ride, but when you press on the accelerator, if she's getting no spark, you never ride. Machinery is fine, but when you get all your organizations ready, and step on the gas and she don't crank, remember that up on the altar of God there is the fire and zeal. What we need is not so much organization, but more consecration, faith and prayer.

Now the Remedy for Present Day Conditions

1. Seek the Lord. "As long as he sought the Lord God made him to prosper." II Chron. 26:3-5.

2. A Revival of Religion. "Sanctify now yourselves, and sanctify the house of the Lord God of your fathers carry forth the filthiness out of it." II Chron. 29:5-7.—Alabama Baptist.

No one who has ever built a house can forget the many happy evenings spent in reading books, examining pictures, and studying blueprints in preparation for the task of planning the future home.

Truly, a man can say that "his home is his castle" when the job is done and the family moves in.

The enthusiast in dairying should be just as interested in providing suitable quarters for his cows. For surely they are the "geese that lay the golden eggs" of profits and it has been proved time and again that the amount of milk a cow gives can be influenced by the manner in which she is housed.

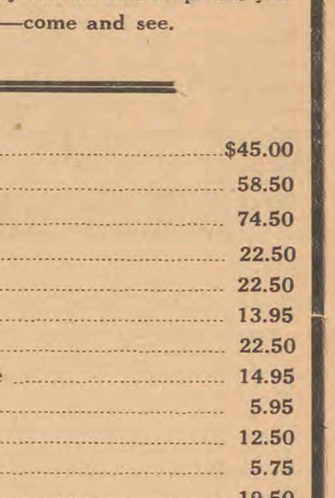
When you consider that a modern dairy cow will produce as much milk in one month as a scrub cow allowed to shift for itself gives during a milking season you know there is something more than just breeding and feeding to account for it.

In the next two or three articles we shall discuss this important subject of dairy barn construction and arrangement. First let us take up the location and the type of barn.

From the standpoint of drainage and fresh air, high ground is desirable. If too high, cold winds in winter and the difficulty of hauling feed up to the barn are things to consider. Later on we shall point out the desirability of having running water in the barns, and a hilltop location might prevent that.

A gently sloping hill, with a southern exposure, is very good. In any event the cow barn should run north and south, or nearly so, in order that both the morning and afternoon sun may shine in on the stalls. Sanitation, as my readers know, is now becoming a matter of law in many localities, where officials who have to do with the health of the community are regulating the barns where the milk is produced.

Keep this one thought in mind. A cow does her best work at producing milk during the warm summer months. The more comfortable you make her in cold weather the greater will be your profits.



Several types of barns are now in use on American farms. In the colder states the basement barn is popular. It is made by digging out the side of a hill so that one or two sides of the second story will be on a level with the ground. This makes a warm barn in winter and a cool barn in summer, but it may be far from healthy because of lack of ventilation.

Perhaps the most common type is the plain two-story building with a stable on the first floor and hayloft and storage space above. Sometimes the first story walls are made of stone. If built according to approved principles this is a very satisfactory type. Good lighting and ventilation can be secured. One common fault in such a barn is that the ceiling, or the floor above the live stock, may not be tight. Dust filters through, and the odor from the stables goes all through the upstairs.

Dairymen generally favor the one-story barn because of the better sanitation it affords. Usually it is made wide enough for two rows of cows. The roof is well constructed so as to provide plenty of warmth. In moderate climates cupolas can be built to provide ventilation, providing they can be closed up in case of storms and severe cold spells.

In the case of a one-story barn, the hay and feed will have to be stored elsewhere. Sometimes one end is raised two stories to provide space for hay. Some farmers keep their cattle in open sheds all year around, using a stable for milking and feeding only. This makes for rugged, healthy animals.

The round barn is advocated by a number of experts. Friends of the round barn say it is far cheaper, requiring 25 per cent less wall to enclose a similar space than does a rectangular building.

MT. PLEASANT JR. HIGH SCHOOL OPENS OCTOBER 8TH

School will open at Mt. Pleasant Jr. High School on next Wednesday, October 8th, at 8 o'clock. The building and campus have been cleaned and made ready for the opening day. The largest enrollment since the establishment of the school is expected.

All children, patrons, and friends interestedin the school are urged to be present for what we expect to be the best opening exeercise of any previous year.

We are proud to state that the school begins this year along with all the other district schools, for last year the school was three weeks later than others, due to the building not being complete. We also take much pride in announcing that the school opens with a clear record, there not being a single debt charged against the school.

The faculty this year is composed of the following:

R. B. Johnson, Jemison, Ala., principal and Junior High instructor, Mis Evelyn Littlejohn, Clanton, Ala., sixth grade. Miss Olys Bean, Clanton, Ala., fourth and fifth grades. Miss Mildred Rainey, Adger, Ala., primary work.

Being out of power the Democrats can promise to regulate the weather so there will be one rain a week during the summer months, to abolish the static in radio broadcasting, and to give higher prices to the farmers and cheaper prices to the consumers, and they can get away with it—so long as they remain out of power.

15,000 Demand Sargon Daily

Vast Growing Army of Sargon Users, Marching Single File, Would Encircle Globe In Only Few Years Time.

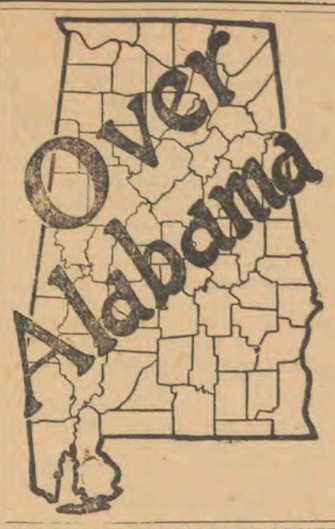
(By Richard L. Simms)

Atlanta, Ga.—More like a tale from the Arabian Nights of old than a record of modern business achievement reads the story of the marvelous growth and development of Sargon, the New Scientific Compound which has become the sensation of the drug trade throughout the United States, Canada and other countries.

The old illustration of the pebble dropped into the pool best describes the phenomenal and unprecedented demand and its fame is rapidly spreading over the entire American continent like a great tidal wave.

Recently compiled figures reveal that approximately 15,000 men and women are marching into the drug stores daily for Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills, the marvelous new treatment that is restoring health to countless thousands by new and remarkable methods undreamed of only a few years ago.

Already more than 5,000,000 suffering men and women have put it to the test and have told other millions what it has done for them.



Marching in regulation U. S. Army fashion—single file—this vast army of Sargon users would reach from New York to San Francisco and at the present rate of sale, would, in a few years time, encircle the entire globe.

The only explanation of Sargon's triumph in the Medical World is Sargon's true worth. Back of its triumph in the drug stores is its triumph in the homes and it is the grateful endorsements of its millions of users that has made it the most widely talked of medicine in the world today.

Sargon is extensively advertised, it is true, but no preparation, no matter how extensively advertised, could possibly meet with such phenomenal success unless it possessed absolute merit and extraordinary powers as a medicine.

There can be but one possible explanation for Sargon's amazing success and it can be told in one word—MERIT!

Sargon is sold by Alred Drug Company, Clanton; and Thorsby Drug Company, Thorsby, Alabama.

G. W. WEAVER
Republican Nominee for STATE SENATE

To the Voters of Chilton County:

As a candidate for the State Senate, and your County being one the counties comprising the Fifteenth Sanatorial District, I feel that I should give an expression, before solociting your suffrage as to what my position will be on all matters of local and State concern.

1. I shall support such measures as will, in my judgment, promote the general good interest of the State and its people.

2. I will co-operate with the Representative of your County in getting such legislation as the County demands.

3. I am opposed to any increase in taxes; believing that the revenue of the State at this time is ample to, if frugally administered, carry on a progressive administration for the next four years.

4. There is much to be done to create a greater efficency in the school system of the State. And to provide a more adequate and better means of transportation to the rural schools, and whatever legislation appropriate to this need I shall advocate and support. Too much can not be done to promote the progress of education, and it will be my purpose to support such measures as will foster education.

5. I advocate the election by the people of all major offices, including the County Superintendent of Education; believing that the people are better qualified to select their officials than any power of appointment. Also to abolish the absentee ballot law.

6. I stand for such progressive legislation as will promote the farming industry.

7. I am an advocate of good roads.

8. I will be fair to both labor and capital, and support such legislation as will promote the speedy development of the State's natural resources.

Upon these expressed policies I solicit your vote and influence.

(Paid political adv., by G. W. Weaver, Columbiana, Ala.)

An Invitation
To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

Since the Republican State Convention of Alabama has not nominated, and therefore the Republican ticket in the November election will not have candidates for Governor and United States Senator, I feel that I am justified in extending to the Republicans of Chilton County an invitation to cast their votes for Hon. B. M. Miller for Governor, and Hon. John H. Bankhead for United States Senator, and for the other Democratic candidates for State offices in the General Election of Nov. 4th.

I feel that I can conscientiously and truthfully say to all the citizens of Chilton County that the best government for our State will come out of the election of Judge Miller as our Governor. And since we all agree that our State government should be the best possible to obtain, I think that it is becoming that we support those candidates who offer us the best and most constructive, economical administration of State affairs.

Since the Republicans have no state ticket, the Republican voters of Chilton County are therefore left to do as they please about voting for State officers and United States Senator. I invite you to consider carefully the qualifications and platform of Judge Miller, John H. Benkhead, and the other Democratic candidates for State offices, and to cast your vote and influence for them in the General Election of November 4th.

Anyone desiring any literature on the Campaign may get same by calling at my office in Clanton.

Respectfully,

N. S. JOHNSON, Chairman,
Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County.

CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL TO HAVE NEW LUNCH ROOM

The committee appointed by the P.-T. A., with authority to make a plan and act regarding the running of a lunch room for Clanton Grammar school, has formulated plans whereby it is hoped that the children and teachers of the school will have warm lunch every day. The committee has engaged Mrs. J. W. Franklin to manage the lunch room, on a salary basis. It is hoped thereby to give the children wholesome, nourishing lunches.

This is a progressive step for our school, and deserves the cooperation of all the patrons of our school. The P.-T. A. committee believes that it will be cheaper for the children to eat in the lunch room than to bring lunches or go home for lunch. And of course, everyone will realize the benefit of a well-balanced warm lunch.

The P.-T. A. has at present some of the necessary equipment, but for efficiency it will be necessary to have other equipment. It is hoped that this equipment may be obtained by a public shower to be given on Friday October 10th.

The present plans call for the opening of the lunchroom on Monday, October 13th.

WILL GIVE AWAY LAMP

Jones Hardware Company is Making a very Attractive Offer for November 1st.

Mr. C. Fenn Jones, our progressive local hardware dealer, is making announcement elsewhere in this paper which is of particular interest to every home owner who is without electricity for lighting. They are the local franchise dealers for the famous new instant-light Aladdin kerosene mantle lamp, which gives a beautiful modern white light equal to ten ordinary oil lamps. It is over four times as economical as the best open-flame lamp, the reason being that it burns only 6 per cent kerosene to 4 per cent air. It will save its cost in a few months' time.

The Aladdin is simplicity itself in operation — anyone, even children, can run it. It is perfectly safe. Does not require generating, pumping up or pre-heating. It gives off no offensive odor, does not sputter, hiss or make the slightest noise—burns without smoke.

These new Alladins may be secured in either table, vase, hanging, bracket or floor styles. The Aladdin vase lamp is something new and distinctly different—never before available in an oil lamp.

All Aladdins may be equipped with either plain glass shades or decorated glass or parchment shades, except the floor lamp which comes with parchment shade only. All decorated shades are beautifully designed and are in five colors.

Every home not equipped with electricity should have at least one Aladdin. It would be advisable to visit this store at as early a date as possible while the line is complete, so that you may secure a wider choice. Read the important announcement elsewhere in the Union-Banner for further details about how you may secure one of these fine lamps without cost.

VERBENA HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Due to the inclemency of the weather the P.-T. A. meeting scheduled for last Thursday was postponed until the next regular meeting, which will be on Thursday, October 2nd.

The home economics building is being repainted inside, and the furniture is being redocrated. The kitchen is divided into three unit-kitchens, with a certain number of students for each kitchen. The girls in each group are planning the color schemes, and the arrangements of the kitchens. They are redecorating the furniture under the direction of Miss Wibble, the home economics teacher.

The Manual Training class is making the necessary repairs, under the expert supervision of Mr. Hiten, who teaches that class.

The Home Econimics class has been selling candy to get the funds necessary for purchasing new curtains for the home economics building.

Among the visitors to our school last week was Mr. L. K. Benson, a former principal of this school.

Drum Is Found To Be Basis of Modern Orchestra

Bernard Barton's Playing of Instrument Gives True Rating

New York City.—Though the drum is ordinarily relegated to the back of the orchestra, there are some super-drummers who bring it to the fore. Bernard Barton, manager of the Weede Meyer Orchestra, is one great musician who is a drummer.

"Though the basis of our music is the African drum, the drum has not been developed as have the other instruments in the band," Barton apologizes for his adored medium. "Yet the tom-tom beat of the drums from tribe to tribe in Africa has made the basis for American jazz. Though we have appropriated, we have done little to elaborate this beat.

"Musicians as a rule do not take the drum seriously and it is only on rare occasions that one gets the musical value out of the instrument. Yet it would not be possible to have a dance orchestra without a drum, although any other instrument might be substituted for it. Drum beats are the teeth of the band."

Mr. Barton has studied the drum in many lands, he says. "In Haiti, natives often drop from exhaustion, trying to keep up with the rhythm of their elongated tom-tom.

"Many of our most popular tunes are real drum numbers and I am surprised that more leaders don't take advantage of the possibilities of the instrument. 'What's the Use?' the fox trot ballad that is played and sung everywhere, is typical of the kind of dance tune that shows up drum possibilities at their best."

CHURCH LEADERS SUMMON PEOPLE FOR DRY BATTLE

Protestants Called On To Vote Against Wet Candidates On Nov. 4th

Washington, Sept. 30.—Leaders of Protestantism in the United States Tuesday summoned their people to the prohibition battle and to vote dry in the November 4th elections.

Citing the unprecedented proportions of the anti-prohibition drive, more than a score of persons identified with the Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, Congregational and other churches and with religious or prohibition organizations, issued a call to set aside Novembe 2nd as Christian Citizenship Sunday.

The call stressed the Christian obligation to vote. This obligation, it continued, was emphasized with a specified moral involved, upon which churches have declared themselves.

"The elections of November 4," the call said, "in our opinion, constitute such an occasion. The drive to destroy the eighteenth amendment and restore the regulated liquor traffic has assumed unprecedented proportions.

"That drive will not be turned back unless the Christian citizenship of the nation is aroused to turn it back at the polls.

"It was by a Christian crusade that the legalized liquor traffic was first outlawed. It will require another such crusade if the outlawry of that traffic is to be permanently established."

Rededicated To War

On Sunday, November 2, congregations are to be asked to rededicate themselves "to a continuance of the church's war against liquor until its menace is finally destroyed."

Enoch Mims and family of Montgomery were visitors to relatives and friends around Clanton last Sunday.

CENTRAL SINGING SOCIETY MEETS AT COOPERS NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Central Singing Society of Chilton County meets at Coopers next Sunday afternoon. This will be the society's first meeting at Coopers and it is expected that the best singing of the season will be had down there. An addition has been made to the building, so that it will seat many more folks than heretofore, and Mr. I. D. Huett, the local singing chairman, says that he wants to see the large house filled with singers and listeners next Sunday afternoon. As announced before, the Clanton Quartet will be there and help in the singing. Visiting singers from other places are always welcome with the Central Singing Society; your presence and help is always appreciated.

The Society met at Friendship last Sunday afternoon and enjoyed an excellent service. The house was filled, and there were lots of directors and singers to carry on the service. Directors were: T. E. Wyatt, S. L. Baker, L. T. Grant, Emmett Wilson, Chester Wyatt, R. M. Robinson, R. E. Powell, O. R. Robinson, A. O. Boswell, R. T. Grant, O. L. Grant, Alpheus Jones, O. L. Devaughn, Willie Mims, I. D. Huett. An octette also was rendered.

The schedule of meeting places for this month are: first Sunday, Chestnut Creek; second Sunday, Walnut Creek; third Sunday, Refuge; and fourth Sunday Poplar Springs. Keep in mind the various meeting places and meet with the society. Some communities are meeting and practicing nights on the new book, and this is proving to be quite a help. Other communities should be doing the same thing, and in this way rapid improvement in the singing would be noticeable.

Canals of Bruges

The imaginative traveler will find new delights in the scenery of Bruges as seen from its canals. From a boat in these calm waterways new aspects of the old Belgian city can be discovered. The waters reflect their shores so beautifully that it is no exaggeration to say that on them one sees every sight twice—towers, houses, trees and cool arches of old bridges. The view from beneath the old Bridge of the Lions, built in 1627, frames the vista of nearby gables and the distant tower of St. Jacques in the soft green of trees. Swans float out in the twilight and add much to the idyllic quiet of the scene.

Defining "Gentleman"

Within the last few years the French academy has officially received the word "gentleman" into the French language and incorporated it into the famous dictionary of that institution. An interesting feature of this is the definition given, since there has always been more or less discussion as to just what constitutes a gentleman. In this dictionary he is definied as "one in whom are combined a certain elevation of character with a certain elegance of manners." This is believed by many authorities to be a most apt description.

Impeachment of Statesmen

Impeachment proceedings in England are quite similar to the same proceedings in our congress. The house of commons are the prosecutors and the house of lords are the judges. Should the accused be found guilty, judgment follows if the commons move for it, but not otherwise. The commons thus retain the power of pardon in their own hands, and this right they have in several cases expressly claimed by resolution. There is no such provision in connection with impeachment proceedings in congress.

Here's the PROOF---

We recently carried a land advertisement in our "Classified" column, for Mr. John T. Ellis. This week we received the following note from Mr. Ellis:

Take my land adv. out. I traded the land in two or three hours after the paper came out.

Yours,
JOHN T. ELLIS.

Wm. R. Hearst says there is too much European influence in American editorial policy. True enough, and the next time Mr. Hearst is tempted to use the editorial columns of his newspapers to swell the European protest against framing an American tariff in the interests of America rather than of Europe, he ought to keep this thought in mind.

"A FEW years ago, I found that I was very weak and nothing I ate seemed to give me any strength," writes Mrs. R. B. Douglas, 704 South Congress St., Jackson, Miss.

"I suffered intense pain in my head and back. At times I would have to hold to something to steady myself, so as to do my little work. I was worried about my condition.

"My mother told me that I should take Cardui. After taking two bottles, I felt stronger, but I kept on taking it until my head and back quit hurting. I took about six bottles in all, and have never quit praising Cardui."

Bro. Bryan's Weekly Message

(Written for The Union-Banner by REV. J. A. BRYAN, Pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Alabama)

ROME AS I SAW IT

The city of Rome as we think of it is situated on the Palatine of the seven hills, on the left bank of the Tiber River, about six miles from the sea. Tradition connects it in legend with the Trojan War in whose wake followed Numitor, king of the league of Latin cities of Italy. This king had two orphan grandsons, Romulus and Remus, who founded the city of Rome, and in the dispute as to which should govern the city, and so give its name to it, Remus was slain by Romulus, who became its first king, hence the name Rome.

It is a positive fact that the seven hills you read about upon which Rome is founded can be located today. The Tiber River is ink-colored and traverses the city of Rome, forming the island anciently called Insula Tiberina.

Rome at the time of Christ our Lord was the mistress of the world. "As was Rome so was the world." The thing that is far more beautiful and precious to the Christian in connection with Rome is the fact that it was the center for the spread of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Many people in Rome heard and believed the word, confessed their sins, were converted and received into the church, loved, trusted, and lived for Jesus Christ.

On my recent visit there I found a true confirmation of the teachings of the New Testament. It is my purpose to tell you my experiences there as I found the confirmation of the Bible. I feel sure that all men and women who go there on their knees and studying the Bible will find it so. Now the church was established in Rome when the persecuted Christians fled to her for protection. In the second chapter of the Acts we read that there were Romans in Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost. There were Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites. and dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judea, and Cappadocia, in Pontius, and Asia, Phryia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, in part of Lybia about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and Proselytes. They were believers and seekers along with the rest, waiting for the descent of the Holy Spirit, which had been promised.

Again I think of the greatest legacy ever given to the Italian race and the greatest lecture delivered in Palestine after Christ's death on the cross was a sentence uttered by the Roman centurion in these words: "Truly this man was the Son of God." This sentence following the great fact that throughout apostolic and Gospel history there is no record of an Italian ever being unkind and dirty to Jeesus Christ is a legacy to be proud to possess. When Paul was taken to Rome a chained prisoner the emperor played the devil but listened to the centurion and allowed him to dwell in his own hired house. "Truly this man was the Son of God." That sentence was from the heart of the first man to be saved after Christ's crucifixion. That convicted, convinced man looked up amid the great storm, the raging winds, and flashing lightning and the trembling earth and said, "Truly this man is the Son of God." O, that every man would look up and say as did the Roman centurion, "Truly this man is the Son of God."

That centurion might have been numbered with the strangers of Rome. The term "stranger" was not used in the same sense we use it today in common conversation. Everybody at that time, except Jews, were called strangers. Paul, a Jew of Tarsus, was called of God with a desire to introduce Jesus Christ and His Gospel to not only Jews but also kings and Gentiles, the whole world. It is your duty and my duty to introduce Christ to the last man and woman, boy and girl on the face of the earth.

In reading the New Testament one is impressed by the Romans in the fact that when Paul was hotly pursued by his enemies who tried so hard to kill and get rod of him he appealed to Caesar. He would have been torn to pieces on those steps in Jerusalem had he not appealed to Caesar. Mind your thought just here that the centurion who carried Paul in chains to Rome made an appeal to the emperor in defense of Paul may be in such words as these: "There is not a thing against this man with the exception that his own people brought the charge that he has been preaching about the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ." He was just simply preaching the great truth of Jesus Christ. Certainly the great need of the world today is to preach, speak, and live the truth. That is exactly what Paul did. Again I hear the centurion in his defense of Paul say: "Certainly this is a clean man. He has stolen nothing, he has burned no houses, he has broken no laws of his country, and his manner is always becoming of a cultured and refined gentleman. He just went down to Jerusalem and said of Jesus Christ, 'This man Jesus whom I preach unto you is your only Saviour from sin because He triumphed over death, hell, and the grave when He arose in His own strength from the garden tomb. Because He arose from the dead we shall arise.'" Then the centurion said: "When they were about to tear him to pieces Jesus appeared to him and said: 'As thou hast testified for me in Jerusalem, so shalt thou testify of me in Rome.'"

Paul had written the letter to the Romans and sent it by Phoebe, a deaconess in the church at Cenchrea. In the last chapter he extends greetings to twenty-four people he had heard about through the brethren but had not yet met personally. Certainly in studying this those early Christians in Rome impresses one very much. There were more Christians in Rome than we sometimes think. Never can I forget the thrill it was to me to ride on the train from Geneva, Switzerland thru the Alps to Rome. As I first looked out of the window in Italy and upon Rome I never had such an experience. I had just read the Romans, the Acts, and the four imprisonment letters, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Philemon, and also Timothy.

We were on the American Express in Rome escorted by an Italian who also spoke English language very fluently. To be truthful my mind was not on the Coliseum, St. Peter's, and what is called St. Paul's without the gate, the home of Aquilla, the Appian Way, the Seven Taverns, the Roman Forum and such things. My mind was on the great thought of duty in leading Italians of our own country as well as of other countries to Jesus Christ.

Paul did not enter Rome over the same route nor in the same freedom as we did. He was led in chains along the Appian Way, a great and beautiful highway from Naples to Rome, which was built by the emperor Claudius. The Appian Way is not mentioned in Acts but the Seven Taverns is and is situated along this old Roman highway along which the greatest generals of the world had passed in great glory and honor, but greatest of all this great hero of Christ, Paul the apostle. We read that at the Seven Taverns he was met by Italian converts whom he had never met personally. The record is that Paul thanked God and was greatly encouraged.

I see Paul being led on into Rome where he resides with handcuffs around his wrist. Even though handcuffed he leads many people to Christ and received all who came unto him in sympathy, kindness, and interest of their soul's salvation. In that rented house he wrote four letters. Not far from that place is the Memertine Prison into which Paul was placed before his execution, and from which he wrote 2nd Timothy.

Now we come to the Catacombs of Rome. They are underground caves or subterranean places for the burial of the dead, the bodies having been placed in recesses hollowed out in the side of the caves. These Italian or Roman catacombs near Rome are remarkably large. Some of them extend a mile in one direction while in the opposite direction they may extend as far as three miles. I am sure from all evidences which I received in visiting in these catacombs that they were used as, not only the burying places of the early Christians of Rome, but also as residental places. They were so persecuted that in their determination to be true to Christ the Italians took refuge in these underground labyrinths. Many epitaphs as carved by symbols prove that it is the burial places of the Christians. The first one upermost in my mind is the Latin inscription "resurgiam" which interpretation in the English is "I shall arise." This certainly expressed the faith of the Christians that their sleeping bodies would one day arise. Then there were symbols expressed in pictures carved out in stones. As I walked about in the catacombs with a lighted candle in my hand I saw many of them among which the picture of the dove, a symbol of peace; an egg, the symbol of the resurrection; a bunch of grapes, the symbol of new life which the Christian will find in Christ Jesus at the last day. Also in there were excavations of stone tables upon which the Christians no doubt observed the sacred ceremony of the Lord's Supper, and also stone baptismal altars.

How Old Are You?

Today Said She---I'm 43

AM I FAT?—NOT ME

Yes! A year ago I had twenty-two more pounds of fat than I needed—I was fat—and very sensitive about it—but now I say it is foolish for anyone to be overweight.

What did I do? Nothing very hard, I can assure you—I cut out pies—candy and all sweets—ate moderately and every morning before breakfast I took one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water—Never missed a morning.

I lost fat—gained in energy—vigor—charm—and vivaciousness and have a shapely figure I am proud of—anyone can do the same.

A North Carolina woman lost 47 pounds in 3 months—a Montana woman lost 19 pounds in 4 weeks—Wisconsin woman 11 pounds in 6 weeks.

Alred Drug Company, of Clanton, and every druggist in the world sells Kruschen Salts—a bottle that lasts 4 weeks—costs 85 cents.

IN MEMORY OF W. B. HICKS

Mr. W. B. Hicks, 88 years old, August 25th passed peacefully across the "River of Life" at 9:30 a.m., at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. O. Mize of Maplesville, Alabama. He was born near "Old Maplesville" on August 25th, 1842. He was a member of the Baptist Church, being first associated with Bethlehem church and later transferred his membership to Rehoboth Church.

Mr. Hicks took his marrigae vows with Miss Cathrine Taylor at the altar, with whom he spent a happy wedded life until she preceeded him to the silent city of the dead, ten years ago. From this union came eight children, six of whom survive him, viz: C. L. and J. O. Hicks of Lawley; Mrs. Emma Smith of Woodstock, Ala.; Mrs. J. P. McGee, Mrs. Luke Varner and Mrs. J. O. Mize of Maplesville, Ala.; Twenty six grand children and twenty one great grand children.

He answered the call of the Confederacy in the 60's, wearing the insignia of the "Lost cause," for himself, his family and the Southland.

He led an active life until about one year ago, when his steps began to grow feeble, and he began to lay down the working tools of life, preparatory to entrance through the gates of pearl, to the city whose streets are golden and there are no good-bye's said.

A large crowd of friends followed his remains to the grave where he was gently returned to earth from whence he came. Active Pall Bearers were: Paul Beavers, Rube Bearden, Henry Head and Will Barnes. Burial rites conducted by Rev. Paul Oden.—A Friend of the Family.

BETHSALEM NEWS

Our Sunday School was called to order Sunday morning at 10 o'clock with a very large crowd.

The singing was enjoyed by a large crowd. We had some real good singing and we especially invite every one to come back next fourth Sunday afternoon, and let's make our singing grow.

The superintendent of our Sunday School, Mr. C. L. Wilkins, and three of the Sunday School teachers, Mrs. Leola Billingsley, Miss Alta Belle Vinson and Zettie Mims, and several others from this community attended the Sunday School Convention at Thorsby Sunday, and reported a wonderful time.

Remember Sunday School next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Every one is especially invited to come.

Rev. J. W. Jones and G. F. Harper of Thorsby were visitors to Clanton Tuesday.

UNITY-CHILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The Annual Meeting of the Unity-Chilton County Sunday School Convention was held with Thorsby Baptist Church, Sunday, September 28, 1930. It was one of the best meetings held since the Convention was organized.

Twenty-two Sunday Schools had representatives at the meeting; others sent written reports.

A very interesting program was carried out, and we feel sure that the meeting will result in increased interest in the Sunday Schools in the two Asscciations.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis Cooper and Miss Caver, State workers, assisted greatly in making the meeting a success.

The following officers were elected for the next year, subject to the approval of the two association:

H. A. Harris, president; C. D. Hughes, first vice-president; W. J. Patrick, second vice-president; G. F. Harris, secretary-treasurer.

The next meeting of the Convention will be held with Mulberry Baptist Church, Tuesday, August 4, 1931.—G. F. Harris, sec'y.

LAWLEY NEWS

On last Wednesday Mr. William Hicks died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. O. Mize, at Maplesville. He was buried here at Randolph cemetery on Thursday. Rev. Paul Oden conducted the funeral services.

In early boyhood he joined the Baptist church here, and lived a faithful, loyal and Christian life. Always putting his interest in the church and community first.

His life as a citizen was always for the up-building of humanity. He was a strong advocate of good roads, good schools and prohibition.

He reared a family of 8 children, of whom 6 survive him. His wife preceded him to the grave several years.

He retired from active service only a few years ago, on account of old age, as he was 88 years old.

We extend to the bereaved family our tenderest sympathy and pray that our heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of their bereavement and leave them the cherished memory of the loved and loss.

The Sunday School here is planning for a special program to be given at the church during the latter part of October, in interest of State Missions, with Miss Alvis Latham, Mrs. Geo. Lawley and Mrs. W. P. Hicks in charge of arrangements. Everyone should co-operate with them in making it a success.

Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Hicks spent last Thursday night at Woodstock with their brother, Mr. Holland Hicks, who was hurt in an automobile accident. His injuries were not serious and he is now able to be up and walking around, for which his many friends here are indeed glad. The accident happened on the highway near Tuscaloosa, when the car, which he was driving hit a truck, almost completely demolishing the car. It is only a miracle that no one was killed. Holland is one of our home boys of Lawley and we hope for him a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Juda Holmes of Birmingham were here Sunday visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Mount. Juda is a former resident of this place, as his father operated a saw mill here for many years, and has many friends who were so glad to see him

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Barnes entertained a number of friends at a birthday party, at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Barnes, last Friday evening, but on account of rain, many could not attend.

The singing given by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wilson at their home last Saturday evening was greatly enjoyed by all present. Under direction of Mr. Clint Latham and Mr. Edwin Lovelady and Miss Alvis Latham, as organist, the singing was indeed spirited. Everybody seemed to have the devine power from above to guide them and especially does Miss Alvis Latham, who serves in ways other than organist. She exemplifies in her life a deep abiding faith in her Saviour. We thank God for her beautiful Christian character. We fully believe that we should give to the living their flowers. They know nothing of them after death.

CHAMPION COTTON PICKER

Little Ruby Frith, the 8 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Frith of Liberty Hill community, is a little wonder cotton picker, having picked 100 pounds of cotton in one day. Ruby is the grand daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Best.

CANE CREEK

Our singing at this place Sunday afternoon was very good. We wish to thank the singers from other communities for their cooperation, and invite them all to come back again.

Singing was opened by our chairman, W. L. Sanders. Directors for the afternoon were: E. C. Traywick, F. J. Little, Jasper Oaks, Andrew Blow, Roy Coggins, and Lillie Mae Weldon. Organists were Lillie Mae Weldon and Mrs. Genie Robinson.

We invite all singers and lovers of music to meet with us next fourth Sunday, and also remember next Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days. Everybody is invited to the services.

INK DROPS
FROM C. C. H. S.

Correct Posture
(By Helen Roberts)

When going to school we should wear our low heeled shoes, or better still, oxfords. This allows one to feel free and easy and your shoes do not hinder you in taking part in the various school activities during the day's program. When standing, instead of stooping down on one foot, stand up, head erect, and shoulders thrown back and let the world see who you are. When in classes set up straight, but not rigid, and have your feet on the floor. This is much better than sitting way down in your seat, and half settnig on your back. Correct standing, walking, and sitting posture adds much to one's appearance, helps to make up a good all-round school girl or boy, and is a part of the real school spirit. Would you like to be tagged for correct posture? Then look out for Posture Day.

Cheer Leaders For C. C. H. S.

Singing at Assembly
(By Mary Courtney Jones)

Our chapel exercises are very interesting this year. Everyone enters into the singing wholeheartedly. Very interesting talks which have been given by Dr. Childs, and Dr. Ezell have helped the students very much. Our exercises are held at 10:15-10:35, and are opened by Bible reading. The student body sings sometimes, and many unison songs. Miss Margaret Kendrick is the music director and has charge of the singing. Miss Nell Wells plays the piano.

Dr. Ezell at Chapel Last Wednesday
(By Mary Frank Smith)

Dr. Ezell paid us the honor of a visit at chapel last Wednesday. His talk centered around the "Race of Life." He showed how we should spend our time in preparing for life, instead of wasting it in riotous living. He stressed the point that we should so live to obtain life. The entire student body was impressed by his inspirational talk.

C. C. H. S. Wins Opener

Battling with inexperience and a handicap of rainy weather for the week preceeding, C. C. H. S. eked out a 7-0 victory over the Holtville High gridders here Friday afternoon.

Captain Benson Simms showed improvement in the defensive tactics and ran true to form on offenses, while alternate captain, Paul Cox, snagged a couple of passes out of the ether to run the yardage into a "total" worth while to bring victory to the tigers.

Due to inexperience the rough elements were distinctly noticeable in both forward walls. Let's show our Clanton blood by giving these boys a real glad hand, following there where possible, and watching them in action at every possible chance. They are ours, fighting for cleanliness in developing into worthwhile manhood.

IN MEMORY OF GRANDFATHER

On Friday night, September 19th, about 1 o'clock, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. Frank Jones and took away from them their beloved husband and father, to his happy home in the great beyond. He suffered quite a while with paralysis. All was done that human hands could do for him, but God knew best and took his soul home to sweet rest. God giveth and God taketh away; and He knows what is best for our homes and our hands.

Some day in the future, we know not where and we know not when, God will summon us to leave this old world of sin, if we have obeyed Him. He will claim us for His own. We shall rejoice with His loved ones around the Throne.

No one knows what a father's love is until you have seen him put away.

It is first a vision, so it seems, but he has gone to stay. He was laid to rest in Mullins cemetery, Rev. Metcalf conducting the funeral.

Dearest father, thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel;
But tis God that has bereft us.
He can all our sorrows heal;
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled.
When all in heaven with joy to greet thee;
Where no farewell tear is shed.

Written by his grand daughter, Gertie Mae Brand.

In a recent letter from Rev. John Bean to J. D. Collins, it is stated that the former accepts the call as pastor of Friendship Baptist church. The same meeting time, the fourth Sunday and Sunday night, will be retained by the church. Rev. Bean's first sermon will be the fourth Sunday in October at 11 o'clock.

Charley Wilkins of Bethsalem community was in Clanton Tuesday.

HAULING—I have a truck which is equipped for any kind of hauling and transfer work. Local and long distances. If you have anything you want hauled any time, leave word for me at The Union-Banner office.—F. A. Ellison, Clanton Ala. 10-2-1tpd.

HOW MAINE WENT

If political revolution impends, it has not been foreshadowed by the outcome of the election in Maine. Not only were the congressional candidates of the Republican party elected; they were chosen by majorities which give little reason for believing that the administration has lost in popularity among the voters. The senatorial candidate of the Republican party, Mr. Wallace H. White, Jr., polled some thirty thousand votes more than his opponent, while Republicans were chosen for the House of Representatives in each of the four congressional districts by majorities ranging from six thousand to nine thousand votes. Only the gubernational election was close, but the reduction of the majority of Mr. William Tudor Gardiner to sixteen thousand, as compared with fifty thousand two years ago, may be ascribed to local rather than national conditions.

In the circumstances, the Republican party has reason to look with renewed confidence to the congressional elections elsewhere. The accuracy of the election in Maine as a political barometer has frequently been disputed with reason, but more than once the vote there has hinted the trend of the vote elsewhere. While Maine is remote from many political currents, it is not unaffected by conditions which prevail elsewhere. An industrial as well as an agricultural community, it has also felt the effects of depression. If the potato crop is good, the mills have not been exceptionally busy, while its income from vacationists has been considerably reduced. Like other states, Maine has been aware of hard times. That its voters are not inclined to lay the blame on the administration is significant.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

In the United States when there are hard times the tendency is to blame the party in power, whether the party is responsible or not, and to take it out on the candidates at the polls. In South America they have a different system. There they seem to believe in direct action, and instead of voting out the government, some nations are apt to put it out by armed revolution. The present depression is world wide, and the evidence that South America has not escaped is evidenced by the overturning of the governments of Peru and Argentina during the past few weeks. There are rumors of trouble in other Latin-American countries, even in Brazil, which nation has had few internal difficulties during the past decade or two.

The most important overturning perhaps was that in Argentina. Her foreign trade, to speak in approximate proportion, is twice that of Brazil and five times that of Chile. In 1929 we exported more than $200,000,000 worth of goods to the South American republic. At the same time, Argentina is Uncle Sam's most serious rival in the New World for foreign trade. This is because Argentina, in the southern temperate zone, raises approximately the same crops that we do.

Perhaps partly for this reason, the United States is less popular in Argentina than in any other South American nation. Congress for years has sought to protect the American farmers against the importation, into our own country, of corn, meat products and other farm commodities which are raised in the United States. The duties were increased in the tariff bill passed this year. Many Argentinians have at times criticized these tariffs and especially embargoes which have been laid against Argentine products from time to time because of the fear that the foot and mouth disease and other pests might be introduced into the United States. It is only fair to say that at least a part of this propaganda against the United States has not originated in Argentina but has been scattered there by European news agencies and European interests which have been anxious to foment discord between our country and Argentina in order that as much Argentine trade as possible be diverted from the United States to Europe.

As a result of trade rivalries and this hostile propaganda against America the relations between our own country and the Argentine Republic have been none too cordial during the past several years. Irigoyen, the president of the republic, recently deposed, was particularly unfriendly to the United States. He withdrew the Argentine ambassador from Washington more than two years ago, and has sent no one to replace him. When the sixth Pan-American conference was held at Havana in 1928, the Argentine administration recalled its delegation because it opposed some of Mr. Hughes' proposals made for the good of the conference on behalf of the United States. And during the conference it seemed that the Argentine delegates were doing their best to embarrass Uncle Sam. And again Argentina refused to be represented at the Pan-American conference on conciliation and arbitration held at Washington in 1928 and 1929.

But the unfriendly president is no longer the head of the government and it is freely predicted in Washington that the new government, if it survives, will be distinctly more friendly to the United States. All of which is well and good and highly encouraging. No one has claimed that Irigoyen was put out of power chiefly because he was unfriendly to the United States. But suppose opposite conditions had been true and Origoyen had been a traditional friend of Uncle Sam. Then when he had been deposed we would have heard a shout from one end of this country to the other, from free traders and other internationalists, to the effect that Irigoyen's friendship to Uncle Sam had been fatal to him and that he was a victim of indignation over our new tariff. Only the fact that Irigoyen was not our friend has saved us from a barrage of hot air of this kind.

NOW HOW DID HE FIND THAT OUT?

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, declares after a visit to Europe that a decline of one billion dollars in American exports during the first six months of this year was due to the new tariff law. That seems a bit curious, in view of the fact that the new tariff law did not go into effect until about the end of that six months period, and no one had any way of determining prior to the passage of the act just what would be in it when finally enacted. The decline of our exports was due in part to the decline of commodity values and of foreign purchasing power caused by depression abroad. In part it is due to the removal of foreign cheap labor markets of some two thousand American factories, which now not only supply a part of our foreign markets, but with Senator Barkley's assistance, have been trying to displace in our markets the output of American factories handicapped in competition with higher wage costs. Senator Barkley's cure for unemployment is to admit into the United States a greater quantity of this output of foreign cheap labor. It does not seem to be a very intelligent method of putting more American workmen on the job.

NO WEAPONS NEEDED

Owing to the tenseness of public feeling during the recent German election the government prohibited the carrying of revolvers, knives and similar weapons on election day. But the communists and facists immediately set about destroying each other with beer steins. Which shows that when people want to fight they will fight whether they have warships or not. There is a lesson in this for the pacifists. The most brutal and bloodiest wars in history, taking into account the number of men engaged, were fought in the days when the war club was regarded as the latest thing in implements of destruction. Even if the world were now entirely disarmed and somebody wanted to fight, there would still be plenty of bricks and baseball bats handy. Unfortunately, the urge to fight cannot be abolished by statutory enactment.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

"We ought always to act fairly and generously to other nations. In international matters, I hold that we should have the same standard of morality that we have in private matters. But we must remember that our first duty is always to be loyal and patriotic citizens of our own nation, defenders of her rights, maintaining her noblest traditions." How utterly shocking these observations of Theodore Roosevelt must sound to most of the speakers at our modern institutes of politics.

If more of our American press agencies would select real Americans for their European correspondents, the United States might get a square deal occasionally in our foreign news items.

Nobody expected that Charlie Michelson would emphasize the good points of the present administration. But perhaps, as a critic he has overplayed his part.

Let us hope that some day the wise men of the Senate will insist that their investigations be kept within the spirit of the law.

Historian H. G. Wells is in favor of an international mind for everybody, except, of course, that where the welfare of his own country is concerned, he will always be found an intense nationalist.

There is a subsconsious feeling even among Democrats, that the administration is dealing wisely and effectively with the present industrial condition.

Raymond Fosdick cards the New York Times to complain that the United States now has a navy almost equal to that of Great Britain. It worries some of our professional auslanders to notice that the United States is equal to any foreign country in anything. Certainly we have a bigger output of over-educated intelligentsia who love every other country but their own than any other nation on earth.

Franklin Roosevelt's strong point as a candidate for President would be that a lot of folks would think they were still voting for Teddy.

It seems as though the fellows who usually get a refund on their income taxes are the very ones who don't need the refund.

There are now so many airplanes traveling over London that the air ministry is going to put one way air traffic into effect. How about left hand turns?

Early recognition of the Uriburu government in Argentina was given. We are neutral. Uriburu is just as hard to spell as Irigoyen.

It is said that authors of two dollar books are looking down on authors of one dollar books since the book price war started. Just think what an opportunity for snubbing this gives the guy who writes the high priced encyclopedias.

THE JACK POT

BY "JACK" HIMSELF

WHY DO WE DO IT?

There are a few things that people do which seem unreasonable. At least they seem unreasonable to others, and sometimes to the people, themselves, who do them. We do them, you do them, everybody is guilty of some of them, and yet you couldn't explain just why you do them. Some are easily explained, and some are not. Some we do from force of habit; some we do for a kick; some for this reason and some for that; some for no apparent reason at all. Here are a few of them—how many are you guilty of?

Why do we gamble? Oh, you don't! But you do! In one way or another everybody does. A farmer gambles when he plants his crop, not knowing if he will net a profit from it, or lose. A merchant is a gambler when he buys goods, not knowing if he will be able to sell them or not. Check up on yourself—see just how many ways you DO gamble. Even preachers gamble. No? Every time you—no matter who you are—load your family into your car for a spin, you gamble their very lives that you will return from the pleasure trip safe and sound. Any time you take any kind of risk, you're a gambler.

Why do we lie? Maybe you think you don't do it, but if you don't you are a very rare exception. One of the easiest things in the world to do is to lie to yourself. Nine people out of ten will lie to a friend to keep from hurting his feelings. A merchant advertises that his will be a cash business from now on—let a good friend, or anyone who is a good credit risk come along and ask for credit and see what happens—the little book comes out and a ticket is made. One man says there are three great classes of liars—cheerful, willful, and malicious.

Why do we covet? To the POTTER, this is the hardest of the ten first great commandments to obey and comply with. Can you be content with your salary, your home, your farm, your automobile, or the like, when your neighbor has something much better? If you can, you're a wonder. Not many people CAN, or even pretend that they can.

Why do people swear—and curse? Perfectly useless habit, yet one with a vast scope. If there is any one of the commands that CAN be complied with, it is this one, yet it is one of the most common of our faults. Absolutely uncalled-for, and nauseating to the ear of one who, himself, is guilty, yet we do it, unthinking. Why?

There are a number of "whys" we might bring up, but the POTTER is not a preacher, nor his column a pulpit. In fact, we didn't expect the article to take the turn it did when we set out—it just got beyond our control and ran off with us. Lest we be accused of failing to practice what we preach, we believe it a pretty good idea to close the "why" column for the present. We believe there's enough in the above to keep you thinking (when you have nothing else to think of) until we can get back to you again next week, any way.

Lots of people are kicking up the dust about the motor transport companies hauling such heavy loads over our fine Birmingham-Montgomery highway. That the road will not—CAN NOT—stand up under the usage being made of it is becoming more and more apparent. The highway is not only being USED, it is being ABUSED, daily. And it is already showing signs of going to pieces in places.

Maybe these places ARE few which are showing premature wear, but remember that it has long been said that "a road is only as good as it's worst part," and, inasmuch as this abuse is absolutely uncalled-for gives that much stronger reason that it should be stopped.

Stopping of such abuse, and regulation of use of the road would be much easier than trying to repair the damage being done daily. Our legislators can regulate the USE of it, with their collars and ties on, and without cost to the taxpayers, but it will take much material, hard work, and lots and lots of money to repair the damage that is inevitable as the result of the GROSS ABUSE of it as is going at present.

Far be it from us to try to make suggestions as to ways and means to follow in handling such a situation, but it seems that a system of tonnage rates and scales might easily be worked out which would go far toward effecting a remedy. Any way, SOMETHING should be done, and soon, else our fine road, costing thousands of dollars per mile to build will become a veritable "no man's land." Remember that old adage—"A stitch in time—".

There are a lot of chronic "kickers" in this neck of the woods. All right, old fellows, there's a nice block for you to get busy on. If you must kick at something get busy about the above—just kick to your hearts' content—and if you can get something, anything, done, more power to you. We'll join you in THAT kick.

If your tongue just MUST run, then put it on a tight pulley instead of a loose one, and let it work. If you can't do that, you can use gum for an idler. In that way you can help some—Mr. Wrigley don't object to another million or so.

Speaking of idle things—take jaws, for instance. Sugar cane will soon be in the right stage for chewing—and, too, the 'possum hunting season comes along about that time. Strange! Right strange!

The man on the steeple says there are plenty of wheels turning—the only thing wrong is that their main product is miles.

We wondered, at first, why so many were going into the tree-sitting contests. And then we read where the Institution for the Feeble Minded was already filled to overflowing. Rumor has it, however, that another such institution will be built. Such being the case, let the motto be: "Get them out of the trees by Christmas." What if it should be another rough winter like the last? Too bad! Just too bad!

Our idea of a man with a rubber brain is one who tells us that the war was the cause of the hard times back in 1914, and then chirps up with that one about "our Hoover prosperity."

Some people have an idea that there are reasons why Mr. Wrigley gave Joe McCarthy the air. May be something in that. He might have caught Joey chewing another brand, or something like that.

SOMETHING ABOUT CONTINENTAL CURRENCY

Every American has heard on numerous occasions the expression "not worth a continental," and most of us are aware of the fact that the reference is to the currency of the colonies during the Revolution, a currency which for a part of the time was well nigh valueless. Comparatively few people, however, are conversant with the history of the issuance of this money, just how it was put into circulation, and the extent of the various issues. In an interesting account of the continental paper money in the current issue of the National Republic, Mr. Albert Beatty says in part:

"When, on May 10, 1775, the Second Continental Congress met at the seat of government, Philadelphia, it discovered to its discomfort that in dependence for the colonies, like numerous other desirable things, would cost money to obtain. In other words, it was faced with the difficult and serious problem of raising sufficient funds to carry on an armed conflict with the mother country.

"Limited as it was by the people, made its task doubly hard. It was vested with no authority to impose taxes; consequently, it was powerless to make loans. To borrow large sums from a foreign nation, no matter how sympathetic its government might appear to the cause of freedom, was next to impossible at the time. No solution presented itself save that of emitting paper currency, although this system had been in vogue in all the thirteen colonies and had proved to be most unsuccessful.

"However, on June 22 of that year, the day on which the news of the Battle of Bunker Hill was learned by this great body of statesmen, a resolution was presented and passed providing for the issuing of 'a sum not exceeding two million Spanish milled dollars in bills of credit 'for the defense of America.'

"The name 'Continental Currency,' or 'Continental Money,' was given to the notes in the early stages of their existence, in order to denote their origin from the confederated efforts of America, as being common to all of the thirteen colonies, and as a mark distinguishing them from their separate and individual issues.

"It is of interest to note at this point that, while many varied explanations of the dollar-mark and when it was first introduced have been suggested, there is now little doubt but that its origin was derived from the ancient Romans. Among the ciphers and abbreviations of the people of that once powerful nation, there will be found some with horizontal lines; and others, though but few in number, with sloping and not quite upright lines, such as are used in the dollar-mark. In the latter class, the form S will be discovered, which, in all likelihood, is the beginning of the modern symbol. This character came into use sometime during the Middle Ages to express the current value of the old Spanish dollar, which was good for eight reals.

"As soon as final action had been taken on the measure, Congress selected Benjamin Franklin, who had played an active role in the Congressional deliberations on the subject: James Wilson, John Adams, John Rutledge, and James Duane as a committee to have the necessary plates engraved, procure a large quantity of substantial paper and supervise the turning out of the bills.

"A month sped by, however, before any steps were taken to print the money; and then nothing was done until R. Bache, Stephen Paschall and Michael Hillegas were named to superintend the press and direct the work of getting out the money.

"During the war, a sum estimated at $209,000,000 in paper money was emitted by the individual colonies. These state bills, although about the same size as the national notes, were different in design and were decorated with devices and phrases peculiar to their respective localities."

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Uncle John Gore, the fruit man, was telling a good one on Armon Wagoner Tuesday. It was something like this: Armon was called up in Judge Smoot's court to answer a certain charge. He had no lawyer. The judge asked him if he expected to defend himself. "Yes," that is what I expect to do, Judge, if your Honor please," said Mr. Wagoner, "but I don't know anything about law, and you may have to help me to keep straight; but even a blind hog can pick up a few acorns." The case proceeded and Mr. Wagoner was declared not guilty of the charge.

The store and office of the Alabama Power Company has been undergoing some changes and improvements during the past few days. When finished it will be more suitable for demonstrating the use of electrical appliances for the home.

The old postoffice building is being practically built over again by the owner, Dr. Hayes. It will be made into two business houses, each fronting on the highway, with nice glass fronts. I tried to find out what the buildings are to be used for, but I only had the usual luck of a fellow who tries to get information or anything else from Si Hayes.

Everything is in order for a big business at the Probate office during the next few weeks. October the first is here with its many and sundry demands for licenses, taxes, automobile tags, and what not. If you are in any kind of business, just remember there is one thing as certain as death, and that is taxes and licenses.

A friend of The Union-Banner from the upper part of the county tells me that some of the folks up that way have been disappointed lately because we did not print stories about some folks who have got in trouble with the law. I am sorry anyone is disappointed with the paper for any cause. We try to make the kind of a paper that will please rather than disappoint or displease.

But the question of printing details of all the bad things that happen is one that gets next to me. I wish we could print our paper without ever having to relate anything bad about anybody. Since that is impossible however, we must therefore try to be fair to all, and either print all or leave out all. It is not our purpose to tell about one fellow getting into the entanglements of the law and then purposely fail to tell about another one. If we have missed any it is because we are by such cases just like we are by everything else. We can not know it all.

I want to suggest something that I believe would help the paper very much, and would perhaps go a long way to make the paper fulfill its greatest mission as a newspaper. If a fellow knows anything that is news, the surest way to see it in the paper is to write and tell us about it.

My good old friend, Mr. Jim Wiggins, of Dry Valley, was by to see me Tuesday. He was very gracious to express his pleasure at receiving The Union-Banner every week. He is one of the oldest subscribers on our list.

Last Sunday I attended the Sunday school convention at Thorsby Baptist Church. It was interesting, helpful, and instructive. A fine representation of Sunday School and church workers from all over the Chilton and Unity Associations. Report of the meeting from the Secretary, Grady Harris, appears in another place in this paper.

It was my first visit to the new Thorsby Baptist Church. The building is in keeping with the progressive spirit of the Thorsby community, and I congratulate Rev. Jones, his congregation of Baptists, and the other citizens of the community who doubtless also had a part in making this splendid house of worship possible.

I have been going to "big meeting" for the past week. You know what I mean. I notice Brother Jones of West Chilton in his letter this week made a reference to revivals, saying that we used to hold them in September and October, but now in July and August. Yes, I can remember when many folks used to refer to their revival as "September meeting."

Rev. Frank J. Fleming, of Ashland, in Clay County, who is doing the preaching at our revival this week, is what I consider a real good preacher. He has revealed God's word with great power during his ministry here. I am sure the result will be evident in a revival of faithfulness to the church in the hearts and lives of many of our people.

Then I must not fail to express appreciation for the work of the singer, P. S. Rowland. This is the second revival campaign he has been in here. He was with T. O. Reese about eleven years ago, when the meeting was held in a tent down on Main Street about where the Alabama Power Co. office is now located. Rowland is a wonder with children. His sunshine chorus has plenty of pepper.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

POULTRY PAYS AS SIDELINE TO COTTON

Wedowee, Ala., Sept. 28.—Mr. Ben Stanfel of Randolph County is a practical example of the large number of Alabama farmers who are finding that poultry properly managed is a profitable sideline to cotton. He has a flock of 140 white leghorn hens that net him an average of over $1.00 a day. Daily production ranges from 96 to 120 eggs.

In winter when egg prices are around 45 cents a dozen, and he gets nine dozen a day, his income is $4.05. Feed for his flock costs about $1.50 a day; this leaves a labor profit of $2.65. Profits in the summer are smaller.

Chickens on the Stanfel farm are fed Alabama Farm Bureau feed mixed by a formula recommended by the Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Chicks arrive on this farm about the middle of April from a hatchery free of white diarrhea. They cost 13 cents apiece postpaid.

The Stanfel farm produces infertile eggs; therefore, roosters are marketed when they weigh around two pounds. These surplus birds are usually disposed of through cooperative poultry sales.

Mr. Stanfel is one of the large number of farmers in southeast Alabama who keep a small flock of chickens. Clay, Cleburne, Chambers, Talladega, and Randolph Counties produce thousands of dollars worth of poultry and eggs per year. Money paid for this produce stimulates business conditions. The income from poultry is a year-round income.

TEXAS FARMERS POOL 250,000 BALES COTTON

Allen Northington, general manager of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association, got a telegram from the Texas Cooperative Cotton Association, in which it advised that the Texas Association expected cotton deliveries to reach 250,000 bales by the last of this month. This compares with 43,000 bales, which the association had received on the same date last year.

CULLMAN BUREAU NOW HAS 1,940 MEMBERS

Cullman, Ala., Sept. 28.—Since September 1st, 574 Cullman farmers have joined the Cullman County Farm Bureau, making a total membership in the county of 1,904, according to J. S. Hyatt, general manager, who reports that from 30 to 40 farmers are joining daily.

4-H CLUB BOY MAKES TWO BALES ON ACRE

News has reached here that James Albert Peeples, 16 year-lod club member, Dothan, Ala., Route 4, this year produced 2 bales of cotton on one acre of land.

James pooled this cotton with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association and drew 9 cents per pound, as the cotton was of good staple length and of good quality. J. H. Witherington, Houston County agent, said that James produced 2,411 pounds of seed cotton on one acre and that he still has about 100 pounds to pick.

FARMERS KNOW HOW TO MAKE DIMES WORK LIKE DOLLARS

The power of poverty's pinch will reach to many a farmer's table and feed trough this winter, although Alabama farmers who have had previous experience with low priced cotton know full well how to make dimes do the work of dollars.

Cotton is a big crop in Alabama this year. This bids fair to be the biggest crop in three years. The price is around 9 cents and the tendency is lower. This is a reminder of the bumper crop of 1914 when the price almost reached 7 cents.

When the greatly decreased purchasing power of the farmer's dollar today is considered, it is seen that cotton has declined to where it is relatively lower in buying power than in 1914. The actual price is still about 2 cents per pound higher.

Today the power of the Alabama farmer's dollar will buy but 77 cents worth, compared with 100 cents in the period from 1910 to 1914. The price of cotton is today exactly 27 per cent higher than in 1914. On the contrary, the prices the farmer has to pay are 32 per cent higher. So, it is easy to see that the farmer's cotton will buy but 95 cents worth of commodities today, compared with what it woudd in 1914, for example.

Alabama farmers face losses on four different counts, according to estimates by F. W. Gist, federal and State statistican, with the State Department of Agriculture at Montgomery.

First—there is the drought loss which is 45 per cent of the farmer's loss for this year.

Second—general low prices cause a loss of 44 per cen. over last year.

Third—the weevil was merciful this year, he caused a loss of but 5 per cent.

Fourth—other causes such as late planting, poor stand, etc., caused an additional loss of 6 per cent.

Mr. Gist further says that his reporters say Alabama will gather but 67 per cent of the food and feed crop of last year. The gross income of the Alabama farmer will be 57 cents, compared with a dollar for 1929.

This condition calls for economy and retrenchment along the line. Even with this, the wolf will hover near the door of many a renter and farmer in Alabama long before the holiday season.

COTTON DIRECTORS URGE BETTER COTTON

Directors of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association in session in Montgomery Tuesday passed a resolution urging cotton farmers to grow cotton of "at least 7-8 inch staple."

They showed that last year Alabama produced 4.8 per cent of cotton that showed less that 7-8 inch length in staple and that "during the past two years Alabama had the highest percentage of short staple cotton of any cotton producing state."

It was also stated that approximately one-third of the cotton used by Alabama mills is bought outside the state and that "3-4 inch cotton is today worth $7.50 to $10.00 per bale less than 7-8 inch staple length, and there is little probability of improvement in price in the near future." After setting forth these facts along with the fact "we are competing more and more with foreign countries in the production of short staple cotton of less than 7-8 inch length," they said.

"We, the directors of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association, being in full sympathy with and cooperating with the Federal Farm Board in its efforts to improve conditions in the cotton markets of the world and specifically to make it possible for the cotton farmers of this country to receive a fair price for their product, do hereby resolve:

"That an effort should be made to supplant the growing of all cotton which does not result in a staple of at least 7-8 inch in length and we urge all farmers in the state of Alabama to immediately procure planting seed of varieties suitable for their land and producing at least a staple of 7-8 inch. We furthermore urge that those supplying credits to cotton producers bring this matter strongly to the attention of their customers and that county agents, county farm bureaus, and all other agencies influencing production in the several comunities of the State do everything possible to eliminate the production of short staple cotton and improve the quality of the cotton produced."

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express to the people of Thorsby our thanks and appreciation for the many kind things they have done for us since we moved into the community. We have found that the people among whom we have come are the best of neighbors, and we want them to know that we appreciate their goodness to us. We especially thank our friends, and Dr. Wood for their kind ministrations during the recent sickness in our family.—M. Lockhart and family.

50,000 BALES COTTON POOLED

The Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association has received 50,000 bales of cotton. It received 7,000 bales on Monday. It is averaging about 3,000 bales each day.

Ben Vines of Beat 1 was a visitor to Clanton Tuesday.

NEW FERTILIZER BAG LIGHTENS HEAVY WORK

Another hard job on many of our farms will disapnear as a result of a report from Chile announcing a change in the size of nitrate bags.

Formerly shipped in 200-pound bags, Chilean nitrate of soda will henceforth be offered only in 100-pound bags. The new size will be introduced this fall.

The change was made after a careful survey of the preference of farmers in all parts of the country. The handling of a 200-pound bag is a strenuous job, and the smaller bag should mean real relief on the farm and better condition of the material.

That a vast army of farmers will be benefitted by this improvement is indicated by a report recently compiled which showed that nearly 1,000,000 use Chilean nitrate in their mixtures and for sidedressing and top-dressing purposes.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Canned ice cream ready for immediate use by consumers or manufacturers is to be placed on the market by Milk Industries, Inc.

Many people travel in the air. In the first 10 days of operation on the New York, Philadelphia, and Washington Airway 15,057 paid passengers were carried. This is said to be a world record.

The average of hog prices in the 1930-31 marketing year is expected to be higher than that of year ending September 30, 1930, says the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics which adds that this will be accompanied by relatively high feed prices.

The short and almost steady decline in America's export trade at last has been checked. In August this country shipped abroad goods valued at $300,000,000, an increase of $38,000,000 over July, according to a report by the U. S. Department of Commerce.

The day when a housewife can tune in her radio cook stove to bake the next meal is foreshadowed by a little glass dish in the General Electric laboratories in Schenectady. Without flame or means of heat of any visible sort this dish has cooked one sausage, one fried egg, one baked apple, a batch of cookies, and water has boiled in the dish. It was all done with the new, short-wave vacuum tube, which sends out a radio wave about 20 feet long and having a frequency of 50,000,000 cycles a second.

BEES IMPROVE DIET ADD TO FARM INCOME

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 29.—Bees for for the production of honey would be a profitable enterprise on nearly every farm in Alabama, it is believed by W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. He thinks that a unit of five colonies, to produce honey for home use, would improve the diet of farm people and add another source of income. Surplus could be sold.

He hopes to find that this can be succesfully done anywhere in Alabama. With this in view demonstration apiaries have been placed on 3 of 11 demonstration farms. They are at Blountsville, Hamilton, and Athens. It is hoped that others may be placed at Abbeville, Cuba, Jackson, Lineville, Sylacauga, and Wetumpka.

These farms are operated by the Extension Service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute in cooperation with the State secondary agricultural schools as demonstrations for farmers in the 11 sections. The bee demonstrations at the three farms are units of five colonies. At all three places they are in fine shaps to go through the winter, and at Blountsville there will be a surplus of honey.

Establishment of these apiaries was made possible by the generosity of Alabama bee producers. Among those making donations of bees were Mr. Jasper Knight, Haynesville; J. M. Cutts and son of Montgomery; Mr. W. E. Harrell of Haynesville; Mr. Zed Gafford of Bowling, and the Citronelle Apiary of Citronelle.

EXTRA WOOD RING FORMING

A second so-called annual ring is being formed during the present year in many of the trees of Alabama, according to Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester, who has just concluded field investigations on the subject. Future forest students, therefore, will have to be very careful in computing the age by counting the annual rings of trees whose life span includes the year 1930.

As a rule, the age of the stem of a tree at any point in its height can be determined by the number of rings extending about the center, counting from the pith outward. Under ordinary circumstances one light ring and one dark ring are formed every year. The light ring consists of hollow fibers and vessels with thin walls, used largely to carry water and sap from the roots to the leaves during the time of rapid growth which of course is coincident with the damp weather of the spring and early summer. The dark ring comprises the layer of tubes and vessels formed after the period of most rapid growth and consequently consists of smaller and more densely packed elements.

Under special circumstances, however, as when the spring growing period is interrupted by a severe drought, the growth slows up and the dark ring begins to form ahead of time. Later in the summer the drought may be followed by a rainy spell which causes resumption of growth of each kind are much thinner than spring, making a new light ring in turn, followed by a second dark ring toward the close of the growing season. Thus there may appear to be two light rings and two dark rings for the same year.

Close examination of these rings usually shows that the second ones og each kind are much thinner than those adjoining them, and rarely extend entirely around the tree. They are known to foresters as false rings and when carefully watched for in estimating age of the tree they may be eliminated as a source of error.

Foreign trade picked up in August, which makes it a little embarrassing for the free traders who claimed the new tariff would eliminate it and who were chuckling in glee every time Uncle Sam's exports and imports showed a decrease.

FARM BUREAU DISTRIBUTING VETCH

The Chilton County Farm Bureau this week received ten tons of vetch seed for distributing among its members. Ten tons of Austrian peas have already been received and distributed. According to County Agent, Stapp, this is about one-tenth of the amount which ought to be used by the farmers of Chilton County for winter cover crops and soil building purposes.

Farmers are reminded by Mr. Stapp that additional supplies of these seeds which may be bought from now on will cost a cent and a half a pound more than that which has already been bought.

Clanton District of Boy Scouts Are Going Out After Required Finances

Recently Clanton Kiwanis Club completed arrangements with officials of the Central Alabama Council Boy Scouts with headquarters in Opelika to enter Clanton as one of the Districts in the Council. This assures Scouting for Clanton and neighboring cities.

The Council with John J. Sigwald as Scout Executive, comprises sixteen counties or one fourth of the State of Alabama. Mr. Sigwald has six districts from which he works. Opelika District, Auburn District, Tallasse District, Selma District, Alexander City District and now Clanton District are the administrative centers from which the work is given out to the surounding territory.

Clanton District officials with the executive's help will start to raise the $350.00 quota of the $4,350 budget of the Council this week. Team workers will approach prospects to secure this quota. "The idea is," said Mr. Sigwald, "not to have only a few support the movement but have many give a little that will make the goal of $350.00."

Scouting will soon be 21 years old in America. The local executive has been a scout since the age of twelve and since that time has served as a volunteer leader in every position of the scout movement. Mr. Sigwald comes to Clanton with scouting experience. He will set up the Clanton District scout officials with C. E. Stapp as chairman. Besides assiting in the finance campaign Mr. Sigwald will confer with each scouter as to his duties. While here he will tell local Kiwanians the immediate objectives of the movement locally.

Scouting teaches a boy two things. Character development and citizenship training. At least two troops will be registered before the new year in Clanton. Besides a troop in Thorsby is already under construction.

This movement will give our boys between 12 and 16 years of age the very things so necessary to develop them into real men who shall be in position to wisely govern our city in the near future.

NEGRO SUSPECTS CARRIED TO BIRMINGHAM AS MOBS DISPENSE

Troops Guarding Jail At Huntsville Released; City Again Quiet

Huntsville, Ala., Sept. 30.—Huntsville was quiet and rapidly returning to its normal activity Tuesday night after martial rule had been lifted from the city and the two negroes sought by mobs here had been taken to the Jefferson County Jail at Birmingham for safekeeping.

National guard units ordered to guard the Madison County Jail and to protect G. E. Henderson and Rufus McCoy, negroes, were released from further duty during the day by Gov. Graves.

The city for two days resembled an armed camp in the vicinity of the jail as guardsmen patrolled the streets.

Several minor clashes between the mob and the soldiers marked the martial rule. On Sunday night shots were fired over the heads of the crowds as it broke down a gate after cutting wire fences. Monday night another mob edged close to the jail only to be driven away by tear gas and the points of bayonets.

Spirited Into City

The negroes were spirited into Birmingham Tuesday morning by state law enforcement officers. Henderson was arrested in connection with investigation of the slaying of H. E. Ross, local busines man, who surprised a negro burglar in his home Sunday night.

McCoy is being held on a charge of murder in connection with the death of J. E. Mathes, traveling salesman of Phoenix, Ariz., whom McCoy told officers he had slain and thrown into the Tennessee River, September 10.

Quaint Old Land's End

There is no spot in England more wrapped in mysterious charm than Land's End. It is the jumping off place of a million imaginations, and when the freedom to travel is possible, a trip to Land's End will prove one of life's happiest realizations. If you would try it, put up a week-end or more at St. Just, or St. Ives, Pendeed, or at old familiar Penzance of Gilbert and Sullivan fame. After a night's rest, wander forth into the quaint old streets, visit fisher homes in sheltered nooks, climb old cliff paths, pulling and puffing out the finest Atlantic air and before the train takes you away you will discover that the lure of Land's End was a charming trick to introduce you to several of the loveliest villages of old England.—Boston Herald.

Vacation Important

The Public Health service says that a vacation is one of the most important of our social institutions. In a world that is so arranged that most people are compelled to work during the greater portion of the year, a change, a rest, a vacation, if properly taken makes the work possible. Every man and woman is entitled to a vacation. Every woman engaged in maintaining a home is entitled to a vacation. It is not necessary to go long distances, but it is necessary to get out in the open. A vacation should be a time set aside for the building up of that reserve of health and bodily vigor necessary to carry people through the long periods of work which must follow before the next vacation season rolls around.

REPORT OF THE COUNTY MONEY

Bonded Debt Has Been Reduced to $109,000; $58,000 Now In Treasury

NO ROAD TAX WILL BE COLLECTED NEXT YEAR

This being the first meeting of the Commissioners Court in October and the end of the fiscal tax year, the Commissioners Court would like to render a statement to the people of the County of the financial condition of our county.

We have paid $91,000.00 of the $200,000.00 bonded indebtedness which will be due in 1947, leaving $109,000.00 balance. The county has now on hand in the treasury $58,111.49 to commence the new tax year with, and all bills of the county are paid except current running bills which are generally paid monthly.

We have graveled many miles of road this year, and in fact have graveled practically all parts of the roads that become impassable in wet weather. We have built several large steel bridges, and also several creosoted timber bridges this year. We only have one large bridge in the county that is of cheap material. The Court has advertised for lumber for bridges by competitive bids and found it necessary to buy this lumber outside of the county.

Many of the roads have been widened and graded, culverts put in, and we feel like the court has done some of the best and most lasting work for the county this year that we have ever done. We take this opportunity to thank the people of the county for their help and assistance in furnishing gravel and rights-of-way which were necessary in improving our roads. We also would like to thank all road subjects in the county for their assistance and the faithful work they have done on the roads during the past year.

We did not buy any trucks, but have followed what has been the policy of the court all along, that is, to spend all the county's money as near as we could with the people of the county, and in doing this we hired the people's trucks of the county to do the graveling with, thus in a large measure giving back to the people the taxes they paid.

We consider the farmers of the county, and the great per cent of our people are farmers, have probably had the worst year from a financial standpoint that we have had in many years, and we feel like it is the duty of the Commissioners Court to aid and assist them in every way that we can. We realize that it is to be exceedingly hard for the farmers of our county to make a crop next year and that they will need all the possible assistance they can get, and realizing that very few of the road subjects have been able to pay their fee this year and will be less able to do so next year, and in carrying out our promise to the people that we would reduce taxes whenever we felt like the county was able to do so, the Commissioners Court, at its present term, passed an order that no road tax be collected from any road subject in this county for the year 1931, and also that no road subject be required to work on the public roads for 1931. The effect of this order is to relieve all road subjects from payment of the road fee of $5.50, or working the roads for the year 1931.

We feel that this will, to a measure at least, be of assistance to the farmer, and we especially ask the people's co-operation in all things working toward the betterment of our people and our county.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.
J. P. Bean,
T. A. Maddox,
J. L. Burnett,
A. P. Vinson,
Commissioners.

SCOUT FINANCES OF CLANTON DISTRICT RAISED IN DRIVE

The quota of the Clanton District Boy Scouts was raised here last week in cash and pledges after an earnest effort by C. E. Stapp, W. M. Polk, John Hollis, J. C. Page, T. H. Neighbors, Rev. E. A. Childs Grady Broadhead, Billy Smith, Rev. S. J. Ezell, W. M. Wyatt, Sam Powers, Frank James, C. H. Pipes, and John J. Sigwald, Scout executives, who approached prospects.

Thus the organization of Clanton District Boy Scouts in the Central Alabama area council is assured. C. E. Stapp was elected the district's first chairman. Mr. Stapp announces the following members of his organization: John Hollis, camping chairman; Percy Pitts, service chairman; Rev. E. Childs, court of honor chairman; John C. Page, chairman of finance; Dr. V. J. Gragg, health and safety committee chairman; Sam Powers, chairman of the leadership training committee; Earl Thomas, chairman Lone (rural) Scouts; W. M. Wyatt, chairman of publicity; Rev. S. J. Ezell, chairman of reading; and Raymond Smith, troop organization chairman.

With the above organization the scout executive explained at the Kiwanis meeting last week that scouting will operate 365 days each year, and not only on his visits.

CHILTON COUNTY ASSOCIATION MEETS OCTOBER 15TH AND 16TH

The Chilton County Baptist Association will meet with the Mulberry Baptist Church, about 12 miles West of Clanton, on Wednesday and Thursday, October 15th and 16th, 1930.

Addition Made To Church At Coopers

Gift Of Former Resident Makes Possible Annex At Chestnut Creek

There has recently been built as an annex to Chestnut Creek Baptist church a large wing on each side, which are split up into rooms to accommodate the Sunday School clases. The rooms in the annexes are divided by swinging doors and curtains which may either be used or pushed aside, thus throwing the entire building into one huge auditorium. When all the building is used at least two thousand people can be comfortably seated including the balcony.

A new coat of white paint has been applied all over the outside of the building, and the inside has been covered with a coat of stain and varnish, giving a very delightful appearance both on the outside and inside.

This wonderful addition to Chestnut Creek church was made possible almost entirely by the generous gift of one, Mr. P. C. Pinson, for many years a resident of Globe, Arizona. The entire cost of the work was covered by the gift from Mr. Pinson, which amounted to $2,000.00. Of courses there was quite a bit of free labor furnished by the friends of the church in and around Coopers.

P. C. Pinson has lived in the West for 22 years. He was born in Verbena about 54 years ago; spent his boyhood days in Cooper, and attended school there. He also attended Sunday School when a boy at Chestnut Creek church. His mother and father as well as other relatives are buried in the cemetery at Cooper.

Through his brother, M. A. Pinson of Cooper, P. C. Pinson inquired if the church would accept the gift, and inquired of the amount necessary. When this information was sent, the money was forthcoming, the money being intrusted to M. A. Pinson, who disposed of it according to the plans of the church membership.

When M. A. Pinson was approached regarding some information about his brother he said: "I wouldn't say very much about it as my brother dislikes publicity. It would please him better for you to thank those who donated labor toward erecting the building. I would suppose that it was sentimental reasons that prompted my brother to make the gift."

In conference at Chestnut Creek church last Saturday, resolutions were submitted and adopted, expressing the appreciation of the people of Cooper and surrounding territory for the donation of Mr. Pinson as well as for the free labor given by the people there.

Dr. Gragg Candidate For the State Senate

Race Is Being Made On Heflin-Locke Ticket In Three Counties

In the person of Dr. V. J. Gragg, of Clanton, the Heflin-Locke ticket is offering one of the outstanding men of Central Alabama as a candidate for State Senator from the Fifteenth Senatorial District, composed of Chilton, Shelby, and Autauga Counties. Regardless of how one may feel about political matters, it is a fact generally recognized, that Dr. Gragg is a man of outstanding ability, and being well known throughout the district, his strength as a candidate for this important office is at once recognized.

Dr. Gragg was born and reared in Chilton County. He is a self-made man who came up from the plow handles by virtue of his own ambition to be something in life. In his early days he taught in the public schools of Chilton County for several years. During that time he formed many contacts which have ripened into lifelong friendships.

From the schoolroom as a teacher he went to medical college and prepared himself for the practice of his chosen profession. For many years he has been one of the most active physicians and surgeons in Chilton County. As a doctor he has come into intimate contact with thousands of people, and it goes without saying that this personal attachment will gain for him supporters in his present aspirations as a public official and publisc servant.

As a physician and surgeon, Dr. Gragg, in recent years, has been the leader in the movement to establish and maintain the Central Alabama Hospital, at Clanton. Through his vision, and untiring work in behalf of this institution, the same has become one of the most valuable institutions of Chilton County, serving not only the county, but a large portion of Central Alabama as well.

As a member of the Town Council of Clanton, Dr. Gragg has seen service more than one term. For three terms in succession he served as Mayor of Clanton. During his administration as Mayor the paving of the business streets of the town was done. This accomplishment stands a monument to the executive ability and civic progress of his administration.

DR. V. J. GRAGG

In announcing his candidacy for the State Senate, Dr. Gragg has made the following statement to the voters:

As a candidate for State Senator from the 15th Senatorial District, I realize that I should express my views concerning matters that might interest voters before soliciting your vote.

1. I believe in majority rule instead of minority control, as we now have in some instances. And I shall stand for all elective offices, education or otherwise, being filled by the expression of the voters interested.

2. More safe laws for protection of depositors in the state banks.

3. Reduction rather than increase of taxes and expenses if possible, but no reduction of school funds.

4. Continued progress along the lines of education and public health.

5. Continued road improvement without debts if possible.

6. Honest and impartial enforcement of the law regardless of class or creed.

In conclusion, will say that I solicit the vote and influence of every law-abiding white voter regardless of his or her past affiliation, realizing to the fullest extent that a bad citizen is a bad citizen, and a good citizen is a good citizen, regardless of whether he has called himself a Republican, Democrat, or what-not in the past.

County Commissioners Make Statement Concerning County Almshouse Business

To the Public:

Our attention has been called to the report of the recent grand jury in which the keeper of the almshouse has been criticized.

We have had considerable trouble for the last two years in trying to build and improve our almshouse, but Dr. Andrews, State Prison Inspector, would not permit the same to be done. Dr. Andrews wants this county to combine with twenty-one other counties and build a joint almshouse. The Court has been to several meetings in Montgomery, but no agreement has been reached at this time. It has been our desire to make considrable improvements at the almshouse by building a new building, especially fitted to take care of the old and cripple people, put heat and water works in the same, and, of course, buy new furniture.

We have no house at all for negroes, and under the law we cannot add to our almshouse until Dr. Andrews furnishes us with a plan that he would endorse, and this he has refused to do. He has had the almshouse of this county examined often. The last examination by Dr. Andrews' Department before the grand jury report was late in the spring and he said conditions were alright, and he has had the almshouse examined since the grand jury report and while the report has not been filed with us the examiner told Judge Reynolds that he found the conditions at the almshouse satisfactory and was only going to make some minor suggestions.

We have realized that we ought to buy some new furniture and bedding for the almshouse, but we have not thought that it was fair to the tax payers to spend a lot of their money and then Dr. Andrews demand such changes and have us move the almshouse entirely out of the county and not use the new material we had bought, so we have been trying to get along the best we could, always keeping in mind the comfort and care of the inmates.

The almshouse has been visited frequently by some of the members of the board, and the only complaint we remember having from the inmates in the last twelve months was from Mr. Lawrence, and he has been complaining ever since he has been in the poorhouse.

If some of the people of the county who are complaining at the almshouse had to contend with fifteen or twenty elderly people, practically all of whom are decrepit and in many ways dissatisfied, some of whom could not get along with their own people, and many of whom it is impossible to satisfy, they could very readily see the situation that confronts the keeper of the almshouse. The court also understands that several pepole who wanted the job to keep the almshouse and failed to get it, have been making quite a bit of complaint, and also it has come to the attention of the court that one or two have constituted themselves spies to stay around the almshouse and try to dissatisfy the old people, and, of course, there are others who are anxious to criticize regardless of the conditions. In justice to Mr. Bean, the keeper of the almshouse, we might state that he gets $12.00 per month for each pauper, and out of this he furnishes food, clothing and he prepares the food, and the county furnishes other necessities. It has been the idea of the county to keep these people comfortable, and practically all of them, if not all, are in much better circumstances now than they were before coming to the almshouse, however the court has not seen fit to lavish the hard earned tax payers money needlessly, and uselessly, in things we did not think necessary for the comfort and welfare of these old people.

We are looking after the paupers in the best manner we can under the present circumstances considering that we are not permitted to build any new buildings. On September the 22nd, 1930, since the grand jury report, we had Dr. Andrews before our board and told him that we had

Heflin Denies Trade With Republicans

Report Of A Speech Made At Greensboro, In Hale County

In a speech at Greensboro, Hale County, on September 24, Senator Tom Heflin is quoted as denying the charge of Sam Hobbs that he (Heflin) has made a trade with the Republicans of Alabama. In reporting the speech of Senator Heflin on this occasion, the following clipping is taken from the Abbeville Daily Independent:

"The Raskob-Tammany leaders in Alabama are living and feeding on falsehoods," declared Senator Tom Heflin before one of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences ever to gather in Hale County.

"As as example of the falsehoods that the defenders of the "27" are putting out, the Senator quoted the following from a speech by Judge S. F. Hobbs, of Selma:

"I have it on the highest authority that Heflin has given his solemn assurance to the chairman of the Republican committee in DeKalb County that he would help elect a Republican Congressman in the Seventh District if he should be favored with the Republican vote in the counties of that district."

"This is a falsehood as black as Sam Hobbs is capable of telling," Senator Heflin asserted.

The speaker (Heflin) said he did not know the DeKalb County Republican chairman, and he had made absolutely no trades with any Republican leaders. "Sam Hobbs is a common prevaricator," the Senator avowed.

The above is an interesting piece of political "news" in view of the fact that the present political situtation in Alabama has assumed so many different angles in different parts of the state. It was handed to us by a prominent Republican of Chilton County with the request that we publish same in The Union-Banner.

ALABAMA GIRLS WIN AT MEMPHIS

Carried Away Most of Honors In Judging Contest At Fair

Auburn, Ala., Oct. 6.—Four-H club girls of Alabama carried away most of the honors in judging contests held during the Southern club congress at the mid-south fair, Memphis. Opal Jones, of Butler County made the highest score, thereby winning over her representatives of 4-H club work from the other southern states, who judged materials used in home improvement, preserved food products, and clothing.

Miss Jones was a member of the Alabama food preservation judging team and her partner was Lela Pope, also of Butler County. This team won first place in judging preserved food products.

Alabama's team in home improvement, Robbie Kate Register and Jeannette Borland of Dale County, also won first place. Another team entered by Alabama was Lillian Holt and Ellen Amanda Ingram of Lee who were judges of clothing. This contest was won by the Kentucky team.

These girls won the right to represent Alabama at Memphis by winning in judging contests held during the State short course at Auburn in May. They were the first teams Alabama has sent to the mid-south fair.

Speaking of the achievement, Miss Helen Johnston, State home demonstration agent, stated that judging had been emphasized in 4-H club work conducted under the direction of Miss Bess Fleming, and that she was delighted with the showing made by Alabama's representatives.

The teams were chaperoned while in Memphis by Miss Lavada Curtis, Dale County home demonstration agent, who trained the home improvement team. The clothing team was trained by Miss Mary B. Bailey, Lee County home demonstration agent, and the food preservation team by Mrs. Thelma Fraser, Butler County home demonstration agent.

NEWS IN BRIEF

United States farm population decreased 4,000,000 from 1920 to 1930, from 31,000,000, to 27,000,000.

Tree-ripened, quick-frozen Georgia peaches in fiber cups are being packed and distributed throughout the nation by a company of Montezuma, Ga.

Fires on farms last year took a total of approximately 3,500 lives and caused property damage to an amount estimated at $100,000,000, or nearly 1-4 of the fire loss of the entire country.

constipation

"I HAD a stubborn case of constipation after a very severe spell of grip," says Mr. John B. Hutchison, of Neosho, Mo. "When I would get constipated, I'd feel so sleepy, tired and worn-out.

"When one feels this way, work is much harder to do, especially farm work. I would have dizzy headaches when I could hardly see to work, but after I read of Black-Draught, I began taking it. I did not have the headaches any more.

"When I have the sluggish, tired feeling, I take a few doses of Black-Draught, and it seems to carry off the poison and I feel just fine. I use Black-Draught at regular intervals. It is easy to take and I know it helps me."

Bro. Bryan's Weekly Message

(Written for The Union-Banner by REV. J. A. BRYAN, Pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Alabama)

CHRIST SPEAKS UNTO US IN THESE LAST DAYS

In Paul's inspired letter to the Hebrew Christians we read the salutation thus: "God, who at sundry times and divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His son, whom He hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also He made the worlds; who being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His person." Certainly those words refer to Jesus Christ, and makes these minutes and hours very serious and sacred as we study together.

God hath spoken words by His son, "I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." That is, Christ is telling us that He came not to call the self-righteous Pharisee, the bigoted scribe, the egotistic one but He came to call the sinner and the lost to repentance. Now what does He say? My friend, He says, "I call you to turn to Christ and live, for why will ye die when there is life this moment with me?"

Christ was passing through Jericho, not old Jericho, which was destroyed in the time of Joshua, but it was the new Jericho of New Testament times. But as Christ passed along through fields great multitudes followed Him in a mad rush to see Him, and be near Him, some maybe for curiosity's sake and others because they felt the need of Him in their lives. Among the great throng of eager seekers that day was Zacheus, a man low of statue. He climbed a sycamore tree that he might be enabled to see Christ in that great crowd which followed closely. Again we think of Zacheus as being a hated and despised tax gatherer. Maybe his next door neighbor did not speak to him. The very idea that Jesus Christ passes along and does not forget and overlook this man who keenly felt that he was disliked, even to the extent of hatred by his fellowman. Jesus Christ looked up into the sycamore tree and said, "Zacheus I need you. Come down, for today I must abide at thy house. I came to call sinners to repentance and you are a sinner. I want to go home with you and sit down and talk with you as the Saviour of sinners, a friend to a friend." Zacheus came down and Jesus went home with him and saved his soul. That is just what Christ the sinless Lamb of God does for poor, hell-deserving sinners. What a merciful savior he is.

Certainly He speaks of the characters which He came to seek and to save in these words. That is, He came to seek and to save "lost ones." You may be on the cold dark mountain sides of sin, lost to your mothers and father's prayers but at the same time Jesus is seeking to save your soul from the ravages of hell. He places you on His shoulder and takes you into the fold. Hear Him again as He says, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth, for I am God and there is none beside me." This is a wonderful verse which Jesus uses to make the plan of salvation plain.

Again Jesus is calling unto us, speaking unto us in these last days, saying, "I did more for you than walk the hills and mountain sides of Palestine with stone-bruised feet seeking to save sinners, doing good even to many who hated and rejected me. I did more for you than to give you your physical and material needs. I did more for you than spending nights in prayer for you. I went out to Calvary bearing my cross and died on it for you. I was uplifted on Calvary's cross to draw you unto me." "I, if I belifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me." For salvation from sin we look to this uplifted Christ, and cling to Him and all that He did for us when the waves of sin, death, and hell rolled over His sinless body on the accursed tree.

He speaks to us these last days in these words, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth." O how we should look unto Christ. "Look unto Christ." This sentence should ring in our ears, and we should cherish more and more each day its priceless value. I hear someone say, "I can't understand enough about it to look to Christ." My friend, Jesus Christ makes it mighty plain. "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth for I am God and there is none beside me." I can't and you can't look unto associates, social prestige, influences, fine clothes, money, fine cars, benevolent deeds, kindnesses, earthly friends. We must look unto Christ our true and never changing friend. Yes, it is Christ the friend of sinners. O, my friend, look unto this precious, loving, gentle Christ and be ye saved.

Again He hath spoken to us in these words, "Neither is there salvation in any other for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." The church is mighty sweet and so sacred, but it does not save us from sin. Looking unto that precious mother and kind father does not save one. Looking and trusting in the good qualities of a dear friend does not save one. Only by looking unto Christ are we saved from sin. "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth, for I am God and there is none beside me."

In the 12th chapter of Hebrews we read these words He speaks unto us, "Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Now "looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." That is, the Christian faith is a continuous coming unto Christ. What a sin it is to sing, "Just as I am without one plea," unless we come to Him in faith, believing that He will accept us thus. That is, we come to Christ for help, for strength, for courage, for submission, for guidance. We come to Christ for our all.

Then He hath spoken unto us in these words which are precious far beyond comprehension, "Lo, I am with thee always, even unto the end of the ages." Pardon me, dear friends, but this precious and endearing promise of Christ came from His lips out yonder on Mount Olivet, that cold mountain side where He slept without a blanket, pillow, or mattress, that cold mountain side where He prayed all night for you and for me. It was that mountain side over which David ran in sackcloth and ashes mourning for the disgrace which his son, Absalom, had brought upon him as he cried, "O, Absalom, my son, Absalom!" It was that mountain side over which Christ rode and paused on His triumphad entrance and sighed from a broken and wounded heart, "O, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how oft would I have folded thee beneath my wings as does a hen her chickens, and yet thou would not."

It was to this place nigh unto Bethany just before His ascension He led His disciples out and lifted up His spike-scarred hands and blessed those tired weary, discouraged disciples. O, if He would lift those same hands up and bless us this morning. He said, "I am going to leave you. I am going up into heaven, but I want you to remember that I am with you. " Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the ages." Friends, what would we do without this precious promise of Christ which He hath spoken unto us in these last days? When David Livingston returned to Oxford University after some service in Africa, the eager ministerial students expected to hear him speak of the natives, their customs, language, and life in general. But he chose for the morning devotional service, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the ages." As we look out upon the world we know not what a day will bring forth, but O how comforting it is to know this promise from the great loving heart of Christ can sustain us and does sustain us in the great task.

A fact you should not overlook

More red-cells in the blood! Good health and resistance to infection and disease, depend on that! Loss of appetite, underweight, sluggishness, a weakened condition, nervousness, pimples and boils are symptoms, often seen, of a deficiency of red-cells in the blood. If a lowered red-cell count is allowed to continue, ANEMIA often results. S.S.S. should be your safeguard. A hundred years of experience has proved its usefulness in building red-cells in the blood. Take it before meals. Millions of people have found it the easiest and surest way to restore their red-blood-cells. The appetite picks up, the whole body is invigorated. G. W. WEAVER

To the Voters of Chilton County:

As a candidate for the State Senate, and your County being one the counties comprising the Fifteenth Sanatorial District, I feel that I should give an expression, before solociting your suffrage as to what my position will be on all matters of local and State concern.

1. I shall support such measures as will, in my judgment, promote the general good interest of the State and its people.

2. I will co-operate with the Representative of your County in getting such legislation as the County demands.

3. I am opposed to any increase in taxes; believing that the revenue of the State at this time is ample to, if frugally administered, carry on a progressive administration for the next four years.

4. There is much to be done to create a greater efficency in the school system of the State. And to provide a more adequate and better means of transportation to the rural schools, and whatever legislation appropriate to this need I shall advocate and support. Too much can not be done to promote the progress of education, and it will be my purpose to support such measures as will foster education.

5. I advocate the election by the people of all major offices, including the County Superintendent of Education; believing that the people are better qualified to select their officials than any power of appointment. Also to abolish the absentee ballot law.

6. I stand for such progressive legislation as will promote the farming industry.

7. I am an advocate of good roads.

8. I will be fair to both labor and capital, and support such legislation as will promote the speedy development of the State's natural resources.

Upon these expressed policies I solicit your vote and influence.

AUTUMN LEAVES VALUABLE

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 6.—The fallen leaves, as autumn approaches, usually cause a series of hazardous conditions due to the common practice of burning them, states the Alabama Commission of Forestry. In cities and towns it is customary for the residents to rake or sweep the leaves into piles and then set fire to them. The possibility of a sudden gust of wind carrying the fire to grass or buildings is very great. The smoke caused by the burning, while pleasantly pungent if not inhaled in too great quantities, obstructs the view and often contributes to traffic accidents. In rural localtiies the burning of leaves around buildings also may cause fire to be carried to the woods, resulting in large financial loss to the owners.

Fallen leaves in both city and country are a valuable asset and may well be gathered and utilized. Leaves make excellent fertilizer, and if they are piled and covered with earth they rot quickly. They contain phosphoric acid and potash but burning them drives off the most abundant and valuable element, nitrogen. Decayed leaves, or humas as this part of the soil is called, applied to lawns, flower and vegetable gardens increase growth to a great extent, and when applied to crop land in the case of corn and cotton materially increases the yield per acre.

A. A. Beaird of Montgomery attended the singing at Coopers last Sunday afternoon. Mr. Beaird and his wife came up with Enoch Mims and family.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

University, Ala., Oct. 6.—Miss Fanny T. Taber, field agent for the library association of Alabama, spoke in favor of the library commission bill, recently in Doster Hall, to the presidents of sixteen federated clubs in Tuscaloosa and to the library classes at the University of Alabama.

Miss Taber explained that the passage of such a bill would mean that the libraries of the state would be under one central head. One of the main interests of the commission would be to establish a circulating library in every county in the state, in order that the rural sections might enjoy better reading advantages.

Miss Taber stated that a library commission would develop the libraries of the state in the same way that the State Department of Education improves the schools.

Miss Taber declared that every state in the union except five already have library commissions, and that every southern state has a commission, except one, Alabama.

It is said that the library bill has received endorsement from most of the women's clubs in Tuscaloosa, as well as from many of the men's civil organizations.

Miss Taber, in addition to her duties as field agent for the Alabama Library Association, is librarian at Alabama College in Montevallo.

HONOR WHERE HONOR IS DUE

There is nothing sacrosanct about the American Constitution. Nevertheless, it is worthy of all reverence, for the simple reason that it has worked. No finer statement of the purposes of government can be found than in its Preamble. The spirit and purpose of the American democracy, the safeguarding of human liberty, the enforcement of even-handed justice, the opening of the doors of opportunity to every citizen, find adequate expression in our fundamental law. A good many proposals which were excitedly advocated a few years ago for extending the direct action of the popular judgment have already been found unworkable. The sober wisdom of the constitutional fathers has been amply justified, and we do well to pay them tribute.—Minneapolis Journal.

There's nothing for it now but to raise the anchor and put your weight against the oar. The tide is at the ebb, and we've been becalmed here long enough. The captain of one of the largest corporation in the country said recently that he was personally urging all his mates in every big industry to take out and dust off their idle money in the banks and start buying materials, machinery and man-hours now, so that men might begin buying things again. All, he thought, were as low, in price and spirits, as they were likely to go.

The way to give a lift to labor now is to do a little of it.—Business Week.

Now is the season when a candidate wonders whether he should be wet, dry, moist or neutral. —Indianapolis News.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

One of the constructive steps taken by the national administration with a view to helping the unemployment situation, has to do with further restriction of immigration. It was announced recently at Washington that the State Department recently at Washington that the State Department foreign countries, would hereafter, for the time being at least, refuse visas to alien laborers seeking to find work in this country. The action has been ordered under an old section of our immigration laws which provides for the exclusion of aliens from the United States who are liable to become public charges after their admission to the country.

Ordinarily when an alien in a foreign country, coming under the quota, asks for a visa, if he is able bodied and otherwise qualified, and if he has sufficient funds to support himself and those dependent on him until he gets to his destination, he is admitted. This is the procedure in normal or prosperous times in the United States. But, it goes without saying, that these are not normal times. We have now a general condition of unemployment so that there is not now a reasonable prospect that a foreign artisan or laborer can immediately find employment in the United States. For that reason he is much more apt to become a public charge than during prosperous times.

It was pointed out in a statement made public at Washington on the subject, that the enforcement of this section of the law strictly against Mexican labor last year, greatly cut down the tide of immigration from Mexico into the United States. Steps of a similar nature have been taken against the immigration of Canadian labor, which is not under the quota, and in fact, Canada has adopted restrictions against American labor during the present depression, which has hit Canada and the rest of the world as well as the United States.

It is undoubtedly true that any great inflow of alien labor into the country at this time would be unfortunate from the standpoint of the immigrant as well as from the public standpoint. Indeed it is during a time like the present that we come to appreciate our immigration restriction laws which have been carefully developed during the past few years.

It is easy to illustrate the importance of this legislation. Before the World War, it is to be remembered, that immigrants were pouring into the United States at the rate of more than a million a year, in fact the tide during the year 1914 mounted to over 1,200,000. Immigration naturally fell off during the war when the nations of Europe were employing their man-power on the field of battle. But after the war was over and things began to readjust themselves the figures rapidly approached the million mark again and it became evident that the tide would soon mount much higher. But the two restrictive immigration acts were passed and the immigration to this country from Europe and Asia was sharply restricted. The total number of alien immigrants coming into the country during the past nine fiscal years was 3,301,981, or an average of 366,887 a year. Now if we judge by the figures from the pre-war years and the known desire of nearly everybody in Europe to come to America after the war was over, we can easily estimate that had it not been for restricted immigration, we would have five or six million more aliens in the country than we have today. This would have meant several millions more applicants for jobs, and that many additional people to take care of in times of unemployment.

This is a situation we do not like to contemplate, in this year of 1930 when there are not enough jobs to go around, and when many workers are employed part time. It demonstrates the wisdom of our restricted immigration policy. The greater the unemployment the greater the distress and the longer the time required for a restoration of normal conditions.

NOW FOR THE FINAL BATLE

The primaries are over and the two political parties are on the home stretch. From now until Sunday before the first Monday in November we may expect a battle royal between the Republican and Democratic speakers. The issues are varied in the different states. In spite of some efforts to keep the wet and dry issue out of the picture it is a potent factor in some campaigns. In others farm relief, the tariff and the depression are issues. Republicans in their literature and in their speeches have succeeded in making out a good case for the Hoover administration so far as concrete achievements are concerned, and the list as enumerated in the booklets issued by the Republican National Committee is an imposing one.

The Democrats during the rest of the campaign are expected to make the most of the industrial depression as an issue. They will blame it on to the Republicans but may have some difficulty in explaining the fact that it is world-wide, causing revolutions in many countries, and threats of revolutions in others. Efforts of free traders to blame the depression on to the new tariff are ludicious in view of the fact that it statred many months before the tariff was passed, and that conditions seemed to have been slowly but steadily improving since the bill became a law. The protectionists on the other hand are charging that the blocking of the tariff bill in Congress by the free traders accentuated the depression and enabled importers to get such a surplus of cheaply made foreign products into the country that it will be perhaps the first of the year before the full effects of the tariff bill on American industry are felt by an acceleration in business.

The contest in the Senate will be an interesting one for the reason that it was in the Senate that most of the administration's legislation was delayed. Thirty-five senators are to be elected, three more than the usual one-third of the Senate. Three elections, in Kansas, Pennsylvania and Ohio are for terms expiring in 1933. These elections are made necessary by the death of Senator Burton in Ohio, by the elevation of Senator Curtis to the vice presidency, and by the rejection of Senator Vare by a majority of the Senate.

In the primaries held there have been five upsets, and strange as it may seem, more Democratic upsets than Republican. The sitting Democratic senators defeated were Senator Simmons, of North Carolina; Senator Blease of South Carolina, and Senator Ransdell, of Louisiana. There is in fact a fourth Democratic upset due to the fact that the Democrats of Alabama refused to permit Senator Heflin to run in a Democratic primary nominating Mr. Bankhead instead. Heflin is now running independently and fighting for his political life. Whether the Alabama upset will be made complete depends on the results of the November election.

In the Republican primaries the two upsets were the defeat of Senator Deneen of Illinois, and of Senator Grundy of Pennsylvania. But in addition to these primary upsets there are bound to be more new faces in the Senate owing to the fact that seven senators are retiring voluntarily, six Republicans and one Democrat. They are: Phipps, of Colorado; Gould, of Maine; Gillette, of Massachusetts; Baird, of New Jersey; Goff, of West Virgina; Sullivan, of Wyoming, and Brock, of Tennesse. However, some old faces may return to the Senate as seven former members of the Senate are running for election, six Democrats and one Republican. They are Butler, of Massachusetts; Bayard, of Deleware; Gerry, of Rhode Island; Gore, of Oklahoma; Hitchcock, of Nebraska; Lewis, of Illinois; Neely, of West Virginia.

Some of the Senate races promise to be very close while in other instances the nomination is equivalent to an election. The Republicans are handicapped by the fact that most of the retiring Republicans are in close districts, requiring real battles to hold the seat, while in all but three or four of retiring Democrats hail from Southern states where a nomination is equivalent to an election. The Republicans, however, are planning to put up a whirlwind campaign, with what results remains to be seen.

We have not yet arrived at the international state of mind where we believe a German Reparations Bond is as good as Liberty Bond. Perhaps what we need is a "liberal" education.

The Iowa Supreme Court has decided that punctuation marks are not a part of the English language. Perhaps not, but if we didn't have 'em how would the artist who draws the Sunday comics express what the man of the house says when he steps on the cat?

Heywood Broun, running for Congress on the Socialist ticket in New York says that he is in favor of Uncle Sam's disarming at once, giving up his navy and army. He thinks the rest of the world would be so impressed by this action that it would generously disband all its armies and sink its navies. After reading this example of Mr. Broun's good judgment we are willing to bet that if he is ever elected to Congress he won't any more than land in the District of Columbia until somebody sells him the Washington Monument.

THE JACK POT

BY "JACK" HIMSELF

Hello, again, folks! Guess you're wondering just what the candle and everything means. Nope! It don't mean that we're all lit up, or anything like that—it is just a cute little way we studied up to let you know that the POT is one year old—TODAY.

The POT has come to you for the last 52 weeks. We would just like to know how you like it. How do YOU like it? If you read the POT pretty regularly, how about dropping the POTTER a line—just a letter or card telling us so, and giving us your opinion of it. We don't care if it is a bouquet or a brick-bat you want to toss our way, let it come.

Now, don't be bashful, come on and write to us—address it this way:

The Jack Pot
% The Union-Banner
Drawer 285
Clanton, Alabama.

If you will do that the POTTER will appreciate the favor very much, and we really believe you owe us one teeny-weeny note, inasmuch as we have written to you 52 times. You can help us celebrate our first birthday in that way, too.

During the year we have tried to cover the field as best we could. At times we have been quite serious—again we took on a feeling to slip in a little funny squib or two—and at other times we have played all over the ground between these two extremes. All in all, we have tried at all times to make the POT interesting.

Again—we'll appreciate it if you'll write and tell us how you like our JACK POT, no matter how you like it, good or bad. Do that much for us—will you? It will not take much time, and it'll encourage us, oh! ever so much to know that you read it. If you enjoy it—GOOD! If you don't enjoy it—then we'll TRY to improve a bit so that you WILL enjoy it.

You've heard of this mental telepathy racket, haven't you? That is, you can think of anything so hard until that thing will happen. Maybe you think that's all just so much bunk, but listen to this. One day this week, the POTTER was listening to the play-by-play report of a WORLD Series baseball game (that hot one last Monday, it was) and in that hectic eighth inning when the Athletics got three men on the bases and one down, with the score at nothing-all, some of us pulling for the A's and some for the Cardinals—everybody putting pressure on that radio set to tell us something favorable, no matter how we were pulling—just imagine what really happened. Imagine! The tension in that room was so high, the mental pressure so hard that the radio just fainted and passed out—cold. What a time for such a thing to happen. Luckily, we were just across the street from another set, so we rushed over, just in time to hear the announcer tell how it all went. After such an experience, we wouldn't be surprised if that chatter about "mental telepathy" and "sub-conscious pressure" is the goods after all.

Now for something else. Oh, yes! Have you heard about the new Boy Scout movement? That's a corker. Clanton CAN and SHOULD have several troupes of Boy Scouts. Lots of ways the Scout movement helps. It teaches many lessons which they would miss, otherwise. It teaches them how to behave and handle themselves in nearly any kind of emergency that presents itself. In addition, it makes the boys of the town into potent units which tend toward the upbuilding of the future citizenship of Clanton, always giving them a chance to be of real value, instead of allowing them to float around.

It has been said that "An idle mind is the devil's work-shop." We don't mean that our boys are idlers, either. If you would just take the time to read the handbook and creed of The Boy Scouts of America, it would open your eyes to the real value of Scout-craft. Investigate, if you have a boy 12 years of age. There are so many ways in which this movement can be beneficial—the only bad thing about it is that it hasn't been started long ago. We're for it! Let's have it!

Say, this Democratic party here in Chilton County is getting to be pretty smart. Realizing that they are on the losing end of a fight, they have changed tactics. Instead of trying to elect their county ticket along the whole front, they have turned to the "wedge" system, and are trying to carry one fight by putting all their strength behind ONE candidate, in that way trynig to make an entrance in the seemingly impregnable Republican defense.

In plain words, they realize that if they try to carry ALL of their candidates they will carry none. But—if, by putting all forces together behind the candidate for ONE office they MIGHT put him over. Plainly spoken, that is the sheriff's race. And the sad part of it is, there are a few disgruntled, jelly-boned Republicans who have about become convinced that they can do it, or seem to have. The POTTER has heard quite a few of these speak along these lines: "Well, I'm AFRAID they (the Demmys) will beat Gillespie. He's not near as popular as you think he is."

Don't you believe such rot. That's only part of the scheme. Some people just naturally hate to be on the loser's end, and Democrats and their sympathizers, realizing this, hope to pull these voters over by such tactics. Listen! Any old time a tried and true prohibitionist puts himself up for sheriff, especially one as well known as to his policy of law enforcement as Walter Gillespie is, and with the backing he received from his party in the recent primary, you can bet your last lonesome dollar he's got a cinch.

Of course, he's not elected until the votes are counted, BUT—don't ever let ANYBODY tell you that men are beaten in their aspirations by holding a "rep" for doing their duty and doing it well. Nope! It isn't being done that way, Teddy, it just isn't being done. Instead of letting somebody pull the wool over your eyes in that way, just make up your mind a little stronger that he will win, and give a little harder push to see that he does. Just BE WISE to the wisecrackers.—"JACK".

WHY IT COSTS MORE

One important cause of increased governmental expenditures throughout the United States is, of course, the growth of population and its movement toward the cities. The problems of local government in urban communities have always and of necessity been greater, and its functions more numerous, than in the rural district. In itself, the shift from a rural to an urban organization of society involves an increase of governmental expenditure. From 1915 to 1930, the population of the United States increased about 20 per cent—most of this growth taking place in urban communities.

Another factor has been the demand upon governments, state and local, to perform new functions and render new services. The increased expenditures of the present days are due, in large part, to the new tasks imposed upon government. Transportation, traffic regulation, policing, improved schools, highway expansion—all these suggest the tremendous increase in the number of governmental functions.

In the third place, price and wage changes enhance the cost of government. The dollar buys far less today; either in commodities or in services, than it did before the World War. In other words, the level of prices has risen. At a higher price level more dollars must be paid out by the federal, state and local governments to obtain the same quantity and quality of goods and services as before. Since 1920, prices have declined, but not to the pre-war levels.

A fourth cause is waste an extravagance in administration and laxness of legislative methods in appropriating public funds. Other contributing factors include the natural desire of governmental departments to expand and the organized activity of minority groups who, interested in a raid on the budget profess to voice public demands.—Ft. Wayne News-Sentinel.

25 YEARS AGO

News Items as published in The Union and in The Banner, issues of October 5, 1905

Quite a jovial party from Coosa arrived at Clanton last Thursday night to solicit the aid of Judge Reynolds to make the course of true love run smooth. Miss Mary Lee Wilbanks was married to Mr. James Marion Martin, the ceremony being performed by Clerck Henry Honeycutt.

Twenty-two were baptized at Macedonia, near Randolph, last Sunday.

Bettie, the 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Gibson, of Pleasant Grove, died on September 27th.

Col. W. A. Collier returned from his vacation Sunday. Mrs. Collier, with the baby will return later.

Col. Robert H. Knox went to Maplesville Saturday to attend Justice Court.

Married this week: James Marion Martin and Miss Mary Lee Wilbanks, J. D. Thomas and Miss Della Foshee, S. S. Stanfield and Miss Emma Townsend, Dock Ellison and Miss Bessie Martin.

THE CANADIAN TARIFF

Free traders and internationalist bleaters in the United States would like very much to blame the new Canadian tariff on to the protective tariff recently passed by our own Congress and to show that the Canadian tariff is retaliatory. They are handicapped in doing this, not only by the statements to the contrary of the Canadian leaders themselves but by the fact that the tariff is directed not against the United States alone, but against the whole world, including the mother country, England.

As a matter of fact the political upset in Canada came about from the unsatisfactory industrial and economic conditions in Canada. The depression is world-wide and Canada is suffering just as other countries are. The Canadian voters took it out on the liberal party which happened to be in power, just as the Germans expressed their dissatisfaction by voting for Facist candidates, and just as the people in Argentina and Peru protested by pulling off first class revolutions.

The Conservative party, which won in Canada, has been in favor of a high tariff for years, long before the present American tariff law was ever thought of.

Therefore in consdiering the new tariff law in Canada let us give the leadership of that country credit with having enough intelligence to see that the way to restore prosperity to Canada is to try so far as possible, to keep the Canadian market for Canadian competitive products. This is the real reason for the Canadian tariff just as it was for our own tariff. The Canadian government was already collecting more tariff per capita than our own government is collecting even under a comparison of the old Canidan law with our new law. The new Canadian tariff therefore is not retaliatory, it is constructive and is framed with a view to aiding Canada.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Rev. Dewey Huett, one of Chilton County's young student ministers, now of Howard College, was a visitor to Clanton last Saturday. "While we all regret the resignation of Dr. Dawson as president of Howard Colleg," he said, "nevertheless we are pulling right along for a greater Howard College in the future. Dr. Dawson is a great man and a great educator; still we feel that our Baptist denomination will be able to fill his place with one who will be able to carry on from where he leaves off."

Uncle Tom Hubbard of Beat 14 was a visitor to The Union-Banner office while he was in Clanton Monday. Uncle Tom, you know, was Tax Collector of Chilton County many years ago when lots of us were just kids. And he held that office for quite a long time. He was Tax Collector when The Union was founded, and was one of the first men to put his shoulder to the wheel to start a Republican newspaper here.

Dr. Hayes asked Uncle Tom how he was getting along, to which Uncle Tom replied: Well, Doc, I ain't no count. That's all right then, said the doctor; you are holding your own. This brought the customary hearty laugh from Mr. Hubbard. He enjoys a good joke, even if it is on himself.

Oce Bird, traveling salesman, was in Clanton Monday on his regular trip through this territory. Oce has been selling drugs and medicines up and down the line since as far back as I can remember. For a while in 1914 he thought he might quit traveling and go into the newspaper business. He came here and took charge of The Union-Banner. Pretty soon he got ink all over his linen britches and it was soon done for him in the newspaper game. Back to the road traveling again, and I guess he will never try anything else.

Guy DeShazo passed through Clanton Sunday on his way to Ashville, St. Clair County, where he expects to be associated in the publication of the Southern Aegis. For some months past he has been with Tup Lucas of the Atmore Advance.

Things looked up a bit in Clanton last Saturday, speaking in a business way. There were literally mobs of folks here, and the stores seemed to be having a good day. It was the first day things looked like fall trading. Up until a week or so ago the weather has hampered the picking of cotton. The worst of all, the price has been low; and the result of it all is too well known to require any comment or explanation from me. In fact there is no explanation. It is just too bad, so to speak.

Judge Huey of Bessemer was in Clanton Tuesday. He is something what they call a deputy Probate Judge of Jefferson County. The Bessemer Probate Judge is appointed by the main Probate Judge of the County at Birmingham. Judge Huey was whooping it up for Judge Miller for Governor. Of course he found some "sympathizers" here.

Big Sam Edwards and Uncle Jim Mims hanging around the same corner. Both are candidates, you know, seeking a place on the Board of County Commissioners. One will be taken and the other left on November 4th.

Well, the clean-out machinery got into action Monday night when the new Mayor and his councilmen gathered around the table for the first session. Result: Milton Smith succeeded by Earle Gore in the waterworks department. Johnnie Plier replaced by Claudie Pipes as city clerk. To the victor belongs the spoils. It has been that way ever since Old Hickory ruled this country.

Many of us baseball fans, in fact all of us, envy Frank Callen and Reedie Taylor because they pulled out for St. Louis Saturday and were on hand to eye-witness the two great world series games of Sunday and Monday. It is awful to be poor, says Catfish, but we thank God for the radio. We can come so near seeing a game with one of those things.

Big crowd in town last Saturday night to see The Ku Klux parade. Considerable surprise was expressed at the small number of the paraders. No use to worry about where they were though. They will doubtless turn up in full force about November 4th.

Paul Ousley, now a citizen of Deatsville, was here Tuesday. Same old jolly, care-free Paul. He takes the turns of life with a smile. "I don't expect to stay in Deatsville always," he seemed to say as he expressed his sympathy for us folks who have to live in a little old country town like Clanton.

AT ABERDEEN

We are a great and rich country. Europe and the rest of the world hate us, envy us, are engaged in competition with us. We are a commercial nation. We want to send our goods and factures over the seven seas. We want to be able to protect them. We want to live in security at home. We should not place our faith in tracts or pronouncements, but in guns and men, for, basically, the mass of mankind is the same yesterday, today and forever.

It is therefore comforting to know that the government has developed many changes and improvements in arms since the World War. We then learned many things and have profited by the knowledge gained. We have made phenominal progress in the matter of antiaircraft armament, in tanks, in artillery for mountain use, in almost every vital direction. This government does not intend to go into the next war unprepared; it does not intend to leave its citizens unprotected in emergency. Hence, the army and the navy of the United States were being made ready for a contingency.

The general public was invited to witness the demonstrations at Aberdeen. They saw new guns in action. They were not disappointed. They came away from the exhibition elated and encouraged in the belief that pacifism not yet has emasculated the spirit of national prudence and patriotism.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

STATE CAPITOL News

Active cooperation of business men and manufacturers in aiding the development of the Coosa-Alabama water route from Mobile to Rome, Georgia, is urged by Jesse B. Hearin, secretary of the Montgomery chamber of commerce. Mr. Hearin in a recent interview pointed out the widespread benefit to be derived by Alabama and Georgia from this great development, and gave an encouraging report on the recent meeting of business men, civic and state leaders held at Rome, at which plans were considered for bringing about the completion of the project.

"Now, as in the past, transportation is one of the great economic factors to determine the progress of this section," Mr. Hearin said.

"The Coosa-Alabama system, if properly developed for transportation, would give to this section and the Southeast advantages enjoyed by few sections of the United States. Every city from Atlanta on the north and to Mobile on the South would get tremendous immediate benefits, and those cities and shipping points within a radius of 50 to 100 miles of the river points would also profit immensely by freight reductions.

"The project for a nine-foot channel from Rome to Mobile has long since passed the dream age. The possibilities of this project are now accepted by many of the leading business men and engineers who have given thought and time and material means to make possible the canalization of the Alabama and Coosa Rivers.

"At a meeting of the Ninth Division of the Mississippi Valley Association held at Rome, Georgia, on September 22nd, representatives from Mobile, Selma, Montgomery ,Wetumpka, Talladega, Anniston, Gadsden, Rome, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Birmingham and many other important cities came together with the Board of Army Engineers from Washington to discuss practical means of bringing about an early completion of the Coosa-Alabama nine-foot channel.

"The governors of Alabama and Georgia, the United States Senators from Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama as well as earnest business men throughout the Southeast outlined the necessary procedure to accomplish this long desired project of river navigation.

"It was agreed by all that if sufficient public sentiment could be built up to demand the completion of this system that the Congress of the United States, following a favorable report of the United States engineers, would make sufficient appropriations to complete a nine-foot channel from Rome, Georgia to Mobile, Alabama.

"All local associations merged into the Ninth Division of the Mississippi Valley Association which is recognized as the great river improvement association of the country, and at the meeting the president of this association pledged the loyal and active support of the association to the Coosa-Alabama River project.

"Governor Graves, of Alabama, in a really great speech, stressed the national need of this system of waterways, and pointed out the fact that it would be absolutely necessary to obtain a favorable report of the United States Engineers before we could hope for Congress to make suitable appropriations to complete so great a project. Governor Graves was followed by others who had given the matter great consideration, and when the business men of Atlanta brought to the attention of those present the tremendous tonnage that would be furnished by the Atlanta district alon, there was no doubt left in the minds of those present that a nine-foot channel on the Coosa-Alabama Rivers would revolutionize industry in this portion of the Southeast.

"It will take continued concentrated efforts of the people of all sections to be benefited, and will require substantial financial support for this project to be made nationally popular so that the Congress of the United States may be convinced beyond a doubt that appropriations for this work will be of great benefit to a large number of American people.

"The Coosa-Alabama River project, under the call of Governor Graves of Alabama, had a great get-together meeting at Montgomery last spring, which resulted in raising sufficient money and public interest to bring about survey by Mr. Theodore Brent, showing the possibilities of profitable traffic on this waterway system.

"At the meeting held at Rome, September 22, the Brent survey was presented to those present and convinced all thoughtful business men, who gave the matter serious consideration, that the time had come to make a determined effort to secure sufficient appropriations to begin and complete this great river system.

"This is a matter of tremendous interest to all the people of Alabama and Georgia, and those who are engaged in this work are entitled to the thoughtful and active cooperation of the shippers, manufacturers and business men of every section of Alabama."

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY ALABAMA ALUMNI

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Oct. 6.—With great enthusiasm the project for a four-year medical school and a state teaching hospital was endorsed last night at a meeting of the University of Alabama Medical Alumni and members of the Northwest District Medical Society of the State Medical Association gathered in Doster Hall to honor the deceased members of the medical college of Alabama at Mobile.

At the unveiling of the portrait of Josiah Clark Nott yesterday afternoon at the school of medicine, Dr. Jerre Watson, of Anniston, president of the Medical Alumni Association, after several doctors had emphasized the need of a four-year school, appointed a committee consisting of five former presidents of the State Association and one former professor of the Mobile school, all Mobile graduates, to prepare resolutions for the evening banquet. They were: Dr. William D. Partlow of Tuscaloosa, Dr. E. V. Caldwell of Huntsville, Dr. J. D. Dowling of Birmingham, Dr. Henry Green of Dothan, Dr. M. B. Cameron of Eutaw and Dr. Alfred E. Maumoneo of Birmingham.

At the banquet last night in the new Union Building, which christened the new dining room, the committee reported the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted.

"Whereas, the history of medical education in Alabama, as reviewed at the unveiling of the portrait of Dr. Josiah Clark Nott here today at the meeting of the alumni of the school of medicine of the University of Alabama and of other members of the Northwest District Medical Society of the State Medical Association, records not only the glories of past years, but inspires us to look forward with concern for the future of medical education in this state, and

"Whereas, the present facilities for medical education are considered by us to be inadequate to meet the needs of the state, and

"Whereas, the loss of our own young men and women, who are compelled to complete their medical education elsewhere, together with the loss of funds which they necessarily carry away, can be prevented only by the establishment of a modern four-year school and teaching hospital, and

"Whereas, we have faith in the plans formulated by the University of Alabama for a four-year school and teaching hospital devoted to the service of the entire state, therefore

"Be it resolved that we urge ical alumni of the University of Alabama and the members of the Northwest District Society of the State Medical Association, here in meeting assembled, do heartily indorse the plans for the four-year school, and furthermore,

"Be it resolved that we heartily indorse the action of the University trustees in requesting from the State Legislature sufficient funds to complete the school of medicine for the State of Alabama and, furthermore,

"Be it resolved that we consider the most important question to be, not where such a school shall ultimately be located by experts, but that it shall be a school of medicine of first quality, whereever it may be located eventually, and, furthermore,

"Be it resolved that we urge upon the coming legislature action favorable to sufficient appropriations to complete these plans, and furthermore,

"Be it resolved that we promise our united and continued support to this movement, heartily cooperating with the committee on Medical Education of the Medical Association of the State of Alabama, to the end that the most serious deficiency in the state educational system be remedied and that Alabama provide the means of educating its physicians as it does now provide the means for educating its lawyers, teachers, chemists, engineers, agriculturists and industrialists."

Mr. Aubrey Taylor and friend, Mr. Truman Evans, who are attending school at Auburn, spent the week end at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Taylor in Clanton.

Editor The Union-Banner:

We wish to say a few words through the columns of your paper, and also have these resolutions published.

Words cannot express our heartfelt thanks to Mr. P. C. Pinson for his donation to this church. We feel that God moved upon the heart of this man to do such a wonderful thing for us, and if God caused this man to do that, we feel that He has something for us to do. So, let us express our thanks by striving to build up the Sunday School and church work at this place. Let everyone come to the Lord's house every Sunday morning and do our part to carry on the great work.

Resolutions of Thanks

Whereas, we as a denomination, as a church and as individual Christians, do believe that a very important function of the church is the teaching of God's word, and that such teaching can be much more effectively done when the Sunday school is graded and separate class rooms are provided for, and

Whereas, Brother Peter Pinson has honored the cause of Christ by making possible the building of our Sunday school rooms to the Chestnut creek Baptist church, and

Whereas, we do believe that this building will greatly help in the teaching function of this church, aid in the spread of Christ's kingdom, add to the comfort and convenience of its members, as well as to the appearance of the church house; we offer the following resolutions:

1. That we give heartfelt thanks to our Father in Heaven, who has, through His blessings, made this gift possible.

2. That we deeply appreciate the generosity of Brother Peter Pinson, and in accepting his donation, bind ourselves to attempt to use the building to the glory of God.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes, that one be published, and that one be sent to Brother Pinson.

With love and gratitude. — The Chestnut Creek Baptist Church; A. L. Nichols, Pastor; R. E. Miller, Clerk. In conference, October 4, 1930.

A Resolution
By Chestnut Creek Baptist Church

Whereas, the cause of Christ has been greatly helped and the members of Chestnut Creek church have been caused to rejoice over the splendid additions made to the church,

And whereas, such additions were made possible by the gracious and hospitable generosity of the friends of this church and of the cause of Christ in general;

Therefore, be it resolved that we, the Chestnut Creek Baptist church, in conference, hereby express our heartfelt thanks and humblest appreciation for the generous donations, both in money and in labor, that have made possible this splendid work.

Resolved further, that we especially express our thanks to Mr. P. C. Pinson of Globe, Arizona, for his splendid donation of two thousand dollars toward this building and to Mr. M. A. Pinson of Coopers for his wise appropriation of this money. This gift from Mr. Pinson made possible the erection of these additions to our church; otherwise we could not have done it at this time.

And we would not withhold our expressed thanks to those of our own people who were so generous with their labor in this work. The part they took, though small, has our appreciation.

We pray the blessings of almighty God upon Brother Pinson and upon all others who had a part in the erection of these splendid additions to our church. May the Lord smile upon you all wherever you go, is our prayer.

Resolved further, that we send one copy to Brother Pinson, and one to The Union-Banner for publication.

Adopted in conference, this 4th day of October, 1930.

A. L. NICHOLS, Pastor.
R. E. MILLER, Clerk.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS SINGING AT COOPERS LAST SUNDAY EVENING

The largest crowd that has attended any session of the Central Singing Society was present at Chestnut Creek church Cooper, last Sunday afternoon. All of the seating room of the huge auditorium was taken and there were several people standing. There was plenty of room to seat the people had there been enough benches.

The class singing was splendid and enjoyed by all. The numbers sung by the Clanton Quartet were received with much applause by the class and by the audience.

The Central Singing Society meets next Sunday afternoon at Walnut Creek church. The singing will begin at 1:30 o'clock, or as early thereafter as possible. Some talk has been rife of changing the hour of meeting from 1:30 to 2:00 o'clock; this matter will be determined definitely next Sunday afternoon at Walnut Creek.

HALEYVILLE MAN TELLS POLICE OF SLAYING BANDIT

One Killed, Second Shot Following Holdup, Officers Hear

Haleyville, Ala., Oct 7.—Sylvester Arthur, 35, reported to Chief of Police Berry Shedd here Tuesday that he had shot and killed a bandit and wounded another of a trio who held him up and robbed him of his watch, pistol and $30 late Monday night, while he was on his way home from an American Legion banquet here.

Arthur told Chief Shedd that after robbing him the bandits forced him eo enter the automobile and that they then drove to Bear Creek, where the wounded bandit left the car. Later, he said, they drove "about 15 miles north of Huntsville," where the second bandit was shot.

The victim told Chief Shedd that when they were on a lonely road north of Huntsville, the automobile stalled while the driver was attempting to turn it, and that in attempting to start it, the carburetor was flooded. The driver got out to examine the motor, Arthur told Chief Shedd, leaving the stolen pistol on the seat. Arthur reported he seized the gun and shot the bandit five times. The other bandit fled.

Authorities of Franklin, Winston, and Marshall Counties said Tuesday night the slaying and robbery had not been reported to them, nor had any bodies been discovered that would fit in with the story related by Arthur.

MANY CONGRATULATE 70-YEAR-OLD FARMER

Forty-Seven Years of Wandering; Freed by a Guntersville Jury; Plans For Future Not Certain

Guntersville, Ala., Oct. 7.—For the first time in a half century Jim Neely, a wizened little old man of threescore years and ten, looked the law in the face Tuesday and stood before the world as a free man.

His 47 years of hiding and evading retributive justice had come to an end as a Circuit Court jury declared its verdict to be that Jim Neely was not guilty of the slaying in 1883 of Hiram Cooley.

His freedom came, not by an appeal to the sympathy of his peers that filled the jury box, but through a plea of self-defense. Yet all who heard the testimony of two eye witnesses presented by the state and that of the defendant agreed that the verdict was one based on sentiment.

But the little old man had been confident of acquittal since his arrest three weeks ago in Tyler, Texas.

RASKOB'S MYTHICAL PANIC

Statistics released by the Department of Commerce on the decline in foreign trade are being shaped into ammunition for a new Raskob fusillade against the administration. No attempt is made to interpret the figures in their true fight. The fact that they show a decrease in export trade is sufficient to make them available for purposes of misrepresentation.

During the six months from July to December, 1929, foreign trade fell off only 5 per cent as compared with the preceding year. This, according to the Democratic argument, was due to the fact that foreign nations did not as yet realize the mischief that was astir in Congress. During the next six months, says one oracle of Democracy, the new tariff legislation took definite shape, and the resentment of foreign customers was manifest in a 20 per cent reduction of American exports. The fact is, of course, that foreign customers are hard up, on account of the world depression.

No amount of camouflage will make the public forget that the stock market crash did not upset the economic equilibrium until November, 1929. Only a slight decrease in trade could be expected for the last half of that year. But the depression extended through the world, and continued throughout the first half of 1930. Foreign trade has fallen off in about the same ratio as domestic business activities, and for exactly the same reasons. Would the panic promoters expect America's export trade to go along at its usual clip when domestic markets were depressed and the commerce of every forign country was curtailed? International commerce has shrunk with the world's economic depression, and the American tariff has nothing to do with the case.

As the pall of depression lifts from the world markets, commerce will resume its normal swing. The United States will continue in the role of the world's leading commercial nation, because of its greater resources, superior methods and mass production. This country will continue to manufacture products that are in great demand abroad on a scale that makes competition very difficult on the part of nations with less industrial development. American industry and agriculture are in a stronger position as a result of the new tariff. The American demand for foreign goods will expand with the return of prosperity. The turn toward prosperity has begun. Attempts by the Raskob panic machine to prevent the return of good times are as futile as they are vicious.—Washington Post.

To call the roll of nothing-buts summons an august assembly. There was Socrates, charged with many things, and yet he replied, "I am not a teacher nor yet a poet nor yet a rhetorician or lawyer or pleader or pretender to any superior learning. I am 'nothing but' a seeker after truth."

And St. Paul said, "This one thing I do," and went on to tell how he devoted his entire energies and life to proclaiming a message that he considered worthy of all his efforts. A great man that Paul; he might have been a university professor in Tarsus, "no mean city," or might have risen to a place of influence as a Roman citizen, establishing contacts between the Roman government and the Jewish people so difficult to govern. In that case he would have been forgotten with most of the men of his generation. But he joined the nothing-buts and became immortal.

And so might the list be lengthened with the names of all the great specialists of the world—Galileo and Luther and Newton and Columbus and Washington and hosts of others. And these all would have acknowledged themselves nothing in entire great spheres of knowledge and endeavor but—and in that but lay the fruits of concentration, of idealism, of devotion and perseverance. A noble order are those "nothing-buts."—Detroit News.

No Real Significance in "Average" Figuring

Averages are funny things. Here comes the National Confectioners' association with satistics to show that the average American spends two cents a day for candy. "If he buys 12 pounds a year he is average," it is said.

The above-mentioned average person, if he likes candy, spends considerabily more than two cents a day on it, and eats far more than a dozen pounds a year. The man who does not care for sweets will buy none at all.

So the "average," although interesting, means nothing at all. Perhaps the best thing such figures do is to permit those with curious minds to make comparisons.

It is always intriguing to be told that the number of doughnuts eaten in the United States every year, if piled on top of each other, would reach to the moon and back five times.

One is reasonably sure that this spectacular piling feat would be impossible from every standpoint, but it pleases the imagination to picture that multiple pile of doughnuts.

Thus the American reader is deluged, year after year, with highly fanciful comparisons, spiced with great distances and impossible stunts. No one is harmed, and perhaps the art of statistics is helped.—Washington Star.

Law in a Democracy

"For that is what a law is in a democracy—a statute that the people will back up; indeed, in the long run, that is all a law is anywhere. The laws of a nation or community are the recorded customs of the people . . . and all the historic codes, the Mosaic code, the laws of Solon and Lycurgus, the codes of Justinian and Napoleon, the civil law, the English common law, and the legendary taboos of the savage tribes are but customs that have existed so long that they have crystallized into law . . . It is not the law that makes the custom, but the custom that makes the law, and when statutes run counter to custom they are impotent."—Brand Whitlock's "The Law of the Land," in the Atlantic Monthly.

Boys Will Be Boys

There came an angry rap on the kitchen door, and Mrs. Brown opened it to admit her neighbor, who was in a state of great indignation.

"It's that mischievous boy of yours," cried the enraged woman, holding up a brick for the other's inspection. "He's been and thrown this through my window."

A delighted look came over Mrs. Brown's face.

"Really! How interesting!" she remarked. "I wonder if you will let me have the brick? We're keeping all the little mementoes of his youthful pranks—they'll be so interesting when he grows up."

Jumping to It

Two schoolboys were discussing athletics.

"How high can you jump?" asked one.

"Just over four feet," explained the other. "What can you do?"

"Five feet," his friend replied. "How about the long jump?"

"Just about ten feet," said the first. "What can you do?"

"Eleven easily," was the reply. "What's your time for the half-mile?"

By now the other was a little suspicious.

"Five seconds better than yours," he said.

Toy Williams Tells Banner Readers of his Purpose in Visit

By J. T. Williams

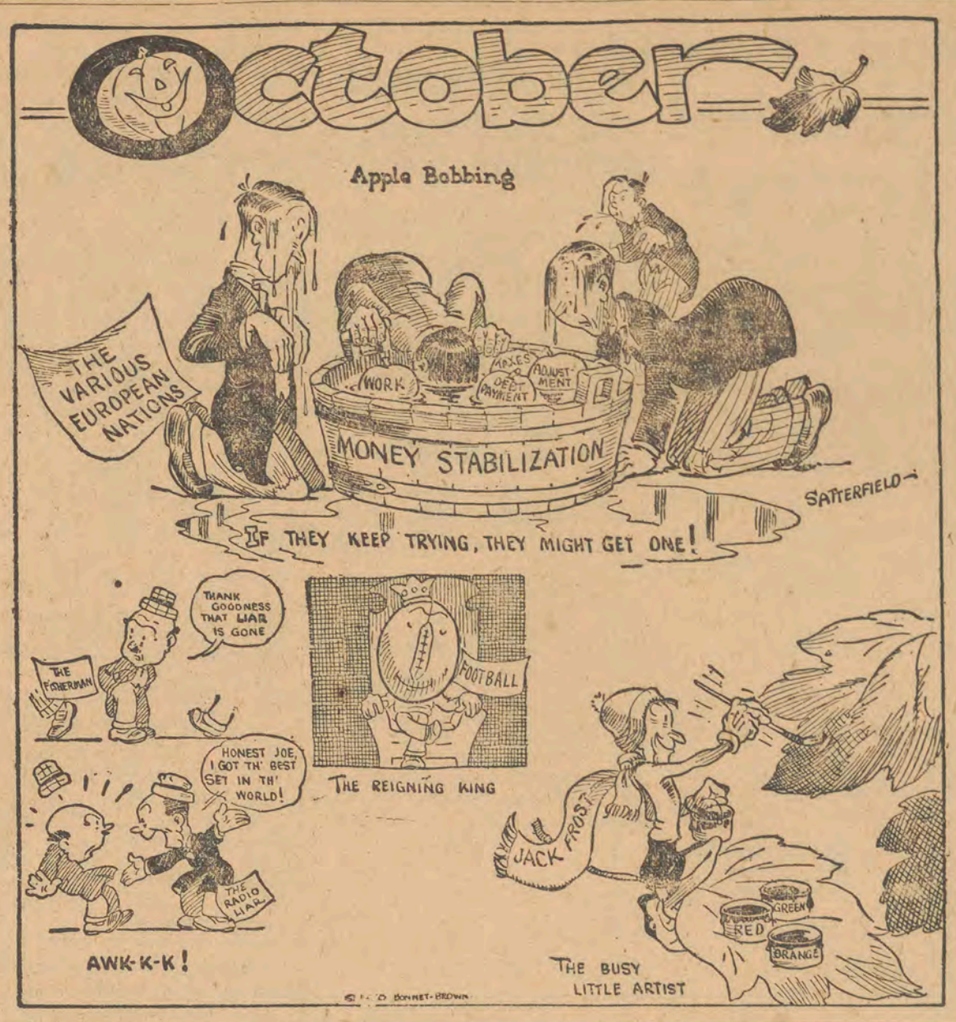
(This was written in the rough, at the same time some other articles were, but I was so busy at other things I did not get time to copy it. The readers of The Union-Banner may remember that some time ago there were some articles about the trip I took.—J. T. W.)

In some former writing I told you about making a trip to Shantung. But I did not tell you what I was doing up there. You may be sure I was not traveling for my health, for at least some of the travel I do not consider very conductive to good health.

In my work as Sunday School secretary of the China Baptist Publication Society, I try to attend as many large meetings of Chinese workers as I can; to speak to them, and talk with them, to try to stir them up on the importance of teaching the Bible in the Sunday School; and to show the great advantage of training young Christians for the service of the Master.

The Association at Pingu was composed largely of preachers, teachers, and the leaders in the churches around in the country. There were about one hundred and fifty delegates present, and the local people swelled the crowds to about three hundred. It was an inspiration to me to speak to that group of earnest Christians, telling them how Jesus went about the villages teaching and preaching, and urging them to give more time and energy to building up their Sunday Schools and really teaching and training the church members as well as reach out for others.

The moderator and clerk of the Association were Chinese and they carried on their work with as much smoothness and order as you would find in an association at home. They worked earnestly and spoke well upon the subjects that were before the Association. Old Pastor Li (pronounced Lee) was sitting there a little back from the front watching the younger men do most of the work of the Association. After they had their say, Lao Li hsiung (Old Brother Lee) would get up and say a few words out of his wisdom and experience that always hit the spot and added interest and zeal to the work in hand.



Perhaps some of you do not know Pastor Li very well. He was converted more than forty years ago by reading a little tract called "Truth Manifest," I showed a copy of it to many of you when I was at home last year. He has been an ordained pastor nearly thirty-five years. He has gone up and down the country over several states in summer and winter, under the scorching sun and through drenching rains, and facing storms of sleet and snow, for what purpose? That he might witness for the Master. He has baptized more people than any living man I have ever heard of. One day I walked up to him and said: "Pastor Li, how many people have you baptized?" "More than five thousand," was the reply. Just think of what that means.

If you were to meet Pastor Li on the road you perhaps would think he is some old ignorant codger, but he knows his Bible, he loves his Lord, he longs to see his people saved and is fired with zeal and earnestness in witnessing for Him who gave his life a ransom for many.

As I sat and watched that group of Christians earnestly discussing and planning the Master's business my mind went back to the days when that faithful missionary, Miss Lottie Moon first entered the gates of that ancient little city to witness for Jesus and found the people friendly. Then not a Christian for miles around. Now several thousand of them are in the city and villages round about that country. Is it worth while? Yes, the coming of missionaries to China has been a blessing to hundreds of thousands and we are looking forward to the day when millions will be turning to the Lord.

Perhaps some of you have heard me say there are many things in China that help one to understand many things in the Bible. As I came back from Tsingtao, sitting on the boat on Sunday afternoon I read the book of Mark. Never before has it come so vividly to mind what it meant when it said the people crowded around Jesus to hear his words.

The days Bro. Lowe and I tried to go to Pingu in his Ford and had to turn back on account of the floods we stopped at one town that was having market day. With our hands full of tracts we went out to where the people were and began talking, preaching and distributing tracts. How the people did crowd around us and listened to the words of life! Then I could see how the people crowded around Jesus to hear the message that brought peace to their hearts. How I do long to be more like Jesus as I try to make Him known to the Chinese.

Prominent Esthonian City

The second largest city in the republic of Esthonia, Tartu, holds rank with the capital, Tallinn (Reval), as an intellectual center of Esthonian nationality. It was begun in 1030 by the Russian Grand Duke Yaroslow, son of Vladimir the Holy, who conquered the Esthes, and its celebrated university was founded in 1632 by Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden. It has a library of more than 200,000 volumes, a famous observatory, and a botanical garden. For nearly 200 years it was one of the principal seats of learning in Russia and the chief school for its Protestant clergy.

Venerable Flemish City

The city of Ghent in Flanders has existed from the very earliest time, and no exact date can be given for its settlement, nor is the derivation of the name accurately known. The site was occupied by prehistoric tribes and later by the Celts and Belgii and Nervii. It is mentioned as early as the Seventh century. According to one author, Ghent was originally Gand, which derives from a Celtic word meaning "confluent," in reference to the location of the city at the confluence of the rivers Scheldt and Lys.

No Wonder

Two strangers on a train got into conversation. The windows had just been let down and the desultory chatter consequently turned to the subject of ventilation.

"I make it," said one of the two, "an invariable practice to advise people to sleep with their bedroom window open all the year round."

"Ha, ha!" laughed the other; "I perceive that you are a doctor!"

"Not at all!" was the reply. "To tell you the truth, strictly between ourselves, I'm a burglar!"

Castles in the Air

"If you have built castles in the air, your work need not be lost; that is where they should be. Now put the props under them," said Henry David Thoreau. Helen Keller says we cannot always realize our ideals, but we can always realize our realities, and our ideas must be practical if we are to make a religion of them and live by them. Phillips Brooks expressed a high ideal in these words: "We reduce life to the pettiness of our daily living. We should exalt our living to the grandeur of life."

Curly Maple, Perhaps

Jimmy had a head covered with yellow curls. His mother fondly and frequently called him:

"You little curly head!"

The name linked itself in his brain with the emotion of affection.

One morning he climbed on his father's lap and hugging him tightly said:

"You little curly head!"

His father was entirely bald.

Bridge Had Long Life

Old London bridge, begun in 1170, was completed in 1209. It carried a row of timber houses, which were frequently burned down, but the main structure existed until the beginning of the Nineteenth century. The old bridge was the center for booksellers and other tradesmen. On it stood the chapel of St. Thomas of Canterbury and a tower on which the heads of traitors were exposed to view. The present London bridge was begun in 1824 and completed in 1831. It is borne on five granite arches, is 928 feet long, 65 feet wide and 56 feet above the river.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

THE DAIRY BARN A FOOD FACTORY

It is not my purpose in this article to discuss in detail the various regulations which are in effect all over the counry regarding dairies. Both public demand and city ordinances are demanding more expensive barns in order that every possible safeguard may be thrown around the milk, from the cow to the table.

Therefore, the dairy barn, next to the home itself, is the most important building on your farm. If you are building a new barn, there are few points you ought to keep in mind. It will save you possible trouble and expense later. If your present barn is not what it should be, changes can be made which will bring it up-to-date.

Let us assume you are building a new barn. Walls of hollow tile or concrete blocks are popular because they are fireproof and they provide for the free circulation of air, thus making the interior dry and warm. There is practically no expense for repairs and the wall lasts a long time. Now, very satisfactory walls can be made of lumber. In that case an inner and outer wall is advisable, to provide air space, with tar paper between to make it warm.

Stone or brick can be used in walls, and they will stand like the rock of ages, but beware of a solid wall with no air spaces! Cement, or concrete, is the best for floors. Dirt is the cheapest, and comfortable for the cows, but most unsanitary. In case of disease a dirt floor cannot be disinfected. Wood or cement gutters help some, but at best dirt is a makeshift.

A tightly constructed wood floor, with air space underneath to keep the wood dry, and with coal tar between the planks to make it waterproof should last eight to ten years. They are harder to keep sanitary than cement, it is true.

Cement will cost little more than lumber in most localities. It is long-lived and easy to keep clean. The objection to cement, that it is cold and causes udder trouble, can be overcome by putting a layer of cinders under the cement, and using plenty of bedding. In laying the floor the surface of the cement is left rough, to prevent slipping. In the stalls a wooden platform is a good thing, or better yet, cork brick on the cement foundation.

In building the cement stalls there should be a slight depression near the manger so that cows may reach their food easily and no slip to their knees. The rear of the stall has a slope also to allow drainage so that the cow is standing on the level.

Concrete mangers are fine because they can be thoroughly cleaned. Put a removable partition between each manger so that the animals will not get into each other's feed. The reason for making them removable is to permit flushing out the manger with a hose. A simpler way of keeping the cattle from getting into each other's food is to run two or three iron bars across between each feeding section. By building the feeding platform on a level with the top of the manger the food can be pushed back easily. However, by building the manger about six inches higher than the alleyway we prevent dirt and dust from the floor mixing with the food. In building a cement manger, be sure to have all corners rounded to make the cleaning easier.

The building of a gutter is important from the standpoint of cleanliness. A width of sixteen inches and a depth of ten or twelve inches is recommended. Too deep a gutter may cause the cows to slip and injure themselves. At the same time they should be of such depth that the cattle will not stand in them with their hind feet. Have the edge of the gutter that is nearest the cow a little higher than the edge next the alley so that the cow will gradually step up.

When it comes to selecting the stanchions, any number of styles are available. The stanchions most popular, perhaps, hangs on a swivel at top and bottom. It is made of steel and has a wooden lining. This is quite an advantage over the rigid stanchion because it allows the cow greater freedom. A slip chain tied to a double post is also comfortable.

As a final touch to a model dairy barn, have two or three box stalls, depending upon the size of the herd. They are invaluable for sick animals and for pens in which to place calves. If possible, the stalls should be in another part of the barn, away from the milking cows.

Prof. W. E. G. Sutton, principal of Verbena High School, was in Clanton the first of this week, attending teachers institute.

Lesson for October 12

MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS: AN EXAMPLE OF MOTHERHOOD

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:15-19; John 2:1-5; 19:25-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—But Mary kept all these sayings, pondering them in her heart.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Mary, the Mother of Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Mary, the Mother of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What We Owe Our Mothers.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Mother's Influence.

I. Who Mary Was (Luke 1:26, 27).

She was a Jewish maid of Nazareth. The first information we have of her is that she was engaged to be married to Joseph, a carpenter of the same village. The custom among the Jews was for betrothal to take place about a year before marriage. During this interval the woman remained with her parents.

II. Mary Accepted Motherhood at God's Command (Luke 1:26-56).

1. God sent Gabriel to Mary (vv. 26-38).

It was during this interval of betrothal before Joseph and Mary were married that God sent the angel Gabriel to announce to Mary that she was to be the mother of Jesus. More than seven hundred years before, Isaiah prophesied that a virgin should give birth to a son whose name should be called Immanuel—God With Us (Isaiah 7:14). Though at first perplexed, she accepted the annunciation with remarkable courage and devotion. Mary accepted motherhood at a tremendous cost. She was conscious of her virgin purity. She knew that to become a mother under such circumstances would expose her to suspicion and shame. This was the view that certain Jews took of the matter, for they cast into the face of Jesus, that he was born of fornication (John 8:41). Her faith was such that she responded with noble courage.

2. Mary visits Elisabeth (Luke 1:39-45).

In her embarrassment she set out on a visit to an elderly kinswoman named "Elisabeth," where she could have the help of a woman of spiritual discernment.

3. Mary's song (vv. 46-56).

Having sought the sympathy and encouragement of her friend, her triumphant faith carried her beyond the misunderstanding and shame which awaited her, and caused her soul to burst out in a wonderful song of praise. As pointed out by another, three features of her character stand out in this song:

(1) Her heart purity.

Only a pure heart rejoices at the nearness of God.

(2) Her humility.

She forgot herself and gave her heart in praise to God.

(3) Her unselfishness.

She did not primarily think of the undying honor which would be attached to her, but the blessing which would come upon future generations through her.

4. The birth of Christ at Bethlehem (Luke 2:15-19).

What Gabriel announced to Mary was now being fulfilled. Caesar's decree concerning taxation brought Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem for the fulfillment of Micah 5:2. Because of the crowded inn, the birth of the world's Savior took place in a stable.

III. Mary's Faith in Her Son (John 2:1-5).

1. Her anxiety (v. 3).

The arrival of Jesus and his disciples put a drain upon the resources of the host, for their invitation seemingly came after their arrival at Cana.

2. Mary presents the need to Jesus (v. 3).

The clear implication is that she requested him to embrace this opportunity to present his Messianic claims by working a miracle.

3. Jesus asserts his authority (v. 4).

He respectfully reminded his mother that he had now passed from her authority and that his Father's will was supreme.

4. Mary's confidence (v. 5).

Perhaps as he asserted his authority he gave her a sign by which she understood that he would not fail her in her hour of embarrassment. Accordingly she directed the servants to carry out whatever instructions he should give.

IV. A Dying Son's Thought for His Mother (John 19:25-27).

It is beautiful to note the tender care which Jesus in his dying hour manifested for his mother. He committed her to the care of John. John accepted the responsibility of a son and took her to his own home.

Veni, Vidi, Vici

I came, I saw, I conquered, may be inscribed by the Savior on every monument of grace. I came to the sinner; I looked upon him; and with a look of omnipotent love, I conquered.—Toplady.

RESEARCH WORK GETS HIGH OFFICIAL PRAISE

Auburn, Ala., Oct. 6.—Research work being done in the agricultural engineering department of the Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute is recognized as the best being done in the United States. This fact is pointed out by R. W. Tullinger, president of the American Association of Agricultural Engineers. He said that the work at Auburn stands head and shoulders above that of any other institution in the nation.

This research is under the supervision of M. L. Nichols, head of the Auburn agricultural engineering department.

Mr. Tullinger visited Auburn as official inspector, office of Experiment Stations, U. S. Department of Agriculture. He praised the research work being done along all lines of agriculture here and commended the good judgment and ability of Director M. J. Funchess in spending the public money. "Auburn is one of the outstanding agricultural experiment stations in the 12 southeastern states which I visited," he declared. "The work is particularly outstanding in agricultural engineering, agronomy, animal nutrition, and other lines."

The federal official stated that the research program at Auburn is well balanced, all phases of agricultural science being investigated. He added that the facts being found are fundamental and of universal and permanent value.

"When they learn something here one may be sure that it is right for all times," he declared.

Overheard at a Recent Luncheon In CLANTON

"CAN you imagine what a thrill I got last night when I returned home from our bridge party, walked into the kitchen and found a charming new electric automatic range—the very thing I've wanted such a long time! John bought it at the Alabama Power Company range sale. They paid him $20 for our old stove and he gave that to me."

"Well dear, I've wanted one a long time, too, and I am going right down town this afternoon and look them over. You say they're only asking $5.00 down and you pay the rest month by month? We can easily afford that! Thank you so much for telling me about this wonderful opportunity."

You will hear other interesting details of our time limited offer on Electric Ranges if you, too, will call by our store right away.

Wire Cable With "Teeth" of Sand Cuts Out Slate

A saw with teeth of sand is used to saw out large blocks in the slate beds of Pennsylvania.

This ingenious device consists of a three-strand wire cable, which is built into an endless belt. The cable is guided by orienting pulleys, which adjust themselves to the face to be sawed. As it arrives at the point to be cut, sand is spilled over the cable by means of a stream of water, the particles of sand lodging in the twists of the cable.

The cable drags the sand, under considerable pressure and at high speed, against the bed of the slate and rapidly cuts its way through, the cutting being a trifle larger than the diameter of the cable.

The savings effected by this means run into a figure as much as 50 per cent of the usual amount of waste.

Experimenting is going on to work out a method of cutting the slate into the size of sheets to be shipped out by piling several slabs on top of each other and cutting them all at once with the wire saw.

Sand Frequently Trap for Traveling Snakes

Snakes, when not in a hurry, can climb a leaning tree or the slippery slope of a wet rock. They are brisk travelers on the levels, and can turn on an extraordinary speed when in chase or flight they slither downhill. But any wide stretch of loose sand or dust pulls them to. Between the scrubs of Poole's point and the mangroves of Tibbo beach on the N. S. W. south coast, lies an expanse of drifting powdery sand, writes a Sydney Bulletin contributor. Sometimes a snake trying to cross from one cover to the other gets stranded. As the crawler advances upon the ashlike surface he pushes forward a wave of sand with every sinuous heave. Sickening of the heavy going, he turns back, scooping out of the yielding sand a basin, the rim of which affords no scale hold. He squirms frenziedly to escape but only deepens the depression. In the end he dies of exhaustion or is scooped up by a swamp hawk or a kookaburra.

Noted English Porcelain

Spode is the name of an English porcelain made at the pottery of Josiah Spode in Staffordshire, England. Spode was born in 1754 and died in 1827. He manufactured dessert services, Spode cups, and Spode jugs or pitchers, large and long-lipped with a capacity of a gallon. When sixteen years of age, he is credited with having begun to make feldspar porcelain at Stoke-upon-Trent, and introduced into his composition crushed bone which was a soft base giving a very transparent body. His pieces were highly decorated with floral and ornithological designs, and were highly gilded. Succeeded by his son, the firm he established became one of the leading houses in the industry.—Literary Digest.

Famous Police Quarters

Scotland Yard in London derives its name from the palace, which from the time of Edgar to Henry II, was assigned for the residence of Scottish kings whenever they visited that city. Scotland Yard in London is the headquarters of the Metropolitan police force. The first police office was located in Whitehall in Scotland Yard and from there removed in the autumn of 1890 to the new building on the Thames embankment, now known as New Scotland Yard, in which all the branches of the Metropolitan police force, including the famous criminal investigation department, are located.

Cattle Differentation

The Department of Agriculture says that it understands that in Holland there have been for many years both red-and-white and black-and-white Holstein-Friesians. A great many of the breed in this country carry recessive hereditary factors determining red color. Consequently, not infrequently red-and-white calves will be secured from registered black-and-white parents. The Holstein-Friesian association, however, will not register the red-and-white offspring in this country even though they come from registered Holstein-Friesian parents.—Washington Star.

Valuable Rubber Tree

The latex of Euphorbia intisy, which flows from any cut in the plant, coagulates in the air without further treatment. The bands of rubber thus formed are of very high quality. This shrub or small tree is native to Madagascar and with its discovery in 1891 and the following commercial exploitation the plant has been almost exterminated. The United States Department of Agriculture has secured specimens and is experimenting with them in a hope of adapting this remarkable rubber tree to growth in this country.

Actors Without Jealousy

The performers in the Oberammergau number about 700 persons, and it is said to be the only band of its kind where there is no professional jealousy and no exhibitions of artistic temperament. The actors receive only a very small sum for their efforts, the main proceeds going to charity. And as taking a part in the play is looked upon as an act of natural devotion, none of the 700 tries in the slightest way to outshine the rest.

VERBENA NEWS

Mr. F. A. Gulledge has returned from a business trip to Birmingham where he spent most of last week.

We have back with us Mrs. Cordelia Ward, as teacher in our high school. She is one of Chilton's outstanding teachers.

Mrs. Reeba Easterling from Macon, Georgia is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Robinson.

Miss Mivis Thomas, one of Verbena's most attractive young ladies, is visiting her parents this week. She has been prominently connected with the Sales Corp. of Birmingham. She has been entertaining quite a number of her friends from Birmingham this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Thomas, Miss Pollie King and Herbert Anderson motored to Montgomery Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Berry Rutland motored to Wetumpka Sunday.

A number of Verbena people attended the Central Singing Society and enjoyed the good singing immensely and especially the Clanton quartet. We hope they will continue the good work.

We have a growing B. Y. P. U. and we have some interesting programs, and we also have church on the first and third Sundays. Dr. Kamplain, Pastor. He is a very forceful preacher putting much vigor and power into his messages. He doesn't only deliver wonderful sermons to you but he is second to none as an evangelistic singer. We invite you to come and hear him. Hearing his messages once means many other times.

We regret very much that our violinist is with us no more. The church will miss her very much. But we hope he makes a howling success on the stage in New York, where he has gone to take up his new work.

FIRST BOY TO JOIN FISHER BODY GUILD

Buck Grant of Collinsville Leads Boys Entering Scholarship Contest

Buck Grant of Collinsville was the first boy in Alabama to enroll in the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild, which is sponsoring a nationwide educational program to develop better craftsmanship among boys.

More than 900 awards, valued at $50,000 and including four university scholarships, will be given to boys who build the best models of a miniature Napoleonic coach. The awards will be made by renowned educators along technical lines who have endorsed the Guild movement.

Any boy in the United States between the ages of 12 and 19 years inclusive is eligible for membership in the Guild. Enrollment blanks may be secured at any General Motors dealer. As soon as these blanks have been received by the Fisher Body Corporation in Detroit, a membership button and complete working plans for modeling a coach will be forwarded to the boy.

Owing to the wide age range, two class divisions have been formed. One is a junior group comprised of boys from 12 to 15 inclusive and the other a senior group composed of boys from 16 to 19 inclusive. Awards will be divided equally between the two divisions, two scholarships going to the juniors and two to the seniors.

In addition to the scholarship awards, trips to Detroit will be presented to the boy in each class in each state whose model is adjudged the best in the state. Further awards in cash will be made to the builders of the second best coach model in each division in each state, and for individual merit on particular parts of the model building, such as woodcraft, metalcraft, trimcraft and painteraft.

We especially thank our friends, and Dr. Wood for their kind ministrations during the recent sickness in our family.—M. Lockhart and family.

Farmers of State Meet in Montgomery to Consider Reduction Cotton Acreage

A direct appeal to the reason and intelligence of the farmers of Alabama, placing before them facts and figures on necessity for curtailment of cotton production if that production is to be continued next year at a profit, is the program for reduction of cotton acreage in the state that was adopted yesterday at the state-wide conference called by Gov. Graves at the Capitol to act in the present emergency by recommending a course of action to accomplish such a reduction.

In addition to pointing out the vital need of acreage reduction under existing conditions, the resolution adopted by the conference also recommends ways and means of dealing with the economic situation resulting from prevailing low prices of cotton, and tiding over the approaching winter until another season arrives.

Though no definite figure was set to which next year's cotton acreage should be reduced in Alabama, an amendment to this resolution, taking into consideration different conditions and circumstances in different locations in the cotton belt, recommends that the farmers of all cotton producing states in cooperative action looking to acreage reduction, bear in mind it has been estimated that a cotton producing area in 1931, beyond 40,000,000 acres is dangerous if a profit is to be realized from the crop.

Suggestions are contained in the resolution as to how to utilize profitably acreage that would otherwise be devoted to the growing of cotton, which can be turned to other uses when the cotton acreage reduction principle is carried out.

Information concerning the proposed reduction and why it is needed, also information on how to meet and cope with the present low cotton price situation and its results is to be carried to every farm by every agricultural agency in the state and through all other agencies and organizations interested in Alabama's welfare, development and progress.

Text of Resolution:

Following is the text of the resolution of the conference:

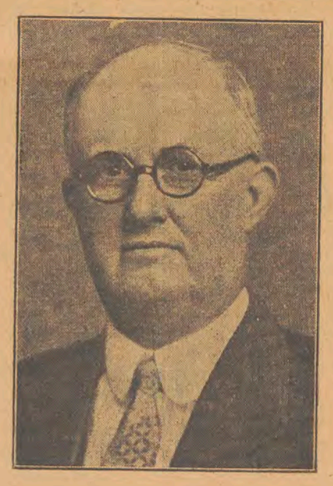
"Whereas present low prices of cotton are deplorable, and are causing drastic reductions in the incomes of Alabama farmers, and are lowering the standards of living of cotton growers, thereby injuring the agriculture of the South and the business and industry of the whole nation; and

"Whereas the present situation requires the greatest possible relief be obtained in the shortest possible time; and that methods be developed and put into operation to prevent a recurrence of such situations; and

"Whereas present low prices are largely due to a world-wide business depression which lowered the demand for American cotton, causing consumption in this country to fall off a million bales the past season, and the world total consumption of American cotton to fall to 13,000,000 bales against 15,100,000 bales the previous season, and a production of 14,800,000 bales last year, leaving the carryover in this country the largest at the beginning of the present season, that it has been since 1921, and increasing the total carryover of American cotton by approximately 1,800,00 bales which carryover has been a burden on the market; and

"Whereas present cotton prices are far below the average cost of production;

Therefore Be It Resolved



"First: That as an immediate step, farmers be urged to market their cotton through the cooperative association whereby they may obtain 90 per cent of the market price now, and profit from the subsequent rises in the future, and

"Second: That cotton production be reduced until consumption increases and stocks are reduced so that cotton can be sold at a profit; and

"Third: That the reduction in total production be accomplished by readjustment of acreages, so that some lands previously devoted to cotton can be used for other purposes, and

"Fourth: That advantage be taken of the fact that many crops other than cotton can be grown at a profit and will yield a cash income; and

"Fifth: That as hogs, cattle, dairy production, poultry and eggs can be produced at a profit by many of our farmers and readily marketed for cash, these enterprises be encouraged, and

Candidate for State Senator

As a candidate for State Senator from the 15th Senatorial District, I realize that I should express my views concerning matters that might interest voters before soliciting your vote.

1. I believe in majority rule instead of minority control, as we now have in some instances. And I shall stand for all elective offices, education or otherwise, being filled by the expression of the voters interested.
2. More safe laws for protection of depositors in the state banks.
3. Reduction rather than increase of taxes and expenses if possible, but no reduction of school funds.
4. Continued progress along the lines of education and public health.
5. Continued road improvement without debts if possible.
6. Honest and impartial enforcement of the law regardless of class or creed.

In conclusion, will say that I solicit the vote and influence of every law-abiding white voter regardless of his or her past affiliation, realizing to the fullest extent that a bad citizen is a bad citizen, and a good citizen is a good citizen, regardless of whether he has called himself a Republican, Democrat, or what-not in the past.

Respectfully,

V. J. GRAGG.

Jeffersonian Democratic Candidate for State Senate.

"Sixth: That more feed stuffs be produced at home since large amounts are purchased which can be produced more cheaply by the individual farmer, and

"Grow More Food"

"Seventh: That Alabama farmers grow more of their own food, thereby saving money and improving their standard of living, and that immediate steps be taken to relieve the present emergency by planting winter legumes, fall grains and fall garden crops, and

"Eighth: That land which is too poor, or too rough, or is in areas too small for profitable production of cultivated crops and pastures be allowed to grow up to forest, thereby removing 'marginal lands' from the production of crops and returning it to the timber area, thus increasing the production of timber of which there is a steadily diminishing supply while prices, over a long period of years, have been advancing, and

"Ninth: That production costs of cotton and all other products be reduced to a minimum by improving the condition and fertility of the soil by terracing, and the growing of legumes, and proper use of commercial fertilizer, by using enough machinery and power for efficiency, by planting seed of the best varieties, by having livestock of good breeding and by practicing the best methods of planting, cultivating, and harvesting crops, and of feeding and managing animals, and

Improvement of Staple

"Tenth: That the quality and staple of cotton produced be improved by planting seed of only the varities which produce staples wanted by spinners, and which will bring a higher per acre income as these varities are known and can be recommended by the experiment station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and this will reduce the production of untenderable cotton which is now being sold by farmers at discounted prices, and which probably will be even more difficult to market in the future, and

"Eleventh: That for assistance in production as well as in marketing we endorse the work of the Federal Farm Board and the Alabama Farm Bureau in its various lines of work and call upon bankers and business men as well as farmers to give the Federal Farm Board and the Farm Bureau their hearty cooperation, and

"Twelfth: That the experiment station and the Extension Service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, the Federal Farm Board, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture and the State Department of Agriculture and Industries be requested to assemble and furnish facts about prices, acreage, production, and business conditions and outlook so that farmers may have this information for consideration in making their plans for adjusting production; and that the 'agricultural outlook' information furnished by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture should be given local interpretation and dissemination by state agencies so that the individual farmer can determine which crops he can most reasonably expect to grow at a profit on his own farm, and Cooperation of All

"Thirteenth: That bankers, merchants, civic clubs and other organizations, and dividends interested work together for promoting these recommendations throughout Alabama to the end that the agriculture of the state may be placed upon a sound basis, which will avoid periodic distresses and give to the efficient farmer a profit each year on his investments and expenditures and for his efforts, and

"Fourteenth: That we request the Alabama Extension Service, the Alabama Farm Bureau, and the Alabama Bankers Association to conduct district, county and local meetings throughout the state to acquaint farmers and the general public with the situation and impress upon them the importance of putting these recommendations into practice, and

"Fifteenth: That farmers, bankers and merchants in other cotton producing states be requested to adopt and make practical application of these principles in order that the economic and social structure of the entire South may be placed on a sound and safe bisis. All should recognize and heed the fact that the cotton acreage adjustment under present conditions should be much greater than under normal conditions. In doing this farmers will apply a principle of successful manufacturers, namely, the reduction of production to the demands of consumption. Unless farmers do this they will enlarge their own burden and postpone correction of the present distriss situation."

The meeting which was attended by between 40 to 50 outstanding farmers, bankers, merchants, manufacturers and farm agency heads and representatives, as well as many other interested citizens, was particularly harmonious, all present pledging concerted and cooperative effort toward cotton acreage reduction in Alabama.

Rev. Marion Mims of Isabella was in town Tuesday of this week looking after some business matters.

HIGH POINTS IN PLAN FOR COTTON ACREAGE REDUCTION

Urging of farmers to market their cotton through cooperative association, for obtaining of 90 per cent of the market price now, and profit by subsequent future rises in price.

Reducing of cotton production until consumption increases and stocks are reduced, so that cotton can be sold at a profit.

Cooperating in the holding of cotton acreage in the United States next season to not more than 40,000,000 acres, beyond which the danger point will be reached.

Reducing production by acreage readjustment, so that lands previously devoted to cotton can be used for some other crop or purpose.

Growing of other crops besides cotton, that will give a cash income.

Turning lands that cannot be farmed profitably into timber production areas.

Encouragement of the livestock, poultry and dairy enterprises.

Reducing cost of production of all crops to a minimum by improving the fertility and condition of soils, by growing legumes, proper use of commercial fertilizer, employment of sufficient machinery, planting seed of the best varieties and employing the best methods of planting, cultivating and harvesting.

Improving the quality and staple of cotton by planting seed that produces the staple desired by spinners and which will bring a higher income per acre.

ALABAMA FREE FROM DANGER OF THE DEADLY FRUIT FLY

The Alabama shock troops who enforced the citrus fruit fly quarantine on the long line of 150 miles between Alabama and Florida, during a part of 1929 and 1930, have long since been disbanded along with the gradual control of the Mediterranean fruit fly. A further step will be taken October 15, when the U. S. Government will release Alabama from the fruit fly quarantine restrictions so long held in force.

Under this modification of the quarantine act, only a small region in Florida is still held under the same quarantine regulations existent since the infestation was reported. In a discussion concerning the effect on Alabama's comparative freedom from restriction, Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of Agriculture who has taken an active part in the fruit fly fight, since the first day of his induction in office, said:

"We can soon eat southern citrus fruits and feel secure of finding the good old time quality, found before the war on the fly. The heating and refrigeration to kill larvae and eggs, will be employed only in a small quarantined area around St. Augustine."

"Alabama has abundant cause for rejoicing that this deadly pest has been all but conquered," said the Commissioner, who in meditating over the outcome of the long siege and fight, said further: "Alabama through the Departmen of Agriculture, waged a deadly battle on the fly to keep it out of this part of the state. We were sucessful; no trace of the insect was discovered in Alabama."

Commissioner Storrs was of the opinion that never before in history of mankind had an insect quarantine been so vigorously fought, so fearlessly enforced and so successfully carried out. The battle is not entirely over with, since a small area in Florida is still under quarantine and fruit coming from it, is under the usual quarantine restrictions."

Commenting further on insect pests, the commissioner said that mankind had never succeeded in absulutely eradicating an insect pest when once it gained a foothold in the United States. The best that could be done was to hold it in check by regulatory and control measures. The deadly character of the fly summoned all the resources of a number of southern states and the nation as well. The entire cost of the eradication to date runs up into the millions, but even at that, it is cheap compared with the loss of so many valuable fruits that would have followed had the fly gained a foothold in the South.

A gross income from farm production of about $11,851,000,000 in 1928, with $11,616,000,000 in 1927, and with $11,480,000,000 in 1926, is estimated by the United States Bureau of Agricultrual Economics.

E. F. Creekmore, president of the Cotton Stabilization Corporation, with headquarters in New Orleans, announced through the Federal Farm Board that the holdings of the corporation of about 1,300,000 bales would not be dumped on the market at present prices but would be held at least until July 31 next year, unless the market price reached or passed the purchase price.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

France has a gold reserve of $1,800,000,000; the trade last year with her own colonies reached the enormous total of $1,375,000,000; Algeria alone had a total foreign commerce of $400,000,000. France's recovery since the war is one of the wonders of our time.

General Uriburu, the provisional president of Argentina, proposes to cultivate friendly relations with the United States. He makes the sensible observation that both nations have everything to gain and nothing to lose through friendly diplomatic and commercial relations.

The Haytian delegate to the League of Nations at Geneva made a savage attack recently on the United States, and a number of other delegates have emphatically denied that they helped him prepare the speech.

It is becoming more evident every day that the American people are not holding our efficient national administration responsible for the drouth or the world-wide business depression.

By a joint and secret vote of the assembly and council of the League of Nations, Hon. Frank B. Kellegg was elected a member of the World Court.

George H. Shaw of Colorado thinks that his nomination to the Senate was due to his campaign against all foreign entanglements.

The Sanitary Commissioner of New York says he has found some street sweepers in his department who have never held a broom. This is what might be called running true to Tammany form.

A French motorist in Algiers was stoned to death the other day by monkeys sitting in trees along the roadside. Maybe he had one of those "boop-a-doop" motor horns.

WEST CHILTON

Cotton fields are white, everybody is busy. That is right, but be slow in marketing while the situation is acute. Older people can recall the panic in the early nineties when the cotton went to four cents. In 1907 it went to seven cents, in 1914 it went to six cents. Back in those days we were not living as fast as we are now. There were no automobiles, highways, nor high schools, then. Now our expenses are great, hence the situation is more acute than in former days.

An Invitation

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

Since the Republican State Convention of Alabama has not nominated, and therefore the Republican ticket in the November election will not have candidates for Governor and United States Senator, I feel that I am justified in extending to the Republicans of Chilton County an invitation to cast their votes for Hon. B. M. Miller for Governor, and Hon. John H. Bankhead for United States Senator, and for the other Democratic candidates for State offices in the General Election of Nov. 4th.

I feel that I can conscientiously and truthfully say to all the citizens of Chilton County that the best government for our State will come out of the election of Judge Miller as our Governor. And since we all agree that our State government should be the best possible to obtain, I think that it is becoming that we support those candidates who offer us the best and most constructive, economical administration of State affairs.

Since the Republicans have no state ticket, the Republican voters of Chilton County are therefore left to do as they please about voting for State officers and United States Senator. I invite you to consider carefully the qualifications and platform of Judge Miller, John H. Bankhead, and the other Democratic candidates for State offices, and to cast your vote and influence for them in the General Election of November 4th.

Anyone desiring any literature on the Campaign may get same by calling at my office in Clanton.

Respectfully,

N. S. JOHNSON, Chairman,
Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County.

COMMISSIONER'S STATEMENT CONCERNING ALMS HOUSE

no place to put negro paupers, and that we wanted to make some addition to our almshouse, but he said that he would not approve any plan now and as soon as the election was over he was going to take up the district proposition again.

Under the present law the Commissioners Court cannot aid or help with the county's money any person outside of the almshouse.

We urge every citizen of our county that can conveniently do so to visit the almshouse. We especially urge people who have friends and relatives there to visit them and see how the paupers are cared for. We would be glad every citizen of our county could visit this home and see the condition for themselves.

Signed—L. H. Reynold, Judge of Probate; A. P. Vinson, T. A. Maddox, J. P. Bean, J. L. Burnett, Commissoiners.

Dr. Wood's Statement

The following report to the Commissioners Court was made on October 7th, by Dr. S. C. Wood:

To the Commissioners Court:

In reply to your request for a statement about the general conditions at the Almshouse, will say that I have made frequent visits attending the sick, and usually visit all the buildings at least twice each month.

I have found the sanitary conditions and general living conditions better the last four years than at any time since I have been the Almshouse physician.

Very truly yours,
S. C. WOOD, M. D.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 1.—The forty-second consecutive quarterly dividend on its preferred stock was paid today by Alabama Power Company, when approximately $500,019 in dividend checks were mailed to more than 14,500 shareholders.

The dividend paid was to holders of record on September 15th of preferred shares entitled to dividends at the rate of $6 and $7 per annum.

An additional dividend of approximately $38,000 will be paid November 1st to some 1,100 holders of its preferred shares entitled to dividends at the rate of $5 per annum.

THE ALABAMA CAMPUS

The Crimson Tide again rolled to a victory, beating the University of Mississippi 64 to 0. Last Saturday Alabama beat Howard College 3 to 0.

It seems like another Alabama year.

The week was uneventful for the Clantonians, except that all were hard at work. You'd be surprised at the work it takes to get along in College contrary to the opinion given some people (who never went to college) and the college movies.

Mid-semester exams are only a short time off and everybody is getting set for them.

We want to correct here an error mode last week. The article reading: William Arthur Willis and Grover Harris the "Gold Dust" twins (except they are yellow) should have read: Except they are green. Everyone knows that a freshman is green and through a mistake somewhere the error was made.

We wish to apoligize for the mistake.

There goes the chimes we must close.

Rocky Mountains Given Their Name by Indians

In his diary while governor of York factory on Hudson bay in 1716, James Knight notes the arrival of a band of Mountain Indians with whom he had "a great deal of discourse." They told him their country was "very mountainous and of a prodigious height. . . . so they cannot see the topps without it be clear weather. . . . The sea lyes a little way to the westward of the mountains." This is the earliest reference to the Rocky mountains in the records of the Geographic board of Canada.

In 1730 Beauharnois, the French governor, transmitted to France a sketch which the Indian, Ochagach, had drawn for La Verendyre showing the Grand Portage route to western Canada from Lake Superior. This map indicates the "montagnes de Pierres Brillantes," a name which is found in translation "mountains of Bright Stones" on Jonathan Carver's map, 1778.

The mountains are referred to by their present name in Legardeur de St. Pierre's Journal of 1752. He calls them "montagnes de Roche." The name is a translation of the Indian name, which in Cree is assinwati, in Stoney niaha and in Blackfoot mistokis. Viewed from the prairies, the Rockies present a great wall of rock.

Glorious Chapters in History of Lifeboats

Devotion and courage are inseparably associated with the saving of life at sea, and even though the oar-propelled boat has largely given place to the motor lifeboat, the thrill of the launch and the excitement of the dash to the wreck still remain. The inhabtants of Tenby, in Wales, have witnessed many a thrilling and hazardous rescue, and they will have even greater confidence in future attempts now that their old motor lifeboat has been replaced by a new and up-to-date craft. The earliest lifeboat was designed by a Frenchman in 1765, but there is no record that it was ever put into service. The credit of having built the first practical lifeboat, in 1789, belongs to Henry Greathead. The Royal National Lifeboat Institution, which provides British coastal towns with lifeboats and life-saving apparatus, was founded in 1824.—London Mail.

Bicycle Wheels

There are quite a few different factors which enter into the strength of a built-up bicycle wheel as well as the road conditions and the conditions of the tires. As far as we have been able to ascertain there have never been any definite tests made to determine this. An authority says he has known a bicycle to carry a weight of approximately 300 pounds on two wheels, but he does not know how long the bicycle could stand this weight nor whether it would have been possible over a rough, stony road surface. The condition of the tightness of the spokes, as well as the angle of the lacing and the strength of the spokes, also contributes to the serviceability and strength of the wheel.—Washington Star.

Magnesium Long Known

Magnesium metal has been known to science 100 years. Though known for 122 years it appeared in its purest form a century ago and has been available commercially for more than 65 years, says Dr. John A. Gann, metallurgist, in a report to the American Chemical society on the development of the magnesium industry.

Since the date of its discovery it has been found that the metal is about seventy times as plentiful as nickel and 200 times as abundant as copper. Magnesium salts are also found in mineral waters and in the ocean. The important raw material for magnesium production in the United States at the present time is Michigan salt brines.

Prof. Herbert M. Etheridge, teacher at Maplesville, was attending the teachers institute here Monday and Tuesday.

Intelligence Shown by Seals in Their Playtime

The seals are the clowns of the seas; after the monkeys, they are the most manlike of nature's creatures.

I have seen them, in the wild state, play for their own amusement a game of their own devising so ordered that I doubt that it could be taught to any other animals after years of training. They play it in the water after eating their fill and before resorting to land to rest.

Eight of them form an octagon, with a ninth in the center. The center starts the game by tossing a fish to one in the outer ring, which passes it in a flash to another. The fish flies around and across the octagon faster than it ever moved in the water.

There are guile and deceit and strategy in the game; the players look one way and throw another and cavort like a baseball infield warming up. The first to miss or drop the fish becomes "it" and changes places with the seal in the center.—Capt. Chas. F. Adams in the Saturday Evening Post.

Doughboy Meant Well, but French Was Weak

After the American doughboy had been in France for a few months he picked up a few words of the language, and with admirable confidence began conversations with the French people that are remembered to this day as examples of how French ought not to be spoken.

After they had returned from the Luneville sector a soldier of the First division, billeted along the canal below Bar le-Duc, saw the cow belonging to his landlady escape from a field and start up the road. He rushed into the house, and in his best French told her what had happened. She failed to understand and the services of a French soldier were called in, who informed her what had happened. She hurried out, rounded up the cow, and after returning to the house, laughed for about five minutes at the puzzled doughboy. It developed that his message ran something like this:

"Mademoiselle, mademoiselle, your milk is taking a walk!"

Prof. Luther E. Little, principal of Stanton Junior High School, was in Clanton the first part of the week attending teachers institute.

BANKS OUT AGAINST LAMAR JEFFERS

E. D. Banks, of Anniston, has qualified as a candidate for Congress in this, the Fourth District, in opposition to Lamar Jeffers, in cumbent, and nominee of the regular Democratic primary.

Banks is on the Heflin-Locke ticket. He was the leader of the Anti-Smith movement in Calhoun County in 1928, the result of his efforts being a majority vote for Hoover in Calhoun.

It is admitted by the political leaders in this district that Mr. Banks has a good chance to unseat Mr. Jeffers. It is recognized that he has a chance to carry Calhoun, Cleburne, Shelby, and Chilton Counties.

There is no Republican candidate for Congress in this district.

FRESHEST GROCERIES

Not to be found in old packages

FOOD and other groceries in A&P stores are always fresh because they are sold quickly. New supplies, therefore, are constantly coming into these stores. Nothing stays on A&P shelves long enough to become stale.

For this reason you find in A&P stores only the latest packages put out by the manufacturers. Sometimes these packages are smaller than the old ones. Sometimes they are larger. But the manufacturers often leave the prices of their packages unchanged on account of varying costs.

This is why sometimes you get a smaller or a larger package in A&P stores than you get in other stores which sell the same goods. Old packages are never to be found where sales are rapid.

FEDERAL AGENTS VISITED CLANTON

Investigating Illegal Sale of Flavoring Extracts At Clanton Stores

Federal agents have investigated the illegal sale of flavoring extracts for beverage purposes in Chilton County during the present month and it is understood that conditions here were found to be very unusual. Extracts have been freely offered to and purchased by the drinking public for beverage purposes. It is understood that one place in the county has been buying special flavors manufactured by some firm permitted to buy alchohol under a government permit in bulk and selling it according to the taste and pocket book of the consumer. It is rumored that many gallons in bulk have been shipped to Clanton and sold in large quantities purely for beverage purposes.

The Federal agents are investigating the illegal sale and use of extracts as it is claimed the National Prohibition Act makes it illegal to possess, transport, manufacture or sell any intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes containing more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol by volume. Any sale of anything containing this quantity of alcohol is prohibited and unlawful where the seller has reason to believe, or such knowledge that will lead him to believe, it is to be used for beverage purposes. It has long been apparent to any ordinary citizen that extracts were being freely used for beverage purposes by some persons, and that in and of itself should be sufficient notice to the seller.

It is understood that the evidence gathered will be presented to the next Federal Grand Jury and proceedings will be instituted to prohibit the illegal diversion of alcohol by the manufacturer.. Under the National Prohibition Act the premises where such extracts are sold may be closed as a liquor nuisance and the owners and operators prosecuted under the Jones Law, which provided a maximum punishment of five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

SINGERS MEET AT REFUGE NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Central Singing Society will meet at Refuge church next Sunday afternoon. Singing will begin promptly at 1:30 o'clock. Everybody make a special effort to get there by 1:30, so that there will be no delay in starting.

The society met at Walnut Creek last Sunday afternoon, and the singing was fine. Prof. L. T. Grant acted as chairman in the absence of the regular chairman, Prof. W. M. Devaughn. There was a good class of singers present, as well as full supply of directors. Two special double-header quartets were sung near the close of the program, which received the hearty applause of the full house of listeners.

The Central Singing Society is always glad to have visiting singers meet with us. Visit us some time and see how you think we are getting along. If we deserve encouragement, let us have it; and if you think a little friendly criticism would help, don't withhold that.

TOM HEFLIN WILL SPEAK HERE SATURDAY THE 25TH

We are requested to announce that Senator Tom Heflin will speak at the courthouse in Clanton on Saturday, October 25th. Everybody is invited to hear him. This address of Senator Heflin promises to be the biggest political gun to be fired off in Chilton County during the present campaign.

NOTICE TO HUNTERS

Mr. A. R. Lightsey, of Centreville, district game warden for this section of Alabama, was in Clanton this week. He wishes to remind all hunters that licenses for trapping and hunting expires on the first of October, and that no kind of hunting can be done legally unless the hunter has county or state licenses. Violators of this law will be prosecuted if caught and it should be remembered that Mr. Lightsey, with his deputies is keeping a close watch on the woods.

JUNIOR REVUE IS EVENT OF FRIDAY

"Miss Clanton" To Be Selected At Wadsonian Theatre Friday Night By Judges From Out Of City.

Innocence and unspoiled sweetness will reign supreme on the stage of the Wadsonian Theatre, Friday night, October 17th, when the more than forty little junior beauties, selected by the business firms of Clanton make their initial bow to the audience.

.The little misses are all between the ages of eighteen months and seven years, the most attractive ages of childhood. Each little lady will represent some place of business in the city, and she will be known by the name of the firm she represents. Every little girlie in Clanton within the age limit, can enter this revue and the parents are requested to call at the Wadsonian Theatre for any information desired.

These little beauties, all togged out in their fancy attire will trip with all their natural grace and sweetness and do numerous unrehearsed stunts for the entertainment of the audience. In presenting the junior beauty revue, the management is confident that it will be long remembered as the most unusually beautiful, most novel and most originally different revue ever witnessed in our city.

Out of twon judges, who are total strangers to everyone, will select the two prettiest children. The prettiest little girl will receive the title of "Little Miss Clanton," and a beautiful diamond ring. The second prettiest little girl will receive the surprise award.

Just what little lady is going to be known as "Little Miss Clanton" has set the whole town talking, and all Clanton and vicinity are making preparations to attend the Wadsonian Theatre on Friday night, October 17th, to witness this lovely assembly of Clanton girlies and enjoy every minute of their beautiful revue. It is sugested that every one come as early as possible for a crowded theatre is assured for this auspicious and unusual event.

Marbury High Beat Chilton 19 To 0

Outcome Was A Great Surprise As Clanton Expected To Win

Chilton High lost to Marbury on the local field last Friday by the score of 19 to 0. Before the game began, judging from the appearance of the two teams, fans expected to see Chilton win by two or three touchdowns, and the outcome was a great surprise.

Marbury showed a snappy, wide-awake team, which was always quick to take advantage of every break or miscue which presented itself. In contrast to this Chilton seemed dead on her feet, the fellows showing up the effects of training, or rather a lack of it. The only bright spots in the Chilton team worth mentioning were the terrific line plunging of "Moose" Melton, and the nice defense work of Herman "Sparky" Harris, although Harris is a newcomer on the squad and saw little service Friday. However, if he is capable of putting out the kind of work he showed in his brief stay in Friday's game, we wouldn't be a bit surprised to see him land a regular berth.

Coach Walker is doing the best he can with a bad situation. Unless the team will keep training rules, it can not expect to win games. No one who saw the game Friday could have any doubt as to the trouble. Chilton had the man-power, and the plays; they should have won over Marbury easily; the "pep" and life just wasn't there, and therein lies the story of the game.

That puts it up to the team squarely. If they want to go on losing, that's easy to do—keep up the practices of the past. If they want to put out a winning squad, it will be nearly as easy; it will just take systematic training, hard work, and an interest in the game. We believe they can and will do it. Everybody on the squad seemed ashamed of the showing last Friday, and we expect them to profit much from that game. Chilton fans will back Chilton teams, and to the limit, when they are really giving their best.

Chilton plays Wetumpka High here tomorrow, Friday, October 17. Come and see a re-vamped Chilton "Tiger" team fighting to redeem itself.

Some Facts About The County Health Unit

What Constitutes Health Unit; Program of Activity; the Ends That Are Sought; What Is Required To Get Health Unit; Will Not Increase Taxes

The voters of Chilton County are asked to vote for or against a county health unit on November the 4th, at the same time of the General election. In order that a proper understanding of the question may be had, the Union-Banner prints the following information, which is a correct statement of (1) what constitutes a county health department; (2) outline of the program of activity of a county health department; (3) the ends that are sought by a county health department; (4) the final result that may be expected from operation of a county health department; (5) what it requires to get a county health department.

What Constitutes a County Health Department

The personnel of an average county health department includes:

a. One full time county health officer who is a duly qualified physician. He is the director of the department and is held responsible for the public health activities carried on in his county.

b. One full time nurse whose duty it is to carry on such portion of the health work as is best suited to her trained ability. She works under the direction of the county health officer and among her duties are the following: Assisting the county health officer in the examination of school children; immunization of people against smallpox; home visits to mothers regarding the correction of defects in school children; instruction in the care of expectant mothers, infants and children, and in the prevention of tuberculosis.

c. A full time sanitary inspector, usually a layman with both urban and rural sanitation. It is his duty to inspect and supervise the sanitation of both public and private premises; to advise and assist in malaria control work and the protection of private water supplies. His duties also include the inspection of barber shops. cafes, soda founts, dairies and other food handling establishments.

d. One full time office secretary, attends to records, reports and correspondence. Her entire time during working hours is spent in the office of the health department.

Program of Activities to be Undertaken by County Health Department

A very well defined program of activities is followed in an effort to obtain the maximum benefit at a minimum cost. Embraced in this program are the following major activities:

1. The control of the soil pollution diseases—typhoid fever, dysentery and hook worm. The campaign against these robbers of Alabama's coffers embraces proper sanitation, the protection of water supplies, and the administration of typhoid vaccine.

2. The control of the acute communicable diseases—smallpox, scarlet fever, measles, mumps, whooping cough, and diphtheria, by vaccination inoculation and isolation: the control of malaria by screening, draining of mosquito breeding places, oiling where drainage or like procedures are impossible; and the administration of quinine: lastly, the suppression of the social diseases. That this last group may be eradicated from Alabama is the hope that forms the foundation of the venereal clinics that have been instituted in many towns and cities in every county of the state.

3. Second in importance only to the control of the soil pollution diseases is the measure of protection offered mothers in hygiene of maternity and infancy through the administrations of kind and sympathetic nurses; the regular and systematic examination of school children; the inculcation of proper health habits; and the medical examination of adults.

4. That these major activities may yield the results one has just right to expect, a program of education and publicity is conducted that the benefits of health protection may be known to all.

Certain minor activities make their contribution to a well rounded program: The inspection of food-handling establishments, the investigation of nuisances, of stillbirths and maternal deaths attended by midwives; the supervision of the reporting of communicable diseases, of the recording of all births and deaths, and the work of midwives.

The Ends that are Sought by a County Health Department

From such a program designed to include all who may seek its benefits these immediate ends are sought:

1. One hundred per cent safe disposal of excreta.
2. One hundred per cent public intellegence of the health program.
3. Equality of opportunity for health as well as education for every child of school age.
4. Prompt reporting and control of communicable disease.
5. Complete and accurate registration of births and deaths.

The Final Results Expected From a County Health Department

The final results expected are:
1. A higher level of health and efficiency.
2. Lowered death rates.
3. Lowered incidence of preventable disease.
4. The savings of millions of dollars due to the saving of health.
5. Increased production of wealth due to increased health.

What is Required to Get a County Health Department

The Commissioners Court of Chilton County will be asked to put up $5,000 a year. To this sum the State Department of Health will add $4,000 a year. This total budget of $9,000 a year will go to pay the salaries and expenses of the county health officer, the nurse, the sanitary inspector, and the office secretary.

Will Not Increase Taxes

The employment and operation of the county health unit will not increase taxes one penny. The appropriation comes out of the county treasury from funds which are raised by existing revenue laws of the county and state. Chilton County is amply able to spend this money each year to safeguard the health of her people, and it is an investment that will pay greater dividends than any other our county has ever made.

Commissioners Court Submits Health Unit To Vote of People of the County

Voters Will Have An Opportunity To Accept or Reject It On November 4th. Separate Ballot Will Be Provided At General Election In County

The Commissioners Court passed an order submitting the question of an all time health officer to the voters of this county at the general election, November 4th, 1930.

This question has been considered by the people of this county for the past several years and the commissioners court of this county knows no better way to find out what the people want than to submit the matter to them. It will not cost the tax payers of this county anything as the officers of the general election can manage this election at the same time without any additional cost.

The court is anxious for every voter in the county to express themselves either for or against the county employing an all time health unit. An all time health unit will cost the tax payers of this county $5,000.00 per year.

I have received the following letter from Dr. J. N. Baker, State Health Officer, which explains itself:

My Dear Judge Reynolds:

Thinking you would like to know the exact amounts necessary for full time health service in your county, I am setting forth the following:

$5,000.00 is the amount asked from Chilton County. To this sum the State Department of Health will add $4,000.00. This total budget of $9,000.00 will be sufficient for the salary and traveling expenses of the health officer, nurse, and sanitary officer, the salary of the secretary and the upkeep of the office.

If I can give you further information, please advise me.

Very sincerely yours,
J. N. BAKER, M. D.,
State Health Officer.

This the 14th day of October, 1930.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

GRAGG BOYS RETURN FROM THE WEST

Vincent and Thomas Gragg have returned from the Northwest where they have spent the past few months. We suppose their main business on the trip was to see the country, and as a sideline to help out with the expenses they worked during the wheat harvest in the fields of Nebraska and other states.

They brought back with them many interesting stories of their adventures, also a number of souvenirs, including a sugar beet and a tame Coyote.

The sugar beet is a variety of beet which is cultivated extensively in parts of the Northwest, chiefly for the sugar which is extracted from its large white roots. It looks very much like our seven top turnips.

The Coyote is a small species of the wolf. It is common on the plains of the Northwest.

The boys traveled in their car and went through the states of Tennessee Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyomirg, Colorado, New Mexico Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Instructions About Marking Ballots

Campaign Chairman Explains Important Question To Voters

I have frequently been asked, should a voter desire to vote the Republican ticket, and also for U. S. Senator and for Governor, in which case there are no candidates on the Republican ticket, how should the voter mark his ticket, in order that it may be counted as it is intended to count.

In reply to this question, I desire to call your attention to Section 475 of the Alabama Code, which makes the matter very plain, which is as follows:

475. When straight ticket does not contain name of all officers. If the ticket marked in the circle for a straight ticket does not contain the names of candidate for all offices for which the elector may vote, he may vote for candidates for such offices so omitted by marking a (X) mark before the names of candidates for such offices on other tickets, or by writing the names, if they are not printed upon the ballot in the blank column under the title of the office."

The above section just means this: To vote a straight Republican ticket, and then for U. S. Senator and Governor on another ticket, make your cross under the Republican Emblem, then make a cross before the name of the candidate you desire to vote for for Governor and Senator.

In other words, we have nominated no candidates for Governor, U. S. Senate, nor Congress, and therefore the above section applies.—J. Z. Mims, Chairman Republican Campaign Committee.

WILL VOTE ON HEALTH UNIT

Election Ordered At Same Time of General Election November 4th

At a session last week the Commissioners Court of Chilton County passed an order calling for an election on the question of establishing a full time health unit for Chilton County. At different times in the past various appeals have been made to the Commissioners to make the necessary appropriation for putting on the health unit. The Commissioners have deferred action on the matter awaiting an opportunity to have the voters of the county express themselves on it. The question will be finally settled November the fourth. If a majority of the voters of the the county vote for the health unit, the Commissioners will make the appropriation and the State Department of Health will put the personnel of the county health unit into immediate action.

Seeking to bring the matter to the attention of the people of the county, a definite program of publicity, public speaking, etc., has been determined on by a group of interested citizens of the county who believe that we should have a health unit. The Kiwais Club of Clanton last Thursday voted unanimously to sponsor and advocate the movement and agreed to join with any and all other agencies of the county which might be of a like disposition in the matter.

It is expected that considerable activity in favor of the health unit will be developed through the teachers of the county and in the schools; the American Legion; the Farm Bureau; the Child Welfare Department; the Parent-Teachers Association; the County Medical Society; and a great many individual citizens and business men who feel that the health unit should be established and put into operation without further delay.

A meeting of interested men assembled at Clanton last Friday night to study the question of reaching the voters with such information about the health unit as would enable them to vote intelligently. It was decided to conduct a number of speakings at different places in the county and that literature fully explaining the operation of the health unit will be placed in the hands of the voters between now and November the 4th.

Dr. J. N. Baker, State Health Officer was present at the meeting and talked to the men on the important phrases of the public health program as carried forward through the county health unit. It will be remembered by many citizens who heard him that Dr. Baker spoke on this subject at the barbecue in Clanton the fourth of last July.

According to Mr. Baker, Governor Bibb Graves has expressed his desire to come to Clanton and make some speeches in support of the health unit. A committee has been appointed to confer with the Governor and make arrangments for his apperance at some places in the county between now and the fourth of November. It is also probable that a representative of the State Health Department will be available for some speeches in the county.

COTTON REPORT

There were 8,316 bales of cotton, counting round as half bales, ginned in Chilton County, from the crop of 1930 prior to October 1, 1930, as compared with 10,572 bales ginned to October 1, 1929.

ALABAMA CAMPUS

Alabama's Homecoming October 18

Next Saturday marks the Homecoming of the University of Alabama. On that day all Alabama Alumni should make a pilgrimage back to the Capstone and see their old Alma Mater. Many changes have been wrought in those few years you have been away but not the old Alabama spirit. Many old school mates will meet that haven't met in years. Meet them Saturday.

Alabama plays the University of Tennessee in what bids fair to being the best game of the current season and on it may hang the outcome of the southern conference.

Alabama has some 4,000 students in school this year. It is an increase over last year in spite of the season of depression that we have had. This year marks the 100th anniversary of the University.

The Clantonians are hard at work studying for the mid-semester exams which are under way. And so we leave you until next week.

Remember homecoming October 18th.—Alabama Reporter.

STATE CAPITOL News

A statewide appeal to Alabama farmers to plan crops wisely and farm safely and with saving, was voiced by Governor Graves in the first public meeting held in Montgomery on October 6th, when representatives of organized agriculture, fertilizer manufacturers, agricultural workers and farmers met to thresh out farm prospects for 1931.

Conditions were described at the meetings as bad enough with a likelihood of getting worse, unless farmers planned their acreage with extreme care next year. The cause of the present low prices was said to be overproduction of cotton, with depression causing low prices the world over.

Adjusted production was given as the keynote for safety first. As an example most farmers will have to buy some corn at a dollar or more per bushel this year. Hay already costs twenty-five dollars per ton. Most of what the farmers have to buy was said to be far above the cost of Alabama production.

On the contrary, cotton was far below the cost of production and so cheap that some farmers were not going to pick their entire crop.

To avoid this farm tragedy, farm workers evolved a plan for adjusting conditions in Alabama, in order to secure safe farming. The plan in brief calls for the following farm practices.

1. Growing crops for food, feed and sale to give annual income.

2. Increase poultry, livestock and dairy production with sustaining feeds. Markets for the above are obtainable constantly.

3. Farm only reasonably level land on which a good return can be had. Allow hilly lands to revert to forestry; trees are a crop.

4. Since every farmer can till but a certain number of acres, it will in undertaking this safety first measure be necessary for 1931 to fertilize less cotton and use more fertilizer per acre.

5. The cost of crop production should be reduced where possible by endeavoring to raise less acres intensively, than through planting the usual cotton acreage, with the average fertilizer application.

6. Since cotton production is the main cash crop in Alabama, much attention must be given to economical production of cotton.

7. Longer and better staple should be grown, since 44 per cent of the crop of 1929 was too short to be tenderable on the market and was sold at a penalty ranging from a fraction of a cent a pound to nearly two cents.

8. More information is needed about the cost of production, prices, acreage, business conditions and outlook, etc., in order to guide farmers in planning acreage plantings.

9. Among those who spoke were Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of Agriculture, E. A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau, Bradford Knapp, president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, L. N. Duncan, ertension director, John Drakeford, president of the Alabama Bankers Association, Donald Comer, cotton mill owner of Birmingham, J. B. Hobdy, director of vocational educational education, J. B. Westbrook of the L. & N. Railroad, J. C. Adams of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company, R. J. Goode of Gastonburg, planter and member of the State Board of Agriculture, Congressman L. L. Patterson of Alexander City, and Congressman Lever of South Carolina, author of the Smith Lever act of 1914.

Governor Bibb Graves, who issued the general call, presided at the opening, stated the purpose of the convention and pledged it his earnest support.

The J. Lee Long toll bridge over the Alabama River at Miller's Ferry in Wilcox County was dedicated with appropriate exercises Friday, October 10th. The bridge was named in honor of the late J. Lee Long of Greenville, speaker of the house of representatives of the 1927 legislature and author of the act authorizing the construction of fifteen state toll bridges.

R. J. Goode, Jr., of Gastonburg, who served with Mr. Long in the legislature as representative from Wilcox County, presided at the dedication exercises. The eulogy on Colonel Long's life and public service was delivered by Thomas J. Judge of Birmingham. The bridge was christened by Miss Fannie Paul Burnett of Greenville, niece of Col. Long.

The State Bridge Corporation has announced that two other bridges erected by it will be opened to traffic in the near future; the William Wyatt Bibb bridge over the Alabama at Old Claiborn on or about October 19th, and the Raphael Semmes bridge over the Tombigbee at Jackson, in Clarke County, in November. Plans are being made for the dedication of the latter bridge November 11th.

CULLMAN BUREAU IS LARGEST IN U. S.

Alabama farmers now hold the record of having the largest county farm bureau in the United States. A report from the American Farm Bureau Federation, Chicago, Ill., to the Alabama Farm Bureau shows that Cullman County Farm Bureau, with a membership of over 2,100, is the largest county bureau in the country. There are many county organizations in the country with a membership of about 2,000, but none which surpasses that of Cullman County.

Lesson for October 19

SIMEON AND ANNA: THE INSIGHT OF THE PURE IN HEART

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:25-39.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Being Glad for God's Best Gift.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Simeon and Anna See Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Know Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Wisdom Depends on Character.

The lesson title is somewhat misleading in that it implies that the insight of Simeon and Anna was due to their purity of heart, whereas it was due to the fact of the indwelling Holy Spirit. Those indwelt by the Spirit will be pure in heart, but not all the pure in heart have such insight.

I. Simeon (Luke 2:25-35).

1. His character (v. 25).

(1) He was just.

That is, honest and upright in all his dealings with men. We are not told what his occupation was, but we are assured that he was a man trusted by all who knew him. If he were a merchant, his customers got the kind of goods represented with full weight and measure. In spite of the corruptions of his time, he did not take advantage of his fellow men in business deals.

(2) Devout.

He was just because he was God-fearing. Many boast of their morality while unwilling to bow their knees to God in prayer.

(3) He looked for the Messiah.

God's word had promised that Christ should come. He believed in the truthfulness of that word. The same word that told of Christ's first coming tells of his second coming (Hebrews 9:28). While waiting for the Messiah, he kept faithfully discharging his duty. Intelligent looking for the coming of Jesus Christ means diligence in daily duties, not idly gazing into the heavens.

(4) The Holy Spirit was upon him.

This was the secret of his godly and practical living. The Christ-like life is only possible to those who are filled with the Holy Ghost.

2. His reward (vv. 26-28).

The Holy Spirit revealed unto him that he should see the Messiah before he died. At the appointed time the Spirit led him into the temple where Joseph and Mary came to present Jesus to God. Simeon took him in his arms and blessed God. The most important event in every life is to see Christ. One has missed the greatest experience of life if he has not seen Christ.

3. Simeon's song (vv. 29-33).

This is the Nunc Dimittis sung by Christians since the Fifth century, A. D. Simeon was now ready to die because he had seen God's salvation. Salvation is in and through Christ's atonement on the cross. No one is ready to die until he has seen God's salvation which was wrought out on Calvary's cross.

4. Simeon's prophecy (vv. 34, 35).

(1) The meaning of Christ to the world (v. 34).

Everyone is affected by Christ's coming. His presentation to man either results in their salvation or condemnation. There is absolutely no neutral ground. Personal attitude toward him determines all.

(2) He shall be spoken against (v. 34).

This has been fulfilled in every generation since its utterance.

(3) Meaning to Mary (v. 35).

This began to be fulfilled when she was obliged to flee Egypt in order for Jesus to escape Herod's sword. It was an intimation of what the end would be when she clasped her child to her bosom. Her heart was pierced again and again as human hate swept against her son. Its culmination was reached when she stood below his cross.

II. Anna (Luke 2:36-39).

1. Her character (vv. 36, 37).

She was irreproachable. After a married life of only seven years, she had lived as a lonely widow for about eighty-four years, during which time she devoted herself to God. She was what Paul called "a widow indeed" (I Tim. 5:5). During these long years she endured many trials and temptations, leading a life of self-denial for the sake of others. She was a woman of much prayer.

2. Her testimony (v. 38).

She gave thanks and spake of him to all who were looking for redemption. She thus had fellowship with others who had this blessed hope. Though surrounded by wickedness, many were looking for the Messiah.

No Room for Both

How foolish are we if we attempt to entertain two guests so hostile to one another as Christ Jesus and Satan! Rest assured, Christ will not live in the parlor of our hearts if we entertain Satan in the cellar of our thoughts.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

WILL SOME FATHER ANSWER TOMMY'S QUESTION?

"Daddy," said Tommy to his father, as he stood by his side in their new garage admiring their new car, "is this the best motor car in the world?"

"I wouldn't say that," said his father. "There are cars that cost more; but still, for its price, there isn't anything to beat it. And it cost a lot of money."

"Is that why you've got such a nice house for it?" Asked Tommy.

"Of course," said his father. "A machine built like that, my son, must be considered as an investment, and a good business man always takes care of his investments."

"And that's why you watch it so much, and keep a man to look after it?" Proceeded Tommy.

"Certainly," was the reply. "A careful man is bound to look well after his investments, and see that they are always in good order. That's only common sense, my boy. You surely understand that much."

"Yes, daddy, I do," said Tommy, and then, after a few moments of quiet, given to thought, he raised his voice again.

"Daddy," he said, a little wistfully, 'you don't think me much of an investment do you?"—Methodise Recorder.

MT. PLEASANT Jr. HIGH SCHOOL OPENS—RECORD ATTENDANCE

On last Wednesday, October 8th the Mt. Pleasant Jr. High School opened with the largest enrollment during the history of the school. A large number of the school patrons as well as many friends of the school were present.

Prof. I. C. Warr, principal of the County High School, and Hon. Percy Pitts prominent lawyer of Clanton were present and each made a very encouraging talk in connection with school work.

Mr. Pitts' speech centered around the subject of "The purpose and the Value of an Education." His talk was condensed to a pleasingly simple and interesting form and every child seemed to understand its full significance.

Prof. Warr's speech seemingly ran parallel to Mr. Pitt's talk, as he touched upon the "True worth of School attendance."

Both speeches were given in the most pleasing manner thus giving the boys and girls a new incentive, a new vision, and a new inspiration to begin the new school year's work

Everything points to a highly satisfactory school year.

Our Society is not dead by any means. The United Singing Society meets with Collins Chapel next Sunday and it is time to elect new officers for the coming year, so we would like for as many to be present as possible to help elect officers that will hold our society together and help it grow. We sure want to keep our society and it sure will take co-operation to keep it.

Everybody is invited to attend Collins Chapel next Sunday evening. We expect to have the Clanton quartet with us.

Republicans Should Support the County Republican Nominees

Amid the multiplicity of crossing political currents in the present campaign, The Union-Banner dares to raise its voice and call upon the people of Chilton County to again give their support to the nominess of the Republican party. You may wonder why it is said that we dare to do this. Well, if you have followed political winds in their trend of recent years and months, you certainly know that some of them are blowing in funny directions. And we have already been warned that it is risky business to start out for any particular place with these political winds already approaching the intensity of a hurricane.

Even as we plead now for the support of the Republican nominees in Chilton County, there will doubtless be some who will feel that we have no right to call upon them in such a manner. But inasmuch as the Republican party in Chilton County was worthy to stand in the primary election and have its nominees for county offices made by the suffrage of the people, therefore we may safely say that the party and its nominees are in the same measure worthy to stand before the people of the county in November and ask for their support.

As we have pointed out many times before, a record for good government in Chilton County stands to the credit of the Republican party and the men it has put into office. The men who are now nominated by the Republican party are as good men and capable as any who have preceded them. And we believe they are trustworthy as exponents of the Republican party's political doctrines.

We would remind the Republicans of Chilton County that if they ever surrender the affairs of politics and government in this county to the Democrats, that will be the end of the Republican party. If you think that you, as a Republican, can join with the Democrats now and help elect their nominees, and then turn around again in the next election and take it away from the Democrats and give it back to the Republicans, you are laying your calculations on an impossible proposition.

It is not done that way in the South. That is a political practice that works in some of the States of the West where both Republican and Democratic parties are strong; but it will not work in a State like Alabama, where there is no State Republican party, and we might add by way of parenthesis, no prospects of ever being one.

So far as the signs of the present political horizon portend, Alabama will continue to be dominated and controlled by the Democratic party. It may be the Miller-Bankhead kind, or it may be the Heflin-Locke kind; but it will be the Democratic party right on.

What happened in our neighbor county, Shelby, about ten years ago? Rebuplicans up there deliberately gave their support to Democrats in order to wreak vengeance on some Republican nominees. They intended to vote the Republican ticket again next time and get back that which they had given away. They have been trying to get it back ever since.

That is what will happen in Chilton County if the Republicans ever give up to the opposition party. If we hope and expect to keep the business of Chilton County in the hands of the people as it has been in the past, we must remain true to the nominees of the Republican party. Those nominees, when elected, must give us the very best possible administration of public affairs.

The Republican nominees in the present campaign, we believe, can be fully trusted to do that. They are good men. They stand for clean business and clean living. They are qualified to render good service to the people of the county. Then, to us it appears that there is no reason on earth why Republicans should think of doing anything other than supporting the Republican ticket as we have always done in the past.

Not alone do the Republican nominees in Chilton County deserve the support of Republicans, but they merit the support of all voters and citizens who believe in good officials and good government. While the Democrats and the Independents are seeking the support of Chilton County Republicans for their State candidates, we would remind them that they themselves can do no better service for our own county of Chilton than to vote for and support the Republican nominees for county offices.

As to the State officers, for which there are no Republican nominees, we say let your conscience be your guide. The Miller-Bankhead forces invite the Republicans of Chilton County to support their candidates. The Heflin-Locke forces hope the Republicans of the county will vote for their candidates. Doubtless there will be Republicans voting each way.

Out of it all, the one supreme hope we cherish is that when the political waters have again become settled, we shall continue to have a triumphant, clean, well-organized Republican party in Chilton County, even if it is the only unit of the party left in Alabama.

THE GOSPEL AND THE DEPRESSION

The Alabama Christian Advocate is happy to pass on to its readers an opinion from Mr. Roger W. Babson, quoted recently by the Sunday School Times. Mr. Babson, it will be recalled, is America's foremost business statistician. Hundreds of business men pay him handsomely for his analyses of commrcial and industrial situations. He is a man on whose opinion large financial investments are either made or withheld. The business world believes in Mr. Babson. Here is what he recently said concerning the cause of business depression: "Business depressions are caused by dissipation, dishonesty, disobedience to God's will—a general collapse of moral character. Statistics show this plainly. With equal precisions they show how business depressions are cured. They are cured by moral awakening, spiritual revival, and the rehabilitation of righteousness." Remember that these are the words of the business man whom other business men pay thousands of dollars a year for his opinions on busines conditions. Mr. Babson says further, "To bring back prosperity people must be conditioned in the right ways of working and living." The Advocate can do no better than to quote the comment of the Sunday School Times: "If the nation would turn to God in repentance, confession and faith, there would be not only a 'revival of religion' of the only true sort, but a revival of prosperity as well."—Alabama Christian Advocate.

YORKTOWN TO CELEBRATE IN STYLE

There are a number of historic events to celebrate in October and one of the most important is the surrender of Cornwallis, which occured on October 19, 149 years ago. The event is always celebrated in Virginia and especially in little Yorktown, where the historic event occured. Next year will mark the sesquicentennial of the end of the Revolution and then Yorktown will celebrate in style with the entire nation joining in the festivities. In writing of the preparations for the sesquicentennial celebration, Mr. R. F. Nelson, writing in the current issue of the National Republic, says:

"Virginia has tenaciously observed this anniversary for 149 years, and next year, the sesqui-centennial celebration of American Liberty has been decreed as a national event. Congress has appropriated $200,000 for the celebration. Virginia has appropriated $25,000 and France and England are to be invited to take part in a great rejoicing at Yorktown. The President of the United States has anonunced that he will attend. North, East, South, West will come to take part in this pageant of peace, and to honor the French and American forces whose toils through the desperate years of struggle for freedom, gained for us our heritage of independence.

"Yorktown today is much the same little village it was when England's great leader gambled with superior odds and lost within its confines. The Moore house, where the articles of surrender were signed, still stands. The ancient customs house, the old church which has seen the ravages of two wars, the Nelson and the Digges houses, all are part of the modern village. Perhaps the waterfront has changed most. Modern piers and gasoline and oil storage bases, have blotted out its picturesqueness. But on the heights above the beach, the atmosphere of ancient Yorktown remains. It seems to be a little bit of the past which has survived. One expects no untoward noise to shatter the peace and quiet of this lovely bit of antiquity. The old courthouse remains, with its time stained records reaching back through the centuries. The visitor half expects the clerk to be discovered sitting at an ancient desk, quill pen in hand, with sand box ready for the blotting.

"Adding to the illusion has been the modern trend to 'restore' the ancient things of yesterday. The lichens of 150 years of usage have recently been brushed from the ancient customs house and it has been reconstructed as it was in the time when it handled all the business for the port of New York, as well as those of Virginia. The Digges House also spurns modernity, and the late Mrs. George Preston Blow has recreated the lovely gardens in the ancient Nelson House, which she has renamed York Hall.

"John D. Reckefeller, Jr., has purchased the ancient Moore House at Yorktown and in order that it might be preserved without blemish or taint of twentieth century 'progress,' the federal government has included the ancient town in a proposed national colonial monument to include also Jamestown and Williamsburg, situated near by. The commonwealth of Virginia is combing the vicinity of the town plans to mark its many histric points, particuarly the battlefield, and the positions of the French, American and English troops.

"Two commissions, one state, the other congressional, have been appointed and their duties in relation to the sesquicentenial celebration will be general. They will leave the detailed planning to the people of the historic peninusula upon which Yorktown is situated. These local interests have formed the Yorktown Sesqui-Centennial Association, Inc., which is handling these details."

THE JACK POT

BY "JACK" HIMSELF

Many thanks, folks, for the interest manifest in the welfare and continuation of the old POT. We had quite a few to drop in and give us their opinion of it, while a few wrote. Made us feel pretty good, too, to find what people thought of it, as a whole. Any old time you want to offer a suggestion, let 'er come.

One good friend of ours, although he IS a Democrat, dropped in to give us his opinion. He likes the POT, but threatens to quit reading it unless we quit riding his Democratic friends' necks. That's the bunk, though—you couldn't hire him to stop reading it. Now, we like the good brother fine, but that reminds us of the story of Billy, the big fine goat. Want to hear it? O K! Here 'tis!

A man had two sons, and a big bunch of goats. One of those goats was Billy, an extra large, extra fine fellow, which Johnny had taken especial interest in during all the time since they both were little kids. Jimmy had never cared especially for Billy. One day the father decided to divide the goats and give half of them to each of the boys. He picked a fine bunch of goats, some of the best in the flock, and put them in a pen. In another pen he placed a bunch of little runty, skinned-up fellows, and with them he placed Billy, the prize of the flock. Taking the boys out with him, he gave Johnny his choice of the two bunches. Johnny looked them over, then walked over to the runt pen, with tears in his eyes, took Billy's head in his hands. "Billy, old boy," he said, "We've had lots of good times together—you're the best goat in the whole world, I know—I'd like to have you, Billy—but, it's just too bad—you're in the WRONG PEN!"

And that's just the way it is. We have lots of good friends in the Democratic ranks—fellows we'd do nearly anything in the world for—fellows whose friendship we prize as our most precious possessions—BUT, in some ways it's too bad that they have to see things so different. Just another WRONG PEN!

Had a response from Mr. J. A. Bingham of Talladega, one of the big guns in the Republican organization in the Fourth Congressional District. He wrote in to the POTTER to tell us that he appreciated what we had to say last week about his good friend, Mr. Gillespie. Don't be alarmed over any of the nominees' chances of election, folks, they're all as safe as one could wish for.

If anybody is hunting something to be "afraid" of, we'll give you a little hint. We heard of a Democratic candidate recently who spoke thus of the race: "I am not running on the strength of anybody's prejudices, and I am not particular as to where my votes come from or whose party they come from. I'm out for the office I have asked for. I expect to see as many voters as I can. I will leave the party-line and color-line drawing to others who feel that way about it. It takes votes to win this election—votes, votes, and more votes. That's what I hanker for."

There's the guy for you to be "afraid" will win. Take it from the POTTER. The fellow who is making his race on this principle rather than waiting for somebody to turn to him because he is sore at his opponent has the jump in the beginning. Once that fellow gets his platform broacast pretty well he will give somebody trouble, and lots of it.

Right now, before we start with a little fun, we want to call your especial attention to the article from Mr. J. Z. Mims, which appears on the front page of The Union-Banner this week, relative to the correct way to mark your ticket in November. Turn to it, right away, and get it down PAT, otherwise you could go all wrong and have your ticket thrown out altogether. You know, things are going to be pretty warm along during the first part of November, and every effort will be put forth to find flaws in the marking of tickets. Get yourself posted! Get wise to the situation right now!

Another thing we want to call your attention to is this County Health Unit business. That's a good thing, folks. The fact that its adoption by nearly every county in the state shows that it MUST be good. Chilton County is one of the few counties which do not have it, already. We think when you acquaint yourself with the facts concerning this movement you'll be in favor of it, too. You MUST keep step with the trend of modern times if you expect to hold your own.

If you have been reading the POT pretty regularly for the last few months, you will remember that we said that, according to the old saying that a rough winter was the fore-runner of a good crop year, we never would be able to gather it all this fall. Well, what about it? Here a while ago farmers were a bit down in the mouth because the drouth seemed to be smothering their cotton crop. Now, the cotton crop seems to be smothering the farmers, with cotton pickers hard to get.

Here's the week's best Joke. A fellow dropped in recently to tell us that he expected to go out and catch a few squirrels soon. Get that? CATCH 'em! Bet you never heard of the way he's going about it, either. He will take a little whiskey (provided he can find it) and place it near a squirrel den. The squirrels will find it, drink it, and pretty soon he can walk right out and pick 'em up—they'll be that drunk. How do you like the system? Pretty good. There might be one objection to that—suppose he gets some of this well-known 3-C liquor. In that case he might be in danger of having quite a fight on his hands when he goes to pick 'em up. Judging from the effect that stuff has on people who drink it, a squirrel COULD give you quite a scrap when he was well organized on it.

Heard another good Scotch story the other day. You might try this one, too, if you wish. A Scotchman was driving his mule, when old Beck became contrary and broke loose for a run-away, doing considerable damage to the old wagon. The canny Scot, not to be outdone by a mule, had his wagon repaired, noted the cost, and then inquired the price of corn. Thereafter (until said cost was covered) when he went to feed Beck, he took the usual amount of feed to the stable, but held back one ear of corn from each feeding. When the repair cost was saved in this way he went back to giving Beck her usual feed. How's that one?

At last we've found one instance when it didn't pay to advertise. You've seen fellows smell of a cork and then proceed to reel and rock all over the place. Well, this has to do with one of that kind. A fellow met a plain clothes officer not so long ago, and proceeded to let out a few smart remarks in order that the man would know that he had "been drinking." "What's the matter with you?" asked the oficer. "Drunk as heck and don't care who knows it," was the answer. The next morning he came to life again in the hoosegow. "I've heard that it pays to advertise," he said, "but I NEVER DID believe it, and now I'm sure it doesn't."

"It ain't gonna be long, now," somebody says, until squirrel season. Wonder where that old gun is. Gotta go hunt it up.—"JACK".

WHO'S BROKE?

New York statisticians figure that at the worst stage of the business depression from which the country is now emerging, consumption of commodities averaged only 10 per cent under the peak of the preceding boom.

Eastern business men commonly look upon the Western farmer as a pessimist. Yet a Western farmer can take a ten per cent loss right on the chin, without even blinking, whereas numerous Eastern business men this year have been wringing their hands over a business recession that is fairly comparable to the farmers' 10 per cent crop loss. And it is their pessimism that has retarded complete recovery.

Hard times? This generation knows nothing about real hard times. Recent estimates place the year's investment in miniature golf courses at considerably more than two hundred million dollars, or more than the whole American iron and steel industry was worth only a few decades ago.

Most of these golf courses paid for themselves in the first few weeks of operation, which plainly means that the public has spent a great deal more than two hundred million dollars in 1930 for the privilege of indulging in a wholesome pastime. And the folk who have paid out this huge sum are not the idle rich. They are, for the most part, working people.

Forty years ago, the game of tiddly-winks, played at a table indoors, had as many devotees, proportionately, as miniature golf has today. A set of tiddly-winks could be bought for as little as a dime. A fine set could be had for a quarter. Yet many a family that wanted to play tiddly-winks did not do so, for the reason that it could not spare the dime or the quarter, the latter coin representing about a fourth of a day's wages.

A people that can spend hundreds of millions of dollars on a new fad in a single season is not exactly on its way over the hill to the poorhouse. A country that once had many a citizen too poor to spend a quarter for the privilege of playing tiddly-winks for the rest of his life, eventually reached a state of high prosperity. A country whose millions can spend thirty-five cents apiece for a few minutes of peewee golf, should be able to reach a similar state without any "eventually" about it.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

"VENGEANCE IS MINE"

"For it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore, if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head."

If I might be pardoned for bringing the sacred word of God into such an unholy atmosphere as that of politics, I would ask to have all the politicians of the universe, and particularly those in Chilton County, read and ponder the above quotation from the 12th chapter of Romans.

God's word is supposed to and does shine as a great light to illuminate dark places, even if those places happen to be away back in the secret recesses of the hearts of men. How many instances have we seen in political maneuvers where the burning fire of this passage of scripture is so much needed.

Vengeance! Not the property of man at all. A tool he is forbidden to use. Yet it is almost the whole stock and trade of some politicians we have seen. A man had better be careful how he uses that which God has forbidden him to use. Remember what happened to Adam.

When God told Adam not to eat of certain apples in the Garden of Eden, I think he doubtless meant the same thing Paul referred to when he wrote to the Romans and reminded them that the Lord had said Vengeance is mine.

If a man does you a wrong, God says it is not your job to measure out vengeance to him. I will repay, saith the Lord. He knew that men—politicians—were not capable of handling justly such a dangerous weapon as vengeance.

What a mess we make when we begin to try to do things which God tells us not to do! No wonder we fail to do what we are supposed to do many times. Perhaps the reason is we are piddling around trying to do God's work and neglecting our own task.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

One of the questions which has been particularly vexing in the recent sessions of the League of Nations, and one which has caused a great deal of acrimonious debate, is the question of tariffs. There seemed to be a sharp disagreement on the tariff question, and what, if anything, the League could do toward regulating tariffs and the conditions surrounding them. In general the overseas members of the League, including Canada and Australia, were opposed to the views of the European members. The principal bone of contention was the desire of the overseas nations to have the nations of Western Europe accord preferential tariffs to its grains, and it was predicted that the subject would come up again in the November economic conference to plague the League in its desire for concerted action on economic affairs.

Observers at Geneva pointed out that there is a growing anxiety among overseas nations concerning the concerted European economic action which was approved a year ago. This anxiety is said to be noticeable in Japan as well as in the overseas countries which are attached to the British Empire, and it is predicted that there are stormy times ahead.

This trouble over the tariff program of the League is of special interest to Americans. It will be remembered that during the historic fight against the entry of United States into the League through the medium of the Versailles treaty, it was asserted repeatedly by the defenders of nationalism on the floor of the United States Senate, that as soon as we were once securely in the League, the nations of Europe would seek to have some say in questions which we are wont to regard as purely domestic. Among these questions suggested were the tariff, immigration and the Monroe Doctrine. The internationalists who supported our entry into the portals of the League made light of these charges. They averred that the anti-League senators were afraid of a shadow, that the League would not be concerned with such purely "domestic" questions as tariffs, and that we could enter the League with perfect safety and peace of mind. Another objection put forward by our nationalists was to the effect that once in the League we might well be isolated except for some support we might on occasion gain from countries of the new world. They argued that there would be found to be two distinct sets of ideas on economic and similar questions, one set of ideas possessed by the United States and the other owned by Europe. In a disagreement over tariffs it was pointed out we would stand practically alone with a United Europe opposing us for the reasons that our interests in the theory of protection were diametrically opposed by Europe with its lower wage scale, its lower standard of living for workers, and its theory of cheap production at any cost. On questions growing out of the regulation of immigration, it was further pointed out, we would again be opposed by a United Europe for the reason that here again our principles and our condition as a nation were far different from that of Europe with its overcrowded population.

Now the recent acrimonious disagreement at Geneva over the application of tariff principles indicates that the nationalists in the great debates in the United States Senate over the League question had assumed the correct position. The differences would of course be more pronounced between the United States and Europe than between any other country and Europe.

As the years roll by we begin to appreciate the wisdom of the Senate in keeping us out of the League of Nations, and the wisdom of the people in sustaining that action in two subsequent elections. The realization of the state of international affairs furnishes one of the main reasons why our people are very slow in agreeing to any sort of international commitment which will hamper our freedom of action.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

Some of our high financiers are still expecting that most of the eight billion German international bonds will eventually be sold in the United States and thus enable Germany to pay at once all of her reparations to the allies. If then Germany should decide, because of illegality or other reasons, not to pay these bonds, what a good joke it would be on the United States and how thoroughly some of our European friends, who had already gotten their money, would enjoy the joke.

Republican Nominee for STATE SENATE

To the Voters of Chilton County:

As a candidate for the State Senate, and your County being one the counties comprising the Fifteenth Sanatorial District, I feel that I should give an expression, before solociting your suffrage as to what my position will be on all matters of local and State concern.

1. I shall support such measures as will, in my judgment, promote the general good interest of the State and its people.

2. I will co-operate with the Representative of your County in getting such legislation as the County demands.

3. I am opposed to any increase in taxes; believing that the revenue of the State at this time is ample to, if frugally administered, carry on a progressive administration for the next four years.

4. There is much to be done to create a greater efficency in the school system of the State. And to provide a more adequate and better means of transportation to the rural schools, and whatever legislation appropriate to this need I shall advocate and support. Too much can not be done to promote the progress of education, and it will be my purpose to support such measures as will foster education.

5. I advocate the election by the people of all major offices, including the County Superintendent of Education; believing that the people are better qualified to select their officials than any power of appointment. Also to abolish the absentee ballot law.

6. I stand for such progressive legislation as will promote the farming industry.

7. I am an advocate of good roads.

8. I will be fair to both labor and capital, and support such legislation as will promote the speedy development of the State's natural resources.

Upon these expressed policies I solicit your vote and influence.

CHAS. H. ROBER WRITES

Editor Union-Banner:

I am particularly interested in our great Republican party. Our present nominees cannot be beat. We have Mr. Culp for Tax Collector, who was not only nominated by the Republicans, but who is admired by the Democrats. May God bless all who cares for this good man. The same applies to Mr. Akins I. Collins. May God help us on November 4, to elect these good men, and the balance of the Republican party.

I am only sorry upon my arrival from Georgia this morning to meet several of my friends from Thorsby who said they were going to vote against Mr. Gillespie. You know what I told you. If you are a true Republican you will stand firm by the nominees of your party. My friends, stand firm by the things that are honest.

I myself have known Mr. Gillespie for a number of years. He has always been faithful in the performance of his duties. If he had been otherwise, he would have had you now, who are against him, standing on the street and hollering hurrah for Gillespies. My friends as I stated many times before through The Union-Banner, I am a Republican and stand firm by them. We are going to win on November 4th, and Mr. Gillespie will be your next Sheriff. So hoping this will meet the approval of all good people.—Chas. H. Rober.

Awake Half the Night Weak and in Pain

NIGHT after night I could not sleep," writes Mrs. Mary J. Roberts, 117 West Franklin St., Raleigh, N. C. "I would lie awake half the night. I was dizzy and weak, suffered frequently with pains in my side and small part of my back.

"When I was a girl, my mother gave me Cardui, and it did me so much good, I thought I would try it again. I took five bottles, and I feel like a new person.

"I think it is fine. I would advise every woman who is weak to try Cardui, for it has certainly put me on my feet."

Negroes will Erect School And Home in this County

THE BOOKER WASHINGTON BENEFICIAL BENEVOLENT AND CHARITABLE ASSN.

The Association is continuing their drive for funds to erect the home in Chilton County, Alabama. The land being donated by the Gulledge Brothers of the said county, does show that there are some citizens in Chilton County who are interested in the welfare of the negro race. The same ought to increase the courage in the negroes of the county, knowing that you have a man in your county that is interested in the race to the extent that he will do so much for them.

The Association is asking every church in the county to donate $10, or as much as can easily be contributed. The amount will allow us to begin the work at once. The call is extended to all Sunday Schools, societies, clubs, professional men, women, corporations, business men, individuals and capitalists to do a little for humanity's sake. This being the first call of its kind in the county, in the history of the negro race. This being for the benefit of both races, county and state, we feel that no well-thinking citizen will refuse the cause. The official appeal to your wise thoughts to make a donation at once, so the work can be done at once, the same will be work for the men living in the county during the winter months. This will let the money come back to the citizens of the county in a needy time. We very much hope to get a report from each school and church of all denominations each Monday.

The Association wishes to thank the citizens of Clanton for their donations last week, as follows:

Ruins of Clonmacnoise Venerated by Irishmen

Clonmacnoise occupies a delightful spot on a series of small eminences upon the banks of the River Shannon. Only a small part of the great abbey building is still traceable, but there are numerous ruins of churches and other structures once connected with it, some of them far off in the surrounding valleys.

The principal ruin is that of the great abbey church and cathedral, built in 909 by Abbot Colman Conaillech, with the assistance of King Flann Sinna, son of Malachy I, in whose honor the abbot erected before the entrance a great stone cross with Irish inscriptions and sculptures representing Biblical scenes, which have given it its name of Crosna-Scraptra, "Cross of the Scriptures."

Near it are two round towers which answered the combined purpose of belfries in time of peace and places of refuge and defense when danger threatened.

In the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries this church was rebuilt by Tomultech MacDermott, and is now known as the Teampul MacDermott. The last of the Irish kings, Roderick O'Connor, lies near its altar with his father Turlough.

Clonmacnoise is still the favorite burial place of Ireland, and many hundreds of faithful are laid to rest every year in the sacred dust upon which St. Kiernan trod, and after him so many generations of the great and holy men and women of Erin.—Washington Star.

Death Ended Argument

An awesome debate between two Basuto witch doctors recently ended sensationally at Teyateyaneng, North Basutoland. The witch doctors were arguing about their powers before a great crowd of natives, and the elder of the two stated with considerable emphasis that the other was "only a boy" and could not possibly have the powers which he himself claimed to have. He added that if he (the elder) willed that the other should die, he would die. The younger man took up the challenge and the older one pointed at him with a stick and said solemnly, "You will die." The young man then rose to his feet, staggered and fell against some barbed wire and immediately expired. The other witch doctor was placed under arrest, but was released after the post mortem examination which showed death to be due to a stricture.

Lost Motion Found in Travel on Mississippi

It is hard to realize the possibility of drifting downstream in order to travel upstream, yet at one place in the world it is possible to set off downstream in a canoe and end 45 miles farther upstream without apparently turning back. This was done by an Indian on a stretch of the Mississippi known as the Grenville bends, consisting of many loops and curves continually doubling one on another. The Indian started at one of the lower bends and floated downstream until he came to a narrow neck separating him from the next loop upstream. A "carry" of a few hundred feet brought him to a higher reach of the river. The operation was repeated again and again—floating down, carrying over, floating down, and carrying over. Then by floating downstream 16 miles and carrying his canoe a short distance on foot, he was 45 miles farther upstream than when he started.

E. D. BANKS
Candidate for Congress

Mr. Banks lives at Anniston, in Calhoun County. He was chairman of the anti-Smith campaign in Calhoun County in 1928, and succeeded in carrying the rock-ribbed Democratic county by a majority of 500 for Hoover. He is chairman of the Heflin-Locke campaign in Calhoun County this year.

He is a graduate of Wake Forest College, holding A. B. and L. L. D. degrees. He is a licensed attorney, but confines his activities to business, rather than the practice of law. He helped organize the Alabama Junior Chamber of Commerce, and served as president of that organization two years. He organized the Anniston Junior Chamber of Commerce, and was president of that body two years. He was chairman of the Calhoun County Chapter of the American Red Cross several years.

He is a Baptist, a Mason, a Shriner, a K. of P., an Odd Fellow, and a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics.

For the past ten years he has been actively engaged in community upbuilding and civic work at Anniston and in Calhoun County. He was publisher of the Chamber of Commerce Magazine for Anniston two years.

This year Mr. Banks has been selected by the Jeffersonian Democrats as a candidate for Congress in the Fourth District, in opposition to Lamar Jeffers, incumbent, and nominee of the regular Democratic party. Mr. Banks says he wants to go to Congress in order that he may have the pleasure and privilege of bringing to the Fourth District many things which it is entitled to have.

Children Need Books and Clothes

With 78 children already reported as not having any books or clothes to start to school, and whose parents are unable to buy them, we are asking that if anyone has any discarded clothes that can be made over or any books that their children do not need to please notify the child welfare office at Clanton or bring them to the office. These 78 children recently reported are in addition to the 268 children already being assisted or having been assisted by the welfare department in some way.

There are many children who will not be able to get through the winter unless the more fortunate people of the county will assist them to ward off cold and disease by helping them with the proper clothing and food.

CALLED HOME

On Thursday, October 9th at 5:30 the Lord took to himself the spirit of Mr. J. M. Browning. He was 68 years old. He was a member of a number of Presbyterian churches and has lived a clean, pure Christian life from childhood. He bore his sufferings faithfully. Often expressing his readiness to go. We seem so sad when we go in and see his corner in the room left vacant, but how glad our hearts are when we look by an eye of faith into the beautiful "City of Gold" to behold him, shining robed with the crown of righteousness forever.

May we all strive to live by the example that he nas given us, meeting him some day where there is no more sadness or sorrow.

He leaves behind, his wife, Mrs. Armanda Browning, four sons, Henry, Boyd, William and Clinton Browning and one daughter, Mrs. R. W. Kendrick.

The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh, blessed be the name of the Lord.—R. W. Kendrick.

How Old Are You?

Gloriously Alive at 45

My Friends: Correct Your Eating Faults and Lose Your Fat With Kruschen Salts

Yes: I'm forty-five today—built like a race horse, my freinds say—and I know I feel 10 years younger than I did three months ago—and I'd hate to tell you how much fat I lost with Kruschen.

I call Kruschen Salts the "magic salts" because when I was fat and wretched, despondent and half sick all the time—it took only one bottle that I bought for 85 cents at Alred Drug Company, to liven me up—put ambition and energy into me—made me feel years younger and with the help of a change in diet show me how to lose the fat I was ashamed of.

Cut out pastries and desserts—go easy on potatoes, cream, cheese, and butter—eat lean meat, chicken, fish, vegetables and fruits and never fail to take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning.

Every drug store worthy of the name in the world sells Kruschen Salts—an 85 cent bottle lasts 4 weeks—not much to pay for buoyant health.

PERFECT ACCORD

Teacher—If you subtract fourteen from a hundred sixteen, whats the difference?

Johnny—Yeah; I think its a lot of foolishness too.

BETHSALEM NEWS

We are glad to know that so many were out for Sunday School last Sunday. We cordially invite all that will to come and help out, and to bring someone with you. We had 43 on roll last Sunday.

Next Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days and we want every member to come and be with us. Rev. W. P. Lowery will deliver an interesting sermon. So all that can, come and take part in God's work, and let each one of who it might be, honor our blessed savior to the best of our ability in doing his work.—M. L. Wilkins.

LAWLEY NEWS

The members of Rehoboth W. M. S. met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Madison Young last Saturday night with a surprise donation party. The entire family received many useful gifts, such as childrens cloths, school supplies, groceries, coats, sweaters, hosery and about thirty yards of cloth. All members of the W. M. S. were present with some donation to this family, with an exception of only a few and they sent their gifts.

Mrs. Young thanked the women for their kindness, and stated that she could not form words to express her gratitude, because of her overwhelming joy, and that she feels God has directed this work and that God will bless each one for the manifestation of Christ in their lives.

The society has grown from six to nineteen members in two months, and all are active members. We are indeed so glad to have people in our community who are willing to stand for, and work for a just cause.

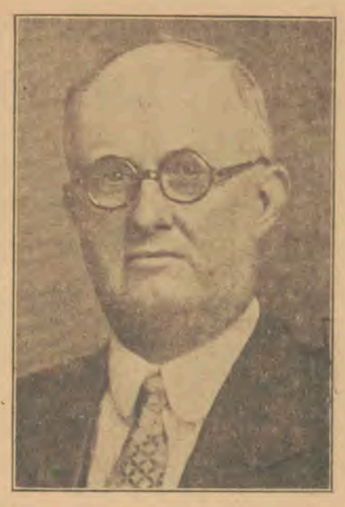
Mrs. W. P. Hicks, president of the W. M. S., states that the society will have a study course about the first of November. Plans are being made to have B. Y. P. U. and W. M. S. study courses the same week. Mrs. Hicks will be remembered by her school mates and friends as Miss Willie Walker.

Miss Olivia Latham, now teaching at Talladega, spent last week end at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Latham. Miss Olivia is a wonderful help in our Sunday School work and we wish she could be here more often.

Mrs. Zada Barnes Yarn spent a few days at Bell Ellen with relatives last week.

We regret to lose from our community one of our life long citizens, Mr. and Mrs. Sheb Holley, who have moved to Tuscaloosa. We will sadly miss them, but wish them much success.

Mr. Horton Walker, who is teaching at Clanton in C. C. H. S., was here last Saturday visiting relatives and friends.



The P. T. A. here will meet at the school house Thursday night to reorganize. Plans are being made by the dramatic club to put on a play in the near future.

SINGING AT FRIENDSHIP

There will be an all day singing at Friendship Church, 6 miles west of Lawley, in the old Christian Harmony and Sacred Harp books, the fourth Sunday in October. All singers are invited.—Mr. C. J. Littlejohn.

Dr. V. J. GRAGG

of Clanton

Candidate for State Senator

To the Voters of Chilton County:

I will not be able to call on you personally and shake hands with you, as is usual for candidates. But I am sure that alone would not go far in securing your vote, anyway.

I believe that honest government and sound legislation, based on principles of fair and impartial laws for all classes is what you want and need.

That is what I stand for, and it is on this promise that I solicit your vote and influence.

Respectfully,

V. J. GRAGG,

Candidate for State Senator in Autauga, Chilton, and Shelby Counties.

(Paid political adv., by Dr. V. J. Gragg, Clanton, Ala.)

An Invitation

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

Since the Republican State Convention of Alabama has not nominated, and therefore the Republican ticket in the November election will not have candidates for Governor and United States Senator, I feel that I am justified in extending to the Republicans of Chilton County an invitation to cast their votes for Hon. B. M. Miller for Governor, and Hon. John H. Bankhead for United States Senator, and for the other Democratic candidates for State offices in the General Election of Nov. 4th.

I feel that I can conscientiously and truthfully say to all the citizens of Chilton County that the best government for our State will come out of the election of Judge Miller as our Governor. And since we all agree that our State government should be the best possible to obtain, I think that it is becoming that we support those candidates who offer us the best and most constructive, economical administration of State affairs.

Since the Republicans have no state ticket, the Republican voters of Chilton County are therefore left to do as they please about voting for State officers and United States Senator. I invite you to consider carefully the qualifications and platform of Judge Miller, John H. Bankhead, and the other Democratic candidates for State offices, and to cast your vote and influence for them in the General Election of November 4th.

Anyone desiring any literature on the Campaign may get same by calling at my office in Clanton.

Respectfully,

N. S. JOHNSON, Chairman,

Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County.

(Paid political adv., by N. S. Johnson, Clanton, Ala.)

MRS. ELIZABETH KELLEY DIED

Mrs. Elizabeth Kelley, wife of Elder J. S. Kelley, died last Friday October 10, at the home of the family in Bethel community. IN MEMORY OF MRS. EMMA WATTS

On the night of October 10, on Friday night, at 7:30 o'clock the death angel visited the home of Mr. Silas Watts, and bore away the sweet and loving wife and mother to that bright and beautiful home where there is no more heart aches and sorrows and pain. She was loved by every one that knew her.

Mrs. Watts was a good Christian woman. She did not attend church regularly on account of ill health, but she lived a Christian life at home. We loved her, yes we loved her, but God loved her more, and took her away to live with him on that bright and beautiful shore.

Weep no more, dear father, children, and friends, but let us live as mother did, and be ready to meet her in that home God has prepared.

Mrs. Watts died of heart dropsy. She suffered for six weeks. She was prepared for burial and buried at Shiloh church on October 12. Bro. Denson preached the funeral. She was then taken and laid to rest at Shiloh cemetery.

She leaves to mourn her loss a host of friends, husband, and three sons, Mr. Silas Watts, the husband; Mr. Jessie Watts, Harson Watts and Will Watts, the sons. May God's richest blessings be upon you all.—Miss Minnie Vines.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR ALL ANIMALS

Auburn, Ala., Oct. 13.—Cottonseed meal is being recommended as a feed for work animals, horses and mules, on Alabama farms because it will reduce the cost of the ration and because it is an Alabama product, according to J. C. Grimes, head of the animal industry division of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Professor Grimes said that a study of rations for work animals has revealed that cottonseed meal may be fed to horses and mules up to two pounds per animal per day, each pound of cottonseed meal replacing two pounds of corn.

At present corn is costing about two and one-half cents per pound, and cottonseed meal about one and one-half cents per pound. Therefore, he said that one and one-half cents worth of cottonseed meal can replace four and one-half cents worth of corn, the cost ratio being 1 to 3.

These figures show that the feeding of cottonseed meal is profitable from an economic standpoint.

Professor Grimes pointed out, however, that animals that work should not receive more than two pounds of cottonseed meal per animal per day. Small animals should be limited to one and one-half pounds; and animals not at work should not receive more than one pound per animal per day, he said.

More than one-third of all the counties in the United States are now practically free from bovine tuberculosis, the United States Department of Agriculture announces. On October 1, there were 1,035 counties classified as "modified accredited areas"—areas in which tuberculosis had been reduced to not more than 5 per cent of the cattle population.

Prices of dairy products are expected to advance moderately during the fall, prior to the usual seasonal drop in mid-winter, but to remain at a lower level than has obtained during the last few years, according to the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The wide popularity of miniature golf courses has greatly stimulated the use of cotton fabrics in the form of awnings, chairs, unbrellas, and protective tarpaulins.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

WINTER COVER CROP LARGEST IN HISTORY

Alabama farmers have this year purchased 1,256,289 pounds of winter legumes cooperatively through their farm organizations, reports Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation. This tonnage included 233,989 pounds of hairy vetch and 1,022,300 pounds of Austrian winter peas. Farmers of the state contracted with Oregon farmers to grow the peas.

The tonnage this year compares with 1,253.225 pounds of winter legume seed purchased cooperatively last year. It will be noted that there is a big increase in the Austrian winter pea sale and decrease in the hairy vetch sale. Last year 737,170 pounds of hairy vetch and 516,055 pounds of Austrian winter peas were purchased cooperatively.

"The Farm Bureau has played a most important part in making Alabama a leader in the planting of winter legumes for soil improvement, said President O'Neal. P. O. Davis, editor of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, has written a historical sketch on winter legumes in Alabama, as follows:

"Ten years ago very few of these seed were sowed and there was uncertainty as to how to do it and when to do it. Meanwhile, the experiment station had been working and continuing to work to answer questions concerning these crops which were then considered very promising. Time of sowing, depth of sowing seed, soil, fertilizer, and other subjects were studied. In due time the experiment station was able to tell farmers how to sow, where to sow, when to sow, and how to fertilize.

"With specific knowledge as to how to proceed the extension worker launched a campaign in behalf of the winter legumes. Farmers were told then as now that winter legumes are the cheapest way to enrich the soil, to add nitrogen and organic matter. These crops do not add phosphorus or potash.

"This work was effective but it had not unfolded rapidly until the farm bureau entered the field as an organization to purchase seed and to other jobs on the cooperative plan. Thus an organization of farmers completed a change from the experiment station to practical applications on farms.

Under favorable conditions the legumes planted on Alabama farms this year will add over $1,000,000 worth of nitrogen to the soil.

FORESTRY AND EDUCATION

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 13.—The boy or girl who studies the elements of forestry is in a fair way to absorb a great deal of information usually found only in rather advanced school and college courses, states Colonel Page S. Bunker, state forester. No student can observe the germination of an acron or pine seed and follow the development and progress of the growing seedling without learning many facts and principles that have important place in the science of biology, particularly botany. Furthermore, the study of soils in which trees grow and of the processes through which the substances of the earth become converted into tree food and later form the wood reveals many features of chemistry.

Since timber growth is measured both by quantity and time as well as by value, the student must brush up on arithmetic, especially the parts dealing with measurements and interest, both simple and compound. For the more involved computations, it is necessary to review algebra and geometry, and even go quite a way into higher mathematics.

The great variety of valuable timber trees of the earth and the points to and from which forest products are shipped, together with the influence of climates upon the character of the forest, contribute much to one's knowledge of georgraphy, both commercial and physical.

The attractive forms assumed by trees, their flowers and their leaves are much used in art designs and extensively portrayed by painters and engravers. There is hardly a student of art that cannot profit by a study of forest trees

The most practical educational influence of the study of forestry, perhaps, lies in the fact that the practice of it demands a most rigid system of accounting in dollars and cents. Whether one's forestry project shall be successful or not depends upon close regard of the principles of economics. The student of forestry keeps these facts before him and in determining the feasibility of various forestral ventures he necessarily must have recourse to economic principles and commercial accounting.

Vitamin G, growth-promoting factor for animals and man, is found to be from five to eight times more abundant in beef liver, pork liver, and beef kidney than in lean beef, pork, and lamb, according to a series of tests recently finished by Ralph Hoagland and George G. Snider of the United States Department of Agriculture.

FARMERS PLANNING FOR CO-OP TURKEY SALES

Farmers of the turkey producing sections of Alabama are turning their attention to cooperative turkey sales just before Thanksgiving. J. B. Sylvest, and J. D. Moore, marketing specialists of the extension service, Auburn, are making plans to assist the turkey producers in getting the best prices possible for their turkeys.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau reports that turkey growers take a great deal of pride in the fact that cooperative turkey marketing has been very successful in Alabama for the past four years. He says that they review the following facts with great interest.

"In 1926 the cooperative marketing of turkeys had its beginning in Alabama. During that year 166,000 pounds were sold which brought $48,000. In 1927 thirty-one carloads, weighing 394,000 pounds were sold for $125,000. During the following year 28 cars weighing 316,000 lbs. brought $101,000. Last year 35 cars weighing 475,000 pounds were loaded by 7,000 farmers who received $121,335."

It is advised that all good sized well matured, and fat turkeys be marketed Thanksgiving. If the turkeys are small and weigh less than 7 pounds for hens and 11 pounds for toms they should be kept for the Christmas market. Thanksgiving offers the best outlet for Alabama turkeys.

STATE FARM PROGRAM ADOPTED FOR ALABAMA

Auburn, Ala., Oct. 13.—Last week a group of Alabama leaders in agriculture, finance, and business met in the House of Representatives in the State capitol at Montgomery upon a call of Governor Graves to consider the present farm situation in Alabama. After careful consideration they adopted a program with better farming as their goal which includes fewer acres in cotton, the production of more cash products, and other important recommendations.

When they met cotton was selling in Montgomery at below 9 cents a pound. Low grades were bringing under 8 cents, and the same prices were being paid to farmers throughout the South.

Their recommendations are too long to quote here, bht the Alabama farm program for the individual farmer in 1931 and future years, in brief is:

1. Fewer acres in cotton in 1931 to allow consumption to absorb the excess surplus now on hand.
2. Production of better cotton. Nothing under seven-eighths inch staple and more of the better staples.
3. More of other cash products, especially dairy products, poultry, and hogs.
4. Home production of ample food and feed for the family and livestock.
5. Production at a low cost by richer land, better commercial fertilizer, better varieties of crops and breeds of animals, modern methods, and adequate use of machinery.
6. Cooperative marketing of cotton and other products; and also cooperative buying of fertilizer and other production products.

HELP PROTECT THE WILD ANIMAL

The growing movement to humanize trapping is a subject which is no doubt of interest to many of our readers. In Washington, D. C., an organization known as the anti-steel-trap league exists with the sole purpose of gaining abolition of devices for the capture of fur-bearing animals, which do not kill at once or take their victims unhurt.

Few women realize that the history of their furs has a hideous beginning but education is producing a strong sentiment against use of adornments representing hours or days of anguish endured by helpless creatures. Anyone who has experienced the agony of a jammed finger should look with mercy upon a being crushed and mutilated between jaws of steel.

In addition to the motive of relieving the fur-bearer, some other considerations are the need of conversation, the danger of injury to domestic animals and the moral effect upon the boy of learning to ignore distress.

During the past year Georgia has prohibited the use of steel-traps, with exceptions, and Governor Richards, of South Carolina has vetoed a measure to permit its use under certain conditions. New York made some progress in legislation and a direct vote is expected in Massachusetts in November. Everywhere the matter is attracting attention especially among women's clubs and humane societies.

Among manufacturers who are meeting the demand for humaner devices are the Tumane Killer Trap Company, Austin, Pa., the Cooper Humane Trap Company, Apalachin, N. Y., and E. L. Herson, Fitchburg, Mass. It should be born in mind that burrowing pests can be effectively destroyed with the use of the exhaust from a gas engine or with calcium cyanide.

It is hoped that the public will appreciate the need of protecting the wild animal from unspeakable torture in trapping and will demand a law to do away with barbaric methods in this connection.

The railroads spent over $321,000,000 in equipment in 1929. The figures recording this expenditure on the railroads' investment accounts mean little to most of us. Their importance is better illustrated by the following:

From the ECONOMIST

"It is difficult to conceive of any public utility being 99.99 per cent perfect in any aspect of its service; yet the railroads of this country in 1929 came just that close to perfection in the delivery of freight cars to shippers --- which means the avoidance of the old bugaboo of car shortages."

From the Scranton (Pa.) SUN

"The railroads have always been one of the main props for industry and, aside from the regular work of roadway betterment, which includes rails, ties and bridge materials, they draw upon almost every other department of trade. The millions to be spent by the roads will give a strong uplift to many lives which are sorely in need of orders just now."

On the receipt of adequate railway income, and sensible limitation of railway taxes and restrictions, depend to a great extent the prosperity, growth, employment, and general welfare of the country.

Few Groups of Eskimos Snow-House Dwellers

Snow houses are unknown to the Alaskan Eskimos, and in the Mackenzie delta region such dwellings are used only in emergencies.

The snow house has long been and still is the winter habitation of a number of Eskimo groups scattered eastward from Coronation gulf to Greenland. Even in that desolate region the snow house is regularly inhabited only when no other building materials are available. Some of these Eskimo hunters are very adept at constructing houses of snow for the temporary shelter of their families.

The Labrador Eskimos do not live in snow houses, and out of the 15,000 Eskimos in Greenland only a few hundred living around Cape York ever dwell in such shelters. Even among these the more usual winter dwelling consists of walls of earth or stone and rafters of stone slabs or the large bones of animals.

It is supposed that the Eskimos are descended from American aborigines who gradually worked their way into the Far North. Ancient ruins found throughout the region where snow houses are still regularly or occasionally used indicate that the house of stone, driftwood and whalebone is older than the igloo or hemispherical house built of blocks of snow laid in spiral courses.

Peasant Had Definite if Peculiar Grievance

One of the most familiar stories of Athenian history is that of Aristides and the peasant, says an article in a Boston paper. The ancient Athenians were just as human as any other people of later times, despite our tendency to regard them as supermen. Aristides, it will be remembered, was a great and good man whose policy was opposed to that of the brilliant and unscrupulous Themistocles.

The deadlock between the two leaders had to be broken by ostracism, which provided for the temporary banishment of the less popular leader. A peasant accosted Aristides and asked him to write the name of Aristides on his ballot. This was a vote for banishment and the leader asked the peasant if Aristides had ever injured him. "No," the man answered, "but I am tired of hearing him called Aristides the just."

Viking History

In a little island in the middle of the Irish sea there is held every year on July 5 (representing midsummer day, old style), the promulgation of the Manx laws. The scene of the ceremony is Tynwald hill, in the Isle of Man.

It is a living relic of the important part played in the history of England by the Vikings, who from the close of the Eighth century made plundering excursions to the British isles, and then settled first in the Orkneys and Shetlands, later in the Hebrides, and thence gradually in the western isles of Scotland; in Ireland, where they were met by their brethren coming round by the south, and in Man, whence they spread eastward till they joined forces with their kinsfolk in York.

Warrior and Athlete

Babar the magnificent warring oriental monarch of the Fifteenth century, was apparently tireless, and as proud of his skill as an athlete as of his ability as a general, says an article in the Boston Globe. Once, for the fun of it, he swam the Ganges, performing this stunt, as he explains in his memoirs, "in 33 strokes." At another time he ran around the battlements of a fortress with a man under each arm, leaping the embrasures. But these feats, added to his endless campaigns, weakened him, and he died suddenly at the age of forty-eight, leaving his new empire to a son whose ability was less conspicuous.

Honolulu Smokeless

Honolulu is a smokeless city and for that reason it is rated clean or free from the smudge which has marred the structural appearance of New York and particularly Pittsburgh. Except for the chimneys of the gas and electric plants there are no chimneys in Honolulu. In the first place heating systems are not needed and the greater number of housewives or servants use gas for cooking. Some more cook outdoors and others on a charcoal stove which does not give out any smoke. This interesting Hawaiian city, it was pointed out, is not a profitable field for painters.

Safety First

During the trial of a man on a serious charge of theft the evidence was so palpably insufficient that the judge stopped the case and directed the jury to return a verdict of "not guilty." A well-known lawyer, however, who wished to do something for the fee he had received for the defense, claimed the privilege of addressing the court.

"We'll hear you with the greatest pleasure," said the judge, "but, to prevent accident, we'll first acquit the prisoner!"—Montreal Star.

Campaign Chairman Appeals For Support of County Republican Nominees

TO MY FELLOW REPUBLICANS OF CHILTON COUNTY

I wish to call attention to the fact that the general election is fast approaching and that in this election we will elect our servants for the next four and six years.

May I say here I do not feel that the Republican ticket is in any danger, but I desire to call your attention to the fact that we need to be on guard and see to it that the unexpected does not happen.

I wish here to express my delight and appreciation of the fact that a great host of Republicans went into the Republican primary in August this year and assisted in selecting our present ticket. This act is manly, patriotic and well deserves commendation because when the people cease to take an interest in the selection of their officials there is danger lurking about and we as loyal Republicans and citizens need to look well to this fact.

Now, my fellow citizens since a great number of Republicans have gone to the polls and selected men from a goodly number of fine men as candidates for the various offices, it behooves us, each and every one of us, whether we lost or won in the primary, to put our shoulders to the wheel like brave, loyal and courageous men and women and see to it that we win in this election by a majority never heard of before in Chilton County.

I contend that we have as good a ticket as could be put out in this County by any party, and I believe that any citizen who will just think unbiased for a moment, regardless of his political affiliations, will agree with me.

In the first place we have men whose lives and characters are above reproach for each office. Some of them are known far and wide for their efficient public service, while there are only two in the whole number who have ever held elective offices. They may all be looked upon as men who have fought long and hard without elective awards of any kind.

Let us look further into the personnel of the candidates and by so doing we find that for positions of an administrative nature we have the fine deserving young men in the persons of W. G. Culp and Akins I. Collins, who are alert, wide awake and accommodating in their very nature, therefore, we may best bespeak for them a very satisfactory administration of the offices to which they aspire. In postions that require a great deal of firmness, judgement and experience, and entails considerable responsibility, we find such men as W. H. Gillespie for Sheriff, J. M. Mims and J. E. Cobb for Commissioners, W. L. Sanders for the Board of Education and Percy M. Pitts for Representative in the Legislature. We also have Judge G. W. Weaver of Shelby County, who is an able man, as our candidate for State Senator from this district representing Autauga, Chilton and Shelby Counties, on the Republican ticket. He is well qualified to fill this place. A number of these men are aged in experience, and all of them men worthy to be trusted to do their duty and to serve the people to the very best of their ability.

They are not a hand picked bunch of candidates, but men, who, because of their fitness, were selected by Republicans from a bunch of fine men in our primary. May I ask then, what plausible excuse can there be for Republicans not voting our ticket? Republicans are going to elect the officers to fill the various offices, because there are more Republicans in Chilton County than there are Democrats. Then, are Republicans going to elect Republicans, or, are they going to elect Democrats? I believe and am expecting us to elect Republicans by an overwhelming majority.

In conclusion I take the authority as chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee of Chilton County, Alabama, to invite all legal voters to vote for the candidates on the Republican ticket November the 4th, 1930, and help elect the officers who will serve you in the various offices to be filled. I assure you that your support of the Republican ticket will be appreciated regardless of your past political affiliations.

Hoping to write again before the election on November the 4th, I close by saying: Now is the time for all Republicans to rally to the support of their party.—J. Z. MIMS, chairman Republican Campaign Committee.

No Flowers—Brevity is the soul of modern journalism. A budding journalist was told never to use two words where one would do. He carried out this advice in his report of a fatal accident in the following manner:

"John Jones struck a match to see if there was any gasoline in his tank. There was. Age sixty-five."—"Selected" by the Christian Evangelist.

HUNTERS SHOULD BE READY

The hunting season throughout the State of Alabama will soon be here, and according to reports from practically every section of the State we have a good crop of game.

During the open season the game supply of both birds and animals add considerably to the food supply of those who go afield with dog and gun.

Permit me to call the attention of the hunters through the columns of your paper to the necessity for equipping themselves with a hunting license before they begin hunting. A hunter who does not nor will not hunt outside the county of his permanent residence may procure a county hunting license, paying therefor the sum of one ($1.00) dollar. Any person however, who hunts at any time during the season beyond the borders of the county of his permanent residence must procure a state hunting license and pay therefor the sum of three ($3.00) dollars. All non-residents or residents who have not resided in the State for a period of one year must procure a non-resident hunting license, at a cost of twenty-five ($25.00) dollars beforesuch non-resident can legally hunt in the State of Alabama.

All hunting licenses may be purchased at the office of the Judge of Probate.

It is much cheaper for the hunter to equip himself with a hunting license than to pay the fine and costs in court for hunting without a license. A person who violates the law through failure or refusal to get his license or who otherwise violates the game law gets little or no real pleasure out of the sport, and hunts at his own peril.

It is the purpose of those in charge of game administration in Alabama to protect and provide as much game as possible for all who would go afield, and I appeal to all hunters therefore, to give us your active cooperation that the coming hunting season may be the most pleasurable and profitable season the hunting fraternity has ever experienced in this State.—I. T. Quinn, Commissioner.

Land Erosion Serious Matter to the Nation

Erosion continues to wash away the soil resources of the nation. A recent survey of a typical small valley in northeastern Kansas shows that 86 per cent of the land, comprising the greater part of the valley, has lost from 8 to 40 inches of soil since it was cleared 40 years ago, the United States Department of Agriculture reports.

Thirty-four acres had lost an average of 11 inches of soil, 45 acres had lost 18 inches, 16 acres had lost 21 inches, 2½ acres had lost 23 inches and 1¼ acres had lost 3¼ feet of soil. The "yardstick" for measuring the losses was found in a few remaining patches of timber, where the soil was as nature originally built it—a mellow rich silt loam almost black with spongy humus, and capable of producing 75 bushels of corn an acre. Now the land is very much less productive. Much of it is overrun with weeds. In the meantime the washing proceeds.

Salem Made Famous by Its Ships and Traders

During the Revolution little Salem, under leadership of Elias Hasket Derby, furnished and equipped 158 privateers, carrying 2,000 guns and manned by 6,000 men, equal to the entire population of the city, writes Walter Prichard Eaton in the Washington Star. At the end of the war, naturally, Salem found itself with a large fleet, much too large for coastwise trade, and a large staff of skippers and seamen trained to adventure and daring navigation. Besides the ships and seamen, the little town possessed, in Derby and others, owners and merchants of imagination and initiative. She was all set for great things.

And great things came with a rush. The Derbys, the Crowinshields and the rest sent their ships around Good Hope, to the East Indies, and long before the East Indian traders knew the names of Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore or Boston, they knew well the name of Salem. Derby's famous ship, the Grand Turk, in 1784 was the first American merchantman to round the Cape of Good Hope.

Faith of Brothah Joe Surely at Low Point

L. E. Newton of Garden City, Mo., put down his magazine and devoted himself to thoughts of a negro handy man who used to work for him—Old Joe Black.

Old Joe, writes Mr. Newton, was forever getting religion and backsliding. One summer he suffered no fewer than seven of these successful wrestles with Satan, and a particularly powerful preacher was called to the rescue.

"Have faith, Brothah Joe, have faith," exhorted the good man. "Hitch you'self to faith and git goin'. Don't you know faith no biggah than a mustahd seed'll move a mountain?"

"Sho' does, sho' does," groaned Old Joe Black. "But jist this minute I ain't got faith enough to move that mustahd seed."—Collier's Weekly.

THE LEADER'S ELEVENTH ANNIVERSARY SALE

Mr. Maurice Lande, proprietor of The Leader, is not very blue about business conditions. He seems to have gotten right next to the people with his Eleventh Anniversary Sale which has been in progress for the past ten days.

Commenting upon this event Tuesday, Mr. Lande said: "I am bound to proclaim that our Eleventh Anniversary Sale has been a splendid success. Thousands of folks have been to our store during this event, and they have found something interesting and attractive. We are proceeding now into the closing days of this special selling event, with a great array of bargains to offer our customers.

"You see, our stock of goods is brand new. Not an item in our store is over sixty days old. These goods were bought since the market went down. We are not trying to sell off a lot of high priced merchandise with high-pressure methods. We just simply have brand new merchandise of high quality, which was bought on the low-priced market, and that is the reason the prices we make are astonishingly low, compared with some others.

"From the ways folks have been coming to our Eleventh Anniversary Sale, I am convinced that The Leader has succeeded in proving to the public that our motto is true: That The Leader really LEADS in giving real values.

"We thank our friends for their continued patronage and good will. We will be found here striving always to bring to them the very best goods in the world at the best prices which they can be sold under the prevailing conditions."

Human Centipede.—A young officer at the front wrote home to his father:

"Dear Father: Kindly send me $50 at once; I lost another leg in a stiff engagement and am in the hospital without means."

The answer was:

"My Dear Son: As this is the fourth leg you have lost (according to your letters), you ought to be accustomed to it by this time. Try and wobble along on any other you may have left."—Montreal Star.

Going the Pace.—To a prospective June bride.

Come, dwell with me and be my spouse,

Sunshine in the Rear—"It is the duty of every one to make at least one person happy during the week," said a Sunday School teacher. "Have you done so, Freddy?"

"Yes," said Freddy promptly.

"That's right. What did you do?"

"I went to see my aunt, and she was happy when I went home."—Christian Register.

Balm in Gilead—A blond flapper called at the hospital the day after the accident.

"I want to see the young man who was injured in the auto wreck last night."

"Are you the girl who was with him?" asked the nurse.

"Yes," was the reply, "and I thought it was only right to come and give him the kiss he was trying for."—Boston Transcript.

Alabama Farm Bureau Feeds Are Manufactured On Open Formulas Recommended By Poultry Department, Experiment Station, Auburn

CHILTON COUNTY FARMER ENDORSES FEED PUT OUT BY FARM BUREAU

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 27.
To Whom It May Concern:
I am a feeder of Farm Bureau feed, which is put up according to the recommendations of the Alabama Experiment Station at Auburn. I like this feed, 1st. Because it has given good results, and 2nd. Because it is handled through the Farm Bureau, of which I am a part.

I have averaged 108 birds in my flock since Jan. 1st, of this year. I fed $135.83 worth of feed to these 108 hens between Jan. 1st and Sept. 1st. Between these dates, I sold $292.34 worth of eggs from these 108 hens. This leaves me $156.51 for my labor. I have a nice bunch of pullets that were raised on Farm Bureau feed.

Yours truly,
W. W. ROBINSON,
Clanton, Ala., Route 1.

1,080 HENS MAKE BEST RECORD ON BUREAU FEEDS

Results of Alabama Farm Bureau Feed fed to the Alabama National Egg Laying Contest follows:

This feed has been used at the Alabama Contest for two years and the 1,000 hens averaged 197 eggs per bird in 1929. This was considerably higher than any previous record at this contest. The 1,000 birds have averaged 167.6 eggs per bird out of a possible 273 days in the 1930 contest. This is 5.3 eggs per bird better than any previous record and we feel that it is due to better feed.

Out of twenty-four Standard Contests in the United States and Canada, Alabama has never been below eighth place and has been first and second the majority of this year. This report was published by Poultry Item.

We are thoroughly pleased with the results of Alabama Farm Bureau Feed and feel that there's none better on the market.

C. T. BAILEY, Manager, Ala. National Egg Laying Contest.

Bro. Bryan's Weekly Message

(Written for The Union-Banner by REV. J. A. BRYAN, Pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Alabama)

GOD'S PROVIDENTIAL CARE OF HIS PEOPLE

The events in the book of Esther cover a period of forty years. It describes God moving in the shadows, and yet His name is not mentioned at all in the entire book. We see God in it working out His plans and designs in no haste, no rest, no weariness, no discontinuity, but all things were done by Him in the majesty of silence, as we see them here in this book under a light that shineth quietly and brightly in the darkness. Just so we see His plan being worked out elsewhere in sacred and profane history.

In reading this book it is easy to understand why God's name is not mentioned, taking into consideration the place it was written. It was written in Persia where the people did not have the same God we have, the same God the Jews had. Had God's name been mentioned it would have had the news and the impression to the people and would therefore have been entirely disinteresting. In this book, however, we come to a wonderful prayer life in the daily walk and habits of some of the people mentioned. Of the sixty-six books of the Bible forty-one were written in Palestine and the rest were written outside. Palestine, the Holy Land. Ephesus, Philippians, Philemon, Colossians, 1st Timothy, were written in Rome, Italy.

Nehemiah and Ezra had returned to Jerusalem, carrying with them some of the Hebrew captives from Babylon back to Jerusalem where the walls and temple was rebuilt and a great reform was made which turned the people back to God. All of the captive Hebrews did not go back to Jerusalem but no doubt preferred to remain up there in Shushan around which were good crops of barley, oats, fruits, etc. That is, they preferred to remain with their prosperity in a rich fertile country undevastated by the enemy's raids. Among those who stayed in Shushan was this pious Jewish captive named Esther, who became queen of Persia and saved her people, the Hebrews or Jews, from the wicked plot of Haman. We also think of Mordecia, Esther's uncle and foster father, who arose from a very humble position to be second only to the king.

This whole book of Esther was evidently written in the Hebrew language. The key sentence in the book is this: "If I live, I live; and if I die, I die." This was a statement made by Esther when she walked up out of the court expecting Ahasuerus to have her killed. She was talking to Mordecia who feared for her life at this time. The place was in Shushan, in the palace of the king about sixty miles from the Persian Gulf. Today there are excavations of some of the walls which surrounded the palace of king Ahasuerus in Shushan. The word Shushan means a lily. It was called Susa by the Greeks, and was in the province of Elam.

Esther means a star. She certainly was a star to her people when the dark clouds hung over them. She as queen appointed a fast, Esther 4:15; was favorably received by the king, 5:1; invited Haman to a feast, 5:8; and asked her own life and that of here people of the king, 7:3; accused Haman 5. This all shows her prayer life, her spiritual body.

Ahasuerus was king and at the beginning of the book we see him on the throne with Vasthi as his wife and queen. I pause to place a wreath on Vasthi's brow. She was a wonderful woman. The name Vasthi means beautiful, and Vasthi was indeed abeautiful queen to look upon. This king Ahasuerus as was the custom at that time among royal families gave a great banquet. Now at this banquet he wished to show all the people present what a beautiful wife he had. He sent for her to come forth and let the people look upon her beauty. Queen Vasthi had a soul too deep and a life too noble for any such display and vulgar glory. She sent the king word that she would not obey him, meaning to say, "You can't make a fool out of me. I desire beauty of soul and mind and refuse to be used as a model of sensuality."

It was then that the men present showed resentment of women's rights when they urged the king to get a divorce at once and degrade her from her royalty. They said, "Our wives will not obey us, since the queen has refused to obey you." That showed the "sovereignty of man" in the far East which exists even until this day.

But this was all in God's plan that Esther should become queen and save her people. Haman was an ambitious and unprincipled courtier in Ahasuerus who became prime minister to the king. He had craved so much for this promotion, and now since he had it, he felt his importance so much that every courtesy and possible respect must be showed upon him. Mordecia would not bow to him and show reverence to him as he wished. Because of this Haman was incited in hatred and malice to have Mordecia and even all of his people, the Jews, put to death. He at once went to the king and obtained a decree to have them killed.

Now Haman, along with other people of the time, could not help knowing the brain and heart of this wonderful man, Mordecia. Certainly this book of Esther shows the clean, pure lives of Esther and Mordecia. It shows Esther's largeness of heart. In it there was room for God and all her people. The first thing she turned her mind to was prayer. She realized their entire and absolute dependence upon God for help and for strength. She said, "We must have days of prayer and fasting before I go into the presence of Ahasuerus to plead our cause." O, if America today only would do likewise how great things we would accomplish for Christ. If we would have prayer meeting every morning. If we would pray God to send better crops, better business, more prosperity, instead of depending upon what we poor creatures of the dust can do, for truly is the help of man vain.

The day came for the great deliverance of the Hebrews. Haman's wicked device for their extermination was in God's plan for Mordecia's promotion. The king said to Haman, "I want you to tell me about this man Mordecia. What has he ever done that he should be hanged upon your gallows, and what has his people ever done that you should have them killed?" In going over the past records Ahasuerus sent down into the basement and found there that Mordecia had one time saved his life in the plot at the hand of certain enemies to kill the king because of some greviance. Ahasuerus said, "O, I feel so grateful for what that man has done that I will spare his life which is now in the balance. I will give him the best position I have and express my gratitude to his God." Friends, gratitude to God is the greatest thing in a man's life.

Esther was a deliverer of her people, and as a deliverer she was a type of Christ. Stop and think with me of the fact that if the Jews in Persia had been exterminated there would not have been a Christ. This man Mordecia was of the tribe of Judah. Then Esther was a Jewess and married a Gentile. Ruth was a Gentile and married a Jew. Jesus Christ the descendent of the house and lineage of David was the Saviour of the world. Leaving the study for a while we calmly and reverently recognize Esther as the deliverer of the world, not a family or a mere nation, but of the world.

J. BICE WRITES REGARDING ALMS HOUSE

Editor Union-Banner:

I wish to say a few words through your paper in regard to the Commissioner's report of the care for the inmates of the county poor house.

The county commissioners do not have to unite with other counties to build a house for the poor of their county. They can if they wish, but the law does not compell them to unite with other counties. The last legislature passed a law giving the county commissioners all power to care for the poor. To erect buildings, buy land for building purposes to care for the poor. Sell land, to do any and all things to care for the poor. All they have to do when they want to build and equip houses for the poor is to notify Mr. Anderson. Give him 15 days notice and furnish him with the plans of the building.

I do not believe in uniting with other counties for the care of the poor. It will add more cost to the operation, and create more and larger jobs for the pets.

Following is Section 1, and part of Section 2 of the last acts of our legislature, for information of the citizen of this county:

Section 1. That the court of the county commissioners or board of revenue or other governing bodies of each county shall have jurisdiction and power necessary and proper for the relief and support of the poor of its county. And it shall have control of the houses for the poor, and may employ a suitable person to take charge of same. It shall see that the poor are properly treated, and it may provide physician, nurses and such other attendants or attaches as it may deem proper, and purchase medicine, surgical supplies and any and all things necessary for the proper care of the inmates and conduct of the institution, and payment therefor may be ordered out of the proper fund by warrant on the county treasurer.

Section 2. The court of county commissioners, or board of revenue may purchase and hold lands and other property proper for the erection and continuance of a home for the poor, and may at their discretion dispose of lands, buildings, furnishings, equipment and stock, now or hereafter owned for such purpose. And make titles therefor, and may make appropriations and orders proper for the erection and continuance of homes for the poor.

I have made no inspection of the alms house, and have made no kick against the man in charge of the poor. With best wishes. Yours truly.—J. Bice.

DEVELOPING THE TREATY NAVY

Hearings have been started by the general board of the United States navy preparatory to its formulation of a construction program to be recommended to Congress when it reassembles in December. Though the London three-power treaty provides for Anglo-American naval parity, so far as the various types of fighting craft are concerned, more than a little must be done by the Navy Departent, Congress and American shipyards before the treaty will amount to much. Parity on paper is not what the American delegation to the London conference worked for. To achieve actual parity the United States must build many crusiers, modern destroyers, submarines and other fighting craft.

The Hoover administration and the supporters in Congress of an adequate navy under the treaty of London believe that the program of the general board should provide for complete realization of parity with Great Britan by December 31, 1936, the date of the expiration of the treaty. Since the appropriations for new construction have to be determined and voted by Congress the problem of naval parity is now squarely up to that body.

The attitude of the congressional leaders has yet to be ascertained, or perhaps developed. Mr. Hoover insists upon rigid economy in expenditures and the heavy monthly treasury deficits since the beginning of the present fiscal year re-enforce his demand impressively. The question, however, is not how much shall be expended on naval construction next year, or in any one year, but how much shall be expended during the life of the naval treaty. Agreement upon the attainment of parity within the period obviously would facilitate agreement upon annual appropriations for new construction.

Much will depend on the President's leadership. He will win, as he has won on various occasions in the past in contests with congressional blocs, if he is prepared to make a determined fight for actual parity. To advocate effectively at the next conference further limitation of naval armaments this nation must demonstrate its determination to possess sea power second to none and to use that power steadily in the interests of peace.—Chicago News.

VERBENA HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

One of the most interesting battles of the ages was raging at Verbena High School last week. This battle was fought by the Red Pirates, led by Captain Kid, and the Black Pirates, led by the infamous John Silver. The Reds surerndered to the Blacks at noon last Thursday after a long, hard struggle of one week.

Every year the pupils of this school sell magazine subscriptions. For several years they sold for the Curtis Publishing Company, but this year they represented the Crowell Publishing Company. Every one in school thoroughly enjoys the contest and the rollicking fun he has at the party honoring the winning side.

Ethel Cagle was admiral of the Reds, with Rachel Messer and John Eiland, Jr., as the team captains. Sue Sharp, as admiral, and Sara Hollis and Milton Sharp, as the captains, led the Black to victory.

The school get a certain amount of each subscription, and the pupils work for individual prizes.

The whole school breathed a sigh of relief when tests were over. But, can you imagine any body making one hundred on geometry? Velma Patterson did.

The teachers returned from the Institute looking more grim and imposing than ever, with a notebook full of new ideas for making life miserable for the pupils.

Rev. D. S. Martin, of Equality, was in Clanton a few days last week visiting his son, J. Mell Martin. While here Rev. Martin attended the meeting of the Unity Baptist Association at White Pond. Rev. He served as Clerk of the body for 34 years, after which he was promoted to Moderator. He now holds the latter named position.

Wise Old Coyote Takes Few Chances on Traps

Ordinarily the coyote does not band like the timber wolf. The person unacquainted with coyotes and their habits would hardly believe the above statement after listening for the first time to the howling of one or two of these animals. The coyote can make more noise for his size than any animal in the woods and a solitary male can so change the volume and direction of his voice that one would almost swear there were a dozen coyotes doing their stuff.

If a coyote locates dead game and is afraid to run chances of getting his toes pinched he will, provided he is a wise old beast, employ a simple strategy to test the danger of the place. Setting back on his haunches he will send a few well-rounded calls into the air, a sort of hunting cry which signals for help. The nearest coyote, particularly if it be a young and uninitiated fellow, will answer the call and come post haste. While the wise one holds back the newcomer will walk up and investigate. Presently, providing nothing serious happens, the old one will come on in and partake of the feast. But, as sometimes happens, if the youngster steps into a steel trap, the other unceremoniously takes his leave, another sly wrinkle of wisdom forming on his shrewd face as he steals cautiously away.

Two-Dollar Bill Called "Just Darned Nuisance"

The idea that there is something unlucky about the $2 bill—so that many persons tear the corners off them to avert misfortune—occasionally arouses curiosity.

A number of our readers have written in with suggestions to account for the belief in the unluckiness of this particular note. One, however, a merchant in Pennsylvania, says from his experience as a retailer that "there is no question of superstition in connection with the $2 bill, it is just a darned nuisance.

"There is no compartment provided in our cash register for them," he writes, "and when we are handed one by a customer we have to secrete it away somewhere until we get a chance to pass it on to the bank. We can't very well hand it out to another customer for change, that is if we want to retain their good will.

"The only possible use it has is when some one purchases a 2-cent stamp and hands us a $20 bill in payment. Then we can get back at him by unloading all the $2 bills we have on hand."—Literary Digest.

But whether naked as he was made, or decked out in an admiral's gold braid, he coutinues to fulfill his role of being the merriest fountain in Europe.

Holding a Husband

How to keep a husband, in nine chapters, is told by the California Federation of Women's Clubs. Here are the rules: Dress prettily for breakfast. Get your husband to take you out two evenings a week, but let him stay at home the rest. Pay the household bills before buying new dresses. Never make your husband dry dishes. Never permit your mother-in-law to visit on holidays. Listen to your husband if he likes the sound of his voice. Ask his advice on everything. Be clinging, but not too clinging. Make him think you're a weak, small creature and he is 9 feet tall with the strength of a lion.

The boy looked more puzzled than before.

"Then who keeps the people off the grass?" he answered.

TAYLOR-PARRISH WEDDING

Well, friends, we are mighty sorry we forgot to tell you last week about Uncle Tom Taylor and Miss Julia Parrish getting married. But it was just an oversight on our part.

Our failure to chronicle this fact last week in due time did not detract from the solemnity of the event one bit. They were married on Thursday evening, September 2, at the home of Rev. M. J. Parrish, in Beat 16. Their many friends have already extended congratulations and best wishes. And now, though a little bit late, The Union-Banner wishes to add our felicitations.

I wish to say that I am now completing my arrangements to move back into the second district and will be there by the time the election comes off. I will continue to live in the second district, and if a majority of the people of the county express themselves in my favor on November 4th, I will be ready to serve them as Commissioner to the best of my ability.—Respectfully, J. DOCTORS FAVOR THE HEALTH UNIT

Every Member of County Medical Society Endorses This Proposition

To the People of Chilton County:

By an order of the Commissioners Court, the people of Chilton County will have an opportunity on November 4th, at the same time as the general election, to vote for or against the establishment of an all-time health unit for Chilton County.

We, the undersigned members of the Chilton County Medical Society, hereby wish to go on record as thoroughly endorsing the establishment of such a health unit in our county, and we urge the voters of the county to vote for the same when they go to the election on the fourth of November.

For the information of the public, we give below an outline of the program of activities that will be undertaken in our county through the proposed health unit, or county health department.

1. The control of soil polution diseases—typhoid fever, dysentery, and hookworm. A campaign against these diseases embraces the protection of water supplies, and the administration of typhoid vaccine.

2. The control of the acute communicable diseases—smallpox, scarlet fever, measles, mumps, whooping cough, and diphthera—by vaccination, inoculation, and isolation. The control of malaria by screening, draining of mosquito breeding places; oiling where drainage or procedure are impossible; and the administration of quinine.

Lastly the suppression of the social diseases. That this last group may be eventually eradicated from Alabama is the hope that forms the foundation of the veneral clinics that have been instituted in many parts of the State.

3. Second in importance only to the control of the soil pollution diseases is the measure of protection offered mothers in the hygene of maternity and infancy through the ministrations of kind and sympathetic nurses; the regular and systematic examination of school children; the inculcation of proper health habits; and the medical examination of adults.

4. That these major activities may yield the results one has just right to expect, a program of education and publicity is conducted that the benefits of health protection may be known to all.

5. Certain minor activities under the health department will make their contribution to a well-rounded program. The inspection of food-handling establishments; the investigation of nuisances; the supervision of the reporting of communicable diseases, of the recording of all births and deaths, and the work of midwives.

From a study of the above outline of the work for a county health unit, we, the physicians of the county, make the open declaration that such a program of work is sorely needed by the people of Chilton County. The health of our people is worth more than everything else we have. We should not think of delaying any longer the proper administration of public health measures, which can be obtained in no other way than through the establishment of a county health unit under the State Board of Health.

We very sincerely insist that the people of Chilton County study this great question carefully, and be prepared to go to the polls on November 4th and cast your votes for the health unit. It will not increase your taxes. (Signed).

BAPTIST YOUNG MEN'S CLASS WILL HEAR REV. E. A. CHILDS

A special program has been arranged for the Young Men's Sunday School Class of the Clanton Baptist church for next Sunday morning, October 26. Rev. E. A. Childs, pastor of the Clanton Methodist church has consented to address the class on that morning.

Plans have been made to have a one hundred per cent attendance of the class if possible to hear Rev. Childs, who has a special message for the young men. His subject being, "My Creed." Baptists Will Give To Orphans Home

Car Load of Produce Will Be Assembled and Sent To Troy

The Unity and Chilton County Associationshave entered an agreement to furnish a car load of farm produce and farm supplies to the Baptist Orphans Home at Troy. The plan adopted is to assemble the various items at Clanton, from where the car will be dispatched on the 20th of November.

J. Watts Moore and J. Z. Mims are the committee in charge of the matter from the Unity Association. The committee of the Chilton County Association is S. J. M. Webb and J. W. Jones. These four en will direct the assembling of the produce and will have general charge of the matter of getting it to the Home.

Every church in the two associations is urged to appoint a committee to get busy on this program. Every church is expected to get up a collection of things to be sent. The call is made for anything that can be used on the farm, it makes no difference what it is. If you have something that you can give, give it. Anything to eat, wear, or any kind of tools or implement can be used.

The need of the orphans at the home is imminent. Baptists must rally to the cause of supporting them. The Chilton County and Unity Associations can give a car load of stuff to this cause and never miss it. Almost every family can spare something.

The churches are urged to get busy on this important matter.

Judge Reynolds Makes Explanation Of The Question About Election Ballots

Proof Is Submitted Showing He Did Not Frame Up Any Scheme To Keep Names of Candidates From Being Placed On Ballots of the General Election

Editor Union-Banner:

I regret to have to appear in print so often, but I feel that it is nothing but fair and proper that I should make due answer and explanation of some unfair and unjust criticisms and insinuations that have been spread over the county relative to my action in submitting to the Attorney General of Alabama the question of placing the names of the candidates in Chilton County on the ballots of the General Election to be held on November the fourth.

Some have gone so far in criticizing me as to insinuate and even make the positive statement that in raising certain questions of law I was seeking a subterfuge to keep from putting the names of the county Republican candidates on the general election ballots because I did not and do not favor some of the nominees. It has even been hinted, whispered, intimated and perhaps stated as a positive fact that I hatched up a scheme that had never been heard of before, merely to keep our Republican candidates from being put on the ticket.

When I came to the discharge of my duty as Probate Judge under the law to have the printing of the ballots done, I did as I always have done. I had just one thing in mind and that was the requirments of the law, and the procedure which we have always followed in this county in complying with the law as best we could understand and interpret it.

When I went into the files of my office preparatory to having the ballots printed, I found that the candidates this year both Republicans and Democrats had not filed the proper papers according to the way we had always done in such cases, and according to the way we had construed the law to require in previous elections. I have reference to Section 588 of the Code, which requires any candidate within five days after the announcement of his candidacy for any office to file with the Probate Judge the name of not less than one nor more than five persons to receive, expend, audit, and disburse all moneys contributed, donated, subscribed, or in any manner furnished or raised for the purpose of aiding of promoting the nomination or election of such candidate, together with a written acceptance or consent of such person to act as such committee. Section 589 says, "Failure to make the declaration of appointment or selection by any candidate as herein required is declared to be a corrupt practice, and in addition, the name of such candidate so failing shall not be allowed to go upon the ballot of such election."

Now, in view of the facts as plainly stated in the law above quoted, and in view of the fact that we have always heretofore complied with the provisions of said sections, and in view of the facts that the candidates this year did not comply with the said sections, I ask and honest, fair-minded man what I could do but ask an opinion of the Attorney General on the question before I proceeded with the printing on the ballots the names of those candidates which had so failed to comply with the law? In view of these facts, how can any reasonable, honest man say that I was hatching up something new and unheard of before in order to keep from printing the names of the Republican candidates on the ballots. When I put the question up to the office of the Attorney General, the matter was referred to Mr. Brassel assistant attorney general. I went to Montgomery and had a conference with Mr. Brassel, and told him that I hoped they could find some way for me to put all the candidates names on the ballots of this county. He decided and wrote an opinion that I could place the names on the ballots. Before releasing this opinion to me he submitted the matter to Hon. Charley C. McCall, Attorney General. Mr. McCall said that the opinion was not correct, and that I could not put the names on the ballots.

After conferring on the matter for several hours I requested Mr. McCall to hold his opinion until I could come home and notify all parties interested, which he agreed to do. He said he would confer with us the next morning at 9:30 o'clock. I came home and notified Mr. J. Z. Mims, campaign manager for the Republicans, and Dr. N. S. Johnson, chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee. I requested them to get attorneys and go to Montgoery with me and see if we could get a legal opinion from the Attorney General for me as Probate Judge, to have the names of the county candidates printed on the ballots. When we had the conference with Mr. McCall, he changed his opinion of the previous day and said that I could legally print the names on the ballots.

I have heard that the statement has been made by some of the candidates that it has never been the custom in this county to file a second declaration after nomination in the primary under section 588 of the code. Some of these statements, I understand, have been very unfair to me seeking to convey the idea that in requiring this second declaration from candidates after they had been nominated in the primary, that I had therein hatched up something new in my purported effort to keep the Republican candidates from being put on the ballot. Mr. J. Z. Mims, who is the present Republican campaign manager, has made the positive statement that he has never filed the second declaration under section 588 or any other section after he had been nominated in the primary. But the truth of the matter is that in 1928, just two years ago, in the last campaign, when Mr. Mims himself was a candadate for Circuit Clerk in Chilton County, he did file a declaration under section 588, both when he was a candidate for the nomination in the primary, and a second declaration under the same section 588 after he been naminated in the primary.

Here is an exact copy of the declaration filed by Mr. Mims in 1928, when he was a candidate for the nomination for Circuit Clerk in the Republican primary:

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.

To the Honorable L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate of Chilton County, Alabama:

Whereas, the undersigned, J. Z. Mims, has on this day, the 26th day of January, 1928, announced himself as a candidate for the office of Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, subject to the action of the Republican primary to be held in said county on the 8th day of May, 1928;

I hereby appoint myself as the committee to receive, expend, audit and disburse all moneys contributed, donated, subscribed, or in any way furnished or raised for the purpose of aiding or promoting my nomination to said office as above stated as provided by section 588 of the political code of Alabama.

I hereby consent and agree to act as said committee as required by said section 588, and hereby accept said appointment and agree to do and perform all the duties required in said act.

Witness my hand and dated this the 26th day of January, 1928.

J. Z. MIMS.

Filed in office of Judge of Probate, January 27, 1928.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

Then after Mr. Mims had been nominated in the Republican primary he filed a second declaration under section 588, designating Mr. W. M. Wyatt to act under section 588, to assist in promoting his election in the general election. Here is the exact copy of his second declaration:

State of Alabama, Chilton County.

To the Probate Judge of Chilton County, Alabama:

Having been nominated by the Republican party as their candidate for Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, in the primary held on the second Tuesday in May, 1928, and having determined to become a candidate for the office of Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, at the general election to be held in 1928, I hereby declare, in conformity with the provisions of section 588 of the code of 1923 of Alabama, that I have selected W. M. Wyatt, of Clanton, Alabama, as the commitete or person to receive, expend, audit, or disburse any money contributed, donated, subscribed, or in any way furnished or raised for the purpose of aiding or promoting my election, and I herewith file with this statement a written acceptance or consent of said W.

CENTRAL SOCIETY WILL SING AT POPLAR SPRINGS SUNDAY

Next Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock the Central Singing Society will meet with the class at Poplar Springs. This meeting at Poplar Springs will complete the first round among the eight churches constituting the society. The first Sunday in November will bring the society back to Concord, where the first meeting was held, and so on.

Fefuge was the meeting place last Sunday afternoon, and the singing was very good. Lots of directors were on hand and a rather good class of singers to back them up. In the absence of the chairman, Prof. L. T. Grant very ably served in this capacity.

Remember that all singers in reach have a cordial invitation to meet with the Central Singing Society at any of its singings.

Hon. Joseph O. Thompson, field representative of the Federal Farm Board, will deliver an address to the farmers of Chilton County, at the courthouse in Clanton, at eleven o'clock, a. m., on Thursday, October 30. His subject will be "How the Federal Farm Board Can Help in the Present Cotton Crisis."

Mr. Thompson says: "I would like to have as many farmers and business men present as possible. Our whole citizenship is interested, and all who can should attend the meeting."

Joe Thompson is well known in Chilton County. He has been here and spoke to our people on numerous occasions in the past. He is recognized as one of the outstanding agricultural authorities of the South. He is himself an Alabama farmer, and he certainly knows as well as anybody the problems that confront the farmers.

On this occasion he comes as the direct official representative of the Federal Farm Board, which has been designated by President Hoover. He will bring a message on a subject that is of the utmost importance to the cotton farmers of the South. And he will have something to say about it that every farmer ought to hear.

The Farm Bureau, the bankers, the merchants, the farmers, and every class of our citizenship are vitally concerned about the cotton situation. Let everybody get busy now and roll up a record crowd from every corner of Chilton County to come here on Thursday, October 30, and hear Mr. Thompson speak.

Mr. Thompson also wants to hear an expression from our people. He says he expects at the close of his address to throw the meeting wide open for discussions from the floor. Every man present will be given an opportunity to say what he thinks about the farm situation.

This can and ought to be made the most valuable meeting we have had in Chilton County in a long time.

AGED LADY DIED IN AUTO WRECK

Mrs. J. E. Guy, Mother of Mrs. Bud Alred. Victim of Accident

Mrs. J. E. Guy, age 82 years, of Titus, Ala., was killed and a son, Henry C. Guy, of Birmingham, was injured, when the automobile in which they and E. E. Middleton, of Birmingham, crushed into a culvert guard rail on the Birmingham Highway three miles north of Calera last Sunday afternoon.

Henry Guy had been to his mother's home in Coosa County to get her and was taking her to his home in Birmingham ror a visit. The mother, son, and companion stopped in Clanton on their way to Birmingham Sunday and had dinner with Mrs. Bud Alred, daughter of Mrs. Guy.

It was after they had left here and were proceeding on to Birmingham that the wreck happened. Witnesses said Henry Guy, the driver, apparently lost control of the automobile as it rounded a curve, and the car crashed into the abutment of a bridge. Another report said that the car was driven by Mr. Middleton.

It is farther stated that Mrs. Guy did not die from actual injury in the wreck, but it is thought that shock and fright caused her death. She was physically injured, however.

Surviving Mrs. Guy are her husband, Joseph E. Guy, Sr., of Titus, Ala.; eight sons, W. E., L. D., J. M., and Reedie Guy, of Montgomery, Henry Guy, of Birmingham, Joseph E. Guy, Jr., of Wetumpka, and M. A. Guy, of Ashwood, Texas; two daughters, Mrs. A. Pierce, of Titus, and Mrs. D. C. Alred, of Clanton.

The body was brought to Clanton Sunday afternoon by Mell Martin, and prepared for burial. The funeral was held at two o'clock Monday afternoon, at Providence, in Coosa County.

The husband and many other members of the family arrived in Clanton Sunday night and stayed here with relatives and friends. The body was being held at the undertaking parlors of J. Mell Martin.

STATE CAPITOL News

Alabama is maintaing her position at the top of the list in public health work, with a larger percentage of population served by county health units with the full-time health officers than any other state in the Union. This enviable position is one of the achievements of the present administration, Alabama having attained first place in January, 1929. For several years the state occupied third place from the health standpoint, being surpassed by Ohio and North Carolina. Both these states have been passed since the 1927 legislature made the additional appropriations which enabled the health work to go forward on an incerased scale.

Evidence of the progress along this line is further shown in stricking fashion by the following figures on a number of Alabama counties having county health units: January, 1 1927, 30; 1928, 33; 1929, 50; while at present 53 of the 67 counties of the state have this protective public service.

Clay and Cullman counties made the largest reduction of illiteracy of white children 16 to 20 years of age (inclusive) from 1928 to 1930 as shown by the 1930 census. Clay cut the illiteracy of 16 to 20 years old 42.1 per cent and Cullman followed closely with a reduction of 42.4 per cent. Both Clay and Cullman provided opportunity schools for four successive years previous to 1930 and made vigirous efforts to enroll all illiterate boys and girls sixteen years of age and over.

The census revealed that the state on the whole had a slightly larger number of illiterate white children 16 to 20 years of age in 1930 than in 1928, the record showing an increase from 1,932 to 1,998. However, in all counties where opportunity schools were provided and where the 16 to 20 groups were given a chance to learn to read and write for two years before the taking of the recent census, there was an appreciable decrease in the illiteracy of the 16 to 20 children.

Walker led the counties which had had only two years of instruction previous to the census with a 25.9 per cent reduction. Morgan had schools for two years but failed to provide for these children in 1929, immediately before the census year, so Morgan had the same number of illiterate 16 to 20 years olds in 1930 that she had in 1928. Etowah gained in school population (7 to 20) by 1,397 but made 15.7 per cent reduction in the illiteracy of the group noted.

Ten counties had opportunity schools from two to four years before the census of 1930 and the results are indicated by the following table:

Clay 42.1, per cent, Cullman, 41.4, Walker, 25.9, Jefferson, 25.6, Dale 21, Geneva 19.5, Etowah 15.7, Chilton 7.6, Jackson 6.9, and Morgan no gain.

Five of thirteen counties not only made a reduction in the illiteracy of the older white children, but reduced the illiteracy of the school population from 7 to 20 wears old.

Etowah made a reduction of 37.4 per cent, Jefferson 34.7, Clay 8.1 Dale 2.6, and Walker 2.1 per cent.

At its annual session at Mulberry last week the Chilton County Baptist Association rendered a most hearty endorsement of the County Health Unit.

In expressing itself on this subject the Association passed the following resolution:

In view of the fact Alabama has the best health system in the world, and

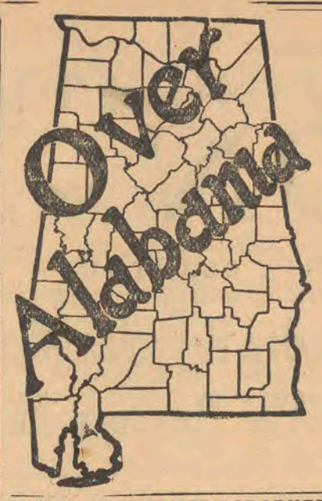
Whereas the benefits of this system are extended through county health units, and

Whereas for the past few years there has been an increasing number of dreaded cases of diptheria and infantile paralysis in the county, and

Whereas these diseases can be practically eliminated through the health unit, and

Whereas the county has sufficient funds to establish such a unit in Chilton County without an increase in taxes;

Be it resolved, by the Chilton County Missionary Baptist Association that this body endorse the movement to establish a health unit in Chilton County and that a copy of this resolution be published in each of our county papers.



B. Lawrence, Moderator.

County Farm Agent's Notes

FREEZE FRUITS FOR KEEPING THEM FRESH YEAR AROUND

The first laboratory investigation to determine the exact effects of the new quick-freezing process on fresh fruits frozen during this season for year-round consumption, is being conducted in Philadelphoa by Dr. J. Cecil Rhodes, director of the medical arts laboratories. Fresh, tree-ripened peaches frozen in Georgia last summer will be used for the various tests.

The process employed for freezing peaches and other fresh fruits, in a manner designed to make them available for the table throughout the year, with all their original freshness, flavor and color, is essentially the same as that which has been successfully used for the quick-freezing of fresh meats. The successful freezing of the Georgia peaches by Tom Huston of Columbus, Ga., during the past season is, however, the first time it has been applied with success to fresh fruit for home or individual consumption.

ALABAMA DROUTH SUFFERERS WILL CO-OPERATE WITH STATE AGRICULTURAL AUTHORITIES

Alabama will proceed in an orderly systematic way to handle needy cases in the drouth-stricken counties, according to a statement issued by Commissioner of Agriculture Seth P. Storrs, who is chairman of the State Drouth Committee.

Committees have been appointed, who will survey the families needing help in the various districts, between harvest and beginning of crop time next year. Every needy family will be considered with regards to its ability to secure regular or emergency employment, food and supplies needed. The amount of credit needed, to finance the coming crop, will be considered with reference to ability of local communities to supply credit.

Most soft drinks are artificially colored with so-called certified dyes, harmless, and suitable for use in beverages and other foods, says J. W. Sale of the federal food and drug administration. NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR PARDON OR PAROLE

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Columbus Littleton, convicted in the Circuit Court of Chilton County, in April, 1930, for manufacturing whisky, and sentenced to the penitentiary for a year and a day, will make application to the Honorable State Board of Pardons of Alabama, for pardon or parole.
(Signed) COLUMBUS LITTLETON.

HENRY MAKES PROGRESS WITH PUREBRED FLOCKS

Abbeville, Ala., October 21.—Two years ago Henry County had very few flocks of purebred chickens. It now has a large number. Fifty-one persons in the county began raising poultry for the first time this year.

The progress Henry County has made from poultry, which adds another source of income for farm people, is due largely to the influence and leadership of a woman. This woman is Miss Mamie C. Mathews, home demonstration agent, who began work in February, 1928, following graduation from the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn.

"To date 105 brick brooders have been constructed in Henry County," said H. R. Bailey, assistant extension poultryman of Auburn. "Many of these were built without the help of a man, Miss Mathews and the farm women doing the actual work. The brick brooder is a cheap, easily constructed, but efficient brooder, and Miss Mathews' enthusiasm and desire to help the people she is serving prompted her to master the art of laying bricks."

Mr. Bailey said that all of the 51 flocks started in the county this year are of purebred stock, as the farm women know that good stock will be more profitable. "They are keeping poultry as a side-line to cotton, corn and other crops," he said. "The aim of the extension program is to induce farmers to add poultry, hogs, and a few cows to supplement their income from cotton. When this is done, low prices for cotton will not be so disastrous."

FEDERAL QUARANTINE LIFTED ON FLORIDA FRUITS OCT. 15TH

The battle line drawn against the mediterranean fruit fly in the 150-mile front between Florida and Alabama, on which national guardsmen and employees of the state department of agriculture stood for months with the battle cry, "They shall not pass," has been ended as a victory for these forces against the fly.

On October 15th, the United States government declared that the fruit blockade no longer existed between Florida and other states including Alabama. After that date, citrus and other fruits can enter Alabama with no restrictions.

So deadly an insect could not have been exterminated by a single state alone. The combined forces of various states and the strong arm of federal control was needed to safeguard the southern fruit industry. The state quarantine measures on fruit and vegetables are vested in the department of agriculture, and Commissioner Storrs was plunged into the midst of a battle against the fly on the first day of his taking office in June, 1929.

HEALTH SERVICE ADDED IN MARION COUNTY

Montgomery, Ala., Oct 18.—Marion County will have a full time public health service effective January 1, it was announced by Dr. Douglas L. Cannon, administrative assistant of the State Board of Health. The unit with headquarters at Hamilton, county seat, will be composed of a health oficer, nurse, sanitary officer and a secretary.

Appropriation of $5,000 by the Board of Revenue, which will be supplemented by a $4,000 state appropriation, will provide for the unit.

Marion is the fifty-third county in Alabama to inaugurate a full time health unit.

It it all right to call the fellow who spends most of his time reading books a book-worm, but you had better not call the fellow who spends his time around the stock ticker a tape worm.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

Alabama's Homecoming

Friday night marked the greatest demonstration ever staged by Alabama students. They took the town and how? After an immense donfire on the center of the campus 3,000 students headed by the Million Dollar Band paraded down University Avenue to take the town, pulling trolleys off the track, manhandling private cars, and stopping the traffic signal lights, not to mention many other things.

And on Saturday the University R. O. T. C. department passed in review before the Governor and army officials. And what a picture they made. Those new uniforms, rifles shining, led by a band that is hot, looked like Alabama had gone Westpoint. And did you see our own William Arthur Willis, playing in that Million Dollar Band.

The "Alabama Union," Alabama's new $400,000 building was dedicated with appropriate exercises. The Denny chimes were heard in concert at five o'clock. Dr. Denny made the semi-annual report to the University Board of Trustees.

There was something over twenty thousand people on Alabama's campus today. There was thousands of old graduates who were back to the old Alma Mater, and were they pleased? Ask them.

At two o'clock that Crimson Tide rolled out on the field and Tennessee went down to defeat the first time in 4 starts. They came to Alabama with a record of no defeats in four years, but Saturday night that record was history. Alabama wanted Tennessee to have McEver, Hug and Brant so they could shoot the works but as it was the second team played the majority of the time. Oh yes, the score, 18 to 6.

Several people from Clanton and vicinity were over. Ask them. It's another Alabama year. Bring on Vandy. See Red Wagoner for details 'till next week.—Alabama Reporter.

Note—Will the person who sends Alabama Campus Notes please let us know who he is? This is necessary according to the rules of our publication.—Editor.

CHEVROLET TAKES OVER MARTIN-PARRY BODY CO.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 19.—Purchase of the Martin-Parry Body Corp., Indianapolis plant by the Chevrolet Motor Company, for production of certain types of commercial bodies used by Chevrolet was announced here today by W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

While the plant operated this year on curtailed schedules, the Chevrolet organization expects to put it into immediate full-time operation.

Included in the purchase are forty acres of land, 550,000 square feet of factory space, an additional 150,000 square feet of lumber storage space under roof, railway right-of-way, as well as 21 branches operated in various parts of the country.

J. A. Jamison now controller of Chevrolet, will go to Indianapolis as general manager of the new department, to be known as the Chevrolet Commercial Body division of Chevrolet Motor Company, while the remainder of the personnel in the organization will be taken over intact. Employment at capacity will total six hundred men.

Despite the sale of its main production unit, the Martin-Parry Corporation will maintain its identity and continue to operate at York, Pa., and South Kearney, N. J., it waas announced.

The plant purchase agreement was to take effect October 15th and immediately thereafter Chevrolet will begin active operations, Mr. Knudsen said. The branches will be taken over November 1, and provisions are already being made to extend the number to more than fifty to assure adequate facilities for exhibiting and distributing the new products of the company.

OCTOBER IS THE TIME TO PLANT SWEET PEAS

Auburn, Ala. Oct. 20—Sweet peas should be planted the last of October or in early Noember, if early spring bloom is desired, says Prof. John W. Hyde, associate professor of landscape gardening of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. The Winter Flowering Spencers may be planted later, but do best if planted earlier, he said.

He recommended dropping the seed about two inches apart in a trench and covering them about four inches deep. Sweet peas grow best in the heavier soils which have plenty of organic matter. A liberal application of manure or about one pound of fertilizer per square yard is recommended.

The manure should be thoroughly rotted and well worked into the soil before planting the seed, he said.

"After planting it is best to cover the ground with a mulch of leaf mold and well rotted manure for the winter. This should be about three inches deep and of light friable material and not be packed. It should be removed as soon as the plants come through the ground."

The plants should be thinned to 4 inches apart when they are about 2 inches tall and should receive plenty of water. Poultry netting or brush will make a good trellis, he said.

If red spiders attack the plants, he suggests dusting with flowers of sulphur, or if they have plant lice, spray with nicotine sulphate.

MILLION TREES IN FOREST NURSERY

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 19.—Over a million seedlings are growing thriftily in the State Forest Nursery, according to Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. The trees are intended for forest planting on nonagricultural lands owned by farmers in co-operation with the United States Department of agriculture.

While seedlings or transplants several years old make a more immediate showing in forest planting, a greater percentage of survival is usually obtained if small trees only about a year old are used. A large measure of economy is introduced in this way, also, since the planting stock is thus placed in its permanent site with a minimum amount of nursery work and consequent low cost to the state and tree planter.

The kinds of planting stock grown in the State Forest Nursery are those that are not handled to any material extent by commercial nurseries. The little trees are furnished in small amounts of five hundred or a thousand to the farmers of the state to demonstrate the feasibility of planting to timber the parts of their holdings that are not suitable for cultivation. These small amounts are furnished free, and if a large number is desired the farmer may buy them at the cost of growing, packing and shipping.

The species grown in State Nursery comprise Long Leaf pine, Black Locust, Slash Pine, Sycamore, Laurel Oak, Loblolly Pine, Catalpa, Black Walnut, Persimmon, Russian Mulberry and Bald Cypress. The relative amounts of the different species are in the order named, there being approximately 325,000 Long Pine and about 5,000 Bald Cypress.

COLLINS CHAPEL

The singing society met at Collins Chapel church Sunday afternoon and a wonderful singing was enjoyed by a large crowd.

After the singing a meeting was held for the purpose of electing new officers. The following were elected: Mr. Akins Collins, president; Mr. A. H. Glasscock, vice persident; and Mrs. O. H. Willis, secretary.

The society will meet at Collins Chapel next Thursday night to practice. We are expecting the Clanton Quartet to be with us. Also the singing at Oak Hill will not meet there next Sunday, but will meet at Center Hill. Everybody has an invitation to attend both places.—Mrs. O. H. Willis.

SOME GEMS OF TRUTH

Every word of God is pure. He is a shield unto them that put their trust in Him.—Proverb 30:5.

It is better not to be overcome with evil. But rather overcome evil with good.

No one wants a knocker; or one who tries to carry water on both shoulders.

It is well to be a good hearer, rather than to interrupt.

A dog that will carry a bone will bring one.

God pity the man who can't find any place good enough for him to worship God, because of faults in others.

A faultfinder or one who never sees or hears anything that meets their approval is surely a public nusiance and should be treated as such.

If some men could be bought for what they are really worth and sold for what they would have you think they are worth, that would be profiting.

The realization of the Lord's presence will save us many a misstep and many a heartache.

E. N. ROY FAVORS HEFLIN

Some of the newspapers amuse me very much when I read their efforts to prove to the people that Senator Heflin should be defeated because he worked against Al Smith when he was a candidate for president. They claim Heflin betrayed his party when he worked against the Democratic nominee. However, the very next breath they tell the voters they are excused for working against the Tammany, Catholic candidate of 1928 because he was an inferior nominee. But now because there is no Catholic running for office in our state we should vote the straight Miller and Bankhead ticket, a plain contradiction. They tell the voters it was right for them to go on record against Al Smith, but because Heflin worked against the Democratic nominee he should be kicked out of his party and get defeated. Since they openly confess that the voters did right when they worked against the 1928 presidential candidate, we know the charges against Heflin are without foundation and that he helped his party when he worked against Smith.

The Montgomery Advertiser and other newspapers who are working for the Miller ticket, claim they are doing so for the preservation of the Democratic party. This same paper advocated Al Smith for the Democratic nominee before the delegates ever met at the Houston convention. Grandma evidently knew then that it would be impossible for Smith to be elected. If the Advertiser wanted party harmony, why did she advocate nominating a Catholic which she must have known in advance could not be elected? With the fact that forty states gave Smith the most decisive defeat ever given a presidential nominee, the Advertiser will have to admit she was awful ignorant if she did not know in advance Al Smith could not win. Before the election in 1928 people everywhere expressed the general belief that he could not be elected. In an issue of the Birmingham News for June, 1924, just before the nomination of John W. Davis, that paper is quoted by a widely circulated paper as writing this: "If Smith is named he will be knifed in the doubtful states not only by the resentful and disappointed McAdoo strength but by a great host of Democrats who are bone dry in their political alignment, and who are everlastingly committed to the 'unwritten law' which has obtained since the creation of this country, that the Chief Magistrate must be Protestant." Therefore, the Birmingham News and the Advertiser evidently knew in advance Al Smith could not be elected. Since they must have known their nominee could not be elected, the Advertiser must have worked before and after the Houston convention in an effort to destroy the party instead of working for harmony as they would have the people believe.

When the Democratic Executive Committee denied Heflin and others the right to run for office in their party, I believe they finished an old job that started before Al Smith was nominated. In an editorial of the Advertiser for May 20, 1928, you will find this: "It is as we say, clear that the Alabama Senator has alienated himself from his party, and doubtless but for the extreme kindliness or lack of nerve on the part of his Democratic colleagues in the Senate they would go into caucus and read him out of the party." According to the above statement of the Advertiser which was made before Smith was nominated, that paper seemed to want Heflin voted out of his party before he even had an opportunity to work against the 1928 nominee. If the Democratic Executive Committee voted Heflin out of his party because he worked against the Democratic nominee, why was strange influences working against him before the selection of their nominee? Roman Catholics from Boston communicated with a member of the Senate in an effort to have them read Heflin out of his party. They wired Governor Graves in an effort to have Heflin put out of his party. I believe money was the final cause of the Democratic Executive Committee's action against Heflin and others. I don't believe they voted him out of his party because he worked against Smith, but I do believe they voted him out of his party because he was fighting to keep the rules of Catholicism from being inflicted upon this country.

If we keep Heflin in office we will continue to receive services for the farmer and the laborer. We will be guided by one who is opposed to foreigners flooding our country and getting our jobs while Americans have to do without. Heflin is against social equality and many other evils destructive to the people. What is Bankhead interested in? I am told he was educated in a Catholic university and as we know, he is a millionaire attorney for the Alabama Power Company and other wealthy interests destructive to the common people. According to reliable information Bankhead struck three white people off the jury list and placed a negro there in their place. If you want one for the Senate who seems to be for social equality and if you want to help the wealthy interests vote for Bankhead. If you want white supremacy and want to help the common people vote for Senator Heflin.—E. N. Roy, Billingsley, Alabama.

OLD TIME SINGING

There will be an old time singing at Friendship, 10 miles west of Maplesville, next Sunday, the fourth Sunday, October, 26th. Classes in old Harp and Harmony have a cordial invitation.—J. T. Fisher, J. W. Fountain.

RAYMOND CLEVELAND McGEE

Little Raymond Cleveland McGee, Jr., born September 28 and died September 30, 1930. We know heaven has been made brighter by the addition of our darling baby, yet it was so hard to give it up, for it was all the baby we had in the family. But God's will be done, not ours. Let us just say God had use for another flower in heaven, and he plucked it in our home and by so doing made heaven much brighter for us.

Although it was our pleasure to keep our darling with us so short a time its little memory will ever linger with us. It seemed more than we could bear, but we know heaven would not be complete without some of our precious babies. And I know as we grieve for our dear baby the angels are rejoicing over its smiling little face, and are glad to receive it in heaven to wait for the rest of the family, which I trust will not be a missing link. I know by the grace of God I'll see it again, where there will be no more parting and heart-aches to endure.

We have no doubt but that our precious babe is resting in the arms of Jesus. For Jesus said: "Suffer not little children, come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

We want to thank all our friends for all they did for us at this sad hour. It was through the trust we have in God and the kind words spoken to us that we were able to bear this great sorrow. We feel that all was done that human hands could do to save our baby. We want to thank Dr. Dubose and Dr. Pickern for all they did trying to save our baby. Although we sent it to Dr. Harper, a baby specialist, it was not God's will for us to keep it. We want to thank our friends from Maplesville for all they did for us, especially Mrs. P. C. Pulliam and daughter, Louise, for their many visits and untiring efforts to cheer us at this sad hour. We want to thank Mrs. Susie Roper, and especially do we thank Rev. G. G. Williams for his words of comfort.

Pall bearers were the Misses Ruth Mize and Louise Pulliam.

This precious babe leaves to mourn its loss both grand fathers and both grand mothers; several uncles and aunts, and many other relatives. May God reward each one, is our prayer.—Mrs. H. C. Ratliff.

LOVE

Can'st thou His name revere and yet not labor,
To lift they fallen brother from the road?
Stoop down, bindup his wounds; he is they neighbor,
Take out thy purse and pay the debt he owed.

Be not as one who left his brother groaning,
Nor like the singing Levite, pass him by;
But let thy heart respond to his faint moaning,
And lift him up, lest thy poor brother die.

Hast thou thy faith? Yet love is still the greatest,
And hast thou hope, bright hope of things to be?
Yet dwell in love, for love is ever sweetest,
And love shall reign through all eternity.—Selected.

SOME AMERICAN OBSEVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

In the course of time our planet will cease revolving around on its axis, scientists tell us and like the moon will have the same side turned always toward the sun. There will then be no water remaining on the hot side of the earth and the temperature on the cold side of the earth will be 50 degrees or more below zero. This slight change in our environment, however, is not expected to take place for two thousand million years, so you need not start worrying yet.

Magnifying all news that is discreditable to any nation and miniminizing all that is creditable is the most effective and dishonorable of misrepresentation. And this is exactly the method used persistently against America by most of the European news agencies that operate under government subsidies.

The first frost of the season appeared Saturday morning.

Say, did you all read the editorial in the last Banner, where the Editor "dared" to lift his voice in defense of the party nominees? Did you read the address of the campaign chairman? If you did not, go back, look up your paper and read them, carefully. Those articles are good. They have the right ring. If you have mislayed your paper, call on your neighbor and read them in his paper. They cover the ground. We see nothing to add to them. Heed the instructions they give and you will feel free and elated when the campaign is over. They are worthy of reprinting.

Bro. Bryan's Weekly Message

(Written for The Union-Banner by REV. J. A. BRYAN, Pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Alabama)

A STUDY IN THE PSALMS

It is an error to say that all of the Psalms are praise psalms. The majority of them, however, are praise and thanksgiving psalms. Someone has said that the book of Psalms is Israel's inspired hymn book. There are psalms of praise, psalms of confession, psalms of thanksgiving. David writes in the 32nd Psalm and also in the 51st Psalm such words as these, "I acknowledge my sins, and my transgressions have I not hidden from Thee." That was a confession of David to God; and if we read it we will see what a blessing David was experiencing in his life of confession unto God.

The Psalms are really the religious experiences of believers in Christ. They are wonderful religious experiences of sons and daughters of God. Here is a wonderful experimental verse, in these words: "Wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and He will give you the desires of your heart." Another is: "My soul, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from Him." Another is: "Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for Him." "The Lord is my light, my salvation, of whom shall I be afraid?" "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." "I will say of the Lord, 'Thou art my rock and my fortress; in Thee will I trust'." As the hart panteth after the water brook, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God."

Now, dear friends, think seriously over the fact of the soul panting after God as the hart, the deer, panteth after the water brook. The deer panting after the water brook is the most hungering, most thirsting and most striving-after condition on the face of the earth. Just so our souls must pant after God. O God, as the deer panteth after the little rivulets, the water brooks, the springs of the earth, so panteth my soul after Thee. I believe that one is not saved until they have come thus far in a desire for spiritual life. Certainly we cannot lead people to worship this precious Christ until deep down in own hearts and lives there is such a desire to worship Him. We must feel the need of it before we can bring others to the realization of the need of it in their own hearts and lives.

Men and women who do not hunger and thirst after God are diseased in their spiritual lives. Down in darkest Africa one sees a heaalthy deer panting after the waters of the Zambezi and Amazon Rivers. So, panting after the rivers, they will even jump over trees, high precipices and deep ravines, to lap of their streams. "So pants my soul after God; my heart pants after God; I long after God." Many men just long and thirst after friendship. Just so is Christian experience, as far as God is concerned. Oh how I long and thirst after this Friend of friends, the big Friend of sinners.

One verse which helps me so much is one which God taught David and made him write it unto us in these words: "Commit thy way unto the Lord." Now, the Hebrew translation of the word "commit" is "turn over to." Hence, "Turn over thy way unto the Lord." Just turn your life over to God. Commit thy way unto the Lord. People lost out when they fail to commit their way unto the Lord. When we commit our ways, our lives, our purposes unto the Lord we find our lives entirely different. They become consecrated and separated unto Him from the world and the things of the world. Such a life is lived in subjection to God. They are submissive lives, obedient lives, considerate of Christ in everything. They are lives devoted to the worship, honour and glory of God.

He says, "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in the Lord." I think we neglect this one thought of trusting in the Lord. You say, "Sure I have faith in God." But, my dear friends, we are to trust also in the Lord. That is, I must love Him enough to trust Him in the rain as well as in the sunshine. I must trust in God with love, faith and confidence, by committing my way unto Him. Then we read about the reward of such a trust and commitment in these words, "And He will give thee the desires of thine heart." In one place we read it in these words, "And He will bring it to pass." You must, in the first place, have the right desires. Your desires must not be to satisfy your own selfish life. "He will give thee the desires of thine heart." I must not have a desire to have a razor with which to cut my throat. My desire must be to crown Christ—to love Jesus Christ more each moment I live. Does He not say, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy strengthand with all thy mind and thy neighbor as thyself?"

"He will give thee the desires of thine heart." If he has taken some things away from us, we must remember that He has given us just the things, the desires of our heart, with which to crown Him by committing our way unto Him, and trusting also in Him. He it is who giveth us the understanding of what friendship, pure, unadulterated love it. He will give us understanding of what a devoted life is. Friends, knowing all these precious promises as unsurpassed in your experience, would you as a Christian exchange places with an unbeliever?

Another striking verse is found in one of the experimental psalms in these words "Acknowledge Him in all thy ways and He will direct thy paths." We notice that this is almost the same expression as is given also in the Proverbs. I believe that this is just what we must wait for. I am acknowledging the Lord when I pray. Paul writes this wonderful admonition from God, "Pray without ceasing." A soldier once asked General Jackson just what this verse meant. General Jackson calmly replied, "I cannot explain it except in my own life, and it is this, that I never do anything without praying before and afterwards. I pray before I give a command and also afterwards. I pray before I worship God and afterwards. I pray before I read God's Word and afterwards. I pray before I give a charge and I pray after the victory. I pray before a defeat and after it." Oh, how sure is such an acknowledgment of God. This afternoon I left the study praying to be back there at 4:20, and I was back at 4:15. By acknowledging Him, I knew that he is able to keep that which I commit unto Him, and bring it to pass. It means that you and I have got to acknowledge God in all our ways.

We must put God Almighty first in everything—our business or whatever it may be. But if we are not on pleading terms with God, we have no right to ask of Him anything. We must not try to put God out of business by thinking and placing other things above and before Him. He is a great God, far greater and bigger than you think. He is infinite in His being, a spirit, justice, purity, holiness, goodness, and truth. When we acknowledge Him thus, He directs our paths. I used to pray that I might attend the university, and I did. The trouble is that we give up. We must keep on praying. Every business manager and president of all concerns should call his office force together to repeat the Lord's Prayer.

There is nothing left but prayer. "Acknowledge Him in all thy ways, and He will direct thy path." Just look about you and see what the Lord has done for us. He has lifted me up and directed my path all these years. "Trust in the Lord with all thy heart, and lean not unto thin own understanding," writes Solomon to us. That is, I must give the Lord all of my heart, and so must you. If there is envy, selfishness, jealousy, stinginess, meanness, worldliness in my heart, it must come out.I cannot trust in the Lord with any one of these things in my heart, for He demands that I trust in Him with all my heart, and all of these things are of the world, which is not a friend to grace, Jesus Christ. God says, "Trust in me, and not in your own brain. Do not prize and value your own way, but commit it unto Me by trusting in Me with all your heart, the seat of trust, the seat of love." Suppose that you resolve now to trust in the Lord with all your heart.

An Invitation

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

Since the Republican State Convention of Alabama has not nominated, and therefore the Republican ticket in the November election will not have candidates for Governor and United States Senator, I feel that I am justified in extending to the Republicans of Chilton County an invitation to cast their votes for Hon. B. M. Miller for Governor, and Hon. John H. Bankhead for United States Senator, and for the other Democratic candidates for State offices in the General Election of Nov. 4th.

I feel that I can conscientiously and truthfully say to all the citizens of Chilton County that the best government for our State will come out of the election of Judge Miller as our Governor. And since we all agree that our State government should be the best possible to obtain, I think that it is becoming that we support those candidates who offer us the best and most constructive, economical administration of State affairs.

Since the Republicans have no state ticket, the Republican voters of Chilton County are therefore left to do as they please about voting for State officers and United States Senator. I invite you to consider carefully the qualifications and platform of Judge Miller, John H. Bankhead, and the other Democratic candidates for State offices, and to cast your vote and influence for them in the General Election of November 4th.

Anyone desiring any literature on the Campaign may get same by calling at my office in Clanton.

Respectfully,

N. S. JOHNSON, Chairman,
Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County.

Lesson for October 26

SPIRITUAL WEAPONS IN A WORLD WAR
(World's Temperance Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—Galatians 5:13-26.

GOLDEN TEXT—And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Learning Self-Control.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Law in One Word.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Secret of Self-Control.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making Prohibition Effective and Permanent.

The lesson topic is not a happy one. The Scripture text chosen clearly refers to the inner conflict going on in the believer. Having been born of the flesh and of the Spirit (John 3:6), there is an unceasing conflict going on between the two natures (Gal. 5:17). The insurrection springing out of the carnal nature cannot be put down by the Law of Moses. Victory can only be accomplished through the energy of the indwelling Holy Spirit.

The committee has further designated it "a temperance lesson." It has a real bearing on temperance in that it shows the only way to destroy the infernal liquor business; namely, to lead individuals to a personal knowledge and experience of Jesus Christ.

Having in Galatians 3 and 4 shown that the believer is free from the law as a means of justification, Paul makes practical application of this doctrine as follows:

I. Christian Freedom (vv. 13-15).

1. It is not an occasion to the "flesh" (v. 13).

Liberty is not license. The notion that when one is free from the law he is free from constraint, is wickedly erroneous. License of the flesh means not merely the indulgence of the flesh in actual material sins, but in the expression of a self-centered life (v. 15).

2. By love serving one another (v. 13).

Freedom from the Mosaic law means slavery to the law of love. Love thus becomes the fulfillment of the law—"Love thy neighbor as thyself" (v. 14).

II. Walking in the Spirit (vv. 16-18).

Walking in the Spirit results in:

1. Loving service to others.
2. Victory over the flesh (vv. 16, 17).

By the "flesh" is meant the corrupt nature of man expressing itself in the realm of sense and self.

III. The Works of the Flesh (vv. 19-21).

By works of the flesh is meant the operation of the carnal nature. The one who chooses to live according to the impulses and desires of his natural heart will be practicing the following sins:

1. Sensuality (v. 19).

The sins enumerated here, practiced in the sphere of the body, are:

(1) Fornication. Fornication includes all sexual sins in married and unmarried life.

(2) Uncleanness. This includes all sensual sins, open or secret, in thought or deed.

(3) Lasciviousness. This means the wanton, reckless indulgences in the shameful practices of the flesh.

2. Irreligion (v. 20).

These acts take place in the realm of the spirit and are:

(1) Idolatry.

(2) Witchcraft or sorcery. This means all dealing with the occult, such as magical arts and spiritism.

3. Sins of temper (vv. 20, 21).

These take place in the sphere of the mind and are:

(1) Hatred. (2) Variance, which means strife and contention. (3) Emulations; jealousy. (4) Wrath; bursts of passions. (5) Seditions; factions in the state. (6) Heresies; factions in the church. (7) Envyings. (8) Murders.

4. Sins of excess (v. 21).

(1) Drunkenness. This means indulgence in intoxicating liquors.

(2) Revelings, acts of dissipation under the influence of intoxicants.

IV. The Fruit of the Spirit (vv. 22-24).

This indicates action in the realm of life. The product of the Holy Spirit indwelling the believer.

1. Love to God and man.
2. Joy; glad-heartedness because of what God has done.
3. Peace with God and fellowman.
4. Long suffering; taking insult and injury without murmuring.
5. Gentleness; kindness to others.
6. Goodness; doing good to others.
7. Faith; believing God and committing all to him.
8. Meekness; submission to God.
9. Temperance; self-control in all things.

Relief From Curse Of Constipation

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.—Upchurch Drug Company, Clanton, Alabama. 11-24-30.

Reynolds Makes Explanation of Question About Election Ballots

M. Wyatt to act as such committee.

Witness, this 10th day of August, 1928.

J. Z. MIMS.

I hereby accept the above appointment and consent to act in the premises.

W. M. WYATT.

Filed in office this 10th day of August, 1928.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

As a further proof of the fact that we have heretofore recognized a second filing after nomination in the primary as necessary under section 588 of the code of 1923, I quote below a copy of the declaration made by Mr. J. B. Atkinson, after he had been nominated as the Democratic candidate for Representative in the Democratic primary of 1926:

State of Alabama, Chilton County.

To Hon. L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate for Chilton County, Alabama:

Having been nominated for the office of Representative in the Legislature of Alabama from Chilton County, Alabama, by the Democratic primary held on August 10th, 1926, and having accepted the nominationfor said office as a candidate for election in the general election to be held in November, 1926, and in compliance with the provisions of section 588 et seq of the code of Alabama, 1923, I, J. B. Atkinson, said nominee of said party, do hereby designate, select, and appoint myself as the committee to receive, expend, audit and disburse all moneys contributed, donated, or furnished to aid my election to said office, and agree to act as such committee.

Witness my hand and dated this, the 14th day of August, 1926.

J. B. ATKINSON.

Filed in office of Judge of Probate August 14, 1926.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

Now, I want my readers to get this thought clear in your minds. You see from the above declarations that it has been recognized in this county in the past as necessary to file such declarations as those quoted above under section 588 of the code, both by candidates in the primary, and by candidates again the second time under the same section after they had been nominated in the primary and were candidates in the general election. The candidates this year did not make such second declarations after they had been nominated. When I found that they had not made such second declarations second as had been the custom heretofore and as we had construed to be required by law heretofore then it was that I took the matter to the Attorney General to see if I could find a legal way around the failure of the candidates to comply with the law and get their names on the ballots.

And also I want to make this clear to my readers: The man who says that candidates have not been in the past making a second declaration under section 588 is uttering a falsehood. And the man who says that I invented a pretext to try to keep any candidate from being on the ballot is utterly a falsehood.

It is clear that in view of our previous custom of complying with this section, and the failure of the candidates to do so this time, if what we have always done was the law (and we believed it was) then I could not have put the names of those candidates so failing on the ballots. Therefore, in going to the Attorney General, I was obviously seeking a way in which to get the names on the ballots, instead of a way to keep them off. For if what we had always done was the law, then the candidates this year, by their own neglect, had denied themselves from being placed on the ballots.

I understand that Mr. J. Z. Mims, present campaign manager, has been saying that I have raised a question that is new and one that the candidates have never observed before in this county, and a question that he has never heard of before this time. That is the question of making a second declaration after the candidate has been nominated in the primary. I wonder why Mr. Mims says this is new and unheard of when the fact is that he himself, when a candidate for Circuit Clerk only two years ago, did make such a second declaration under section 588.

Then further back in 1926 Mr. J. Z. Mims was manager of the Republican campaign in Chilton County, just as he is this year. In the campaign of 1926 Mr. Mims, as chairman of the Republican campaign committee, filed in my office a paper showing his receipts and expenditures of money in behalf of the candidates for the various offices of the campaign. Now, if Mr. Mims was not designated by the candidates under section 588 to act in such capacity for them, I would like to ask him under what authority did he collect and spend such money in the interest of the campaign as is shown in the paper which he filed.

It seems to me that somebody in authority in the present Republican campaign has made a considerable mess out of the business of discharging their duties. And when I, as an official of this county, seek to do my duty under the law, and get the mess cleared up so we could go on and have an election with every candidate duly recognized and on the ballot, I am to be crucified by false statements from those who really are to blame for making the mess and failing themselves to comply with the law.

In addition to the failure to file proper declarations under section 588 as shown above, let me tell you while we are right here, of some other failures that have been made in this campaign which I am not responsible for. Section 610 requires the chairman of the county executive committee to certify to the Judge of Probate not less than fifteen days before the primary the names of the candidates to be printed on the ballots. Mr. J. N. Dennis, chairman of the county Republican executive committee, did not file this certificate in the required time.

Section 647 requires the chairman of the county executive committee of all parties to file with the Judge of Probate within ten days after the primary a certificate certifying to the Judge of Probate the nominees of the party. Neither Mr. J. N. Dennis nor Mr. J. B. Atkinson filed such a certificate in my office this year. But when this matter was called to their attention they did file the certificates in my office and under section 462 I accepted the filing of the list of nominees. But in this certificate made by Mr. Dennis and Mr. Mims, they certified to me that W. I. Sanders was the Republican candidate for the County School Board. I had the ballots printed, and last Saturday it was learned that they had made a mistake and that it should be W. L. Sanders. So I have had to have new ballots printed. This has caused considerable confusion and delay in my office in getting out absentee ballots.

I hope that the people of Chilton County will take time to read what I have said in this letter. The misrepresentations of my actions and attitude concerning the question which I have dealt with in this article have sought to brand me as a traitor to the Republican party, and as being unfair in the discharge of the duties of my office. I can conceive of no charge worse than that.

As a Republican, I want to say to the people of Chilton County that I am today as faithful and loyal to the party as I have ever been. I have battled and fought the enemies who attacked our party from the outside for many years, and I will continue to do so. And further than that, let me say that when enemies rise up inside the Republican party and seek to injure and destroy it, I will fight them to the last ditch before I will surrender the principles of our party.

As to the conduct of the affairs of my office, I have always held to those ideals which my best judgment told me were fair and honest under the law to all people, regardless of politics, creed or sect. I hold that Republicans should comply with the law, just the same as Democrats or anybody else. And when any man goes out to spread the idea that I am doing anything in my office to favor any candidate or any person above another, I stand ready to prove that such assertions are false, and that such practices are not tolerated in my official business.

Before I close, I want to say to all who may be concerned about the whole or any part of what is said or represented in this letter, if you will come to my office I will gladly show you the papers on file which support my statements, and further prove to you that the effort which has been made to besmirch me is utterly false and without any foundation other than the desire of the perpetrators of the same to serve their own personal interests without regard for the truth or the rights of anybody else.

In conclusion, I want to say that if some people in our party would make more effort to build up the Republican party, and less effort to build up a faction within the Republican party, it would be better for all in the future. It would be better if our leaders would try to impress upon our voters their obligation to vote for the nominees of our Republican primary after they have gone into the primaries, than to seek to make them feel that they are under no obligation to support the nominees.

I may not have another chance to say a word to you before the general election on the fourth of November. But as I conclude this letter, I want to say that I shall support the Republican nominees on the fourth of November, and I urge all Republicans to do the same. That is the only way we have of preserving the Republican party, to stand by the nominees.

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

W. H. SARTOR IN THE GRIP OF THE LOW-PRICE GIANT

PROMINENT MERCHANT HERE FOR 20 YEARS DECIDES TO MAKE SACRIFICE OF ALL MERCHANDISE AND FIXTURES

After more than twenty years serving the public as a merchant in Clanton, Mr. W. H. Sartor, owner of the Fair Store, has decided to make a terrific sacrifice of all his merchandise and fixtures. Nothing will be reserved. Prices on everything have been slashed to the bone.

Carrying this message of sacrifice and low prices to the people of Chilton County, Mr. Sartor has put into every mail box in the county during the last few days a big curcular that tells the story in no uncertain tones. Everyone who reads one of these circulars is bound to know that this is a sale of more than ordinary proportions.

The great sacrifice event opened Wednesday morning at nine o'clock. It continues today with renewed interest, and on through this week thousands of folks will be going into this store and carrying away loads of merchandise at prices not heard of in Clanton for a long time.

" We throw up our hands," said Sweet William Wednesday morning when the great merchandise landslide started at the Fair. "We are at the mercy of the buying public. Practically bare walls and empty shelves will stare you in the face when this racket is over."

And it looks like it was right from the way things got started on Wednesday. People came by auto, they came by train. Some were riding, some were walking. They were determined to get there at all cost.

Commissioners Court Submits Health Unit To Vote of People of the County

Voters Will Have An Opportunity To Accept or Reject It On November 4th. Separate Ballot Will Be Provided At General Election In County

The Commissioners Court passed an order submitting the question of an all time health officer to the voters of this county at the general election, November 4th, 1930.

This question has been considered by the people of this county for the past several years and the commissioners court of this county knows no better way to find out what the people want than to submit the matter to them. It will not cost the tax payers of this county anything as the officers of the general election can manage this election at the same time without any additional cost.

The court is anxious for every voter in the county to express themselves either for or against the county employing an all time health unit. An all time health unit will cost the tax payers of this county $5,000.00 per year.

I have received the following letter from Dr. J. N. Baker, State Health Officer, which explains itself:

My Dear Judge Reynolds:

Thinking you would like to know the exact amounts necessary for full time health service in your county, I am setting forth the following:

$5,000.00 is the amount asked from Chilton County. To this sum the State Department of Health will add $4,000.00. This total budget of $9,000.00 will be sufficient for the salary and traveling expenses of the health officer, nurse, and sanitary officer, the salary of the secretary and the upkeep of the office.

If I can give you further information, please advise me.

Very sincerely yours,
J. N. BAKER, M. D.,
State Health Officer.

This the 14th day of October, 1930.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

E. D. BANKS

Mr. Banks lives at Anniston, in Calhoun County. He was chairman of the anti-Smith campaign in Calhoun County in 1928, and succeeded in carrying the rock-ribbed Democratic county by a majority of 500 for Hoover. He is chairman of the Heflin-Locke campaign in Calhoun County this year.

He is a graduate of Wake Forest College, holding A. B. and L. L. D. degrees. He is a licensed attorney, but confines his activities to business, rather than the practice of law. He helped organize the Alabama Junior Chamber of Commerce, and served as president of that organization two years. He organized the Anniston Junior Chamber of Commerce, and was president of that body two years. He was chairman of the Calhoun County Chapter of the American Red Cross several years.

He is a Baptist, a Mason, a Shriner, a K. of P., an Odd Fellow, and a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics.

For the past ten years he has been actively engaged in community upbuilding and civic work at Anniston and in Calhoun County. He was publisher of the Chamber of Commerce Magazine for Anniston two years.

This year Mr. Banks has been selected by the Jeffersonian Democrats as a candidate for Congress in the Fourth District, in opposition to Lamar Jeffers, incumbent, and nominee of the regular Democratic party. Mr. Banks says he wants to go to Congress in order that he may have the pleasure and privilege of bringing to the Fourth District many things which it is entitled to have.

Election Fight On In Chilton County

Reynolds Holds Nominees Must File Declaration

Must party nominees for office in Alabama file a declaration of their candidacy with the Secretary of State or Probate Judge after receiving such nominations? This is the question put up to the attorney general's office by L. H. Reynolds, probate judge of Chilton County on October 9th. Judge Reynolds was in consultation with Attorney General Charlie McCall for about five hours yesterday and no decision was reached.

Judge Reynolds holds that under the corrupt practice act, each candidate must file such declaration within five days after the votes are canvassed by the county committee or state committee. He further holds that where such declaration is not filed he is not authorized to have the names of such persons printed on the official ballots.

If the attorney general's department rules with Judge Reynolds, no ballots will be printed in Chilton, unless mandamus proceedings are instituted and orders issued requiring him to have the ballots printed, the Judge announced. Judge Reynolds stated that he had arranged for a conference this morning with the attorney general at which conference he is inviting both Democratic and Republican chairmen of the county of Chilton to be present.

Those who take issue with Judge Reynolds in this matter point out that the sections referred to apply to candidates for nomination, or candidates who ask for a place on the ticket by petition of the required number of qualified electors. Only one declaration of candidacy is required, they contend, and if such candidate filed such declaration as required by law when he entered the party primary campaign, or at any other time he had met the full requirements of the law.

It is pointed out that under Section 462, the Probate Judge must cause to be printed on the official ballot to be used in their respective counties the names of "all candidates who have been put in nomination by any caucus, convention mass meeting ,primary election, or other assembly of any political party or faction in this state, and certified in writing and filed with him not more than 60 days nor less than 20 days previous to the day of election."

Names of nominees for officers voted for in more than one county are certified to the Probate Judge by the Secretary of State, and these must be printed on the official ballot.

As to compliance with the Alabama corrupt practice act, the contention is made that this applies chiefly to the campaign prior to the party primary, as it is during this campaign that the candidate is running as an individual, whereas he is only one of a group after the primary. It is further pointed out that failure to comply with the corrupt practice act would operate against such person getting the certificate of nomination.

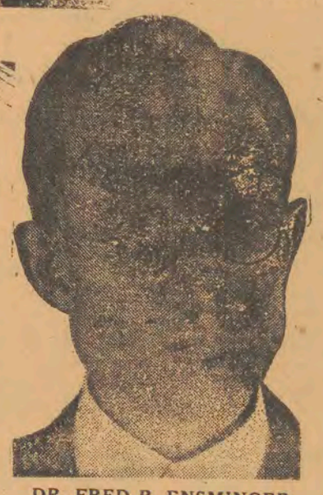
Just what effect the ruling by the attorney general would have on the counties which have already had ballots printed and are today sending out absentee voters ballots, is problematical.—Montgomery Advertiser, date of Thursday, October 16, 1930.

Instructions About Marking Ballots

Campaign Chairman Explains Important Question To Voters

I have frequently been asked, should a voter desire to vote the Republican ticket, and also for U. S. Senator and for Governor, in which case there are no candidates on the Republican ticket, how should the voter mark his ticket, in order that it may be counted as it is intended to count.

In reply to this question, I desire to call your attention to Section 475 of the Alabama Code, which makes the matter very plain, which is as follows:



475. When straight ticket does not contain name of all officers. If the ticket marked in the circle for a straight ticket does not contain the names of candidate for all offices for which the elector may vote, he may vote for candidates for such offices so omitted by marking a (X) mark before the names of candidates for such offices on other tickets, or by writing the names, if they are not printed upon the ballot in the blank column under the title of the office."

The above section just means this: To vote a straight Republican ticket, and then for U. S. Senator and Governor on another ticket, make your cross under the Republican Emblem, then make a cross before the name of the candidate you desire to vote for for Governor and Senator.

In other words, we have nominated no candidates for Governor, U. S. Senate, nor Congress, and therefore the above section applies.—J. Z. Mims, Chairman Republican Campaign Committee.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH MAY MERGE CHRISTIANS

At a joint meeting last week on the Congregational and Christian churches, near Wedowee in Randolph county, the question of the union of the two denominations in Alabama was taken up. The merger of the two national denominations was voted last year, and arrangements are now being made for a meeting of the new General Council of the Congregational and Christian churches at Seattle, Wash., next July. A united Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian churhes was formed last Spring, representing eleven States from Delaware to Florida and west to the Mississippi.

The two groups in Alabama have a total of 84 churches with 5,413 members, the Congregational having 54 churhes with 2,986 members and the Christians having 30 churches with 2,437 members.

Rev. Dr. Fred P. Ensminger of Demorest, Ga., was among the prominent leaders of the Congregational and Christian churches who attended the joint convention in Wedowee.

Dr. Ensminger is superintendent of the Congregational churhes in Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky. In an address before the gathering Dr. Ensminger gave a summarized survey of mission work around the world.

Rev. Elmer W. Butler of Thorsby is registrar and treasurer of the Alabama Congregational Conference. Rev. Joseph E. Each, also of Thorsby, had a part on the program carried out at the joint convention in Randolph County last week.

LAWLEY NEWS

The P.-T. A. met at the school auditorium last Thursday night and reorganized, with Mr. Raley, president, Mr. Edwin Lovelady, vice president, Mr. John Mount, secretary. Everyone should join, especially the parents, and make it what it should be. But those who are always ready to criticize are the very ones who do nothing for the up-building of the community.

The Sunday School, B. Y. P. U., and W. M. S., are making wonderful progress, for which this community is proud.

Mr. A. D. Latham and Mr. Alex Latham spent last Sunday in Tuscaloosa, returning Sunday night, accompanied by Mrs. A. D. Latham, Misses Alvis and Lurleen Latham, who had been in Tuscaloosa since Friday. They reported a grand time, visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Collins, formerly a resident of this place.

Miss Blanche Lawley of Tuscaloosa is here visiting relatives.

Mrs. J. S. Dunlap had the misfortune of almost breaking her leg last week, when one of the seats at the school fell, striking her leg. We are sorry and hope she will soon be able to walk again.

Mrs. Alva Rada Dunlap, or Grandma Dunlap, is spending this winter in Florida with her daughters, Mrs. Emmett Collins and Mrs. R. C. Collins. We will miss her from all activities of church.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wilson, Mrs. W. P. Hicks, Misses Alvis Latham, and Mildred Hicks attended the Bibb County Association at Cahaba Valley Church last week.

The dramatic club here will give a play next Saturday night, October 25th, at the school auditorium, beginning at 8 o'clock. The play is entitled, "Hoodooed Coon," and if you want to laugh your sides sore, come and see this play. There will be black faced comedians. It is full of very amusing characteristics from beginning to end. Come and forget your troubles for a few hours. The proceeds will go to the school, so while you are enjoying the play you will be helping Lawley School. Admission 15 and 25 cents. Money back if not satisfied. Be sure and come.

Those who are to present this play are Mr. Raley, Mrs. Sarah Cottingham, Mr. Edwin Lovelady, Mr. Roy Martin, Mr. Charlie Head, Mr. Snooks Jefferson, Miss Vila Lovelady, Miss Alvis Latham and Miss Lurline Latham.

The Sunday School special program will be next Sunday morning at 9:30. Come and hear the children recite on missions.

FOR SALE—Eleven acres of land, and good house. One mile from High school. Will sell on terms to the right party. H. G. Boyd, Peoples Savings Bank.

Miss Mabel Howard, her mother, Mrs. Fred Howard, Mrs. Conrad Carlson and sister, Mrs. Thorngrenn, Robert Carlson and Martin Nelson drove to Mitchell Dam Sunday. Mrs. Thorngrenn is a very fond lover of nature and enjoyed the trip so much. She expressed her opinion of the scenery on the way and at the dam as being one of the most beautiful spots on her whole trip and that she will always remember it as a beauty spot in Alabama, and one we should all be proud of.

TWO ARRESTED AT STILL IN COOSA

Sheriff Collins and his deputies, together with Federal officers, Myrick and Epson of Montgomery raided a wildcat still in Coosa County last Tuesday night at Eleven o'clock. The still was in full operation. The officers caught Tommie Connell and a Whitaker boy (step-son of Pete Williams) who were at the still. Two other men got away. The two who escaped are known to the officers and will be arrested later.

Connell and Whitaker were taken to Montgomery and placed in jail. At a preliminary trial this week they were bound over to the federal grand jury under $500 bond each. At this writing they were still in jail.

The still was located about a quarter of a mile beyond the river near the old Wisconsin lumber camp.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

American travelers returning from Europe, and American publicists who visit the continent across the Atlantic are not painting a very rosy picture of European conditions from an economic depression much more serious than the one in the United States. Such uncensored reports as filter out of Russia are to the effect that the citizens of that unfortunate country, despite the fact that the government is dumping wheat abroad, are in a pitiable condition regarding the necessities of life. There is great depression in the Baltic countries, idleness and unemployment are on the increase in Germany and Great Britain, while even in France, up until now the bright spot of Europe, there are evidences that the peak of prosperity has been passed.

But political conditions are even more serious than economic misfortunes. On every side are to be seen dictatorial governments or the promise of dictatorships. The recent success of the Fascist movement in Germany is causing grave concern among Germany's friends abroad, presaging as it does, a real attempt to reopen the question of reparation payments and war debts. There is a new dictatorship in Austria and in other countries of middle and eastern Europe there are mutterings of discontent and threats of the overthrow of governments.

The sore spots left by the treaty of peace have not yet been cured and there are rumors of various realignments which might at any time shake the foundations of Europe. And back in the East is the dark shadow of communist Russia seeking to undermine everywhere the civilization of western Europe and America. In fact the greatest deterrent to war just now seems to be the general lack of finances.

All of which is but preliminary to stating once more the wisdom which Uncle Sam displayed in keeping out of the maelstrom of European politics by avoiding the League of Nations and similar entangling commitments. Every day bring a new development which shows the wisdom of our following the advice of President Washington and the traditional foreign policy of the government.

Retaining our independence of action we will be able, in case the opportunity affords it, to offer our services in the cause of peace and tranquility without being bound in advance to a more or less definite alliance of world power. Truly there is more reason today than ever before to avoid the entangling commitments of European politics. Now is certainly a fine time for Uncle Sam to look after his own affairs, and fortunately that is what we are going to do.

In fact Europe is now looking to America for the first sign of a break in the clouds of depression. For Europe believes that if the world is to be restored to prosperity, the first evidences of the returning prosperity will be in the United States. There is every reason to believe that these signs will be forthcoming in the not distant future.

BRAZIL IN ARMS

Nothing better illustrates the condition or depression and the spirit of unrest abroad in the world today than the revolution in Brazil, which, from an apparently small beginning has developed into a first-class uprising. Diverse reasons are given for the cause of the revolution. In most quarters it is stated that the chief factor was the economic condition of the country. The chief export of Brazil is coffee. After vain efforts by the government to regulate production, there has been an over-production of coffee with a consequent depression of prices in Brazil and hard times. Many of the planters are said to charge that the government has not handled the coffee situation properly.

The principal customer of Bazil for coffee is the United States. We have had a depression of our own and as a result there has been a curtailment of coffee together with other products.

The revolution in Brazil is of grave concern to the people of the United States. Brazilians are a Latin people but of Portuguese instead of Spanish descent, a fact which places them at a little distance from the other people of South America and they are apparently more amenable to friendship with the United States.

As is now coming to be well known in our country, South America has been heavily propagandized by European interests against the United States. The European propagandists have painted Uncle Sam as an imperialist bully seeking to dominate the southern continent politically and economically. This sort of publicity truck has been less effective in Brazil than in any other part of Latin-America. The result has formed one of the factors making for a traditional friendship between the United States and Brazil. Another reason for the friendship can be found in the fact that the American protective tariff system does not greatly interest Brazil for the reason that over 90 per cent of her exports to the United States come through Uncle Sam's ports duty free. In addition, when Uncle Sam's productive system is going full blast Americans use more Brazilian coffee than thatv do when our workers are out of jobs.

Because of this traditional friendship between the two largest nations in the Western Hemisphere it is to be hoped that the Brazilians will be able to settle their difficulties with a minimum amount of bloodshed and that peace and order will soon be restored.

SHAKE OUT UNNECESSARY TAX EATERS

Many legislators know what is needed to bring about economy and good business in government. They know that some offices should be abolished because there is no longer any need of them; that with improved transportation and communication facilities, one official could do the work that formerly required six; but when it comes to doing away with waste and extravagance they are not equal to the task.—Indianapolis News.

What we would like to know is whether Adolph Hilter grew his mustache or painted it on.

Foolishness In Politics Will Result In Failure

The Union-Banner does not pose as a prophet, but we do claim to be able to see some things. And therefore, we ask the privilege of saying to the Republicans of Chilton County that we believe we see a disposition among the Republican leaders of this county that is going to carry the Republican party to destruction if our house is not set in order and some of our foolishness subdued.

Only last week a thing happened that caused a great stir among the Republicans, and all without any just cause. When Judge Reynolds went to the Attorney General of Alabama to ask advice on a question which he was justified in submitting to that authority, the word was sent out all over this county by men high in the councils of the Republican party that Judge Reynolds had invented a scheme, a new thing never heard of before to keep the Republican nominees in Chilton County from being put on the election ballots for the general election.

That is a sample of the kind of half-baked political foolishness which we believe is eating at the vitals of our Republican party organization, and which will destroy its life and usefulness unless such dispositions are promptly put out of our minds and hearts.

Of all the things we have heard Judge Reynolds accused of in politics, we think there has never been an accusation more unjust than that which was made last week. And the worst part of it is that the accusation came from men in his own party, and certainly without due deliberation on the part of those who made the charges.

The editor of The Union-Baner has investigated the matter thoroughly, and we have seen with our own eyes documents and papers in the office of Judge Reynolds that prove emphatically that the charge that Judge Reynolds had conspired to keep the Republican nominees off the ballot is not at all justified by the facts in the case.

If those who made this serious charge against Judge Reynolds had taken the trouble to investigate the matter and determine the facts before they made the charges, they could not have failed to be convinced themselves that there was no grounds for such charges. Even if some of them had remembered their own actions in political campaigns of the past, they surely could have known that Judge Reynolds was not raising a new and unheard of question in the matter of candidates filing certain papers in the Probate office, as they have charged since this matter came up.

Judge Reynolds has made a full explanation of the matter in this issue of The Union-Banner. We ask all Republicans to read it and see for themselves. We believe his explanation is sufficient to justify his own actions in the minds of all reasonable, thinking Republicans; and we further believe his explanation will be sufficient to put the shadow of shame upon those who jumped at a conclusion, and without proper investigation laid upon him a groundless charge that amounts to nothing less than a charge of treason against the man who has done more for the Republican party in Chilton County than any other one you can mention.

Now, just a word of warning. You may not like it, but that makes no difference to us. The Republican leaders of this county must cut out some of this kind of foolishness, or else disaster awaits our party just around the corner. We can not travel safely and successfully so long as our party is perched upon a can of powder that explodes and destroys peace and harmony in our councils every time the wind changes.

We must have more confidence and more tolerance. We must put the bridle on a few of the tongues that are loose at both ends. Some of us need to get rid of the idea that everybody else is a crook. We need to exercise more deliberation and consideration for the other fellow. When we talk, we need to know first that we are telling the truth, and not merely guessing.

Just rest assured of this one fact, if you are concerned about what Judge Reynolds is going to do in this election: He is going to support the nominees under the elephant, just like every other loyal Republican will do. He would be the last man in the world to throw an obstruction in the way of the Republican nominees in Chilton County.

Judge Reynolds has occupied a very important place in the Republican party in this county for a long time. If the time has now come that his place must be filled by somebody else, it is high time someone was appearing on the scene with the ability to fill his place as well as he has done it. No less ability than he has shown will ever be able to meet the task.

And if the men who are the leaders of the present campaign would have us take the thing that came from them last week as a sample of their own ability to be fair and perform the task of leading the Republican party, we are bound to say that it looks like a poor specimen of leadership to put in the place of that which Judge Reynolds has given his party throughout his long and honorable career.

In closing this expression of our thoughts on what we consider a very important matter to the future concern of the Republican party in Chilton County, let us add again to what we said last week, and urge the Republicans of Chilton County to give your support to the Republican ticket on the fourth of November. Do not be confused by the uncertain things that you may hear.

There is one thing you certainly can know. We have a Republican ticket in Chilton County, which was nominated in a Republican primary. And the only safe way to continue to have a Republican party is to elect the men who are nominated for office by the Republican primary. You do not need the advice of anybody to make you see the correctness of that statement.

HOW THE GOVERNMENT RUNS A RAILROAD

The Senate committee investigating the causes of the deficit of $1,300,000 on the Alaska railroad during the last fiscal year has found them to be, as summarized by the Seward Gateway: "Too much service. Too low freight rates. Too much duplication of jobs. Too much slacking in departments. Too many high-priced and low-action promoters. Too many barnacles inherited from previous managements."

The railroad operates a hotel at Curry at a loss of $30,000 a year. It formerly ran an electric plant which supplied the town of Anchorage and earned an income of $60,000 a year, but was turned over to private hands for nothing just before the change of managers on the railroad. More than $200,000 of overdue freight bills had accumulated with no chance of collection. Alaska coal is required to pay such rates that much coal from Seattle is sold in competition with it.

Coal and leasing and other conservation laws were cited by citizens as preventing development of traffic for the railroad. In fact, the territory is carefully conserved for future generations, while the public money is squandered on a railroad that was intended to develop the country. —Portland Oregonian.

It's curious how the mind works, you know, and it is odd, isn't it, that while we were reading about the President sitting out in the hot sun with a flat tire, we should think, of all times, of the Hoover Dam.—Boston Herald.

Ninety-six per cent of Brazil's imports to the United States come into our country free so it will be a little difficult even for our friend Pat Harrison to blame the Brazil revolution on to our new tariff law.

MENTAL DEPRESSION

A year ago we were in the closing phrases of the greatest bull market America had ever seen. It seemed that there would be no end to the steady upward march of prosperity. There were many so enthusiastic as to claim that the old economic laws had been repealed, that America was too big for them and that there would never be depression again.

We know now that such predictions were foolish, but we do not seem to realize that the atmosphere of depression and pessimism which has developed the country during the past few weeks is equally foolish. Now there are prophets of disaster who tell us that we are having the medium of progress for all time to come, and that we are never to be prosperous again.

Just what has happened to bring about this change of sentiment? Undoubtedly the cause is the economic depression and the slowing down of business which it has brought about. But it is to be remembered that we have the same country, the same resources, the same intelligent people, the same potential buying power that we had a year ago when it seemed that we could never be stopped. Then what is to prevent our once more marching on the road to prosperity that we were on before?

The truth is that we are overly pessimistic now just as we were overly optimistic a year ago. Then the optimists would pay no attention to the same minds who cautioned them against over-expansion. Now they will pay no attention to the sane and conservative minds who tell them that one of the principal things retarding our recovery is a pessimism as unreasonable as was the optimism of a year ago.

We like to picture the Frenchman and the Italian as the most volatile persons on earth. But our rebound from the heights of optimism to the depths of despair without any change in government and its resourses, would indicate that there may be some weight to the charge of certain European nations that the most volatile people are not to be found in Europe after all but in America.

Isn't it about time we stop theorizing and get down to brass tacks? Things are not as bad as most of us think they are. Business will get better, if we all work together to help improve it. America is still the great country it has always been. Nothing has changed permanently. A part of the disease is undoubtedly mental. That is the part which we can correct immediately.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

I was impressed the other day by a statement from Mr. Eugene R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. The newspaper report which I saw said Mr. Black used "plain words" when he told a group of bankers he did not agree with those who say that all America needs is a return of confidence.

"I believe, first, we have to pay our debts," he said. "To do that we have to economize. We have admittedly a 13-month recession in business. It is farther back than that."

"We have been living in an automobile and radio era. We cannot pay our debts and continue in that atmosphere. Let us not fool ourselves. We cannot have any permanent prosperity when there is a load of debt around our necks."

"A mortgage on the home destroys the peace of the fireside. If the mortgages on our farms in America were paid, there would be no farm problem."

"I believe we have got to assert our character in America. I am afraid that in the last two years some of us have forgotten that a good name is rather to be desired than great riches, and public favor rather than gold and silver. It is not confidence we need in America. It is certainty we need in America."

Go back now and read over the above statements of Mr. Black and study them. It ought to take you at least thirty minutes to read his statements above and give them the thought they deserve.

I am intensely interested in the election on the Health Unit November 4th. I hope every citizen of our county will give due consideration to that question and endeavor honestly to see and realize what it will mean to our county.

Our people are easily aroused by the politicians who are seeking office. But we are hard to move on the more important things like a health unit. Do you know that the health unit in Chilton County is a hundred times more important to our people than the question of who will be United States Senator or Governor or Sheriff or Tax Collector or Assessor? Had you ever thought about it that way? It is a fact. Yet we will tear our shirts for the politicians and fail to give due consideration to what very likely means life or death to hundreds of boys and girls who are growing up in our county.

Governor Bibb Graves will be in our county Friday of this week to bring our people a message on the subject of the Health Unit. He will speak at Jemison School at 11 o'clock in the morning; at the Maplesville School at 2:30 in the afternoon. Friday night at 7 o'clock he will speak at the Courthouse in Clanton.

It is earnestly hoped that a good crowd of our adult citizens, voters, will greet our Governor at each of his engagements in our county.

Another great man is coming here Thursday, October 30th, to speak to our farmers. He is Hon. Jos. O. Thompson, field representative of the Federal Farm Board. Mr. Thompson is well known in Chilton County. He has been here on many occasions before.

He will speak at the Courthouse at 11 o'clock Thursday, October 30. His address will deal with the work of the Federal Farm Board in relation to the cotton question. After his address he will ask the farmers to express themselves. That ought to be a meeting of great value to our farmers.

And here comes Tom Heflin to speak at the Courthouse at 10 o'clock next Saturday. This will perhaps be the biggest political demonstration of the present campaign. Tom gets hearers wherever he goes, because he entertains them. Always in the past when Heflin came to Chilton County it was the signal that the Republicans were bound for a complete skinning. I wonder if he will cuss us this time.

Did you see the fine cattle shown here last Saturday by the calf club boys? It was a good omen for the future farmers of our county to see them starting out early in the business of developing better dairy cattle.

A big snow in New York State this week completely paralyzed and I guess froze a large section. The papers said it was four feet deep in some places. Motorists by the hundreds were stranded on the highways and had to abandon their machines and seek comfort in nearby houses, if there happened to be one handy. It is unusally early for such weather, even in New York, where big snows are common in winter.

Heard a farmer the other day worrying and spewing because he was making forty to fifty bales of cotton on a 3-mule place and was not going to have anything ahead when the guano's paid for. Furthermore I learned that he has not even got a razor back shoat on his farm to make meat, and his one cow has been dry for many weeks. What a pity. That same farmer could have made a nice profit this year with a couple of hundred chickens, a few hogs and cows, plenty of food and feed stuff, and he would have been better off without any cotton at all.

And to provide more adequate and better means of transportation to e rural schools, and whatever legislation appropriate this need I shall advocate and support. Too much n not be done to promote the progress of education, d it will be my purpose to support such measures as ll foster education.

8. I will be fair to both labor and capital, and support ch legislation as will promote the speedy development the State's natural resources.

Judge Reynolds Publishes Letters Relative to Candidates for State Senator

Editor Union-Banner:

The campaign will soon come to a close and we have some of the same old issues that we have had for many years past. We have a few self-constituted leaders in this county that have been trying for years to get a bill through the Legislature to deliberately legislate officers out of office that have been duly elected by the popular vote of the people of this county with no excuse or complaint except the people have elected Republicans, and they want to legislate these officers out of office and have the Governor appoint the officers. It seems like two or three in this county are determined to get their hands in the county treasury. This issue was freely talked in the Democratic primary, and Mr. Duncan, who was nominated for Senator in this District was supported by the few who are so anxious to legislate people out of office, and for the information of the voters of this District I publish the following letter from Mr. L. F. Gerald to Mr. John A. Dickinson, who was also a candidate for State Senator in the Democratic primary, August the 12th. I also publish Mr. Dickinson's letter to Mr. Gerald.

Copy of letter from L. F. Gerald to John A. Dickinson:

Clanton, Alabama,
January 1, 1930.

Mr. John A. Dickinson,
Prattville, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

Referring to your letter of December 31st, advising me that you are a candidate for State Senator from the Fifteenth District, I beg to advise that I do not know at this time what I would be willing to do relative thereto, but there is one question that I wish to ask you, and I wish to ask for direct answer from you on it.

Would you favor and support whole-heartedly and with all your ability a special act abolishing the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, Alabama and providing for the establishment of a Board of Revenue, the initial members of which were to be appointed by the Governor, and thereafter said members be elected from five separate districts in this county?

Further, would you whole-heartedly support and press a bill to provide for the election of School Board Members from this county from districts?

Further would you whole-heartedly press and support a local bill to abolish the office of the County Treasurer of Chilton County, Alabama, and put us on the same basis as the other counties of this State?

Of course, I am asking these questions assuming that the Democratic Committee of this County would favor the same. After receiving your reply relative to the above I can determine what attitude I would take towards your candidacy.

Yours very truly,
L. F. GERALD.

Copy of letter from John A. Dickinson to L. F. Gerald.

Prattville, Alabama,
January 6, 1930.

Mr. L. F. Gerald,
Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter of January 1st, I wish to say that I am a Democrat, and I believe in majority rule. If a majority of the voters of Chilton County desire the legislation suggested in your letter, of course, I would be in favor of giving it to them. However I note that you state in your letter that the initial appointment to these offices are to be made by the Governor.

I am not in favor of legislating any man out of office where a majority of the voters elected him, I don't care what his politics may be.

Statutes of Alabama provide a manner of changing officers in the event of incompetency and corruption, and I believe in following the statute to a letter. If the officers you propose to legislate out of office come under these statues, then why not proceed in the manner as prescribed by the statue, and not attempt to legislate them out of office to which they have been elected.

Yours very truly,
JOHN A. DICKINSON

In order to let the public understand the full situation, I wrote the following letter to J. G. Duncan, Jr., the Democratic nominee for State Senator in this Diserict, and also letter to Professor Howard R. Oden, the Democratic nominee for Representative from this County, and to this time I have failed to receive reply from Mr. Oden.

Copy of letter from L. H. Reynolds to J. G. Duncan, Jr.

Clanton, Alabama,
October 16, 1930.

Mr. J. G. Duncan, Jr.,
Prattville, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

I have been requested to write and ask you if you should be elected State Senator to represent the people of this county in the State Senate, would you be in favor of legislating the Commissioners out of office that have been elected by the people out of office and have the Governor appoint a Board of Revenue in their stead.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

The following reply was received from Mr. J. G. Duncan, Democratic nominee for State Senator in this district:

Prattville, Alabama,
October 20, 1930.

Judge L. H. Reynolds,
Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of your letter of October 16th asking: "If you should be elected State Senator to represent the people of this county in the State Senate, would you be in favor of legislating the Commissioners out of office that had been elected by the people of this county and the Governor appoint a Board of Revenue in their stead."

In reply to your letter I wish to say that I would not be in favor of this legislation. In my opinion this would be quite impractical and unfair.

Yours very truly,
J. G. DUNCAN, Jr.

Copy of letter from L. H. Reynolds to Howard R. Oden.

Clanton, Alabama,
October 16, 1930.

Professor Howard R. Oden,
Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

I have been requested to write and ask you if you should be elected to represent the people of this county in the legislature, would you be in favor of legislating the Commissioners that had been elected by the people out of office and have the Governor appoint a Board of Revenue in their stead.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

I have always believed that the public has a right to know how all public officers stand on public questions. So I take the liberty to publish the above letters so that the people of Chilton County will understand the situation when they go to the polls to vote.

The Republicans of this District have nominated Judge G. W. Weaver, who served Shelby County as Judge of Probate, and a man that will take pride in representing the people of this District and will try to get such legislation through as a majority of the people of this District want, and I hope not only the Republicans in the county and District but I hope all liberty loving voters that believe in the rule of the people will vote for Judge Weaver.

Republicans, we have a peculiar situation, not only in this county but all over the State, and it is well known that I was not in accord with the situation, until my party spoke, and now I am with my party, and I am willing to do any honorable thing I can to help elect our ticket. We have had a primary, and it is the duty of those that participated in that primary to vote the ticket. There is but one way that we can have a party that is to abide by the majority.

I have been voting forty years and I have always taken it straight just as I am going to do this time if I live to get to the election.

I have offered my service to the Campaign Committee if they need me. Republicans you can make a mistake much easier than you can correct it. Do not do something that you will regret. You had better help elect a candidate that you do not like on your ticket, than to elect one from the opposition party.

Yours truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

FROM C. C. H. S.

Miss Anne Carmichael, Assistant State Supervisor of Home Economics, paid our home economics department the honor of a visit last Thursday. Miss Carmichael complimented very highly the work that is being done. In a talk to all the home economics girls, she told us the beneficiary purpose of the course. Home Economics is not limited to sewing and cooking etc., but includes proper home care of children, social relationships, the proper way to decorate a home and general home management, the speaker emphasized. Home Economics is practically a new course, not being more than fifty years old. She recommended quite an extended list of needed materials which will be purchased right away. We are proud of our home economics department. All the students are doing some very practical work. She included our school on her list, and will visit us monthly.

Local Scouts Enjoyed Hike and Supper Out

The Boy Scouts of Clanton had a most pleasant outing at "John's Place" three miles north of Clanton, last Thursday night. Mr. Walker, Scout Master, and Mr. Varnell accompanied the boys. Those making the trip were: John Ezell, Joe Moore, Dan Smith, Grady Reynolds, Sidney Reynolds, Morgan Reynolds, Joe Hall Johnson, Arnold Poe, Hal Broadhead, Philip Nelson, Wesley Danforth Lawrence Gerald, U. L. Baker and Carl Jones.

Mr. Varnell Has Enthusiastic Biology Class

Mr. Varnell's biology class went on a field trip last Wednesday morning for the purpose of gathering insects and reptiles. The students found several specimens which will be preserved in alcohol for future study. They also gathered many insects for present study. Each one in the class has his own individual tools for dissecting the specimens and working out his own conclusions.

A routine of supervised study was followed by the students first dating the experiments and observing and recording the animals and insects that were noticed and secured. Since biology is the science of life, it not only creates an interest in living organisms, but gives us a desire to study these structures from practical first hand point of view.

LITTLE MISS CLANTON

The entertainment on last Friday evening, in the form of a beauty contest and sponsored by the various business houses and other organizations of Clanton was voted an unqualified success. The stage of the Wadesonian Theatre was selected as the setting for the exhibition of the beautiful little maidens in the contest.

The prizes, a gold finger ring and a box of candy were awarded to the little daughters of Messrs. Eugene Aldridge and Dewey Rockett, respectively. These little Misses, according to the out-of-town judges, were the most beautiful of the goodly number of representative children of whom special individual mention might be made without fear of wearying any set of readers.

One of the most attractive of the little folks to be placed upon exhibit, was little Lois Cotton who is commonly recognized as the mascot of the Central Alabama Hospital. Lois who was two years old on the last day of August was bewitching in her red cross costume.

Lois has a very interesting story. She became motherless when two months old. Her health declined, despite all that loving hands seemed able to do. Then she was resecued by a fairy God-Mother, in the person of Mrs. Stapp. When brought to the Central Alabama Hospital on the 11th of April, little Lois was so emaciated that she was absolutely limp. She was unable to lift her head. Her weight at the time was 11 lbs. Today Lois toddles without interference over the domain of the hospital. Her state is regal; all bow allegiance to her summons. She weighs over 20 pounds and roses are beginning to come on her cheeks.

The promise of good health for the little life that was despaired of, crowns with satisfaction the vigilance of Mrs. Stapp of the County Welfare department and crowns with unqualified success the skill, patience, effort and untiring zeal of the entire force of the Central Alabama Hospital.

One Fare for Food

How distribution costs have been cut

A&P brings food to your table on a straight line from the sources. That is why A&P food costs so little. Its price is not taxed by the expense of roundabout journeys. There are no road-side bills to pay.

The shortest road, unobstructed by half-way houses, is the A&P route to its stores. That is why A&P can pay growers and other producers well, yet charge its customers very low prices.

American statesmen say our big country's hardest problem is how to cut "the high cost of distribution." What they mean is that too much money is spent on the usually long road between the field and the consumer.

A&P has solved this problem for people who buy in its stores by providing direct rapid transit for food at one small fare.

Dr. V. J. GRAGG

of Clanton

Candidate for State Senator

To the Voters of Fifteenth Senatorial District:

I will not be able to call on you personally and shake hands with you, as is usual for candidates. But I am sure that alone would not go far in securing your vote, anyway.

I believe that honest government and sound legislation, based on principles of fair and impartial laws for all classes is what you want and need.

That is what I stand for, and it is on this promise that I solicit your vote and influence.

Respectfully,

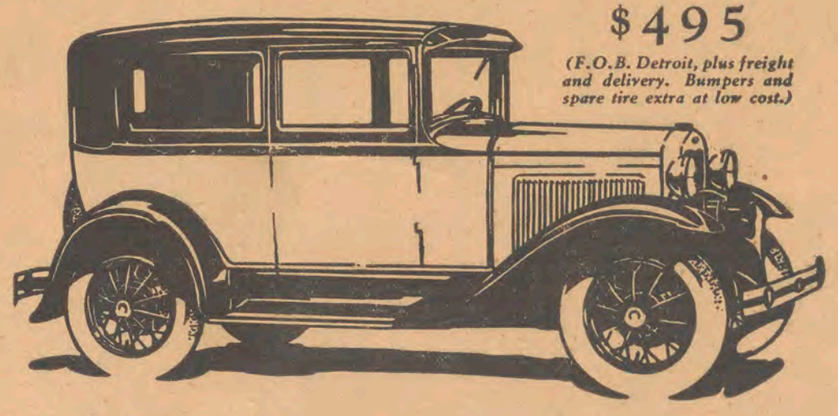
V. J. GRAGG,

Candidate for State Senator in Autauga, Chilton, and Shelby Counties.

Jeffersonian Democratic Candidate for State Senate.
(Paid political adv., by V. J. Gragg, Clanton, Ala.)

Children Need Books and Clothes

With 78 children already reported as not having any books or clothes to start to school, and whose parents are unable to buy them, we are asking that if anyone has any discarded clothes that can be made over or any books that their children do not need to please notify the child welfare office at Clanton or bring them to the office. These 78 children recently reported are in addition to the 268 children already being assisted or having been assisted by the welfare department in some way.



There are many children who will not be able to get through the winter unless the more fortunate people of the county will assist them to ward off cold and disease by helping them with the proper clothing and food.

Mrs. C. E. STAPP, County Welfare Supt.

It stands up under the added strain of bad roads and hard daily service in a way that has always been characteristic of the Ford car. "WHEN I was a child, if I did not feel well, or if I had a cold, my mother gave me Black-Draught," says Mrs. Orpha Hill, of Wofford, Ky. "When I was married, it became a family medicine in my own home, as it was in my mother's.

"I take it for headache and especially for constipation. When I get bilious, my skin gets yellow and I have a very bad taste in my mouth, and a drowsy feeling all during the day. My eyes burn and I get dizzy, or my head is 'swimming.' When I take Black-Draught, it seems to drive the impurities out of my system and I feel fine. I am seldom without this reliable remedy."

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUILD

Now is the time to build, to remodel and to modernize, according to leading contractors and material men. It is possible that the present opportunity afforded by low material costs and high labor efficiency will not recur in several years to come.

Labor is co-operating effectively in reducing construction costs, not so much by accepting lower wages but by doing more work in a day. Union bricklayers are said to be laying nearly twice as many bricks in a day as formerly, while carpenters and other workers have increased their efficiency 30 to 40 per cent.

During the summer and early fall there has been much remodeling, including the replacing of heating appliances with different systems that effect large fuel savings. Economy in operating costs is being sought, as well as in construction itself.

By having needed work done now, great savings are possible, besides the employment of surplus labor will aid in hastening the return of prosperity.

VOLUME XXXVIII.—TWELVE PAGES CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1930 NUMBER 27

FRANK CALLEN IS BANK PRESIDENT

Chosen To Succeed H. G. Boyd As Head of Peoples Savings Bank

Beginning on the first of November, Mr. Frank Callen, will assume the duties of President of the Peoples Savings Bank, of Clanton, succeeding Mr. H. G. Boyd. On the same date Mr. Boyd will take up his new position as vice president of the City Savings Bank and the City National Bank at Selma.

Mr. Callen voluntarily retired from the presidency of the Peoples Savings Bank about three years ago, at which time Mr. Boyd came here and has been serving as president ever since.

The Peoples Savings Bank is an institution that is to Frank Callen next to his home in sacredness. His father, the late W. T. Callen, was one of the founders of the Bank. Upon his shoulders rested the task of making this one of the outstanding banks of Alabama. Frank Callen is a part of this institution. He grew up with it, and it is only natural that he should cleave to it and give it the best service that lies in his power.

He is one of Clanton's most able young business men, a banker, both by inheritance and experience. As he now re-assumes the big job of managing the affairs of the Peoples Savings Bank, the many friends of Mr. Callen throughout Chilton county will give him their best wishes for his continued success.

With the succession of Mr. Boyd by Mr. Callen in the capacity of president, it is announced that there will be no other changes in the personnel of the officers and directors of the bank.

In parting with Glenn Boyd, Clanton and Chilton County are losing one the most valuable citizens we have ever had. Since he has been here, Mr. Boyd has worked unceasingly for the progress and upbuilding of Clanton and Chilton County. We can ill afford to lose from our town and county men who do things as Mr. Boyd has done since coming here.

Some weeks ago Mrs. Boyd and Gypsy Ann went on to Selma. Mrs. Boyd has been busily engaged in getting the fixtures all done in her new place of residence so that everything would be in proper place by the first of November.

UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA

Last week found the University campus vacant while some 3,000 students made a pilgrimage to Birmingham to watch the Alabama Crimson Tide engage the Vanderbilt Commodores. And here is the result.

Commodore Vanderbuilt unable to sail the turbulent waves of the Crimson Tide; Alabama 12, Venderbilt 7.

And who did this correspondent see up there but Jack Hayes, Jim Wade, Dewitt Easterling, Dewey Rockett, Vic Heard, and a flock of others to include our friends from Vandy, Spot Upchurch and Charles Moore.

Mid-semester exams are over now and I'm sure all of the Clantonians made good. It's back to the old grind now until Christmas.

You folks who like foot ball probably missed the best game of the current season with the exception of the Thanksgiving game with Georgia. If you expect to get seats in the stadium you had better send in your order to Jeff Coleman here at the University at once, because that Georgia game is going to be a sellout.

The week was otherwise uneventful as everyone was studying for exams.

Next week it is Kentucky, the next Florida, then L. S. U., in Montgomery, and then bring on them Georgia Bulldogs.

Was glad to see that C. C. H. S. took Montevallo in this week. Keep it up Chilton.—Alabama Reporter.

PLANNING FIELD DAY FOR THE SCHOOLS

Miss Jessie Garrison, head of the physical education program of the State Department of Education, was in Clanton Friday, conferring with school officials relative to a field day event which is planned to be put on by the schools of Chilton County some time next spring.

The date of the event has not been set yet. It will be an occasion that will include practically every school in the county and the plan is to make it a very interesting athletic event.

Full details of the program and arrangements will be made later as the date approaches.

Sheriff Collins is sending out the ballot boxes prepartory to the election on next Tuesday.

TEACHERS ON PROGRAM OF KIWANIS CLUB

The program of the Kiwanis Club last Thursday in charge of John Page was one of the most interesting we have had in a long time.

In preparing the program, Mr. Page drew upon the library and professional resourses of the school teachers of Clanton. And after the program was presented it was very evident that he had tapped a mine of very rich and beautiful gems.

Miss Sherwood, of the Grammar school spoke of the Primary pupil. Miss Morris rendered a vocal solo. Miss Thomas of the Grammar school talked about the characteristics of the Sixth grade pupil.

Miss Martin of the High School, had as the subject of her interesting talk, the pupil of the Junior High school. A piano solo was rendered by Miss Wells of the high School.

The Senior High school pupil was the subject of the talk by Miss Williams of the High School.

The members of the Kiwanis Club who heard the talks made by our teachers were greatly pleased and were impressed with the fact that these teachers have been thoroughly trained in the psychology of the pupil as well as the mere teaching of things from text books.

CENTRAL SINGERS TO MEET AT CONCORD SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Central Singing Society will meet with the Concord class next Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, and no collection will be taken up. Don't be afraid that you will be boned for money and stay away, for such will not be the case. The song books bought by the society have been paid for. One collection was taken up at each of the other eight churches, the last one being at Poplar Springs last Sunday. The small balance has been chipped in by a few interested parties, and the books are all paid for.

Prof. W. M. DeVaughn, our chairman, presided over the singing at Poplar Springs Sunday afternoon; he was not able to attend the last two meetings on account of sickness. The singing was good. The society had several visitors, all of whom we were glad to see. Meet with us again every time you can.

THE BELLED BUZZARD

Glaucus Baker, who lives on Route 2, Clanton, reports that the famous belled buzzard was at his place one day last week. Mr. Baker says he was out in the back yard and heard a strange rattling sound. One of his children located the noise. As the buzzard flew low over the house it was easy to tell that he had on a bell or something of that kind which was making the noise.

JESSE BAKER SAYS TO STAY WITH REPUBLICAN TICKET

Editor Union-Banner:

Please give me a small space in your paper this week for just a word to the Republicans of Chilton County.

My friends, if there ever was a time for us to stand together it is now. The mere fact that some of us did not get our choice in the primary, or that we do not personally like the nominees or any one of the nominees, is no excuse in my mind's eye for a single dissenting vote. There has never been a primary I do not suppose but what some one failed to get their choice.

Now all of you know that I did not get my choice for Tax Assessor but I feel that Mr. Collins can and will do the work just as well as I could or would have done it. And I consider it my moral and political duty to support him and all the ticket just as though I had been nominated.

Our ticket as a whole this time, is as good as we have ever nominated in this county when it comes even to competency and fitness for the places to which they are to be elected. So let me warn you even there may be confusions and misunderstandings among the people of both parties, we had better hold the level head and go to the polls on November the 4th, 1930, and vote under the Republican emblem so that you can go home to your children and tell them if needs be, you have again acted the manly part and done the very best you could for their comfort and protection.

Yours for the success of the Republican party.—Jesse Baker, Clanton, Alabama.

Mims Asks Support For Republican Candidates

Republican Campaign Chairman Makes Last Appeal To Voters Before Election of November 4th

Editor Union-Banner:

May I make this last appeal to the Republicans of Chilton County before the election on November the 4th.

My friends on August the 12th, 1930, we went into the primary by great numbers and nominated us a ticket, thereby selecting the men whom a majority of the Republicans of the county thought was best to put up to fight our enemy with. These men probably were not nominated because they were better men than their opponents, but rather because more of the Republicans thought they were the men entitled to the places of trust and honor to which they aspired. Practically all these candidates got a good strong lead in their nominations and we believe that they are going to be elected by a much greater majority.

Now we have a fine bunch of men selected from among ourselves, men whom we know, men whom we have heretofore trusted in many respects and men who are worthy to be trusted and men who are worthy of the honor and trust to which they aspire. We can trust them to do with credit to themselves and the Republican party the duties of the office for which they are asking. They are men we know and men who know and appreciate us. They are men who can and will appreciate the needs of the people of this county. If you will recall in a previous letter I tried to point out the peculiar fitness of each candidate to the duty of the office for which he is asking. It is possibly true we did not get all of our men in the primary. I didn't and I do not recall of ever doing so, but I have never for a moment thought of even mentioning my dislike or disapproval of any candidate nominated by the Republicans of this county, and I am no better Republican than any one else should be.

My friends, after having some time to consider and think about the matter, what legitimate excuse have we to leave the ranks of our own party at this time and go into the enemy's party? The fact that they have good men running on their ticket is no excuse for any Republican to vote for them. They are men, who as best we have been able to find out, were not nominated by a majority vote of their party even though they had no opponent.

The Republican party of Chilton County offers the only safe place for the people of the county and has proven this fact to my satisfaction by many years of useful, efficient and satisfactory service to the people of the county. One of the many instances of much concern in which the people of this county under Republican rule are permitted to speak their wishes is in the recent act of the Commissioners Court in permitting you to express your sentiment on the question of the all time Health Unit. As I understand it the Commissioners Court has the legal right to employ said unit regardless of the wishes of the people. I consider this serving the people and not bossing them; serving the people like they want to be served. Some probably would say this is not best, but give the people what they need regardless of what they want, serve the people as you think they should be served and not ask them about it. My fellow citizens, the men you vote for on November the 4th, determines in a great measure the kind of service you will get for the next four years. Let us think well before we go astray.

What have the Democrats to promise you? Have they got better men, men with more experience and better fitted to give you service? Can you think that a man or lady who has been your enemy politically all these years will do more for you than your friend that you know, and understand you? I think you are going to say no. Service is all that the general public gets out of the offices or office holders, they why not get the best?

Should there be a candidate on your ticket that you personally dislike it seems to me it would be better to just march up like a man and vote for him and tell him so and then demand of him to be a man, and then you will stand a chance to get him out in four years. Would this not be better than going into the enemies camp and help elect some one whom you do not know and really think you do not want and then stand a bad chance of ever getting through with it.

Remember it is much easier to keep your party and have it in the hands of the people than it is to regain it after you have given it away. When the Democratic candidates slap you on the back just smile and pass him up because it is better to let him do that than let him slap you in the face a little later on.

I am persuaded to believe that we will win this time by as big a majority as ever, but let us not be satisfied with less than the biggest ever.

I am doing every thing I can and know to do and I intend to keep the fight up until the last minute, and I appeal to every Republican to quit themselves like men and women, true soldiers and march to the firing line the next few days and we can rest assured of great victory, a victory that we will be proud of for many days and even years. Beware lest we be forced to say, "well I knew better but I. " Let us play the man and be a square shooter.

Again let me insist that all qualified voters who believe in fair play and good government, regardless of their past political affiliations, come on and help us elect the Republican ticket by an overwhelming majority and thereby elect a ticket that the whole country will be proud of, and you can go home and tell the children that you have done your best to get good government and protection to them and your sacred home.

I will now go, hoping to see you and shout with you over a great victory for the Republicans of Chilton County on the night of November the 4th.

Yours truly,
J. Z. MIMS.
Chairman Republican Campaign Committee.

Percy Pitts Commends Chilton County Exhibits At the Montgomery State Fair

Special Mention Mads of Those Who Prepared the Exhibits

Editor Union-Banner:

I only wish more of the citizens of Chilton County could have attended the State Fair at Montgomery last week. Many counties had exhibits there, as well as different communities over the state. Any Chilton County citizens would have been rather "chesty" to have seen the wonderful display made by our county, and which was recognized by the judges rendering prizes.

I do not know that I saw any display that compared favorably with the Isabella community display. In this community we have one of the most progressive bunch of people in Alabama. Everything raised or grown by a progressive farmer was in this artistic display. It goes without saying they were a prize winner.

The Chilton County exhibit by the 4-H club of pure bred cattle was wonderful, and Chilton County boys under the able leadership of Mr. C. E. Stapp are to be congratulated. They too, won many prizes and ribbons which were in evidence Thursday afternoon. Apparently the chance for a razorback hog, or a scrub cow, in Chilton County in the future is rather past history.

I have often said that we have one of the most progressive bunches of farmers in Alabama, as well as one of the best counties. But after seeing the wonderful displays from Chilton County, as compared with displays from other sections of the State, I am more convinced than ever.

Chilton County is fortunate in having such people as C. E. Stapp, Mrs. S. E. Bruce of Clanton, and Prof. Earle Thomas, and Miss Cora Belle Maddox, of Isabella community, and many others who were instrumental in demonstrating to people over the state what we have and what we are doing in Chilton County.

Percy, Jr, enjoyed the monkey and merry-go-'round; however, I enjoyed and appreciated the efforts of those who made this wonderful showing for Chilton County most. Respectfully yours, Percy M. Pitts.

TO THE REPUBLICAN VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

We are nearing another general election, in which I am sure you are all very much interested and I appeal to you to take the necessary time and trouble to go to the polls and elect the ticket you nominated in August.

You have nominated a good strong ticket and I asure you that I am willing to trust them in your hands. While I lost several that I voted for in the primary election, the ticket you nominated is a good one and has my most loyal support as well as that of all other Republicans.

I wish to warn you against any unscrupulous reports and unfounded accusations that may be circulated the last minute in order to try to influence you against all or any part of our ticket.

Remember that your friends are giving your ticket their wholehearted support; so don't be deceived, let every man and woman in our county realize their duty to themselves, their families, our churches, our schools, our county, our party, and all will be well.

Yours for the rule of the masses and not for the few,
J. N. DENNIS.
Chairman Chilton County Republican Executive Committee.

TOM ROCKETT CALLS FOR SUPPORT OF REPUBLICAN TICKET

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me a little space to appeal to my friends and all the Republican voters of Chilton County, to go to the polls on next Tuesday and vote for the Republican nominees.

I see no reason why any Republican at this time should be confused about anything and have any idea of failing to support the Republican ticket. In fact it appears to me that in this time of great political confusion and upheaval, it is more important than ever that we be careful to keep the affairs of the county in the hands of the Republicans.

The Republican party has always rendered a service of good government to the people of Chilton County. It will continue to do so in the future. Then what reason have we to fail to support the Republican candidates? I say we have none.

I hope that every Republican voter will rally to our standard on next Tuesday and help us to perpetuate the cause of popular government in Chilton County by keeping in power the party that has always stood for the best interest of the people.

Respectfully,
J. T. ROCKETT.

BANK ROBBERS MAKE AN ATTEMPT AT MAPLESVILLE

An attempt of robbers at the Bank of Maplesville about daybreak Tuesday morning, resulted in the failure of the effort to reach the cash in the vaults. The would be robbers had to leave the scene without reward for their labors.

An explosion that shook the town is reported to have attracted the attention of Maplesville residents about daybreak. Investigation revealed that an attempt had been made to rob the bank. Considerable damage was done to the bank building, but the cash vaults were undisturbed.

It is thought the robbers were unexperienced at their business. They placed the charge of high explosives at a place from where the result of the blast only made it impossible for them to get to the money.

Bank officials, with County officers, made a close study of the case but no clue was obtained as to who the men were who attempted the robbery.

ANOTHER NEW DEVICE

Leo Thompson has added another new machine to his equipment at the Clanton Laundry. It is a steam heated apparatus used for quick drying of clothes that have been run in through the dry cleaning machines.

It carries a temperature of 160 degrees and is capable of drying 25 suits of clothing in thirty minutes.

VOTE STRAIGHT SAYS REYNOLDS

Probate Judge Takes A Parting Crack At Tom Heflin

Editor Union-Banner:

The Republican State convention held in Birmingham, August 21, 1930, did not put out a state ticket, and make no recommendation or suggestion as to how Republicans should vote this year. I was in favor then of the Convention putting out a full state ticket and I made a speech urging the Convention to put out a full State ticket. I offered a resolution urging our party to nominate a full State ticket and this was voted down, and after my party acted upon this matter I have had nothing further to say upon the subject. I have been urged by the press of the State to make a public statement and give my views on this campaign, this I have refused to do, and I am going to do as I have always done, stand by my party. If I had not been attacked by Senator Heflin and Mr. Horace Wilkerson over the radio, I would not have had a word to say in this campaign. But I have always tried to defend myself when I have been misrepresented.

Senator Heflin said here last Saturday that I had been hobnobbing with Senator Bankhead. This is like many other statements he makes from the stump, is absolutely false. I have not seen Senator Bankhead since this campaign started, neither have I in any way communicated with him or heard him directly. I am not going to vote for Senator Heflin. I made this plain at our state Convention. I have known Senator Heflin in public life for thirty-five years and he has abused the Republican party and struck it below the belt more often than any other man in Alabama.

I was in the Legislature with Senator Heflin over thirty-five years ago, and he tried then to legislate Republicans out of office in this county, who had been elected by the people and I remember him making the statement that it wasn't necessary for any charge to be filed against the Republicans to legislate them out of office, but the only question necessary to be asked was, whether they were Democrats or Republicans, and stated then that the offices of this State belonged to the Democrats and that they were entitled to them regardless of everything. He was willing then to legislate our people out of office without an indictment, trial or charge of any kind, and he has said in the courthouse at Clanton in a public speech that he could tell when he got within a mile of a Republican County, because he could smell the negro so well, and I am sure that many of you can recall him making the statement that he could blow more brains out of his nose than the average white Republican had in his head. I do not think I need to say more why t true Republican of Chilton County should not vote for Heflin, because I can sincerely state that he has been the strongest enemy of the Republican party in Alabama for the past thirty years, and now he does not state that he is lining up with the Republican party, but continues to state that he is true Democrat and is proposing to reorganize the Democratic party, and no where has he ever stated in the slightest that I ever head or seen in print that in any way whatever has offered to help our party.

If I had been for Senator Heflin I could not have supported him after hearing the statement he made last Saturday in a public address in the Courthouse that he was commissioned by God to make this fight.

Now if Senator Heflin is willing to give me a fair chance, I challenge him to a joint discussion in this county at any time and place that suits him between now and the election, with an equal division of time and if he cannot come then I will be glad to have a joint discussion with Mr. Horace Wilkerson, whom I understand has attacked me over the radio without an opportunity to reply.

I want to make my position clear in this matter, and on November 4, I am going to the polls and I am going to make my cross under the elephant, voting for the full Republican ticket, and every nominee thereon, as I have been doing for the past forty-two years, and my advice and my earnest desire is that every true Republican in this county will vote the straight ticket, and that we will not have any splits among our party and in this I might state that by the expression I have heard every Republican county official in our county, except two, are going to do likewise, and as to these two I do not know, but have not heard them express themselves.—Yours very truly, L. H. Reynolds.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

O'NEAL WARNS FARMERS NOT TO DUMP COTTON

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 27.—Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, today advised Alabama farmers not to dump their cotton but to pool it with the Alabama Farm Bureau Association and in so doing join partnership with the government in solving the agricultural problems of the South.

He said that farmers can stabilize the price of cotton by pooling it drawing 90 per cent of the market value and holding it for better prices. He predicted that better prices will follow if farmers will only handle their cotton through their co-operative cotton association which has the backing and suport of the government.

"Are we cotton farmers going to dump our cotton at bankruptcy prices 1927 sold at the price of 19 and one-he asked. "Do you realize the great government of the United States has offered to go in partnership with us through our organizations to help solve the problem of marketing cotton? The American Cotton Association is a partner, has been set up with the approval of the Farm Board.

"The farm board came forward last October to help, through organization, market our cotton. We got 15.64 cents for cotton when hundreds of farmers and others in the state of Alabama and the South were selling cotton at $10.00 to $15.00 per bale less. If all Alabama cotton growers had taken advantage of this action we would have saved about $10,000,000.00.

"After all this and the fact that our Association is at the present advancing 90 per cent of the value of the cotton, are we farmers going to dump our cotton or are we going to sell it in an orderly manner at a fair price? The Co-operative Sales Agency of the American Cotton growers is not selling the members cotton. They are not forcing the cotton trade to take the cotton at any price. They are trying to help the cotton farmer save himself. Aren't you willing to be saved?

Advanced reasons why he believes farmers will get better prices pooling their cotton and not selling at present low prices, Mr. O'Neal said:

"I wish to recall to your mind what happened in 1926 with the largest american crop ever produced, 19,137,000 bales. The average price received by farmers for this crop was 12 and one-half cents middling hasis." He also gave figures showing that during 1924-25-26 that 50,-750,000 bales were produced and that the world absorbed this cotton in a three year period, leaving a surplus of only 83,000 bales. "Please recall," he said, that the crop of half cents per pound. Don't you think this is a good reason for your careful thought? We have not got a large cotton crop."

President O'Neal not only advised co-operative marketing of cotton but he declared that it is important that farmers grow better quality and longer staple cotton. He presented facts showing that at present prices Alabama farmers are this year losing between $12,000,000 and $15,-000,000 because of short staple. He said that mills do not want the short cotton and that the farmers are paying the penalty for growing short staple. He advised farmers to follow the advice of their county agent in all their farming operations.

FARMERS POOLING MORE COTTON THAN EVER

Alabama farmers are pooling more cotton this year with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association than ever before, according to statistics released yesterday afternoon by Edward A. O'Neal, president, and Allen Northington, general manager.

To date this year the association has received 121,000 bales compared with 37,460 bales on the same date last year when the association received 161,444 bales before the close of the season. These figures show that farmers have pooled 3.25 times as much cotton as they had pooled on the same date last year.

During the past 25 days of October the association has received 61,000 bales which si an average of about 2,500 bales per day, including Sundays, or an average of about 2,900 bales per day excluding Sundays.

These same statistics show that many farmers continue to join the association daily. The total membership of the association at present is 28,250 with several hundred being added each week.

A report released to all fieldmen of the state cotton marketing associations by the American Cotton Co-operative Association, New Orleans, show that all cotton states of the South are this year pooling about three times as much cotton as they had pooled to the same date last year. On October 18, this year, all the states had pooled 1,069,284 bales compared with 300,364 bales on the same date last year. This same report shows that Texas farmers are leading those of all other states by pooling 408,843 bales. Georgia comes second with Alabama farmers taking third position.

FARM BOARD AIDING PECAN PRODUCERS

The Alabama Farm Bureau has been selected as headquarters of the Central Association Pecan Growers' Cooperative Association, a local association of the National Pecan Marketing Association through which the Fedral Farm Board is extending aid to pecan growers.

Harry Houghton is president of the local association and states that the Central Alabama Pecan Growers' Cooperative Association is the only pecan association in central Alabama that has the support of the Federal Farm Board, the Alabama Extension Service and the Farm Board.

It has also been announced that the local association has been authorized by the National Pecan Marketing Association to advance the growers the following prices when the pecans are received.

Eight cents per pound on all good grade seedings (except peewees) 10 cents on all good grade sub-standard varieties, and 15 cents per pound on all good grade standard varieties.

As soon as the pecans are graded a further advance will be made, based on their grade, which advance will amount to around 75 per cent of the loan value of the various grades as determined by the Federal Intermediate Credit Banks. Final settlement will be made to growers as promptly as possible after the closing out of the pool under which the pecans were delivered.

There are five pools in which growers may place their pecans. The first pool closes October 31, the second November 15, the third November 30, the fourth December 20, and the fifth March 1. All the pecans will be sold by the National Pecan Sales Agency, Jackson, Missisippi.

It will not cost the producers over one cent per pound to handle their pecans through the Central Alabama Pecan Growers' Association. This is made posisble through the cooperation of the Farm Bureau. Each county agent of the pecan producing counties has been sent a letter containing the following paragraph:

"Due to the fact that our tonnage this year for the Central Alabama local may not be so large as we may expect in other years, Mr. O'Neal has very generously offered the services of his state organization to aid us in every way possible in keeping down the overhead. We have assurances that this years overhead in our Central Alabama Association which includes receiving, processing, grading, packing, will not exceed one cent per pound. As You will readily see this is going to place us in a very fine light of comparison with other associations and with the prices just outlined to you, we should go over in fine style this year."

The Central Alabama Pecan Association is the outgrowth of many conferences by farm board leaders, extension service specialists, farm bureau officials and pecan growers to determine the best methods for helping pecan producers. Farm Board representatives spent many days in Alabama assisting in setting up the local association.

G. W. WEAVER
Republican Nominee for STATE SENATE

To the Voters of Chilton County:

As a candidate for the State Senate, and your County being one the counties comprising the Fifteenth Sanatorial District, I feel that I should give an expression, before soliciting your suffrage as to what my position will be on all matters of local and State concern.

1. I shall support such measures as will, in my judgment, promote the general good interest of the State and its people.

2. I will co-operate with the Representative of your County in getting such legislation as the County demands.

3. I am opposed to any increase in taxes; believing that the revenue of the State at this time is ample to, if frugally administered, carry on a progressive administration for the next four years.

4. There is much to be done to create a greater efficency in the school system of the State. And to provide a more adequate and better means of transportation to the rural schools, and whatever legislation appropriate to this need I shall advocate and support. Too much can not be done to promote the progress of education, and it will be my purpose to support such measures as will foster education.

5. I advocate the election by the people of all major offices, including the County Superintendent of Education; believing that the people are better qualified to select their officials than any power of appointment. Also to abolish the absentee ballot law.

6. I stand for such progressive legislation as will promote the farming industry.

7. I am an advocate of good roads.

8. I will be fair to both labor and capital, and support such legislation as will promote the speedy development of the State's natural resources.

Upon these expressed policies I solicit your vote and influence.

SIMON PETER, FROM WEAKNESS TO STRENGTH

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:27-29; Luke 22:31-34; John 18:25-27; 21:15-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marveled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Weak Man Becomes Strong.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Weak Man Becomes Strong.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How a Weak Man Became Strong.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Christ Gives Strength.

I. Peter Confessing Christ (Mark 8:27-29).

The time was near at hand when Christ should make the supreme offering of himself for sins on the cross. Knowing the tragic experience through which the disciples would pass because of it, he sought to prepare them for it by leading them into the apprehension of the cardinal doctrines of the Christian faith such as: the integrity of his person, atoning death, resurrection, and second coming.

Peter's confession was provoked by two questions of Jesus.

1. "Whom do men say that I am?"

Opinions differed, but all recognized him to be a teacher or a prophet with more than human authority and power.

2. "Whom say ye that I am?"

Jesus persistently claimed to be the very Son of God. He would have his disciples to possess a personal and experiential knowledge of himself as to being God manifest in the flesh.

II. Christ Warning Peter (Luke 22:31-34).

1. He told him of Satan's desire concerning him (v. 31). Satan is constantly striving to destroy men.

2. Christ's prayer for Peter (v 32). He prayed that Peter's faith fail not, not that he should escape the siftings.

3. Peter's confidence (v. 33). His fall began when he refused to listen to Christ's words about the cross. Believers begin to weaken when they no longer desire to hear about Christ crucified.

4. Denial announced (v. 34). This was to take place three times before the crowing of the cock.

III. Peter Denying His Lord (John 18:25, 27).

1. Before the servant maid (vv. 15-18).

Peter blundered in attempting to follow Jesus at this time (John 13:36). Presumptuous boldness frequently leads into embarrassing positions. Under the taunt of the Jewish maid he openly denied the Lord.

2. Before the servants and officers (v. 25).

Peter was now warming himself at the enemy's fire. When questioned, he denied his relation to the Lord. Separation from everything that is opposed to the Lord is necessary in order to have a clear testimony (II Cor. 6:14-18).

3. Before the kinsman of Malchus (v. 26).

This man had seen Peter with Jesus in Gethsemane (v. 10) when Peter rashly cut off the ear of Malchus. He put the question straight to Peter. "Did I not see thee in the garden with him?" At the utterance of the third denial, the cock crew, reminding Peter of Christ's warning (Mark 14:72).

IV. Peter's Restoration (John 21:15-17).

Peter had thrice denied his Lord. Therefore, before his reinstatement in the Lord's service he must thrice confess his love for Jesus. In this reinstatement and commission of Peter is set forth the motive and nature of the service which has Christ's approval in all times. Love for Christ, not primarily love for the sheep, proves the genuine shepherd.

1. "Feed my lambs."

The word "feed" as well as "lambs" signifies that the work here enjoined is that of nurturing babes in Christ.

2. "Feed my sheep."

The word here means to feed, guide, correct, and lead the maturer classes of Christians. It carries with it not alone responsibility of feeding, but corrective discipline. Failure will inevitably follow if this be attempted without love.

3. "Feed my sheep."

This doubtless relates to the care of aged Christians. The word "feed" returns somewhat to the meaning as in the first instance where he says "Feed my lambs," so that the minister's responsibility to care for the aged is equivalent to that of the young. Peter was to express devotion to Christ by a martyr's death.

ITILIAN RYE GRASS WILL FRESHEN YOUR LAWN

Auburn, Ala., Oct. 27.—Those who want a green lawn this winter should sow Italian rye grass now, says John W. Hyde, associate professor of landscape architecture of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The grass may be sowed on bermuda sod or on the bare ground, he said. In some cases, where the sod is heavy, Prof. Hyde believes, it might be best not to sow the grass on bermuda, since it sometimes hinders the growth of the bermuda.

Italian rye grass is an annual and is admirably adapted to freshening up the lawn during winter, he said. English rye grass is a perennial and is not as good for sowing on bermuda as the Italian rye grass, since it will crowd on the bermuda.

"Large areas should be harrowed before sowing with a disk harrow." he said. "Smaller areas can be worked with an iron garden rake.

It is important to have the ground well scratched before sowing.

"The seed should be sowed broadcast at the rate of 1 pound to 200 square feet of space," he continued. "If the ground is dry a light watering after sowing is recommended and the gass should be watered if the weather continued dry."

Prof. Hyde said that it is easy to have a nice lawn of permanent mixtures anywhere in Alabama. Bermuda is considered the standard basis for lawn mixtures in Alabama, but the Auburn professors prefer the Kentucky blue grass to bermuda for North Alabama.

COTTON

(By Dorthy Sessions)

Cotton originated in India about 600 years before the Christian Era. It was used for clothing in the early days of human history, but its use and introduction into Europe was very slow, although it reached Europe in the early part of the 16th century. It was not until 1621 that it was introduced into the United States.

The cotton plant is a perennial plant, but on account of the frost in the United States it is treated as an annual plant. The plant is a small bushy shrub and grows from four to six feet in height. The leaves of the plant vary in shape on different stems. The flowers are somewhat like a hollyhock, with five white or yellowish petals. The blossoms stay a day or so and drop off laving a small pod which increases and finally bursts in sections leaving the cotton disclosed.

Cotton thrives best in warm humid atmosphere, with loamy and sandy soil. It grows best in a moist even warm breeze and a rich soil.

Cotton is planted in March or April. The ground must be carefulily prepared, after which the seeds are sown in rows about four feet apart. When the seeds have sprouted the chopping process begins and the plants are left about 12 inches apart. During June and July the plant will grow rapidly and the blossoms appear and then the bolls. They mature in August. Each field is gone over about three times. After the cotton is picked the next process is to remove the seeds from the lint. This is called ginning. After it is ginned it is compressed into bales.

Cotton is graded ranging from fair to middling and then to ordinary. Fair is the highest and ordinary is the lowest. Cotton is then sold to spinning mills or to regular cotton merchants. It is then made into the cloth which requiires a long process.

Cotton is non-conductive of heat and is of a short fiber. It is grown in the United States, India, Egypt, Russia, China and certain South American countries.

There are five kinds of cotton; the Sea Island, which is the finest, upland which is known throughout the South; Egyptian, South American, and East Indian.

Our Senior One Home Economics Class wishes to encourage every one to wear more cotton clothes. Every one knows the prices of cotton and every individual can help by buying cotton garments when possible.

Miss Blue Bonnett a Distinct Success
(By Esther Lee Dennis)

Miss Blue Bonnet, one of Wayne P. Sewell's musical comidies, was presented Friday night, October 24, at the Chilton County High School Auditorium. It was one of the most interesting and most successful plays ever given at the school for some time.

The cast as a whole, was one of the best ever selected. Dr. Evans, (Mr. Horton Walker) was always trying to fix things for the family, but always seemed to make them worse. Mrs. Evans, Mrs. Burton Higgins, his wife, was forever and eternally trying to get Magnolia, her daughter, (Margaret Kendrick) a wonderful husband. Other "old maids" in the cast hunting a husband were, Minerva, (Miss Ruth Sessions) although practically deaf, usually caught most of the gossip of the town, and always had her eyes wide open. Hickory Stout, (Mr. J. B. Varnell) played his part 100 per cent. Janice Danforth was Blue Bonnet and the heroine, while Burton Hills (Mr. Broadus Connatser) was the hero. Others taking part in the play were as follows: Mrs. W. M. Greene, Miss Josephine Martin, Miss Edna Coefield, Miss Gladys Williams and Vivian Gray, (two former graduates of the class of 30) John Ponder Lawrence and Clark Polk. The chorus girls played their parts most beatifully. Most excellent readings were rendered by little Misses Dorthy Higgins and Mary Frances Atkinson. Their numbers came in between acts.

We the entire school wish to thank the cast and those who helped to make our play a success. We especially want to thank the business men and merchants of Clanton who were so generous in giving us advertisements which were printed on our programs.

C. C. H. S. Defeats Montevallo
(By Morgan Reynolds)

The Chilton County High School team defeated Montevallo High in a good football game last Friday, the final score was 12 to 6. Harvey Melton carried the ball over the goal line both times, in the first and second quarters. Chilton hit the line so hard that Montevallo line gave way and Chilton went on through for their touchdowns. The Montevallo boys made their touchdown in the third quarter by short runs and forward passes. Neither team kicked goal. Chilton was on Montevallo one-yard line but failed to buck it over so the ball went to Montevallo.

IGNORANCE DROPS AGAINST HEALTH UNIT

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to the Health Unit I hear so much about.

I see this is endorsed by all the doctors in the county; also by the Chilton County Missionary Baptist Association.

We can plainly see why all the doctors endorse this health unit. They expect to reap a harvest after awhile, when it gets in full swing. But I do not understand why the Chilton County Missionary Baptist Association should step out in politics. These two things alone is enough to defeat the Health Unit.

I want to tell you now that religion and politics make a bad mixture. It is just about like whiskey and gasoline; it brings home trouble. I feel just like the Health Unit will bring serious trouble to our schools and to our homes of the county.

They tell you it will not raise your taxes. This will be run by tax money, and in the next year or two you will see a 3 or 4 mill tax placed on the tax payers of this county to keep the health unit going. If these people will deceive you once, they will deceive you again.

I can remember when they told us if we would vote on a 3 mill tax that they would give us free schools in Chilton County. We did it; and what was the results? Our schools cost more than ever before. Then what? They wanted another 3 mill district tax, and said again they would give us free schools. Then what happened? Our incidentals fees went to $10.00 a scholar for each term. This was $7.00 more than ever before. Now will the good people of this county let this bunch pull the wool over their eyes any longer. I don't believe you will. So go to the polls on November 4th and take all your friend voters, and vote against the so called Health Unit.

Now fathers and mothers, you are the ones to decide this question. You are the ones that it will effect most. This doctor will go to all the schools and some of the homes and plan a lot of work for the other doctors to do; and will tell you you will have to have John's teeth filled and Sally will have to have her tonsils removed. So all this will mean more money, and more trouble. This health doctor will not give any medicine at all. he only advises and blazes out the way for the other doctors. So remember this on November 4th.—J. N. Scott.

NEEDS FOR RED CROSS SERVICE ON INCREASE, SAYS CHAIRMAN PAYNE

Disaster Relief and Service to War Veterans Make Heavy Demands—First Aid on Highways New Plan.

Demands upon the public services that the American Red Cross is organized to give are increasingly heavy, and will continue to be so in the future, John Barton Payne, chairman, has announced.

The two major services of the society—service to war veterans and their dependents, and relief in disasters—show each year a greater number of persons helped by the Red Cross.

Pension legislation passed recently for World War Veterans, and increased allotments to all Spanish-American War Veterans, have given to Chapters and the national society many thousands of additional cases to handle, Judge Payne said.

In the past year help was given in 108 disasters. Ninety of these were in the United States, twelve in foreign possessions and six were in foreign countries.

Health activities of the Red Cross also are being extended, especially in the rural communities where all health authorities agree the greatest need exists. Red Cross, with 794 nurses in its employ, is the greatest employer of public health nurses in rural areas in the United States.

In its campaign against accidental deaths, begun twenty years ago with its life saving and first aid programs, the Red Cross now has adopted an additional program—that of combating the huge toll of life from automobile accidents on the highways.

Expenditures of the Red Cross in the past year were $4,254,796.34, of which $1,208,151.09 was spent in disaster relief, the chairman pointed out.

"The Red Cross depends upon the public for its support, through their memberships enrolled once each year in the period from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day," Judge Payne said.

"We do not receive any support from the Government, or through other taxation, although as the President of the United States is president of the society, and one-third of its governing members are representatives of U. S Departments, it ranks as a semi-governmental agency.

"By joining as a member, in the local Red Cross Chapter, once each year, during the annual Roll Call, every citizen will have a part in carrying on this great humanitarian task."

Motor Injuries Treated By Red Cross First Aid

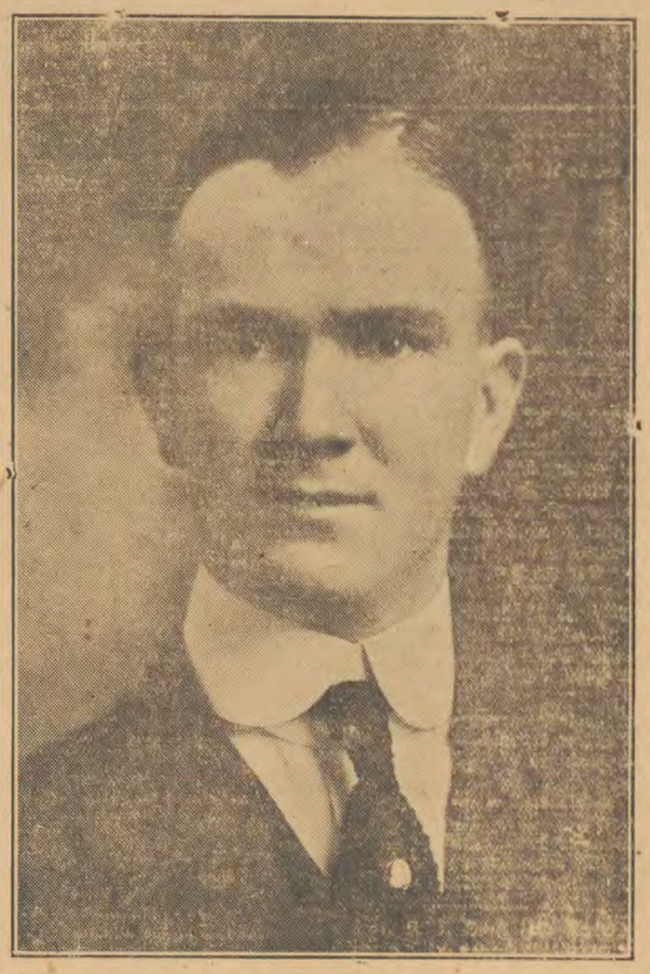
In line with its work for the preservation of life and prevention of accidental death, the American Red Cross has adopted a new program of emergency first aid stations on the highways of the nation, where victims of automobile injuries will be helped.

In the last year 31,000 persons were killed as the result of automobile accidents and more than 1,000,000 were injured. As its contribution to the nation wide safety campaigns of other organizations, the Red Cross will aid through the emergency stations. A number already are in operation by Chapters on such important traffic arteries as the Westchester County, N. Y., park system, the Valley Forge and Gettysburg highways in Pennsylvania and the White Horse Pike in New Jersey, connecting with Atlantic City.

Saving Mothers and Babies Is Important Red Cross Task

Saving mothers' lives and better babies were important features during the past year of the Public Health Nursing Service of the American Red Cross. About four-fifths of the 791 nurses in the Red Cross work made more than 100,000 prenatal and maternal visits, in addition to assisting doctors in the examination of 1,309,409 school children.

Statistics reveal that the lives of two out of three American women who die in maternity cases could be saved if they received proper medical and nursing care. As more than 15,000 women die in the United States each year from various diseases of the maternal state, this means that more than 10,000 of these deaths are preventable.



Comfort Kits Sent 40,000 Service Men by Red Cross

Gay patterned cretonne bags, or comfort kits, containing articles useful and amusing, are sent by the Red Cross to 40,000 soldiers, sailors and Marines, on foreign service, as Christmas remembrances.

The little gift bags are donated and packed by women in Red Cross Chapters all over the country. They are despatched by Army transport in the early autumn in order to reach the foreign ports and posts of the U. S. services in time to be hung on the Christmas trees. Giving the remembrances from home is the outgrowth of a plan adopted by the Red Cross prior to the World War when so many National Guard regiments were on the Mexican border.

Hon. Lamar Jeffers was in Clanton Tuesday.

VOTE FOR

E. D. BANKS

FOR CONGRESS

To the Voters of Chilton County:

I am a candidate for Congress from the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama on the Jeffersonian Democratic ticket. Owing to the limited time in which I had to make the race, I find that it will be impossible for me to see each individual voter personally before election day. Therefore, I am taking this opportunity to solicit the support of every white voter in Chilton County and the other counties of the Fourth District.

I am a Democrat. I voted the Democratic ticket prior to 1928. But when the nominee of the Houston Convention repudiated the party platform and disregarded the precedents and principles of the Democratic party, I refused to follow such leadership. As Chairman of the Anti-Smith Organization in Calhoun County, I fought the election of Alfred E. Smith, and with the aid and assistance of liberty-loving men and women we carried the county against Smith by a majority of approximately five hundred votes.

My opponent, elected chiefly by the prohibition and labor vote of this District, deserted his friends and the cause they championed in 1928, and now stands aligned with the friends of unrestricted immigration and the destruction of the Eighteenth Amendment. Despite his desertion of 1928, and the fight he now wages, he comes again, seeking re-election, without any record of achievement, telling the people "now is the time to vote for the party and not for the man."

This District is entitled to, and has a right, to demand far more than it has received during the past ten years. What has my opponent accomplished for the Fourth District? Where is the Veteran's Hospital, which was promised this District, and which it should have had? What has any county in this District received from the Federal Government through his assistance? Ten years of representation should assuredly be crowned with some record of achievement.

I pledge to the voters of the Fourth District that when I go to Washington as their representative, I will represent all the people regardless of party alignment, and that it will be my pleasure to work as actively for all the counties in the District as I will for my own.

ANSWERING QUESTIONS OF MR. AVERY ON HEALTH UNIT

In another column our readers will find an article from Mr. S. F. Avery, in which he expresses opposition to the Health Unit, and asks a number of questions about same.

For the benefit of Mr. Avery, and any others who may be interested in this matter, we give herewith our answers and explanation of the questions which Mr. Avery raises:

First he asks: "Why was this thing brought up at the last minute? Were the ones that got it up afraid to give the people time to talk about it?"

We will say in reply to this question that Mr. Avery or anyone else is plum silly to ask such a question or make such inference. Anybody knows that our County Commissioners are not trying to put this question over the people without giving them a chance to consider it and to act on it. If they had been of such a notion, they would have exercised their right under the law and put on the Health Unit without asking anybody about it. They could have done it that way, and the people of the county would not have had the chance to say a word about it.

Next, Mr. Avery says: "We are told it will not raise our taxes. It may not this year or next; but any thinking man will know in the end our taxes will have to be raised."

Just before making these statements about raising our taxes Mr. Avery says: "How can I vote for it when I know nothing about it?" Get this straight, now. Mr. Avery says he knows nothing about it, yet in the very next word he declares it will raise our taxes.

The truth of the matter is that the putting on of the Health Unit will not raise the taxes of the citizens of Chilton County one penny. There is a surplus of money in the treasury of Chilton County out of which the county's appropriation for the Health Unit would be made. The taxable wealth of Chilton County guarantees that as long as our county's business is handled in the way it has been handled in the past few years, there will continue to be a surplus every year over and above the operating expenses. If Mr. Avery is able to figure just a little bit, he can certainly see that is a fact.

Chilton County is able to provide the Health Unit for its people out of the present tax budget, without raising the taxes one penny. The only ones who are making such statements as Mr. Avery makes are those who, like himself, do not know anything about the question.

Next Mr. Avery says: "This thing should have been brought up long ago, if it is a good thing, and give us an example of other counties that have the Health Unit as to how much better off now than they were before they got the Health Unit."

If Mr. Avery does not know the question of a Health Unit in Chilton County has been brought up long ago, he is more ignorant than he admits in his letter. This question has been before the people of this county for many years. It has been discussed thoroughly both from the platform and through the press.

As to other counties which have the Health Unit, let us say to Mr. Avery that there are 53 counties in Alabama that have the Health Unit. Some of them have had it for many years. There is not a single one of them that has ever discontinued the health service after they once put it on. Is that any sign that the Health Unit is a good thing? It is not reasonable to suppose that if the Health Unit had any chance of being bad or worthless, some one of those counties would have found it out and discontinued to appropriate its money for that purpose?

Now, Mr. Avery, you need not have any fears about this thing being brought up late so the people would not have a chance to properly consider it. That is a silly statement for you to make, in view of the fact that our people are being asked to vote on it instead of having it put on by action of the Commissioners without referring it to the people.

On the whole, the letter of Mr. Avery proves the ignorance which he admits about the question of a Health Unit. He certainly knows nothing about it, and it looks to us like he has not tried to find out anything about it. In fact, it is the kind of people like Mr. Avery who are stumbling blocks to progress of every kind. If he would see anything good about the Health Unit, he doubtless would be unwilling to admit it. His idea of greatness and prominence is to be against things.

We do not know how much Mr. Avery is worth, but we do not find his name on the tax books of Chilton County. Therefore, we do not see why he should be personally alarmed about the probability of a tax raise, especially when no such thing is even possible. It is no disgrace for a man to be possessed of little of this world's goods. Certainly the name on the tax books does not make the man. But it is a pity for men who admit that they know nothing about such a proposition as the Health Unit to put themselves into prominence about it and try to lead the voters one way or the other when they do not themselves know what is the proper thing to do.

PRESERVE AMERICAN STANDARDS

(By George B. Lockwood)

President Hoover's speech at Cleveland impressed the country with the thought that the chief executive has a strong grasp of the situation and that his confident predictions of national recovery from the present depression are fully justified.

Especially praiseworthy was his reply to the statement of a Minneapolis banker, who declared that the standard of living in the United States is too high, and that it must be reduced to the world level through the razing of our tariff and immigration laws.

This declaration of the Minneapolis banker tracked the statement of Owen D. Young, in his Los Aigeles speech some months ago, to the effect that the American people must either sink to the economic level of the rest of the world or pull the rest of the world up to our level.

The best answer to that false assuption was made by President Coolidge, who called attention to the fact that for many years we had maintain a standard of wages and living higher than that of the rest of the world, and he saw no reason why what had been done in the past could not be done in the future.

It is a part of the program of internationalized finance and industry in the United States to level our economic conditions to that of the rest of the world as a means of gaining immediate profits. Such an effort would bring our social and political structure under a strain it might not be able to resist.

The greatest achievement this nation has to its credit is not only that it has become the richest nation in the world, but that in America wealth is more widely diffused than in any other country of this or any other time. The surrender of that condition would be the biggest blow ever struck at the cause of social justice, because if we can maintain this example, there is some hope that the rest of the world may get over the idea that the object to be attained in production is a cheapness secured through the sacrifice of the worker.

The only solution of the problem created by mass production is the creation of adequate mass consumption through heightened standards of living for the masses. In this machine age no nation can remain prosperous which undertakes to satisfy only the demand for the necessities of life. The taste and demand for comforts and luxuries must be created in order that increased production may be absorbed. The alternative is industrial stagnation and unemployment.

Our tariff and immigration laws are measures of economic defense against the assault of the European economic system, based on the old capitalistic theory against which Marxism rose in protest, and has now carried almost every European nation into state socialism or dictatorship. These defenses should be strengthened, not weakened.

There is depression and unemployment in the United States today largely because of the reactions upon us of the European economic system. If Europe were in position today to furnish per capita consumption of commodities equal to that prevailing in the United States, there would be no problem of over-production, because all that the world produces would be consumed.

During the World War, and since, export of American capital has involved us too closely in the European economic system. As a result our domestic condition reflects a world depression produced by inability of poverty stricken peoples to consume. They will not be able to absorb the products of the machine age until their standards of life, and thus their consuming capacity, have been increased. But as President Hoover points out, our foreign commerce is less than ten per cent of our total commerce. Our exports aggregate only five per cent of our total output. Except for the fact that we have exported many billions of dollars in American capital to Europe we would not now be suffering the repercussion from European depression.

President Hoover correctly said that we have created a new and unique economic system in the United States. We can preserve it only by protecting it. It cannot stand up under the invasion of commodities produced under a system based on cheap labor and low consuming power. It cannot stand up under unlimited immigration from foreign lands.

It is therefore our duty not to weaken, but to strengthen our economic defense not primarily that capital may have profitable investment, but that labor may have general and remunerative employment, and that the farmer may have an outlet for his products which can maintain prices at a profitable level.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

The other day, according to the press dispatches, Henry Ford, visiting in England where he now has extensive manufacturing interests, called on Premier Ramsay McDonald. Just what they talked about the correspondents do not state, but it might be a good guess that they said something about mass production, a subject with which Mr. Ford has had some experience. At any rate a short time afterward Premier Mac Donald addressed the pupils of the North London Dame School and is credited with having made some statements which are worth repeating and worth remembering.

The Prime Minister warned his hearers against the growing disposition to "mass production" of enjoyment and other intangible things of life, saying in part: "There is a growing disposition against being alone. Stimulus is being sought in crowds. There is not only mass production in chairs and tables; we appear to be going in for mass production also in enjoyment. That is false and wrong.

"The great test in education is whether it enables you to sit down by the fireside alone for a couple of hours and then rise with the sense of a companionship that one has found in himself, or herself."

Then Mr. MacDonald declared that only the people who are capable of retiring within themselves on occasion can nourish the pioneer spirit and be prepared to go out into the world and fight their battles alone if need be.

Mr. MacDonald is reputed to be a socialist, but this is strange socialist dictrine, emphasing as it does the development of individuality and of the pioneer spirit. It is in fact good American doctrine, more so indeed than some economic theories which seem to be approved by Mr. Ford.

We have a great deal of mass production in enjoyment in America. Some of it of course is necessary. The theatre, the concert and the football game, all of which have their legitimate place in our life, would be impossible otherwise. But a little occasional solitude is a good thing, too, to give one a chance to find companionship within himself. The man who can find no enjoyment in his own company but must get it in the jostling crowd of "whoopee experts," is lacking in character, in imagination or in education. He has none of the pioneer spirit and will be greatly handicapped in the race of life, if he ever is confronted with a situation where he must fight his battles alone, or do his own thinking.

Certainly mass production of enjoyment and of thinking has little in common with the pioneer spirit. America was settled and developed by the men and women who were not afraid to go into the wilderness of trees and swamp, or into the wilderness of unexplored ventures. Our great leaders, in the political field and in other fields of progress as well, have been the men who have not been afraid to go ahead "on their own," who have needed no system of paternalism or socialism to protect them at the expense of their individuality. They have been the men who were not afraid on occasion to be alone, to stand alone and to think alone, who have been able to get a part of their enjoyment within themselves. Man is of course a social being and should remain so, but if all of his achievement, materialistic and intellectual alike, is to be turned out in mass production, his progress will be temporary and unheroic to say the least.

Last year there was an 11 per cent decrease in deaths among children of school age, due mainly to the improvement and extension of safety education. Accident prevention and health promotion work has become a basic factor in the curricula of modern schools, and is achieving remarkable results.

Offsetting these favorable conditions, is the vast increase in deaths due to the automobile. It is forecast that a new high record of 36,000 will be established this year. However, hope is found in the trend toward modernization of traffic laws throughout the nation and the spread of laws requiring strict examination of applicants for drivers' licenses.

CONSIDER THE HEALTH UNIT WITH REASON

We urge the voters of Chilton County to use their soundest judgment and very best reason in considering the matter of the County Health Unit, upon which you are called to vote next Tuesday. It is a question that is vastly more important to the people of our county than the question of who will be elected to some office.

We hear that some persons, who are obviously uninformed about what the Health Unit is and what it will do, are attempting to spread arguments of ignorance and superstition against the Health Unit. They say that people would be required under the Health Unit to build cement pens for their hogs, concrete stalls for their cows, and various other things which are not true. Such talk is unreasonable and is made without any knowledge of what the work of the Health Unit is for.

The Health Unit is to deal with matters of public health, and not matters of private or personal conduct. If a man has a problem of sanitation at his place that threatens the health of his family and the health of others in his community, naturally such a condition ought to be corrected. And a man who would not want to correct such a thing is a poor citizen. It is to help and advise people in such cases as that that the Health Unit would function. And such a function is badly needed, because there are many instances where the health of families and communities is threatened and the people who are endangered have no knowledge of the existence of such dangers. The first thing they will know about it is when somebody gets sick.

Any citizen who has a contagious or communicable disease in his family certainly does not want it to spread to other people in his community. It is the purpose of the Health Unit to aid in keeping such diseases from spreading.

The Health Unit is not a thing that forces people to do what they are not willing and able to do. It is a thing that helps them to have better health, and certainly every sensible citizen wants that.

We urge our people to use reason and common sense in considering this great question. Do not let yourselves be led by mere superstition and ignorance.

Kindly remember this one fact as you think about a Health Unit for Chilton County: There are 53 counties of Alabama that have had the Health Unit in operation in the past. Some of them for many years; and not a single one of them has ever discontinued the work since it was started. Now, don't you think it reasonable to suppose that if the Health Unit had any chance to be bad and worthless, that some one of those 53 counties would have already found it out and would discontinue it.

There is one thing sure and certain. If Chilton County tries the thing for a year, or two years, or any length of time, and it proves to be the bad thing that some claim it is, we can stop it any time, simply by withholding the necessary appropriation.

ADMIRE HOOVER'S ACTION

Medical men and health authorities are commending President Hoover for his candor in admitting to the press, and thus to the whole world that his son is under treatment for tuberculosis.

The sympathy of the American people goes to President Hoover and his family. According to newspaper accounts, Herbert Hoover, Jr., who resides in California and is a radio engineer, went to his father's Rapidan camp in the Virginia hills a few weeks ago feeling quite rundown. At first it was thought that he was suffering from some intestinal trouble, but the White House physician, suspecting the nature of the ailment, called some eminent specialists into consultation. After a very careful examination it was definitely determined that the patient has an early infecion of tuberculosis infection in a small area of the chest.

There is nothing dishonorable or immorial about tuberculosis. In the past it has been difficult to get those afflicted with the disease, or their relatives or inmates, to acknowledge the fact. Many lives have been lost which might have been saved, had frank recognition been made in the early stages and remedial measures undertaken.

One of the greatest obstacles that have stood in the way of the board of health and other health workers in their efforts to deal with tuberculosis, has been the inability to locate cases. No drastic isolation measures have been undertaken but health officers have sought to render aid and prevent contagion by the aid of visiting nurses and medical advice.

Common sense has induced Mr. Hoover and his parents to recognize and candidly admit the trouble and then take the right measures to cure. This candor and good sense should be more common. That is why the President's action is of value for its example.

One of the most potent reasons for keeping tuberculosis secret and refusing to admit, even to one's own self, its presence is the economic need, the necessity for continuous daily labor for a livlihood. Another is fear, which leads the sufferer to ascribe his trouble to almost every other disease.

Tuberculosis has been and is being cured, especially when it is discovered in its early stages. Because Mr. Hoover's trouble has been discovered early, and because he is starting to fight it early, he undoubtedly will be on his feet soon. The common sense and candor of President Hoover may well be an example to all of us.

A lot of politicians would get on the band wagon if they were sure which it was, a sprinkling cart or a beer truck.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

I went to the State Fair at Montgomery last Saturday. When I told Maurice Lande I had to go to the Fair to take the children, he gave me a funny kind of grin. It was a mixture of a little bit of grin, a little bit of grunt, and a little bit of laugh. I guess it was what some folks call the horse laugh. Anyway, said he, they always lay it off on the children.

We enjoyed the Fair immensely, notwithstanding the fact that it was just another Fair. Nothing very different from all the Fairs I ever saw before. The attendance was very good, but it looked like the customers at the money-grabbing devices were not so numerous and free with their nickles and dimes as we have seen.

Mrs. Bruce was there with her Chilton County exhibit. It was very good, I thought. She was a little bit downhearted because she only got fourth prize. Well, I think she had an exhibit deserving of better rating, but she has gotten so many prizes heretofore, maybe the judges thought they had better give somebody else the first and second places this year just to keep up interest.

Another Chilton County exhibit that was most excellent was the one from Isabella community. I did not learn what award they received for their exhibit, but I am sure they deserved as good as any community exhibit in the whole show.

I am sorry to hear some of the talk that is being done against the County Health Unit, especially since some of it is so unreasonable, and shows so plainly that those who are doing that kind of talking do not really know what the Health Unit is for and what it will do.

I think if a man wants to eat and sleep with the hogs and cows, the Health Unit would not interfere with him. That is a privilege everyone has unto himself, though I would say it is a privilege very few folks would care to exercise. The Health Unit will not attempt to force folks to do what they are not able or willing to do, personally.

You never know what imminent danger one may be in. Imagine what a narrow escape I had one day this week when I passed Sie Hayes and Uncle Hugh Foshee on the street and greeted them with "Hello, Pollywogs." Well, I knew they were not Pollywogs, but I just wanted to have some fun, and believe me, they came very near getting my scalp.

Well Governor Graves disappointed lots of people in Chilton County again last Friday by not keeping his engagement to come here and speak on the Health Unit. Our Governor seems to be noted for making engagements and then failing to show up at the last minute.

The schools at Jemison and Maplesville were all keyed up in high with the anticipation of entertaining the Governor of our State, and you can imagine how they felt and looked when the party of visitors arrived and it was announced that the Governor was not present.

But so far as speaking on the Health Unit is concerned, that was taken care of in a most excellent manner. Governor Graves sent Hon. John S. Tilley to speak in his place, and I must say that the presentation of the subject of public health by Mr. Tilley was masterful. He is one of the best speakers in Alabama, and we deeply appreciate his visit to our county in support of this great public measure, the Health Unit.

I was delighted to hear Mr. Tilley make such pleasing comment on the schools of Chilton County. It was not mere flattery either. We have a good school system, and it is so recognized at the Capitol of our State. About all the bad things that we hear about Chilton County's schools are manufactured within our own county by people who have a grudge of some kind.

If you don't think we have good schools, just visit some of them and see what you see. Go to Jemison, for instance. That will open your eys when you think back a few years and compare the school of the present with what we had at Jemison then. Go to Isabella and Maplesville, and in fact, most any place in the county, and do the same thing.

What we need in Chilton County is to cut out our griping about our faults, and begin to pull together to correct them instead of magnifying them. Our schools are not perfect. In fact they are not nearly as good as we are able to have if we only let ourselves provide for them as this county is amply able to do.

If we would become as much interested in schools, public health, farm progress, home economics, etc., as we are about the foolishness of politics and office-holders, we could step to the head of the class of Alabama counties before you know it.

Let me illustrate what I mean by citing an instance. Take the crowd that swarmed here last Saturday to hear Tom Heflin. That is all right, and I am not criticizing those people nor Mr. Heflin. I have no fight to make with them at all. But compare the interest in the Heflin campaign with the interest in the Health Unit campaign, and you can see where we are acting the fool.

You couldn't get such a crowd as Tom Heflin had out to hear about the Health Unit by any imaginable means. Yet, I say to you, the Health Unit in Chilton County is of more vital importance to our progress and welfare than Tom Heflin has ever been or ever will be. And that same statement holds good in comparison with any other candidate, as well as Mr. Heflin.

I hope you will vote for the Health Unit next Tuesday. I am honest when I say to you that I am firmly convinced that it is the most vital measure that has ever faced the people of our county.

Remember this: When we have tried it, if it does not prove worth having, we don't have to keep it. It will be up to our own county to say whether we like it or not. Let's prove the question for our own selves, and then we will know, even if we do not already know.

PROGRESS IN ACCIDENT PREVENTION

Accident prevention—both the "why" and the "how"—is becoming better understood. There is hardly a major industry in the United States which does not realize that accident prevention is on essential factor in industrial efficiency—as much an economic matter as a social matter. In contrast to this, a few decades ago most employers grudingly took steps to prevent accidents, believing that it was an expense that produced no return.

FIVE COUNTIES TO WAR ON RATS

Auburn, Ala., Oct. 27.—War will be waged on rats in five counties in Alabama from November 4 to 5th, when a campaign against the rodents is to be conducted by Roy Moore of the Bureau of Biological Survey, U. S. Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with county farm demonstration agents and local organizations.

This is announced by W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist of the Alabama Poytechnic Institute, who says that rats in the United States yearly destroyed the equivalent of the total labor of 200,000 men and cost the american people 200,000,000 annually. In addition, he said, where rats are present there is a potential danger of the bubonic plague, since rats carry the flea which transmits this disease to humans.

Mr. Ruffin hopes to extend the rat control campaign to other sections of Alabama later. Control work in five Alabama counties will be conducted not only for the benefit of those communities but as demonstrations of what can be done elsewhere, he added.

Rats will be killed with powdered red squill which will be mixed with food materials, such as hamburger, canned salmon or mackeral, and oatmeal or cornmeal, and distributed where the rats will eat. K-R-O squill will be mixed one part to 16 parts of food and other squill one part to 10 parts of food by weight. County agents will give definite information.

Enough poison for all the rats on the premises will be put out at the first baiting. Then for three weeks another poisoning will be given if necessary.

Counties where rats are to be fought are Elmore, Marshall, Lamar, Tuscaloosa and Franklin.

She Only Weighed Sixty-Two Pounds

"I have been in bad health for the past 15 years and for the past 8 years I haven't been able to do any house work. In fact, most of that time I was hardly able to stand on my feet.

MRS. THOMAS ESTES

"I gradually fell off in weight from 135 to 62 pounds and was nothing but skin and bones. I had no appetite and the little food I did eat just had to be forced down; then I would suffer agony from it with griping pains in the pit of my stomach, in my right side and in the small of my back. My heart would get so weak and would flutter so fast at times it would frighten me. I would have terrible smothering spells and would have to gasp for breath.

"My circulation was bad. I would feel chilly at times, and again great beads of sweat would stand out over my forehead, and I would get blind and dizzy too.

"Yes, I suffered from chronic constipation for years and also had a very bad inactive liver. Often I had billious attacks which would make me deathly ill. During the past five years I don't believe I had a single night of good restful sleep. My nervous system was surely a wreck. I couldn't stand for strangers or even my neighbors to come into my house. Nothing in the way of medicines or treatments ever did me any good. In fact, my condition was so bad none of my neighbors thought I would ever get well.

"Finally I decided to try Sargon. I've taken 15 bottles of Sargon and about 7 bottles of the Pills. Well, it just acted like a miracle in my case. I actually gained 63 pounds in weight. As I said before, I only weighed 62 pounds when I started on it and now I weigh 125 pounds and feel just like a woman made all over again. I have regained all my strength and energy and am doing all my house work. I can hardly wait from one meal to another.

"The Sargon Pills have cured me of bilious attacks and constipation. They are so wonderful I now feel like I would like to tell the whole world about Sargon and the Pills. My friends and neighbors are all talking about my wonderful recovery and I will praise Sargon as long as I live. I believe it has saved my life."

The above remarkable statement was made recently by Mrs. Thomas Estes, 68 Georgia Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

Sargon and Sargon Pills are sold by Alred Drug Company, Clanton; and Thorsby Drug Company, Thorsby, Alabama.

H. R. ODEN REPLIES TO INQUIRY OF JUDGE REYNOLDS

As printed in last week's Union-Banner, the following letter was sent to Mr. H. R. Oden by Judge L. H. Reynolds, under date of October 16, 1930:

Dear Sir:—I have been requested to write and ask you if you should be elected to represent the people of this county in the legislature, would you be in favor of legislating the commissioners that have been elected by the people out of office and have the Governor appoint a Board of Revenue in their stead?—Yours very truly, L. H. Reynolds. Judge of Probate.

Under date of October 21, 1930, Mr. Oden made the following reply to the inquiry of Judge Reynolds:

Dear Sir:—I have your letter of October 16th, and in reply to the question therein asked me, will state that I would not favor legislating the commissioners elected by the people out of office and have the Governor appoint a board of Revenue in their places.

Thanking you for the inquiry, I am. yours very truly, H. R. Oden.

P. S. Being in Montgomery for two days arranging exhibit for Isabella School is cause of delay in answering.—H. R. O.

The reply of Mr. Oden came to Judge Reynolds too late to get in the paper last week.

Mrs. W. J. Gentry of Cane Creek spent a few days in Montgomery last week with her son, Kelley Gentry. While there Mrs. Gentry also enjoyed a day at the Alabama State Fair.

Commissioners Court Submits Health Unit To Vote of People of the County

Voters Will Have An Opportunity To Accept or Reject It On November 4th. Separate Ballot Will Be Provided At General Election In County

The Commissioners Court passed an order submitting the question of an all time health officer to the voters of this county at the general election, November 4th, 1930.

This question has been considered by the people of this county for the past several years and the commissioners court of this county knows no better way to find out what the people want than to submit the matter to them. It will not cost the tax payers of this county anything as the officers of the general election can manage this election at the same time without any additional cost.

The court is anxious for every voter in the county to express themselves either for or against the county employing an all time health unit. An all time health unit will cost the tax payers of this county $5,000.00 per year.

I have received the following letter from Dr. J. N. Baker, State Health Officer, which explains itself:

My Dear Judge Reynolds:

Thinking you would like to know the exact amounts necessary for full time health service in your county, I am setting forth the following:

$5,000.00 is the amount asked from Chilton County. To this sum the State Department of Health will add $4,000.00. This total budget of $9,000.00 will be sufficient for the salary and traveling expenses of the health officer, nurse, and sanitary officer, the salary of the secretary and the upkeep of the office.

If I can give you further information, please advise me.

Very sincerely yours,
J. N. BAKER, M. D.,
State Health Officer.

This the 14th day of October, 1930.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

STANDARD OIL TO SELL TIRES

At Their Stations and Through Independent Dealers

Lousvillie, Ky., Oct. 27.—W. E. Smith, president of the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, announces that Company will enter, at an early date, into the business of selling automobile tires throughout the States of Kentucky, Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi.

In his statment issued to the press today, Mr. Smith said, "The growing demand for more complete and exacting service by the motoring service makes this addition to our business a necessary and logical one.

"The tires to be offered by the Standard Oil Company, Incorporated in Kentucky will be first line and first quality in every respect and will be made by experienced and reliable manufacturers.

"The Standard Oil Company Incorporated in Kentucky, will retail tires, tubes, and the usual tire accessories at certain of its own service stations, and will be prepared to render complete tire srvice along with that of supplying the motorist with gasoline, motor oils, and greasing service, etc.

"A special feature in the Company plan is that of offering tires to independent dealers operating filling stations and garages. Tires will be offered to these dealers on a wholesale basis assuring them satisfactory profits. It will be the desire of the Company to co-operate with and include these resellers in its tire selling program rather than disturb the business of those dealers, many of whom are valued customers of the Company on petroleum products.

"A little later the Company will, through its representative or otherwise, present this feature of its marketing plan to dealers and resellers.

"The Company will guarantee every tire sold, whether by its dealers or service stations. This plan provides for a twelve months guarantee regardless of mileage, on all tires sold by them for use on commercial cars. This guarantee protects them against accidents, blow-outs, cuts and bruises, rim cuts, under inflation, wheels out of alignment, faulty brakes or any other road hazard. In event of such a condition arising during the guarantee period, the tire will be repaired free of cost to the owner or replaced with a new tire for which the owner will pay a price equal to one-twelfth of the usual price multiplied by the number of months the tire was in service, if used on a passenger car; and one-sixth of the usual price multiplied by the number of months in service, if used on commercial vehicle.

"Adjustments and service, under the Company's guarantee, will be made by any one of its dealers or at any of its service stations selling these tires in the States of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky or Mississippi. Furthermore, arrangements have been made whereby the Company's guarantee will be fully honored throughout the United States Where the same tires are sold. Likewise the Standard Oil Company's dealers and service stations will honor a similiar guarantee on the same brand of tires sold elsewhere.

"A moderate scale of charges will be made for service on tires after expiration of the guarantee period, and on other makes of tires."

PERCY M. PITTS WRITES

To the Voters of Chilton County:

As our people go to the polls on next Tuesday, November the 4th, and cast their votes to elect their public officials, as the Republican candidate to represent you in the next Legislature I desire to make the following statement:

I greatly appreciate the confidence that the voters manifested in me in the past when I had the honor of representing our county in the 1927 Legislature.

From my experience in 1927 Legislature, I believe that I can be worth more to our great county and State should you see fit to honor me for the second term.

I am running on my record and for those same principles that I did in 1927.

If I am re-elected to succeed myself, I will as in the past, work for and foster all legislation seeking local self government, thereby keep the government, County and State in the hands of the people.

I pledge you my hearty support of any and all bills pertaing to the education of our boys and girls and believe that we should liberally provide money for their education. Because education o four youth is more important than ever before. Further I will lend my aid and vote for making our schools free to every boy and girl, as many other states are now doing.

We have a compulsory school law, and with this we should have free schools, without incidental fees. Lots of other states with less resources and wealth than Alabama now have this upon their Statue books.

I believe that all our public servants, including the Superintendent of Education, should be voted by the people.

It is a well known fact that there are certain persons here in Clanton who are daily planning again, as in 1927, to abolish our Commissioners Court, regardless of the wishes of of the majority of the people, including both Democrats and Republicans. Regardless of our friends, Atkinson, Hinkle and Gerald et al, spending weeks in 1927 in Montgomery lobbying and working upon my associates in the Legislature to pass a bill designed to abolish this court for no just cause, I was able to defeat this bill by a 3 to 1 majority.

I want to assure the voters that should you elect me on November 4th as your Representative in the Legislature, I will make the same fight as I have made in the past to keep our government in the hands of the people of this County, instead of placing our government in the hands of any appointive power, or in the hands of a few self appointed who have been using every conceivable means to get control of our county for many year.

Our Republican primary is now past history. The majority of the party has selected its standard bearers by the largest majority I have ever noticed since I have been in the county. Each candidate is worthy of your vote and I trust we will as in the past all go to the polls next Tuesday and elect our entire ticket.

Your vote and influence will be appreciated.—Percy M. Pitts.

NEXT DOOR TO ALRED DRUG COMPANY CLANTON, ALA.

THE LEADER MANAGER, M. LANDE

NEXT DOOR TO ALRED DRUG COMPANY CLANTON, ALA.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. B. F. BOOCKHOLDT

Eva Davis Boockholdt, daughter of O. S. and Minda Bird Davis, was born January 27th, 1898 in Wadsworth, Alabama, and died October 7th, 1930 in Montgomery, Ala.

Between these dates lived and labored one of the most beatuful characters the writer has ever known. During the years from 1905 to 1015 Brother Davis, the father, and his excellent family lived in Clanton, Alabama. There Eva passed from childhood into blooming young womanhood, as she "grew in favor with God and man." She chose that goodly part—the Christian's life—joined the church and devoted herself without stint to its service. She never ceased to work for her Lord and Master until she ceased to live.

In 1916 she was happily married to Boldren F. Boockholdt in Calera, Alabama. The happy couple moved to the Capitol City, where the remainder of her life was spent. She left a noble husband and a bright son, Otis, ten years of age. These with the parents and two sisters, Mrs. Fred Howard and Mrs. John O'Gwynn mourn her loss. Yea more than these: a whole community, a church mourns her loss. It seems to us that really her place cannot be filled, but we all know where to find her.

We carried her body to the church where they covered her with flowers that were both rich and rare. We laid her body in the tomb October 8th, but the memory of her beautiful, faithful life lingers like strains of a sweet song.—I. W. Chalker.

SILAS KELLY DIED TUESDAY

Mr. Silas Kelley, age 72 years, died Tuesday morning at the home of his son, J. E. Kelley, in the Mt. Pleasant community. The body was buried Wednesday at Samaria by Mell Martin. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Buford Lawrence.

George Williams, age 34, well known negro around Clanton, died last Friday at the farm of Rudolph Moates, near Clanton. He was buried Saturday at Hopewell.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES GIVEN BY THE CANDIDATES

Although a recent ruling by Attorney General Charlie C. McCall, writted for the judge of probate of Chilton Count declared that a second qualification by candidates is unnecessary, a number of candidates to be voted upon in the general election have filed pre-election statements with Secretary of State John Brandon.

The ruling of the attorney general was occasioned through the threat of Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds, of Chilton County, that unless second qualifications were filed by candidates in his couny, he would not have their names inserted on the general election ballot. In deciding the question for judge Reynolds, Attorney General Charlie McCall held that election set-ups of a candidate entering a primary automatically carry over through the general election unless there is a change in its personnel. However, he held that post-election statements must be filed.

Among the candidates who filed pre-election statements were Judges A. D. Sayre and Virgil Bouldin, associate justice of the supreme court of Alabama, both of whom were nominated for re-election in the dem-ochatic primary of last August.

In fixing his pre-election statement of expenditures, Justice Sayre said "This statement is made, not because affiant considers it necessary under the law but out of abundance of caution."

Republicans Active

The statements of the supreme court justices listed donations of $25 each to the democratic campaign committees with Judge Bouldin listing an additionl $5 donation to the Jackson county democratic campaign committee.

The statement filed by John B. Isbell, republican nominee to oppose Miles C. Allgood, democrat, in the seventh district reveals that the Alabama republican campaign committee has at least the financial backing of the national organization in the fight against Allgood. Isbell's statement listed personal expenditures of $786.45, a $75 donation to his campaign fund by the state republican organization and $1,000 contribution from the national organization.

Representative Lamar Jeffers who was nominated to succeed himself in the fourth district, but it being opposed in the general election campaign by E. D. Banks, independent caniddate listed expenses of $459 with a donation of $5.

Other democratic nominees who filed pre-election statements were John Brandon, state auditor; Pete B. Jarman, secretary of state; S. H. Blan, state treasurer; O. C. Orme, solicitor of the twelfth judicial circuit and W. H. Black, representative in the legislature of Marshall County.—Montgomery Journal.

MRS. CALLOWAY URGES SUPPORT OF REPUBLICAN TICKET

Dear Friends:

As the time is drawing near for the election, I want to make an earnest appeal to all members of our party to vote the straight Republican ticket.

It is true that all the men we voted for in the primary might not be the nominees, that we might have lost some, but even taking this into consideration we must remember that we participated in the game and it is up to us to be sportsmanlike and stand by the nominees.

I know all the nominees personally and have had business dealings with them all and I want to say for them that they are men of the highest type and men who will give justice and fairness to all. They are all qualified for the place which they are asking for and I believe they will make officers that we will be proud of.

I especially want to make an appeal to the ladies to stand by our ticket. There is one officer whose duties cannot be estimated in value in dollars and cents, as he will be the one who will protect our life, liberty and property. In my judgment there is no comparison in the ability of Mr. Gillespie and his opponent for these duties, and I am asking that the good women of Chilton County rally to his support and make our county safer and better.

There is only one way by which our ticket might be defeated, and that is by our people staying at home and not voting. I hope that this will not happen, but that each person will consider himself a committee to aid or furnish transportation to those who have no way of getting to the polls.

Let's all do our part, forgetting personal animosity, and we will have another great Republican victory on November 4th.

Sincerely yours,
GERTRUDE P. CALLOWAY.

STATE RAISES RATE FOR SCHOOL PUPILS TO $5.27

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 24.—The Alabama 1930-1931 school apportionments, based on $5.27 a child of school age and totaling $4,274,354.30 were announced here Friday by Superintendent of Education, A. F. Harman.

The apportionment for Alabama's 67 counties will be expended on 810,-009 children between the ages of 7 and 21, according to the last school census. The per capita average of a school child under the new apportionments of $5.27 is an increase of 21 cents over the 1929-1930 average of $5.06.

Last year's school census was 824,-634, or an increase of 14,625 over the 1930-1031 figure released by Superintendent Harman. Last year's apportionments totaled $4,175,733.57, giving the new total an increase of $98,620.73.

The annual school apportionments announced Friday by Superintendent Harman are taken from the general education fund, made up chiefly of the state three-mill school tax, the annual state appropriation for elementary and high schools and the interest on the sixteenth section land fund established by the government.

FROM O. H. McDOWELL

Dear Voters:

With the election just a few days ahead, could harly let this opportunity pass without a few words to the voters.

First I wish to congratulate you and thank you for going solemnly into our primary and selecting from our ranks our nominees. These nominees are men whom we know, see them almost every day, know what they stand for, know their past record. We know them to be men of high ideals and good character and to make the story short, Chilton County has no better men than they are. They are all well qualified for the offices that they were nominated for.

Now voters it is our duty to lay down all differences, malice and prejudice, if there should any appear, and stand squarely behind our ticket. Chilton Count is brimming full of intellegent voters and these voters knew who they wanted for their nominees and voted for these men. Again I say we have no better men. Lets go to the polls on Tuesday and put our nominees over the top 90 to nothing. All that I can hear now is hurrah. So everybody come to arms on Tuesday and fire right—nobody fire at random and swat the Democratic party of Chilton County completely out never to wiggle again.

Yours for the success of the Republican party and a 100 per cent vote for our ticket.—O. H. McDowell.

CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL

Several weeks ago there was held an assembly for the whole school. There being no auditorium, the children were marched out on the campus where a very successful chapel was held. Last week another such assembly was held with the sixth grade in charge of the program. A very interesting program on the month of October was held. Several of the important days of October such as Columbus Day, James Whitcomb Riley's birthday, the first Colonial Congress and Halloween were featured. The remainder of the program was devoted to the study of autumn. The fifth grade will have charge of the program next time and then all of the grades on down through the first if the weather remains favorable enough for us to go out of doors. These assemblies are beneficial to the children and all of them seem to enjoy it.

At the end of the month the scores are averaged. The room making the highest score at the end of each semester receives a prize. This project is receiving much enthusiasm from the pupils. Already a great improvement of the classrooms has been noted. The room having the highest score now is Miss Campbell's. She has the eigth grade boys and girls, and the ninth grade girls in her room. The home room kept by the senior high girls comes second.

JOHN L. SMITH WRITES TO VOTERS OF COUNTY

As this is the last issue of the paper before the election on November the 4th, please give me space to say that I consider it every Republican's duty to go to the polls on that day and cast their vote for the entire Republican ticket. I cannot see anything else for the Republicans to do, our men are good men; they are honest and we have no reason to believe but what they will make us the very best of servants. On the other hand what can we promise ourselves to vote the Democratic ticket, admitting that the Democratic candidates are good men and honest men, they are on the other ticket and are men that have different ideas and different environments and different influences that will shape their manner of service, to that we are used to and we cannot tell just what the consequences may be. The only safe thing to do is to vote the ticket that represents the ideas and men that we have tried and found true.

Again let me insist that we all go to the polls and vote and in that way we may be assured of success.

Yours for the success of the Republican party.

JOHN L. SMITH.

Candidate For

TAX COLLECTOR OF CHILTON COUNTY

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words to the voters of Chilton County in regard to the campaign which is about to come to a close.

As you know, I was honored with the Republican nomination for the office of Tax Collector of Chilton County in the August primary. And I want to again assure the people that I thank you for what you have done for me.

I have tried the best I knew how, both before and since the primary, to conduct my campaign on a high and honorable plane, having at all times the utmost regard for my opponents and the voters at large. I have realized that those who opposed me have certain rights and privileges which were theirs as same as I had mine.

Now, since the primary is over and the final election is close at hand, I am again appealing to you for your hearty support, pledging you that if I am elected, it will be the height of my ambition to try to make you as good official as the good men who preceded me. I want to insist that you consider well before you cast your ballot on next Tuesday.

It perhaps matters little to you as to the material benefits that will be mine personally if I am elected. But you should remember that the future success of the Republican party in our county depends upon your decision in choosing your men for the various offices next Tuesday.

For a number of years I consider the people of Chilton County have been justifiable in boasting of the good government of our county. And I want to remind you that the same has been administered through the good and faithful management of the business of the county by the Republicans who have been put into office by the Republican party. I do not believe now that you are ready to surrender the affairs of your county to the opposition.

And I want you to remember this one thing: If on next Wednesday morning you should realize that you have made a mistake, it will be too late, for your verdict at the polls on next Tuesday will stand for four years, regardless of how you may feel about it.

Let me insist that you go out to the polls and see to it that your friends all go, and again put your stamp of approval on the good and efficient management of the affairs of your county by the officials.

Thanking you again for the nomination given me, I am,

Yours most faithfully,
W. G. CULP.

PREFACE POET

Now reader go along with me,
Away back to eternity;
Go back beyond the days of youth,
Where everything that was, was truth.

Beyond the sorrow and the tears,
Beyond the suffering and fears;
Beyond the anguish and the gloom,
Beyond the shadow of the tomb.

Beyond all trouble and all pain,
Beyond all losses and all gains;
Beyond all sobs and bitter sighs,
Beyond the limit of the skies.

Before there was a ray of light,
Before there was a day or night;
Before a prayer was ever prayed
Before the world was ever made.

Before there was a moon or sun,
Before old time itself begun;
Before there was a now or then,
Before there was a where or when.

Before there was a here or there,
Or anything or anywhere;
Go back a hundred thousand years,
And farther still though filled with fears.

Go back until within the past,
You fail to find the place at last;
Where the beginning you can see,
At one end of eternity.

Go back until there's not a trace,
Of anything but God and space;
God all around below, above,
Unlimited in power and love.

Away back there, removed from sight,
Where everything that was, was right;
Away back there removed from sin,
Is where my story does begin.

—Fonza S. Headley.

DAIRYING

WHEN SCIENCE STUDIES THE COW'S STOMACH

Modern Feeding Methods are the Result of Experimenting to Find the Proper Combinations

The expression is frequently used that we are living in a laboratory age. Nearly everything we eat and wear and use must first go through several experiment stages.

A few years ago I visited the factory of a well-known high-priced automobile and was told that every part of the engine was inspected every forty-five minutes during the process of manufacture. Finally, the engine was placed on a testing block and run at full speed continuously for four hours before it was ever put into the finished car.

The average public is not aware of the fact that similar methods have been employed for years in the study of the care and feeding of cattle.

Recently I visited a well-known state experiment station. As we went through one barn I was shown a new-born calf and informed that within twenty-four hours it would not be alive. In fact, it was doomed to die before it was ever born. The reason for this was that its mother had been fed a certain ration. For twenty years cows fed this ration had not produced a single calf which lived. In every case the offspring would be undersized, abnormal, and, in many cases, blind. The ration was wheat straw, wheat meal, wheat gluten and common salt.

The interesting thing about the experiment was that in this same barn the cows fed with the same ration, plus the bone meal and cod liver oil produced healthy calves which later became large producers of milk.

All through this experiment station similar tests were being made on various combinations of food. By this means the correct feeding of dairy cattle was being reduced to a science. The results of this scientific knowledge are now available to every farmer, and there is little excuse today for the owner of dairy cattle not knowing how to keep his herd on a profitable production basis.

We have already referred to the dairy cow as an example of a modern machine perfected throughout the years for the manufacture of milk. I think we will have a greater regard for the humble cow and will be far more considerate of her comfort and surroundings if we knew a little more about the mechanism by which she produces milk.

How many times, for instance, are we neglectful, in cold weather, of water for the cattle? We do not realize that their bodies consist of from 70 to 90 per cent liquid. Water performs many important functions in the body. It dissolves the food, acts as a carrier of food and waste. And is a more important element in the chemistry of the body. Any interference with the normal amount of drinking water may be serious and it should be supplied to livestock in large amounts in all seasons of the year. In the winters time, drinking water should not be cold.

The digestive organs of the cow are extremely interesting. As most of us know, the dairy cow chews her food just enough to moisten it, before she swallows it. It is held in the paunch until she is ready to bring it back in the form of a cud, when she masticates it and mixes it with saliva. This is the first step in the manufacture of milk. A cud will weigh three to four ounces. Each one is chewed about a minute before it is returned for digestion.

A cow in reality has four stomachs, each one of which performs a certain function. The first stomach acts as a churn where further mastication takes place. The second apparently has no digestive juices but is a sort of policeman to the food, removing stones, nails, and other foreign objects which may happen to be in it. The third stomach has powerful muscles which squeeze the moisture out of the food and prepare it for entering the true stomach. From there on the processes are very similar to those in other animals.

It is a fact that this is a more complicated procedure than the digestive processes in other animals. Therefore, it is very necessary that the cow be quiet and comfortable during the period when she is transforming her food into milk. A cow, when disturbed, immediately ceases chewing her cud, which means that at the next milking period her supply will be greatly reduced if the disturbance continues.

W. M. Wyatt, accompanied by Theda and Jim Alex, attended the Alabama State Fair in Montgomery last Saturday.

Mrs. S. J. Ezell returned last Saturday from South Carolina, where she spent a week with her mother who has been sick in a hospital for several days.

W. H. GILLESPIE

To all the People of Chilton County:

As the Republican nominee for the office of Sheriff, I make this, my final appeal to all the people of the County for your votes.

If I am elected, I here and now again renew my pledge to all the people for a full, fair, just, efficient, honorable and sensible enforcement of all the laws, civil and criminal.

Assuring you of my heartfelt and lasting appreciation of your support, I am with malice towards none, and justice for all.

Faithfully yours,

WALTER H. GILLESPIE.

Addresses the Voters in the Interest of His Candidacy for Tax Assessor of Chilton County

Maplesville, Ala., October 27, 1930.

To the Voters of Chilton County:

In my efforts to be elected Tax Assessor I have conducted my campaign without malice or abuse of anyone. It was my desire to see all the voters of the county, but that has been impossible. However will say here that I will appreciate your vote just the same, and hope you will understand the reason I have not seen you personally has been because I could not possibly get around to all.

If elected, the only promise I make is to manage the affairs of the office in such a manner that no one will have just cause to regret having voted for me. I fully realize this office carries with it a great responsibility, and will require efficient service, this I agree to do to all alike.

The election day is almost here. I will have time only to see a few more of the voters, but as stated above, I will appreciate your vote on November 4th.

Thanking one and all for any consideration given in my behalf, I am,

Sincerely yours,
ARTHUR D. MARTIN.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Columbus Littleton, convicted in the Circuit Court of Chilton County, in April, 1930, for manufacturing whisky, and sentenced to the penitentiary for a year and a day, will make application to the Honorable State Board of Pardons of Alabama, for pardon or parole.

STATE CAPITOL News

An interesting summary of Alabama tax laws, with particular reference to industry, was contained in a recent issue of the Manufacturers Record, the article being written by John C. Curry of the State Tax Commission. Mr. Curry pointed out the advantage which Alabama possesses over other states in having a lower basis for property tax assessments, and also in the fact that the State Constitution prohibits the levying of income or inheritance taxes. He also referred to the fact that Alabama constitutional limitations protect the taxpayer against any excessive increase in property tax rates without changing the constitution.

Mr. Curry's article, which occupied a page in the Manufacturer's Record, should be of interest to Alabamians generally as information on the taxation system of their state, and is given below in full:

Location in Alabama during the last few years of a great number of new industries has directed attention to the tax laws of this state, particularly with reference to their effect upon industry. Rapid growth of our industrial centers would appear to indicate that the tax laws of Alabama are quite favorable to industry.

The fact that Alabama Constitution does not permit the levy of an income tax or an inheritanc tax is of such importance to capital and industry as to deserve early mention in any discussion of the State tax law. The State Constitution provides: "All taxes levied on property in this state shall be assessed in exact proportion to the value of such property." The revenue law provides: "All taxable property within the state shall be assessed for the purpose of taxation at 60 per cent of its fair and reasonable maket value."

The rate of taxation for state purposes is fixed at 6.5 mills, or 65 one hundredths of 1 per cent per annum on the assessed value. This is the maximum rate permitted by the Constitution for state purposes. The Constitution limits the rates to be levied by counties, municipalities and school districts. The County and municipal rates vary in accordance with the needs at the time of levy. The school district rate is a maximum of 3 mills and, while not levied in every district, is practically statewide. The average rate for the state county and school district purposes for the last tax year was 20.858 mills:

The assessments are made by the county tax assessors and are subject to review by the county board of Review, which is composed of members of the County Board of Revenue or Court of County Commissioners, except the Judge of Probate, and the county tax collector. The State Tax Commission supervises all assessments

All property on public utilities and shares of domestic corporations are assessed by the State Tax Commission. These assessments are certified to the county assessors for entry in the tax books of the county, and taxes are collected thereon, as on other assessments.

It is well to note that the basis for ad valorem assessments in Alabama is 60 per cent of the fair and reasonable market value of the property, mhile in most states the basis is 100 per cent of the value of the property. It is admitted that the actual assessment is usually below the 60 per cent basis. In addition to the higher basis used by most states, their rates are usually higher than those in Alabama. Therefore a comparison of the basis and rates in Alabama with those of almost any other adjacent state will reveal that we have not only a 40 per cent advantage in basis but also and advantage in rate. The constitutional limitation of all rates in Alabama assures the tax payers that an excessive increase in rates is impossible without a change in our Constitution.

For the purpose of extending and operating of factories for the spining of thread and yearn, and the knitting and weaving of cloth and other fabrics of cotton and wool in this state, and plants for the purpose of building ships and factories for the manufacture of bags, wood pulp products, paper, wood cabinets and farm implements, or any other manufactured products, the governing body of any county or city is authorized to remit the taxes assessed on such factories or plants, and also on all of the capital stock of such plants or factories for all county and municipal purposes, for a period not exceeding five years from the date of the incorporation or organization or completion of such plant of factory. In the opinion of the Attorney General, this exemption cannot apply to the school mileage tax, but does apply to all other county and municipal taxes.

Calcium cyanamid manufactories are exempt from all state county and municipal property and privilege taxation for 10 years.

In addition to other exemptions which do not directly concern industry, the following property is exempt from taxation: All cotton or other agricultural products in the hands of the manufacturer, which have been produced in Alabama during the current calendar year; all raw material, including coke, produced in Alabama during the current calendar year, when stock at any plant or furnace, for manufacturing purposes in Alabama; manufactured articles, including pig-iron, in the hands of the producer or manufacturer thereof and at place of production or manufacture, shall be exempt from taxation for 12 months after production or manufacture.

An annual franchise tax is collected by the state Tax Commission from domestic and foreign corporations as follows: Two dollars per $1,000 of capital stock of domestic corporations and $2 per $1,000 of capital employed in the State by foreign corporations. As annual permit fee based on capital stock ranges from $10 to $100 for domestic and $5 to $100 for foreign corporations.

A tax of 2 cents per gallon on gasoline is divided among the counties for maintainence of public roads and bridges. An additional tax of 2 cents per gallon is collected for use of the State, to pay principal and interest on the state road bonds.

For special educational purposes there are levied: A gross receipt tax of 2 and one-half per cent on intrastate business of railroads; Two and one-half per cent on gross receipts of telegraph, telephone and express companies; Two-fifths of a mill per kilowatt hour on hydro-electric power manufactured and sold Two and one-half cents per ton on all coal mined; 4 and one-half cents per ton on all iron ore mined; 3 per cent of value at mine or quarry on sand, gravel, slag and other minerals than coal and iron; an annual privilegetax of $20,000 on sleeping car companies; a sales tax of 15 per cent of the wholsale sales price of cigars, cigarettes and cheroots.

The license tax recieved from the sale of motor vehicle tags is used for interest and retirement of road bonds and maintainance of state roads.

A number of small annual privilege or liscense taxes are levied on various classes of business which are not enumerated here, because very few of these have any direct effect on industry.

The State Tax Commission is composed of a chairman and four associates, all appointed by the governor, and has supervision over tax assessors, collectors and Judges of Probate.

All returns for assessments of ad valorem taxes are filed with the tax assessors, except those of public interest. The returns are due October 1 in each year and become delinquent on the first Monday in Feburary following. The taxes due on the ad valorem assessments are due on October 1st following assessments and become delinquent January 1st following due date and bear interest at 8 per cent from date of delinquency.

WEST CHILTON

Lovely October days, cool nights and light frosts.

Harvesting the corn crop is now the order of the day.

We missed the Jack Pot last week but had a ringing editorial instead.

Rev. Dyer filled his appointment at Union Springs Sunday and Sunday night.

Miss Willie Mae Littlejohn has opened her school at Freeman with a large enrollment.

Marion Cofer's little son is on the sick list, and had the physician with him last week.

As usual at this time of the season with Sunday School workers, people are in a rush, unsettled, days short. No one seems to have time for anything but to rush on. Our fast day urges people onward. We are in too great haste to think. Are we acting wisely? No.

Nearly everybody is talking politics, the science of the government. No one is prepared to discuss the science of the government, while controlled by a spirit of revenge or greed. Generally speaking the rank and file are cool headed, so in the past primaries the rank and file keeping each other, selected their nominees, pledged and honor bound to the selections they unitedly made. So what more, nothing but "play the men," for what? To redeem our pledge to assist each other in keeping a good local self government, economically and wisely administered. That is what we need and what we want. In union we can get that and in no other way.

FRANK JAMES MAKES EXPLANATION OF ERROR

Mr. Frank James of the James Sign Shop, here, wishes an explanation made of the donation given by him to the Booker Washington Association, as published in last week's Union-Banner. Mr. James say that he did not give $25 in cash as was indicated in the report last week, but that he agreed to paint signs to the amount of $25 for the negro school.

W. L. SANDERS URGES VOTERS TO STAND BY THE REPUBLICAN NOMINEES NOVEMBER THE 4TH

As this is the last week the Banner comes out before the election, I wish to say a word to the voters of the county. I was nominated in the Republican primary as member of the school board, using only what I term fair means to get said nomination. Now the time is here for the general election, and I wish to say that I would appreciate the help of the electorate of the county in my behalf. If elected, which I believe I will be, I shall do what I see as my duty under all conditions and circumstances, keeping in mind always the best interest of the educational advancement of all the children of the county.

Sincerely yours,
W. L. SANDERS.

FOREST FIRE REPORT FOR FIRST HALF OF THE YEAR

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 27.—Approximately six and a quarter per cent of the 23,000,000 acres of forest land in Alabama was burned over during the first six months of 1930, according to complications just completed by the State Forestry department. This, while higher than the average for the past four years due to the nine months drought extending from November, 1929, to August of this year and to the early exhaustion of the department's funds through the falling off of receipts, is far below the average prevailing prior to the inaugaration of the co-operative work in forestry between the Federal Government, the State and the local communities. It is pointed out by the department that were not such co-operative measures in effect the proportion burned over would have been in the neighborhood of forty five or fifty per cent.

The total number of fires during the first half of the year was 17,972. The total area burned was 1,447,989 acres. Of this acreage 280,761 was merchantable growth, 1,013,640 unmerchantable, growth 135,042 was the open forest land, while 18,546 was non-forest land. Lightning caused 4 fires, railroads 348, lumbering operations 643, brush burning 8,445, camp fires 337, smokers 2.355, incendiaries 3,205 and miscellaneous causes were responsible for 2,640. Fires covering one-quarter acre or less numbered 388, those more than one-quarter and less than ten acres 5,887, while 11,697 were ten acres or more in extent.

The proportion of forest land burned in the organized forest districts comprising the portions of the State carrying the higher hazards and consequently the localities in which the co-operative work is centered, was about 5.48 per cent. In the unorganized territory, which includes the more populated agricultural sections with the woodland comprised in small areas and involving a much lower hazard, but not supplied with the local forestral agents, the proportion burned over was approximately 7.24 per cent.

In terms of one person per fire it is estimated that 15,659 persons engaged in firefighting without compensation from the state. Of these 11,603 were farmers and stockmen, 371 were railroad employees, 2,389 were lumbermen's employees and other volunteers numbered 1,296. Private equipment was used in fire suppressions to a hire value of $1,527 and the total money value of known fighting efforts on the part of landowners and others is estimated at $13,318.

The forest fires occuring in the state during the first half of the present calendar year resulted in money damage amounting to $1,316,403. Of this amount $144,387 comprises damage to merchantable timber, $996,462 injury to young growth, $41,758 damage to wood products, $6,419 loss to other forest products, $55,205 damage to buildings fences and other improvements and $72,175 damage to range and pasture.

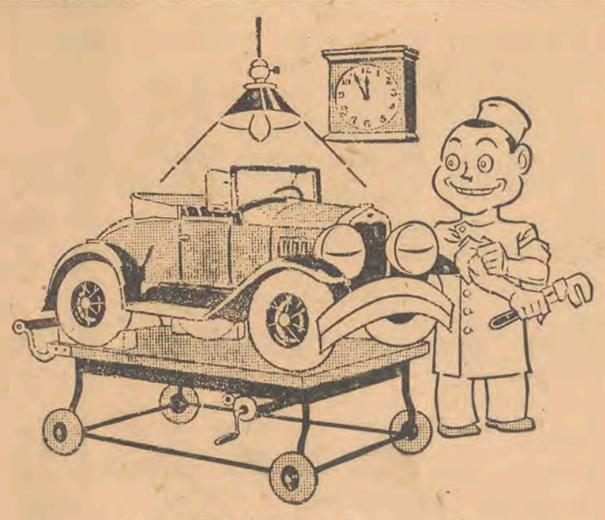
Joseph E. Cobb

Republican Candidate For

Commissioner of First District

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words to the voters of the Republican party of Chilton County.



In just a few days we will elect men to fill the different offices of our County. We have a ticket selected by the majority of our party, so let us all get behind our ticket and put it over by the biggest majority that we have ever had in this county, and try to build our county up so it will be second to none in the state.

I would like to have seen every voter in the county, but it has been impossible, as I am a farmer, just like the rest of you, and had to gather my crop. But, if elected, I will do my best to give every person his part of all money spent on roads. I believe in working all of our public roads just alike in our county, as every man pays taxes alike, and should get service alike. Equal rights to all and special favors to none.

If elected, will feel myself a servant of the people, and look to them for council. I have not made any promises to anyone, so will be free to serve the people of our county, instead of individuals. So let me ask all the voters to go to the polls and do your part, and we will carry this election over. Personally, your vote and influence will be appreciated very much. Thanking you for all past favors, I remain,

JOSEPH E. COBB.

PREPARING FOR THE TRADE REVIVAL

No sensile person cares for pollyanna utterances on the subject of business and its prospects, but facts of a significant and reassuring nature indicative of confidence in the early return of normal industrial conditions are in a different category. Men of affairs want the truth, and if the truth is heartening it will do much to dispell that irrational and perverse pessimism of which business leaders have complained much in recent months.

President Storey of the Santa Fe railroad announces that he intends to contract at once for 60,000 tons of steel rails and 20,000 tons of track material. He proposes to build and repair tracks in the conviction that business soon will improve and the investment will be profitable to his rail lines.

The Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation reports for twelve months ended August 31, a 35 per cent increase in its construction work over the average for four years. Its best year previous to that twelve-month was 1927, yet during the 1930 depression a gain of 15 per cent was achieved over that banner year. Materials are cheap and abundant and labor is plentiful, so that work done at this time is done rapidly and economically. Consequently far-sighted individuals and corporations are taking advantage of the exceptional opportunity to prepare for future business expension.

Sign of a marked upward trend are multiplying. Intelligent foresight is, or should be, the order of the day. Prices, interest rates and the labor market severally suggest careful and adequate preparation for better times.—Chicago Daily Uews.

KEEP THE GOVERNMENT OUT OF BUSINESS

Rudolph Spreckles, in an address before a trade meeting in Baltimore, made a very curious suggestion. It was that the government take the drastic step of placing industry upon the same basis of supervision and control which prevailed during the late World War. He is disturbed because the Supreme Court and the various legislatures have failed to satisfy the needs of business. Moreover, he is troubled because "for the moment our nation seems to be woefully lacking in constructive leadership." To his mind a new relationship between business and the government must come. He feels that the government could prevent ruinous competition by allocating shares of all business to various companies, as was done during the war.

Mr. Speckles is treading upon very dangerous ground. One of the great troubles in the past has been that we have had too much political interference with business. The original anti-trust laws have long since ceased to be effective; but we have sane regulation, and the Federal Trade Board is charged with the work of preventing unfair practices. That is right and proper, but it would be a grave mistake to create a lot of new commissions with hordes of federal agents going about snooping into the affairs of business men.

The notion of having the government undertake the regulation of all business would be a folly which we would surely live to regret. To adopt the suggestion of putting the country on a war-time basis would invite only trouble and would surely hobble enterprise and initiative. We may have our ills, but their solution should be approached from another angle.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The free trader likes to tell us how we ought to encourage cheap raw materials to decrease the cost of living. Well, wheat is pretty cheap now, but they haven't started giving any excursion rates yet on a loaf of bread.

COX MAN FOR COLLECTOR SAYS J. A. MAHAN

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 27, 1930.
To the Voters of Chilton County:

The day of election is near. We will elect state and county officers. There is one man on the county ticket I am especially interested in, and that is Mr. C. B. Cox, for Tax Collector. I am well acquainted with this man, and I don't believe there is a better man for the place in the whole county. He is honest, a clean man, and thoroughly competent to carry on the business of the office to the credit of the county.

Mr. Cox has never held office and I feel like the voters should pass the offices around, and not keep one man in a life time.

Very truly,
J. A. MAHAN.

SQUIRE DENNIS SAYS TO STAY WITH REPUBLICANS

Editor Union-Banner:

The time is close by when we will cast our votes on the 4th of November. To the Republican voters of Chilton County, I say let us stand by our nominees and elect them. If we don't, we are gone. We have good men on our ticket. I hear no complaint, only from the whiskey crowd.

I say don't let them fool you. They would sink your children into hell if they could, just to carry their point.

Let us stand firm and vote the straight ticket in the election, and show them they can't rule the county. Come out to the polls on November the fourth.

Yours for the Republican ticket.—John S. Dennis, Clanton, Route 1.

M. F. JONES SAYS COX IS MAN FOR TAX COLLECTOR

To the Voters of Chilton County:

SOME GEMS OF TRUTH

God knows what is in the heart of men, while man thinks he knows.

We can correct some of our mistakes through watching what we call failures in others.

God will become great when self sees its true worth without Christ enthroned in our hearts.

The way to higher ground is to step out of self and be led in paths of righteousness.

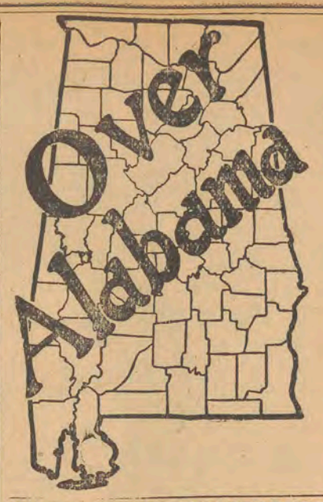
The Bible is the only blueprint by which one may build a character which will stand the storms.

Not every one that sayeth unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my father which is in heaven. Matt. 7:21.

It is the worst wheel of the old wagon that squeaks most.

The man who turns his back on Christ and heaven for the devil and hell is like a humming bird leaving a flower for a swill barrell.

Faith will grow strong if exercised.



It is best not to try to cross bridges before you get to them; worrying over a matter never helps.

The man who rolls up his sleeves and goes after the job with an honest, sincere will, will nearly always win; but the one who says I can't—just can't.

Some people are all whip and no hay; all grunt and no bacon; all sting and no honey.

It will cost too dearly to reject Christ.

Bro. Bryan's Weekly Message

(Written for The Union-Banner by REV. J. A. BRYAN, Pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Alabama)

A BUSY DAY IN THE MINISTRY OF OUR LORD

We have just left Christ in the wilderness of Judea where John the Baptist pointed Him out as the Lamb of God who would take away the sins of the world, and also that He, Christ, was the kingdom of heaven of which he had been preaching "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

This wilderness should be called the desert of Judea. You could not say that it was a dreary, desolate place and yet it was that. There the ministry of the forerunner of Jesus took place. Jesus Christ went down to the Jordan near the desert to receive the Jewish sacrament of baptism. He is led back to the wilderness of Judea and up to the right on the mount called Mount Quarantana. It was there and is there now and is the most dreadful, the most awful place the speaker has ever seen. Here Christ tempted by a personal devil in all points of His nature for a period of forty days and nights. O that wilderness desert, and that mount which the Greeks have named Quarantana. It was there the angel came to Jesus' rescue and drove the devil away after He had gained the victory with God's word.

After this Christ goes back into Galilee where we pause to study this morning, and I shall mention some of the things which I saw on my pilgrimage two years ago. First, Christ leads His disciples to a mount on the right hand side of the oldest highway of history between Capernaum and Cana of Galilee on what is called Mount Hatten. We call it the Mount of Beautitudes. There He spoke the words recorded in the 5th, 6th, and 7th chapters of the Gospel according to Matthew. Friends, it was not Christ's desire to stay on the mount all the time. It must be your desire to stay on the mount all the time. It is not my desire to preach God's word all the time as much as I love to do so. I must go out and minister to the needy and suffering.

I can see Christ go down from the mount where He has just spoken that wonderful discourse. I look at His calm face, so gentle, so tender, so merciful, so kind, and so full of love and compassion and sympathy. His face is the very expression of the greatest thing in the world which is love. Christ attracted people wonderfully. Great multitudes followed Him there. I see a leper approach Him in haste. Maybe he would never have gone to anybody else but Christ's face and attitude appealed strongly to him and urged him to approach Him. No doubt he knew that Christ would not drive him away, would not repel him as did the world. O, if you and I could get the thought not to repel but to love such people.

No doubt this man's body was so eaten up with leprosy that his flesh was hanging loose on his outstretched hands and his knees which fell before Christ in worship. His eyebrows were no doubt gone as well as his finger nails and toe nails. In the greatest suffering he ran and fell at Jesus' feet and worshipped Him. The devil tries to take the "worship" out of it. It cannot be done. This man fell down and worshipped Christ. He had heard about Christ cleansing leners, shanging water into wine, calming storms, etc. I can hear that poor leper this morning when he cries out in the field on the side of the road, "unclean, unclean." Again I hear him approach Christ saying, "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean."

Friends, that leper was unclean but Christ made him clean. The record is that Christ was moved with compassion, reached out His hand and touched him. O, for the touch of that hand which was placed on His mother's heart in Bethlehem, that hand which made spittle of clay and placed it upon the eyes of the blind man and bade him wash in the pool of Shiloah and come forth seeing. O for the touch of that hand which took the five barley loaves and two small fishes and blessed and brake and multiplied them into enough to feed the hungry multitude. O for the touch of that hand which took little weak children and pressed them to His great loving heart and blessed them. Think, my dear friends, of the thousands of hands which are waiting for the touch of the kind hand of a friend. They are just hungering for food and shivering in the cold because they have no friends.

Jesus Christ said to the leper, "I will, be thou clean." The man was made clean. O' if I had the power to tell you what that meant to that poor leper. I can tell you just what Christ's cleansing blood meant to me and means to me.

"I came to Jesus, and I drank, of that life-giving stream.

My heart was cleansed my soul revived, and He has made me glad."

Now Christ is near Cana of Galilee where He walked where He attended the marriage feast and performed His first miracle making marriage forever a sacred and a divine institution. Christ walked along that same road by Cana of Galilee no doubt the first time He went to Capernaum. He is going back to Capernaum so no doubt He did several times. O, if He would just walk with you and with me. O, for a closer walk with Jesus. O, just to have Christ walk with me and pray with me as He did with somebody between Mount Hatten and Capernaum.

Just as Christ is entering into the city of Capernaum the most important town of Galilee, He is met by a centurion who says to Him, "My servant is very sick up here, and I would be so glad if you will please heal him." Friends, I beg you to notice that man's attitude toward his servant. It is a good insight into any man's or woman's character to take notice of their attitude toward their servants. If a woman speaks unkind and ungrateful to her nurse maid, and if she shows no interest in her spiritual and physical welfare, you can just know that she is desperately in need of Jesus Christ in her heart and life. If a man is unkind, unjust in his dealings with his servants and does not consider their spiritual progress and physical well-being you can know of him too that he needs Jesus Christ in his heart and life.

Now this 8th chapter of the Gospel according to Matthew as many writers say was certainly a busy day in the life of Christ. Christ and the centurion walked along as the centurion said, "I hold my position by the permission of the Roman government. I say to one soldier, go, and he goes; and to another, come, and he comes. Whatever I ask of a soldier he implicitly obeys. Christ said, "Where did you say the servant is?" He looked up into the kind face of the Master and guess what he said? He said, "My servant is up there in my house, but Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under the roof of my house." O to be unworthy. There are so many societies and organizations now. But I want to join one called the "unworthy society." I am not worthy that Christ should walk in the study with me. I am not worthy that He stand by me as I preach His blessed Gospel of peace and love. "I am not worthy," said the centurion, "but only speak the word, Lord, and my servant shall be healed." Of that man's faith Jesus marveled, saying, "I have not found so great faith no, not even in all Israel." Jesus then bade him go his way and find his servant healed.

Next on this busy day of Jesus' ministry we find him in the home of Peter. I am not going to judge, but maybe Peter invited Christ into his home. Christ accepted the invitation in a gentlemanly manner and went into his home. Peter no doubt invited Christ into his home because he wanted Him to go and because he loved Christ, but I would not say that he loved Him enough. Nobody loves Christ as much as they ought to. In this home Christ finds Peter's mother-in-law suffering under a great fever. He reached out that gentle hand and touched her hand and the fever left her. Just so, He reaches out that same hand and touches us and heals us of whatever may be the infirmity. O, the touch of His hand on mine, that He might tell us more of His love and mercy.

One sees in Capernaum today the ruins of the Capernaum synagogue which was built for the Jews by the Roman, Italian centurion. The foundation and ruins of this synagogue confirm everything which is said about it in the Bible. Just outside of this toward the east forty yards is a Mosiac rock below which is believed to be the house of Peter in Capernaum. In reading about this home you find that Christ had always a welcome there. Does He always have a welcome in our homes? Does He always have a welcome in His house? If he should come to your home today would you meet Him quietly and calmly and ask Him to take a seat? Would you so meet Him at the church and hear Him say, "I thought I would come in and see what you were doing, and just to have a word of prayer with you?" O would you hear Him say, "I just want to pray with you and then I am going back into heaven?"

Sometime just here Christ took a boat to cross over into Bethsaida. He went into the hindmost part of the boat and lay down tired and weary and fell fast asleep. As that Gallilean fisherman's vessel moved slowly along there swept down one of those historic euroclydons upon it and tossed it to and fro. The enroclydon was caused by the cold winds from the snows on Mount Hermon which swept down like sea birds upon that placid lake. The disciples were affrightened and went at once to where Christ lay sleeping. It is strange how men cry out for Christ when they need Him. They aroused Christ from His sleep and said, "Master, carest thou not if we perish?"

Now there was two storms right there together. There was the storm which beat madly upon the vessel in which they were sailing. That was a natural storm of natural cause. Then there was the storm of fear in the hearts of the disciples which caused them to seek for and cry out to Christ at that time. But Christ could calm that storm of natural cause and that storm of fear pervaded the hearts and lives of his disciples. The Christ who calmed the scorching fever of Peter's wife's mother, the Christ who restored the little daughter of Jairus to life, He could calm that storm as He had calmed other storms along the way. The record in the Gospel according to Matthew is that He, Christ arose and rebuked the winds. That does not mean that He got angry with the winds, because Christ holds the winds in His fists. He made the boat which the wind was tossing about, and the beautiful crystal blue water on whcih it rode. But Christ rebuked the winds that there be quiet and calm. Did you ever have storms in your life? Have you not had the storm of disappointment? Have you had the storm of poverty? of sickness? of death? of ingratitude? Christ is in the boat with you and all you have to do is to go to Him and ask Him to please come and calm the storm.

"From every stormy wind that blows,
From every swelling tide of woe,
There is a calm, a sure retreat,
'Tis found beneath the mercy seat".

Standing there in Capernaum near the synagogue the guide stepped up to me and said, "Doctor, up there to the southeast is Gadara." It was to those rocky projecting tombs that Christ came to on the other side of the sea from Capernaum into the country of the Gergesenes. Now there dwelt in those tombs demoniacs, people devil possessed just like many people are now. When they saw Christ they ran to meet Him saying, "Thou Jesus, thou Son of God, are thou come to torment us before the time?" Then the devils within them cried, "If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into that herd of swine there." Jesus said to them, "Go." The devils came out, and I am sure that I saw the place where the swine ran violently down a precipice into the river. I see Christ as He got out of the boat and cast the devils out of the man and put him in his right mind. The man then said, "I am going down to Jerusalem at once." Christ said, "No, you will do nothing of the kind but go back to your wife and little children and make up for all the unkindness and disloyalty you have given them. You have lived up there in the graveyard to keep from being arrested, but go back home now in decency and stay in decency." It was the great love of Christ which restored a loving father to a needy home. Let us fall at His feet and worship Him that we too may catch His spirit of love.

An Invitation

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

Since the Republican State Convention of Alabama has not nominated, and therefore the Republican ticket in the November election will not have candidates for Governor and United States Senator, I feel that I am justified in extending to the Republicans of Chilton County an invitation to cast their votes for Hon. B. M. Miller for Governor, and Hon. John H. Bankhead for United States Senator, and for the other Democratic candidates for State offices in the General Election of Nov. 4th.

I feel that I can conscientiously and truthfully say to all the citizens of Chilton County that the best government for our State will come out of the election of Judge Miller as our Governor. And since we all agree that our State government should be the best possible to obtain, I think that it is becoming that we support those candidates who offer us the best and most constructive, economical administration of State affairs.

Since the Republicans have no state ticket, the Republican voters of Chilton County are therefore left to do as they please about voting for State officers and United States Senator. I invite you to consider carefully the qualifications and platform of Judge Miller, John H. Bankhead, and the other Democratic candidates for State offices, and to cast your vote and influence for them in the General Election of November 4th.

Anyone desiring any literature on the Campaign may get same by calling at my office in Clanton.

Respectfully,

N. S. JOHNSON, Chairman,
Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County.

Addresses the Voters of the County in the Interest of His Candidacy for Tax Collector

Clanton, Ala., Cct. 29, 1930.

To the Voters of Chilton County:

It has been my desire to see all the voters of the County in the interest of my candidacy for Tax Collector, but owing to the limited time I have had to do so, I feel it will be impossible to see all. I don't want any one to feel slighted if I have not seen them.

I am asking all the voters of the county, regardless of their past political affiliation, for their support.

I desire to say further along this line, I deeply appreciate the expressed interest in my behalf of my friends who are of a different political belief, and I trust my conduct in this campaign will merit a continuance of their good will.

I promise each and all, if elected, I shall strive to conduct the affairs of the office in such a manner that no one will have cause to regret having voted for me.

I urge all voters to go to the polls and vote in this election.

I thank one and all for any courteseis shown me during this campaign, and sincerely solicit your support on November 4th.

Sincerely Yours,

C. B. COX.

AVERY AGAINST HEALTH UNIT

Editor Union-Banner:

May I have a few lines in The Union-Banner to express my views on the Health Unit. Why has this thing been brought up at the last minute? Were the ones that got it up afraid to give the people time to talk about it? How can I vote for it when I know nothing about it?

We are told it will not raise our taxes. It may not this year or next; but any thinking man will know in the end our taxes will have to be raised.

This thing should have been brought up long ago, if it is a good thing, and give us an example of other counties that have the Health Unit as to how much better off now than they were before they got the Health Unit.

I am afraid this thing was brought up late so the people would not know how to vote on it, so there would be only a small vote, and of course it would carry.

No thinking man is going to vote to raise his taxes when he does not know that it will be to his interest, for we know in the end it will raise our taxes.—S. F. Avery.

MR. AND MRS. J. B. DOWNS ENDORSE C. B. COX FOR TAX COLLECTOR

If C. B. Cox were known by all the voters of this county as well as we know him, the race would be over.
—Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Downs.

Akins I. Collins

Republican Nominee For TAX ASSESSOR OF CHILTON COUNTY

To the Voters of Chilton County:

Again I want to thank the people for nominating me for Tax Assessor on the Republican ticket.

Now, let me insist on everybody voting the entire Republican ticket on November 4th. By doing this I feel like we will win by the biggest majority in the history of our county.

I hereby renew my pledge, if elected to the office of Tax Assessor, to give the people of Chilton County the very best service possible.

Yours for the success of the Republican party.

AKINS I. COLLINS.

(Paid political adv., by Akins I. Collins, Clanton, Ala.)

NO REASON TO MAKE CHANGE OF PARTY THAT IS IN POWER

Editor Union-Banner:

As we are called upon on next Tuesday, November 4th, to select our officials, I desire to say a few words to the Republican voters through the Union-Banner.

On August 8th, last, we selected our Republican nominees, all of whom are good, efficient and honorable men and are entitled to the support of all loyal Republicans. Chilton county has in the past kept our county affairs in the hands of the people and by electing Republicans. Now we have no reason whatever to make a change.

I trust that all Republicans will turn a deaf ear to any of those of the Democratic faith who try to persuade you to split your ticket and cast your vote for any Democrat on the local ticket.

We settled all our little personal affairs in the primary and it behoovesus to stand united on next Tuesday and make our mark under the Republican emblem, as in the past.

Yours for the success of our entire ticket.—W. M. DeVaughn.

DANGER OF TUBERCULOSIS

"More pepole died in Alabama of Tuberculosis during April of this year than during any month for the past three and one-half years," announced Richard Hudson, Executive Secretary of the Alabama Tuberculosis Association, today in discussion the vital statistics released by the State Board of Health for the first six months of this year.

The six months period shows a slight decrease in the number of deaths from the disease over a like period for the past four years. There were 1,129 deaths reported for this year. Of this number 422 were white and 707 were negro deaths.

The State Board of Health will establish one or more mobile tuberculosis diagnostic clinics in 1930 that will operate in the various counties of the state. This project is in line with the best procedure as is being practiced by many of the states in their program of tuberculosis control and should play an important part in the control of tuberculosis in Alabama, stated Mr. Hudson.

"Predictions based upon the experience of the 19 million policy-holders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance indicate that 1930 will see the lowest death rate from tuberculosis in its history. There has been a reduction of 65 per cent in the death rate in the past twenty years and that for every three lives that were lost from tuberculosis twenty years ago, only one life is sacrificed today, and yet Alabama has not shown the decline which the nation enjoys," concluded Mr. Hudson. We are confident that the emphasis being placed upon the control of this disease by State and County Health departments and State and County Tuberculosis Associations will do much to reduce the number of deaths in this state.

J. D. COLLINS URGES SUPPORT OF REPUBLICAN TICKET

Editor Union-Banner:

As the election is now near at hand, I wish to say a few words through your columns. I want to ask all of the Republicans to stay with the Republicans, and vote the straight ticket from head to foot. From Geo. Weaver, for Senator, and all the county ticket, don't leave off a man.

And as you know, we have been turned loose as to the state officers. So I want to say I expect to vote for Miller for Governor, Bankhead for United Senator, and Hugh D. Merrell for Lieutenant Governor.

Some claim Miller is not progressive. I think things have been too progressive. So we have, as individulas, got to close down. So I believe the state needs to do the same and I believe Judge Miller is the man to do the job.—J. D. Collins.

JAMES EARL PRICE DIED

Little Earl son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Price died Sunday morning, October 26 with diptheria. He had been sick for three days when God called him home but no tongue can tell the sufferings that he endured. He is now resting sweetly in the arms of Jesus, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for such is the kingdom of Heaven."

Little Earl was born, May 26, 1928 and departed this life November 26 1930. His age was 2 years and 5 months.

All was done for him that loving hearts and kind hands could do to keep him with us. But God needed him as a jewel in his Kingdom and none can stay the hand of God. To the sorrowing parents and many of the loved ones we would say weep not, little Earl is only sleeping to awaken again to welcome you with outstreched hands in a better and a friendlier world.

He was a sweet and loving jewel in the home but is now a brighter jewel in Heaven. He was laid to rest at Shiloh cemetery, with Rev. Nelson officiating.

Little Earl leaves to mourn, his father, mother, four brothers and five sisters, besides many loving relatives and friends. But let us be submissive to God's will for he is the one that knows best and he needed little Earl in his kingdom. He is only gone on ahead and is waiting to welcome us.—Mrs. Ida Burkhalter.

ANOTHER ENDORSEMENT FOR C. B. COX

To all voters of Chilton County:

The time for electing our county officers is near.

Of course we are all interested in our own county ticket. We have a good set of men out for each place, and one excellent lady for member of the Board of Education.

May I say a word to you especially about Mr. C. B. Cox, for Tax Collector. Have been closely associated with him for some time. He is honest, reliable and fully competent to give service to all. Hope my friends on both sides will consider his candidacy election day. To vote for him you support a man that stands 100 per cent for the things you stand for, the right.

Yours truly,

T. S. PYRON.

O. M. CARTER ENDORSES COX FOR TAX COLLECTOR

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 29, 1930.

To the Voters of the County:

Would like to say just a word to you before the election. I am not in politics, nor do I take any active part in it, but this time I can say that I am especially interested in the election of Mr. C. B. Cox, as Tax Collector.

Everyone knows Charley and knows that whatever he takes hold of to do, he does it right. I have no fear in saying the people will make no mistake in electing him Tax Collector. He is thoroughly reliable and able to give good service to all the tax payers. I don't know of a man in the county better qualified than he, nor one who the people would be prouder of as their Tax Collector.

I invite your serious consideration of this matter before casting your vote, then I believe you will vote for him, and by so doing I feel like you will never have cause to regret it.

Yours truly,

O. M. CARTER.

E. D. WHITE ENDORSES C. B. COX FOR TAX COLLECTOR

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 28, 1930.

To the Voters of Chilton County:

I rarely ever take any part in politics and am not much of a writer, but I would like to say just a few words in the interest of one man, and that is Mr. C. B. Cox, for Tax Collector. As I see it, and I believe a majority of the voters of the county see it as I do, we should be glad to have an opportunity to elect a man like Charlie. He is a home-grown boy, born and raised in our county, has by hard work made a success of his business, and now for the first time asks the voters to elect him as Tax Collector. Charley is thoroughly fitted for the place, well qualified in all respects, to administer the affairs of the office that would be a credit to the county. Honest voters, let's put this man in. I have good reason to believe he will be elected. Thanking you, I am.

Very truly,

E. D. WHITE.

County Gave Majority for Heflin and Locke. Jeffers is Ahead of Banks For Congress. Weaver, Republican, Leads Gragg and Duncan for Senate. Pitts Wins for Representative; Akins Collins for Assessor; Will Culp for Collector; Sanders, Cobb and Mims.

At noon Wednesday some incomplete, unofficial returns from every box in Chilton County had been received. The figures, while not complete, are regarded as enough to settle the result, as it is not considered possible that enough change will be made in the final figures to alter the result as now shown.

In the race for United States Senator Tom Heflin carried Chilton County. The vote was Heflin 1,616 and Bankhead 1,138, a majority of 478 for Heflin. There are six boxes not reported in this race.

Hugh Locke carried Chilton County for Governor. His vote was 1,516, while Judge Miller received 1,190. A majority of 326 for Locke. There are six boxes not reported in these figures.

In the race for Congress, Major Lamar Jeffers holds a lead over E. D. Banks. The figures at hand show Jeffers received 1,119 votes, Banks 826, a majority of 293 for Jeffers. There are eight boxes not reported in these figures.

Judge G. W. Weaver, Republican, has the lead in the three-cornered race for State Senator, against J. G. Duncan and Dr. V. J. Gragg. The vote as shown by returns at hand is Weaver, 1,342, Duncan 984, Gragg 762. Returns from Shelby and Autauga Counties will have to be gotten before the result of this race will be known. Returns from six boxes in Chilton County have not come in on this race.

Percy Pitts will go back to Montgomery again as our Representative in the Legislature. He received 1,884 votes Tuesday to his opponent, Howard Oden, 1,181, a majority of 703 for Pitts. Figures for five boxes are not returned in this race yet.

For Tax Assessor Akins Collins ran far ahead of his opponent, A. D. Martin. The vote was Collins 1,929, Martin 1,236, a majority of 693 for Collins. There are four boxes not reported in this race.

For Tax Collector Will Culp held the lead over Charley Cox at the end of a spirited race between the two. Culp has 2,059 votes and Cox 1,470, a majority of 589 for Culp. There are only two boxes not reported in this race.

Perhaps the hottest, and certainly the closest race of all was for Sheriff. Gillespie, Republican, got out ahead of Nivens, Democrat, by only a small majority. The vote was Gillespie 1,884, Nivens 1,708, a majority of 176 for Gillespie. All boxes in the county reported in this count.

For Member of the School Board, W. L. Sanders received 1,823, and Mrs. Parnell 1,112, a majority of 711 for Sanders.

For Commissioner of the First District, Jos. E. Cobb received 1,180 and Killingsworth 1,089, a majority of 715 for Cobb. Six boxes not reported in this race.

For Commissioner of the Second District, J. M. Mims received 1,817 and S. M. Edwards 1,158, a majority of 659 for Mims. Five boxes not given in this report.

The official count will be held on Friday of this week, but it is practically certain that the result will remain as indicated in these incomplete and unofficial returns.

Below is a tabulation of the vote as cast at every box in the County, as it was reported up to Wednesday noon:

KIWANIS CLUB HONORS BOYD

Resolution In Appreciation of Service Rendered To Community

The Kiwanis Club of Clanton, at its weekly meeting last Thursday, took advantage of the opportunity to express its commendation of the fine community spirit of one of its members, Mr. H. G. Boyd, who had resigned as a member of the Club on going to Selma.

The resolution was presented to the club and read by Cohen E. Stapp, after which it was unanimously adopted by a rising vote. The words of the resolution are as follows:

Whereas, Mr. H. G. Boyd has tendered his resignation as a member of the Kiwanis Club of Clanton, owing to his removal from Clanton to Selma, and

Whereas, Mr. Boyd has been, since the organization of our club one of our most faithful members and one of our most earnest workers in every cause which has been undertaken by our club, and

Whereas, his removal from our city is a distinct loss not only to the Kiwanis Club, but to the community of Clanton and Chilton County as well, therefore, be it

Resolved: 1. That we, the members of the Kiwanis Club of Clanton, express to Mr. Boyd our sincere regret that he has decided to leave our town and county;

2. That we appreciate most highly the faithful manner in which Mr. Boyd has served the better interests of our club, our town, and our county, as a member of this club and through every other means possible;

3. That in parting with him as a member of our club and as a citizen of our community, we feel the loss of a very valuable friend who has always shown himself able and willing to champion in a big-hearted and patriotic way every measure for the progress and welfare of our community.

4. That we commend Mr. Boyd to the city of Selma as one of the most valuable assets any community could acquire, as a business man of the highest type and ability, as a citizen who can be depended upon to do more than his part in the upbuilding of the community.

5. That a copy of this resolution be made a part of the permanent records of this club; that a copy be given to Mr. Boyd as a token of the friendship and warm personal admiration that we hold for him; and that a copy be sent to the Kiwanis Club of Selma.

Mr. Boyd, who was present, was very deeply moved by this expression from his friends and fellow-members of the club. He spoke very sentimentally of his experiences while a citizen of Clanton, and it was evident that while he goes to a larger field of responsibility in Selma, yet he regrets to leave Clanton.

Lakeman-Prather

An interesting marriage of the past week was that of Miss Chistine Prather, daughter of J. D. Prather of Haleyville, and John M. Lakeman, which took place Thursday evening, October 29, at 8 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. J. C. Turner in Owenton.

The marriage vows were pronounced by the Rev. O. K. Lamb, of Tuscaloosa and the wedding music was directed by Miss Ruth Garret, pianist, assisted by Mrs. O. K. Lamb, who sang. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was exceedingly pretty in a costume of wine-colored chiffon velvet. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses. Miss Betty Lakeman, cousin of the bridegroom and only attendant, was in a frock of green crepe and had an arm bouquet of pink roses. Steve Merrit served as best man. An informal reception for the bridal party and wedding guests followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Lakeman left for a motor trip to Washington, D. C., for their wedding trip.

Mrs. Lakeman is among the attractive members of the young contingent, and Mr. Lakeman a graduate of the University of Alabama, is an engineer connected with the Alabama Power Company.—B'ham News.

CENTRAL SINGERS GO TO PROVIDENCE NEXT SUNDAY

The Central Singing Society meets at Providence in Beat 10 next Sunday afternoon, November 9th. It is hoped that a goodly number of singers and listeners will meet with the class at Providence. We especially hope that it will be so that our chairman, Prof. W. M. Devaughn, can be with the class again; Prof. Devaughn has been unable to attend for three Sundays during the past month, and his presence has been greatly missed.

The society met at Concord last Sunday afternoon, and was opened by T. E. Wyatt. Prof. O. L. Devaughn, the 1st vice chairman, then came in and the remainder of the program was turned over to him. The singing was very fine and enjoyed by all. Following are those who directed: O. L. Devaughn, S. V. Miller, Emmett Wilson, R. M. Robinson, R. E. Powell, Marion Easterling, T. E. Wyatt, Rev. M. Lockhart, J. W. Cleckler, Rube Miller and Chester Wyatt.

This was the first meeting of the society on its second round, and the interest seems to be holding up well. During the remainder of this month the society meets at Providence, Maple Springs and Friendship, respectively. There will be a fifth Sunday this month, and it will be determined next Sunday afternoon where the society will meet or whether it will meet at all. It may be that we will meet with some neighboring church which would like to have the society sing with them.

YOUNG MOTHER BURIED AT POPLAR SPRINGS MONDAY

Mrs. Mary Everee Duke, age 20, wife of Carson Duke of Poplar Springs community, died at St. Margaret's Hospital, Montgomery, last Sunday Morning. The remains were brought here by Martin and prepared for burial. The funeral was held at Poplar Springs Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. W. P. Lowery and Rev. J. W. Jones.

The young lady was survived by her husband and infant son, as well as her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Cox, four brothers and four sisters all of Poplar Springs community

As was attested by the respects paid at the funeral, the young woman was held with the highest esteem by her associates. She was a member of the church at Poplar Springs, and had been an active church worker as long as she had been large enough. She had been married about four years.

FARMERS, PROFIT BY GROWING WHEAT, OATS, PEAS AND CORN

"Why grow cotton at a loss when there are other crops that will pay better?" This question is asked by Sheriff Dudley Collins, who is still a very successful and practical farmer, in spite of having been a county official for many years of his life.

In answer to this question, he gives below an outline of his transactions this year on eleven acres of land on which he grew a crop of wheat, oats and peavine hay:

On 5 acres of wheat he used 5 bushels of seed wheat that cost him $7.50; plowing in wheat, $10.00; cutting wheat, $7.50; nitrate of soda $7.00. Total expense was $32.00, and he produced 43 bushels of wheat worth $75.25.

On 6 acres in oats he used 12 bushels of seed oats, $12.00; plowing in oats, $12.00; cutting oats, $7.50; nitrate of soda, $10.00; Total expense, $41.00, and he produced 175 bushels of oats worth $175.00.

Then on the 11 acres, after cutting oats and wheat, he sowed $13 worth of seed peas; cost of plowing in peas with harrow, $8.60; cost of mowing peas, $10.00; bailing 225 bales of hay, $22. Total cost of hay, $53.60. He produced 8 tons of hay worth $200.00.

Thus, it was found that the total cost of the whole operation was $127.10. The total worth of the crops produced was $450.25, making a clear profit of $323.15.

Figure for a few minutes and see how Mr. Collins would have come out this year if he had planted cotton on this eleven acres.

GRAVES PAROLES JOE EASTERLING

Although Joe Easterling, of Chilton County, was convicted by a jury and sentenced to from a year and a day to 13 months for distilling, an order issued from the state executive offices Saturday, announced Governor Graves' doubt of the man's guilt and his parole, subject to continued good behavior. He was convicted January 1, 1929.

Governor Graves exercised the authority conferred on him by law in not having the case investigated by the pardon board. It was understood that a Chilton County delegation, including Probate Judge Reynolds, waited on the governer in connection with Easterling's case on Friday.—Montgomery Journal.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Wilson announce the arrival of a baby girl at their home on Sunday, October 26th. She weighed seven and three-quarter pounds. Her name is Ruby Irene.

PLAN TO BUILD NEW JAIL HERE

Will Be Located On Potts Property Next To Courthouse

Chilton County has bought the J. M. Potts residence property immediately adjoining the courthouse lot on the east. The Potts lot fronts 96 feet on Second Avenue and extends back to the alley that passes between the courthouse and the Baptist Church.

Plans are under way for the erection of a new county jail on the back of the Potts lot. The structure will be along modern lines, two stories high. The ground floor will be used for living quarters for the Sheriff, and the cells for confinement of prisoners will be on the second floor. There will be a passage way connecting the second floor of the jail with the courtroom on the second floor of the courthouse so that prisoners in being taken from the jail to the courthouse will not have to go outside the enclosure.

The front part of the Potts lot will be left open back to the new jail building, and will be kept by the county for further addition to the courthouse when necessary.

The building of a new jail or the repair of the old one has been urged several times in recent years, both by county grand juries and the state prison authorities. When the question was taken up by the county commissioners, it was found that estimates on the proper repair and remodeling of the old jail called for an expenditure of a little more than $30,000, and the estimate for a new jail was for a cost of about $40,000.

The acquisition of the Potts property by the county is considered a wise step, as it is certain that more space must be provided for the courthouse not far in the future, and the building of the jail next to the courthouse is a proper solution of that problem.

FELIX DUDLEY GETS IN THE PICTURES

A friend in Clanton has handed to the Union-Banner a copy of "Sales Talk," a publication by the sales department of Bradstreet's. The little paper is devoted to complimentary remarks about the managers of the winning Ohio Valley Division team in Bradstreet's 1930 Hit-the Ball Campaign.

We are gratified to find in the list of pictures of these winners the familiar face of our old friend and fellow-townsman, Felix O. Dudley, who is and has been for several years manager of the Portsmouth, Ohio, branch of the Bradstreet Company.

Mr. Dudley was reared in Clanton. He was for many years Postmaster here, and was prominent in Republican political circles. We are delighted to note the success which Mr. Dudley has attained since he became connected with Bradstreet's. Before going to Ohio he was manager of Bradstreet's office in Montgomery.

UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA

This week the University of Alabama's football team journeyed up to Lexington to play the Kentucky Tigers—the Crimson Tide rolled to a 19 to 0 victory and carried in its wake the Wildcat drowned by the surging and rolling whitecaps of the Crimson Tide. Eight years ago the Kentucky officials kept Wade waiting in the cold hall till 1:30 in the morning and then rejected him. He told them then "I am going to Alabama and as long as I am at Alabama there will never be a Kentucky team beat me," and today he verified that statement in a big way.

Alabama rejoiced today to know that Auburn came to its own and defeated Wofford so decisively. The Tigers will be recognized. All hail to them.

This correspondent did not see this game but a more enthusiastic radio fan never existed. Hope each one of you heard it too. You can hear all of the Crimson Tides games by turning to WAPI or WBRCeach Saturday at 2 p.m. Tune in and hear the best game you have ever heard. By all means arrange to see the game in Birmingham Thanksgiving.

Lest one comes to believe that there is no news except our football team, we will quote some of the happenings.

Plans for the 100th anniversary are under way. All the committees have been appointed by Dr. Denny. The Senior commerce students have just returned from Birmingham where they have been making a tour of inspection. Dr. Denny leaves before long for Washington, where he will confer with a committee of president Hoovers', on the educational problem. The University officials are in collaboration with the city officials in regards to the government Hospital.

The Clantonians are working hard (it's no play here, we students really have to work, don't let collegiate moving pictures fool you.)

It won't be long till we'll be home and will we be glad? It has been some time since some of us have been home. We all like over here but it is always great to go back to the old home town.

All of the Clantonians did well on the past exams and are now pointing to mid-term exams.

Don't forget seniors at C. C. H. S. Uork hard for next year you will need it (ask some of freshmen this year.)

We will see you at the Thanksgiving game in Birmingham, because now the chimes are ringing "good night ladies" and we all go to bed.

FARM STOCK

ELIMINATING THE MILK IN RAISING CALVES

"To get cows, raise 'em," is an expression often heard among dairymen. That being true, the next question is how to raise them. In my preceeding article I showed that calves can be successfully raised on skim milk and that if the proper method of feeding was used, the skim-milk-fed cow would compete with her sister, who ran with the mother as a calf, in every particular.

It is estimated that about half of every hundred dairy calves come from cows where milk is sold as whole milk. The problem therefore is how to raise the calves with the minimum amount of milk. When you consider that a calf will consume around 50 gallons of whole milk a month, you can soon figure out what it costs to board that calf for the first six months, or until weaning time.

The nation has been absorbing for years in various experiments to find a substitute for milk in calf raising. Improvements are being made right along. Both the commercial and home-mixed calf-meals are now quite satisfactorily used. The problem of course is to produce a food that is easily digestible, that has a chemical content similiar to milk, and the necessary vitamines and proteins. Some of the materials commonly used are ground oats, linseed meal, and skim milk powder.

The mixtures are mixed with water of milk and fed in the shape of warm gruels. The proportion is about one part of meal to nine parts of water. The feeding schedule for a calf under this method would be about as follows: One pound of gruel daily, with the milk during the third week, and then gradually increase the gruel and cut down on the milk. The milk can be eliminated entirely at the end of 45 days and by that time the gruel will be running about 12 to 15 pounds a day. The gruel diet may be eliminated at the end of four months if desired as by this time the calf will be eating hay and grain.

A mixture recommended by the Wisconsin Experiment Station consists of 4 perts of ground yellow corn, 3 parts of ground oats, 2 parts of wheat bran and one part of linseed oil-meal. This is fed in connection with skim milk—very light at first and gradually increased.

Another method of feeding with a minimum amount of milk is to give the calf a good start on milk and then jump immediately to the grains and roughage. Many experiments have been tried and are being tried to find out just when the change over should take place.

For instance some breeders reccommend feeding the whole milk for three weeks and skim milk for five weeks before going into the grain and hay diet. That is a pretty short period in my opinion, although a raiser of Holsteins tells me that he has fed 170 pounds of whole milk and around 700 pounds of skim milk during the first six months and switched to grain and roughage with success. In all cases changes in feed should be made gradually.

There are those who believe that no substitute for whole milk is practicable. Therefore they may start with whole milk and gradually dilute it with water. One proportion recommended is three parts of whole milk to one part of water, after the first month, to be continued until the calf is eating a sufficient quantity of grain and hay. The success of this plan rests upon the ability of the herd owner to get the calves started early on grain and hay. And then to see that they eat it in equal amounts.

Powdered skim milk is also used for feeding calves. It is dissolved in warm water and fed immediately. It may be alternated with skim milk on farms where the supply of skim milk varies. The powdered milk keeps well and is easy to handle. The cost of powdered milk to equal 100 pounds of skim milk is about half what you can sell an equal amount of whole milk for. One pound of powdered milk to nine pounds of water, at a temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit is about right.

Another substitute for milk is whey, from the cheese factory. The whey needs to be sterilized as in a fermented condition it is bad for the calf, unless of course the cheese is made on the farm and the whey fed at once. Start at the end of the third week and gradually switch the diet from the whole milk to whey. At the end of six weeks the whole milk can be dispensed with altogether and grain and hay substituted.

Calves should never be allowed to become poor. This will stunt their growth and retard normal development. They should have good feed, good care, good attention and growing every minute. Legume hays are better than timothy for growing calves because of the minerals they contain for making bone and muscle. Alfalfa and clover hay must be fed carefully, as they are laxative.

SENDS SARGON TO ROUMANIA

President of Big Canadian Firm Says He Never Saw Anything To Equal New Treatment

"After taking five bottles of Sargon and two bottles of the Soft Mass Pills I want to say that in all my 70 years I've never seen anything to equal this remarkable treatment," recently said Jacob Gherman, president of the Western Hardware Co., Winunipeg, Cannada, who moved to Winnipeg, Canada, who moved to ago and has acquired extensive real estate holdings in that city.

"In fact, Sargon has been of such great help to me that I am sending a full treatment to two friends of mine back in my old home country. I wrote them what a wonderful medicine it is and how it restored my health after all other medecines and treatments failed.

"I suffered torture with indigestion after meals and only those who have had this terrible affliction know what a blessed relief it means to get rid of it. I also suffered from chronic constipation almost as far back as I can remember.

"After the first few doses of Sargon my stomach semeed to right itself, my nerves grew stronger and I began to sleep well and now I am in better health generally than I've been in 35 years.

"I use to take a physic almost every day of my life, but since taking Sargon Pills my bowels are as regular as clockwork. Their easy, natural action makes them especially suited to elderly people like myself. I only hope my statement will help other sufferers."

This is only one of the thousands of cases where grateful men and women have received such wonderful benefits from Sargon that they have sent it to their relatives and friends in distant lands.

Sargon and Sargon Pills are sold by Alred Drug Company, Clanton, and Thorsby Drug Company, Thorsby.

PERICARDIUM POETRY

Sometime and somwhere, out in space,
God felt it was the proper place;
To make a world as he did claim,
To bring some honor to his name.

Before God brought the world about.
I wonder if he did not doubt;
Whether since he had found the spot,
He'd better make a world or not.

Hence with Himself He then communed,
His attributes he importuned;
First unto truth the Lord applied,
To see if he was satisfied.

Truth looking down through coming years,
Declared that he was filled with fears.
And said He knew not what to do.
In case that man should prove untrue.

For truth unchanged has always stood,
And all He knows or is, is good;
And truth when taken all alone,
Is firm as walls of solid stones.

Then Justice rising to her feet,
Said, "unto everyone I meet;
I deal out justice as I should,
Alike to both the bad and good."

And hence from duty I'll not swerve,
I'll treat mankind as they deserve;
And if on good they do not trust,
All I can do is treat them just.

And then came Mercy mild and meek,
And asked if she a word might speak;
In gentle tones and accents mild,
She plead as would a little child.

Her lips did quiver as she'd speak,
The tears went streaming down her cheek;
Her voice was like the voice of love,
Or like the cooing of a dove.

She said, "if man should go astray,
I'll point to him another way;
And by the mercy that I give,
Poor fallen man again shall live.

"And his companion I will be,
Both on land and on the sea;
And should he fail to go right,
I'll be near by day and night.

"I'll be with him when young or old,
I'll be with him among the gold;
I'll be with him when he is poor,
When death is knocking at the door."

The Lord adopted Mercy's plan,
And made the world, also the man;
This is the way the thing was done,
Without a ray of light or sun.

Hon. Lamar Jeffers Visits School
(Ruth Elne Maddox)

Tuesday morning we had with us one of the most distinguished visitors we ever had in the history of the school, in the personage of Hon. Lamar Jeffers. He gave us much food for thought in his enlightened talk. He urged each one of us to look forward to the future, to utilize our time and opportunities, and to work towards a goal.

In another part of Mr. Jeffer's talk he showed the close contract we may have directly with our government through its representatives. He mentioned the great opportunities which we have of studying our government. The speaker prevaied upon us to thoroughly study our state and national problems and endeavor to draw sound logical conclusions. He reminded us of the duty of preparing ourselves to become good voting citizens. We were very grateful to Mr. Jeffers that from his busy activities he gave the school time for a visit. Through his personality he made us feel nearer to our lawmakers and to our government.

The Importance of Good English

The term "Good English" means the English used by the best speakers and writers of the English language. Therefore we may look upon it as the most nearly perfect English of the day. It is both simple and powerful and one of the ground pillars of the success, advancement, and enlightenment of the English world. It is the medium through which we communicate and exchange ideas and thoughts. Usefulness and prominence are common ambitions of people and to attain either, especially in a social way, it is of the most vital importance to be able to speak good English.

Just What Does Become of Millions of Needles?

Life is full of little mysteries. Tons and tons of steel, for instance, are turned every year into razor blades. Blades are used and discarded by the million. Where do they go? And pins. About fifty years ago it was calculated that enough pins had been made in England to cover the whole surface of the land. Since then their manufacture has gone on at an increasing rate. They are bought and used and dropped—and they just disappear. Somehow you can understand a pin disappearing, for it is made of soft brass, which soon becomes corroded. But what about needles? Needles are made of very hard steel. They don't wear out and their business ends retain their sharpness almost indefinitely. Yet one firm in England has been manufacturing needles at the rate of three and a half millions a week for many years, and for over two hundred years millions have been pouring out steadily from works at Redditch. Nowadays modern machinery enables one grinder to point 100,000 needles in a day. Every week Redditch sells enough needles to supply every man, woman, and child in the country with one apiece. Each of us loses on the average one needle a week throughout his or her life.

Sea Snakes

It is believed that sea snakes do not grow much longer than 12 or 13 feet, says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. Speaking of sea snakes found near the coast of northwestern Australia the National Geographic society says: "Sea snakes are frequently seen curled up asleep on the surface of the water. These reptiles are poisonous and grow to about 12 feet in length." Sea snakes are distinguished by the compressed, rudder-shaped tail, and they are unable to move on land. Their food consists chiefly of fish.

ANOTHER CAMPAIGN IS ON

The election of Tuesday is over and the result is known with practical certainty. But there is still a campaign in progress that has not been definitely settled yet.

Prosperity is up for election, running to overthrow Depression.

It's for the people to decide which will be chosen. Every man and every woman is privileged to ballot—every day.

Depression has no rightful place with a hundred and twenty million people, exchanging goods and services—capable—accustomed and willing to work—more highly skilled than other peoples—leaders in effiency and progressiveness—backed by the vast natural resources of the United States. When we make it possible for the man who works to have a job we make it possible for him to buy food for his family and so help all business, including that of the farmer.

The rest of the world is of small importance compared with that free market of 120,000,000 people—homogeneous—of like tastes, habits and aspirations—living under the same laws—free of trade barriers. Foreign trade may be troubled by tariffs and revolutions, but at their peak our exports represented only five and a half billions of dollars of gross business in a year out of a total American income of ninety billions.

Stagnation of circulation is what's the matter with agriculture and with business. Everyone can help to get that circulation moving again.

Government can't make Prosperity—alone. Bankers and other business leaders can't make Prosperity—alone. It's the people, united in opinion and purpose and courage, who determine Prosperity. They can elect it—none other.

Ballots that will be validly counted for Prosperity are of many kinds. Some one of them every man and woman can cast. For example:

Help a deserving man or a woman to get a little paying work—or, better, a regular job.

Spend wisely and not too timidly, and anticipate scheduled expenditures so far as is practicable.

Turn the deaf ear to false, mischievous rumors; and don't repeat them, if you do hear them.

Be willing to pay a fair price. Don't take advantage of the other man's necessity. Recognize that he has as good claim to a fair profit as you.

When a vampire that fattens on the miseries of others shows up, help to make him unpopular.

Discourage calamity howlers.

Keep business moving evenly, and remember that, to the average man, his job is his particular business. When possible, reassure him against his fear of losing it.

Save, but save wisely, not in fright. Invest for the profit that sound enterprise pays and for the added profit that will come after the hysteria of pessimism has passed.

DODGING THE REAL ISSUE

A well-known economist recently advanced the interesting argument that the present day political campaign against the electric industry has grown out of the fact that public officials are looking for a way to dodge the liquor question.

Prohibition is a passionate issue that arouses strong emotions in "wets" and "drys" alike. It is not, from the political standpoint, "safe." Only in those few states which are irrevocably "wet" or "dry" can it be argued without damaging the political futures of the campaigners.

Thus the office-holders and the office-seekers turned to power as the next best available issue.

Power, unlike prohibition, does not rouse personal feeling in the great mass of voters. It is a pleasantly abstract subject and one which can be misconstrued to the politician's heart's content.

In the face of all the known facts they have attempted to make a skeptical public to whom electricity is an almost infinitesimal part of the family budget believe the nation is menaced by a great power trust. If they have failed it is because they have been trying to do the impossible. The material for an "issue," in the political sense, just isn't there. Power has no place in politics.

It is safe to say that of all modern governmental problems, more people are interested in prohibition, from one standpoint or another, than any other issue. It is amusing to see our "saviours of the people" run to cover when a real issue, which must eventually be solved, appears on the horizon.

MORE FOR A DOLLAR

Various surveys, conducted in different parts of the nation, show that the purchasing power of the dollar is steadily increasing.

Last year commodity prices ranged from 15 to 40 per cent higher than today's level. As a consequence, the average income, from the standpoint of what it will buy, is appreciably greater than it was a year ago, but if the trend toward rising taxes of all kinds continues, the tax collector, not the public, will be the principal beneficiary of declining price levels.

OPPOSING MISUSE OF GAS TAXES

In a report to the Sixth International Congress, Colonel A. B. Barber, director of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, contended that taxes paid by users of automobiles should be applied exclusively to highway purposes.

It is significant that only one of the hundreds of delegates, representing 61 nations, made any exception to this phrase of the report. This delegate did not oppose it, but suggested that it be changed to read that as much of user taxes as possible go to the roads. Other delegates, however, supported Colonel Barber.

There has been a strong trend to regard gasoline taxes as part of a state's general funds. Public officials look on the tax as an easy way of raising money. A number of instances are on record where legislatures have used gas taxes for schools, general governmental work and the like. When this is done, the gas becomes class legislation pure and simple, with the motorist paying for something he doesn't get, and others getting something they don't pay for.

The fact that opposition to discrimination of this kind, as well as opposition to excessive tax rates, is being manifest throughout the nation, is encouraging. The public has been patient but signs are on the horizon that short-sighted legislators, by misuse of the gasoline tax, have run a good thing to death.

MORE ABOUT THE TARIFF

An interesting item having its bearing on the tariff situation appears in the New York Times of October 16th, stating that the American Metal Company has effected a large exchange of its stock for stock of the two British-African copper producing companies. Because of cheaper labor and richer ore the copper mines of the United States cannot compete with the mines of Chile and Peru, much less of Africa, where costs are lower than in any other part of the world. American interests have been acquiring copper mines in foreign cheap labor markets and curtailing production in the United States. The United States is the largest copper consuming country in the world, and also the largest potential producer of copper. In the absence of a protective tariff, nevertheless, the American copper mining industry is gradually being strangled, thus contributing substantially to unemployment.

Still another interesting item in the Times of the same date records that international oil companies now rapidly increasing their imports of gasoline and crude oil to the United States, have refused to curtail their production. The American oil industry is operating under an imposed limitation of production to prevent a disastrous over-supply of crude oil and gasoline. While home production is limited in this greatest oil producing and oil consuming market in the world, the absence of a tariff on oil and oil products enables the companies producing in foreign countries to increase their imports indefinitely, and destroy the beneficial effects sought in home limitation. This of course is productive of unemployment in the United States.

These items in one day's news prove how the success of big interests in preventing the imposition of adequate tariffs on American commodities is contributing directly to unemployment in the United States. Yet there are politicians and journalists who are making the welkin ring with their outcry for further tearing down of the barriers between foreign cheap labor production and American production; for the displacement of the product of American labor by cheap foreign labor. The pretense is actually made that further displacement of American by foreign cheap labor production would decrease unemployment in the United States. Of course such an argument is not sincerely presented, but is evidence of the influence exerted with politicians and journalists by internationalized big business.

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

No matter what the result, there will be plenty of alibis, for the reason that there are so many issues, and so many candidates. In few elections in this generation have there been so many cross currents. In some states prohibition is the principal issue, in others it is unemployment and still in others farm relief. The more issues of course the more possible alibis after the election returns are in. If the Republicans run into a considerable slump in this election, and lose the House of Representatives, it is a good bet that the free traders from one end of the country to the other will claim that the Republican losses are due to the new tariff law. Yet, as a matter of fact, the tariff is an issue in this election in comparatively few states. And in the states where it is a major issue, the dissatisfaction is not with the principle of protection but is one based on the belief that the new tariff is not high enough on certain commodities produced in that particular section of the country.

Before the tariff bill was passed free traders declared that it would raise the cost of living and create resentment and reprisals from abroad against the United States. Neither of these predictions has been borne out. Commodity prices have continued to fall, and foreign countries are not fighting us, but on the other hand are still looking to Uncle Sam to lead the world out of the slump of depression. Even the most hardened free traders cannot claim that the tariff caused the depression in America because it was not enacted into law until long after the depression was on us in full force. Indeed there is good ground for believing that the failure to pass the tariff promptly added to length of the depression.

But the politicians who put out the alibis are never hampered by such things as cold hard facts. In fact the fewer the facts at hand the more daring and original the alibis. Fortunately, however, the alibi period is a short phase of our political activities and soon gives way to the preparations for the campaign to follow.

The season of alibis is approaching. After every contest we must have alibis. Each important baseball game and each strenous football contest is followed by a season of discussion, as to why it all happened the way it did, and what could have been done to prevent the happening of what did occur. Even bridge games are frequently slowed up by the seemingly inevitable "post mortems" following the playing of each hand. In no other profession or sport, call it what you will, is there more pleasure taken in the production of alibis than in politics. In a few days more the campaign will be concluded and the votes will be deposited in the ballot boxes. Then will come the counting, the flashing and radioing of the returns from Maine to California and back again, and then the inevitable "after the battle" discussions with the alibis and explanations.

The Democrats say that they expect to control the national House of Representatives and to cut down the paper majority of the Republicans in the Senate. The Republicans say, quite as confidently, that no such thing is going to happen, and that while the Republican majority in the House may be cut down a little by the customary off-year slump, it will still remain a clear cut majority ready to do business in support of the administration. In a few more days now the country will know which prediction is nearer the truth, although it is of course possible that the result of the congressional election will be a "dogfall," and that the balance of power will remain with the handfull of progressives who qualify as Republicans during the campaign and the cultivate habits of independence after the election. Some Republican leaders declare that if there is this kind of slump it would be less dangerous for the Republicans if they lose control of the House entriely rather than hold it on paper only to remain at the mercy of the Democrats and the so-called independents. Be that as it may, both the Republican and Democratic organizations are fighting for every district and taking no chances.

NO POLITICAL LABOR PARTY

Certain American intellectuals have renewed the agitation in favor of a new political party, to be known as progressive or liberal. They seek trade union support for the plan, believing that organized labor should form the backbone of the party they have in view.

In the labor movement there is no evidence of even the faintest sympathy with such a proposal. At its recent meeting the New York State Federation of Labor had before it a resolution intended to commit the organization, in principle, to the third-party idea. That resolution was rejected by a vote of 400 to 5, without being honored by a debate.

It is safe to say that a similar fate would overtake a third-party resolution at any other representative American trade union gathering, State or National.

American labor feels no need of a distinctive labor party. It is not conscious of differences of opinion sufficiently vital to necessitate the political separation of labor, as such, from agriculture, the professions, business, science and the other great interests.

The existing political parties are in a state of transition. Both Republicans and Democrats are wrestling with new or emerging issues and are endeavoring to decide what position to adopt with regard to those issues. In both parties there is room for different shades of opinion. In both there are reactionaries, moderates, liberals and progressives.

Organized labor adheres naturally enough to the Gompers policy of supporting candidates for office who are deemed worthy and progressive, regardless of their partisan labels.—Chicago News.

THANKSGIVING AS NATIONAL HOLIDAY

Thanksgiving season is near at hand and this gives rise to the question as to the origin of this festal day. The idea of a thanksgiving day goes back to antiquity. It was first observed in America by the Puritans, and was established as a national holiday through the efforts of a New England woman. Writing on the subject in the current issue of the National Republic, Mr. H. O. Bishop says.

"At this particular season of the year it is appropriate to tell about the woman who, after twenty years of patient effort, succeeded in having an annual Thanksgiving celebration in this country observed on the same day by all people.

"The name of this woman was Mrs. Sarah Joseph Hale. Few women, either before or since, have accomplished more big things for the betterment of men and women. I wonder how many people of the present generation have ever heard of this gifted woman? She was born at Newport, N. H., October 24, 1788, and died in Philadelphia, April 30, 1879. She was not a college woman, but was taught by her mother. In 1813, at the age of twenty-five, she married a lawyer named David Hale, who was a brother of Salma Hale, the famous historian and at one time a member of Congress from New Hampshire. Nine years later she was left a widow with five children. She was a genuine old fashioned American woman, and did not clamor for governmental or individual aid. She was quite content to go to work. In 1828 she became editor of the Ladies Magazine, which had recently been started in Boston. She successfully edited this publication until 1837, when it was merged with Godey's Ladies Book, published at Philadelphia. She continued with the latter publication until 1877.

"Editing a magazine is usually considered a pretty big job in itself. Mrs. Hale, however, seemed to find time for many other things. She organized the Seaman's Aid Society in Boston, which is the parent of similar organizations now existing in most ports. The completion of the Bunker Hill Monument was also partly due to the efforts of this little woman. She persuaded the women of New England to raise $50,000 for that purpose.

"Throughout her editorial work Mrs. Hale urged the practical advancement of women, advocating their employment as teachers and the establishment of seminaries for their higher education.

It was in the early forties that Mrs. Hale began her campaign for making Thanksgiving a national holiday and its celebration on the same day all over the country. It was then the custom for different localities to observe the occasion on whatever day happened to strike their fancy.

"For twenty years Mrs. Hale wrote editorials in her magazine, and personal letters to governors and presidents, in behalf of a national Thanksgiving Day. Her efforts and patience were rewarded in 1864, when President Abraham Lincoln saw the wisdom of her suggestion and decided to adopt her plan. From that day to this Thanksgiving has been celebrated by the whole nation on the fourth Thursday of November.

Mrs. Ed Bruce tells a story about a new kind of squash. She says while it is growing you can cut off a piece of it, enough for a mess, and the part left on the vine keeps right on growing. I guess that is one she heard about while she has been going around to the State Fairs.

While she was telling about the squash, Uncle Ed was standing by waiting for a chance to put in a word. When the opportunity came, he said: "Yes, you can make a pudding out of sawdust, but the more other things you put in it, the better your pudding will be."

Lots of folks were nervous Tuesday morning as the votes began to come in to the polls. As the election machinery began to turn the squeaking of the wheels brought a shudder to many of the candidates as they realized that the race was run, and they awaited only a few hours of time until they should know their fates.

The Baptists and Methodists of Clanton are in a life and death grapple with each other. Each has undertaken to lift the debt from their house of worship. The race is to see which one can reach its goal first. The Baptists will raise $6,357 and the Methodists will go a little deeper into their pockets to get up $8,500.

Dr. Ezell is leading his board of deacons in the Baptist drive. Dr. Childs is commander of his board of stewards in the Methodist campaign. I expect that the efforts of these churches will be crowned with success before this week is past.

The Methodist and Baptist congregations of Clanton each have a most creditable church and Sunday School plant. We ought not to rest on our oars one minute until both of them are paid entirely out of debt.

Mr. Avery sent in another letter this week concerning the Health Unit. We did not print it, because we do not see any use of doing so, since the voters of the county have settled that question by their expression at the ballot box Tuesday. There is no reason why Mr. Avery should keep on arguing about matters that have been already settled.

There was the usual crowd of election night visitors in Clanton Tuesday night. But it was an orderly gathering. It seems that the very regrettable occurence of two years ago has caused people to be more careful of their behavior at such places.

Mr. Fox is starting off this week with what he promises will be the real sale of the season. By order of his doctor, he must get out of business, and before he goes he intends to let somebody have a lot of mighty fine furniture, hardware, etc., at sacrifice prices. "After December 24th, I will never run a retail store again," said Mr. Fox, in discussing his plans. "I am going to take the advice of my doctor and quit now, while I can get out alive."

CRIME PROBLEMS AND INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS

The industrial preeminence of the United States is due largely to the fact that our best scientific and executive intelligences have given intensive attention to industry's social and economic problems, with marked success.

In contrast to this, we have failed entirely in handling the crime problem because we have, for the most part, given it over into the hands of emotional reformers, rather than logical, experienced thinkers.

Probably every literate American is aware that we have too many laws, too many legal technicalities and too much red tape. We know that these things give the criminal a tremendous advantage over society. But the agitation for more laws continues with unabated force.

The scientific genius that has solved our industrial problems can solve our crime problems. On the one hand are the factors of poverty, ignorance, disease; on the other, the factors of graft, political-criminal alliances and unenforcible laws. Until we approach crime from the standpoint of logic, rather than blind emotion, the underworld will continue to flourish.

FACTS SPEAK

Thereare 2,484,822 miles of unimproved dirt roads in the United States, according to the American Farm Bureau Federation, and many thousands of additional miles which have been only slightly improved.

There are 2,747,732 farms located on the unimproved roads, and 1,988,704 on the slightly improved dirt roads. Less than 500,000 American farms are located on roads which are passable every day of every year.

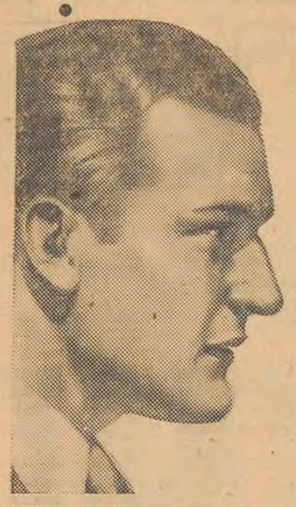
There can be no permanent agricultural prosperity so long as our farmers are isolated from their markets by a barrier of mud. Agricultural progress, both social and economic, will be retarded until our farmers have all-year contact with the outside world through the medium of surfaced, weatherproof roads.

Low cost, long wearing, serviceable surfaces have been developed which make it possible to provide rural areas with practical year-round roads. When every state embarks on such a program, we will have gone a long way toward permanently solving agriculture's problems.

THE SPECIAL ASSESSMENT IN ACTION

The special assesment has long been one of the favorite devices of the tax collector. And it is likewise one of the principal banes of the property owner.

The Santa Cruz, California, News, cites the experience of one if its linatype operators who, twenty years ago, purchased a lot for $3.50. He paid $50 to fence it and $30 for a sewer. An essessment of $402.60 was levied for street pavement, and to pay this he had to borrow money at a high rate of interest. Then he paid a park drainage assessment and $300 in city and county taxes.



Recently he tried to sell the lot for $500 and was unable to find a purchaser. And finally he traded his $1,200 investment for a $600 automobile.

This experience is not so unusual as it may seem. Local units of government throughout the nation have been passing through a "special assessment craze." The taxpayer can only be safeguarded by establishment of a definite debt limit on each piece of property involved in an assessment.

Bro. Bryan's Weekly Message

WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?

I wish you to think of some questions which we find recorded in the Bible, God's word. We are at Jacob's well in sight of Shechem and the location of the ancient Sychar in Samaria. This well was dug by Jacob himself and given to his children for them and their horses and cattle to drink of. One sees it there today just as it was thousands of years ago. It is dug through limestone rock to a depth of about seventy feet. It surely must have been known throughout all Palestine and Syria. Many people stopped to drink of its refreshing water.

The thing which brings this well closer and dearer to my heart is the fact that Jesus passed it and drank of its waters. It is this same Jesus who gives the water of life freely to all who accept it. We read that Jesus must needs go through Samaria. It was a plan in His life of which we are not to question. Christ approached the well and sat down tired, weary, hungry, and thirsty on the stone curb, made so hot by the burning, blazing Palestine sun. Now in God's plan for a life something remarkable happens in a little while. Right over toward the northeast is a spring in which there is water even all through the winter. This woman seems to have walked past that little stream of sparkling, clear water, and in God's plan comes up to that well.

Christ at once spoke to her. Friends, He personally spoke to her, and He personally speaks to us in these Scriptures these days. Jesus said to her, "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, give me to drink; thou wouldst have asked of Him, and He would have given the living water." Then the woman said, "Lord, evermore give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." Jesus gave her the living water which quenched her sins of selfishness in a worldly life. Christ right there rolled her past life as it were on a blackboard before her eyes, and as she saw it in its awful sinfulness she in deep penitence accepted the water of eternal life. She went back to Sychar and said to whom she saw, "Come see a man who told me all things whichever I did. Is not this the Christ?"

Jesus who has helped you and me in tempatations, in trials, in troubles, in disappointments, and in discouragments; Jesus who has helped you and me in the storms of life. He supplied all of that poor woman's needs just like He did your needs and any needs yesterday, according to His riches in glory. This Jesus, is not He the Christ? That same Jesus who awakened the sinful conscience of the Samaritan woman, is not He this same Christ who warningly taps so gently upon the heart of the guilty conscience today? Is not that Jesus who sat on the curbstone that day as the saved woman left her water jar and sins and forgot herself, ran hastily back to her old haunts to lead souls to the water of eternal life? Is not He the Christ who makes us deny ourselves and control our tempers, our thoughts, and our lives in obedience and subjection to Him? Is not He the Christ who makes us grateful, submissive, kind, and humble? Is not He the Christ who makes us think not of ourselves, but of others? Is not this the Christ?

O, my dear, sweet friends, I want you to look to this Christ. I beg you to cling to Him for salvation full and free, which He so lovingly offers you. I am pleading that you take Him as your Christ, at the same time I do not want to talk about Him as somebody else's Christ, for I do so love to talk about Him and think about Him as my Christ, my Jesus, my Lord, my Master, my King, and my all. I dare not begin the untried before me without so thinking of my Christ who is always near to strengthen and help and cheer me along the way. I just want to give my life and my all to thee, O Christ.

Another question which I would have you think about with me is one asked by Christ Himself as He was headed, we would say going quietly toward Calvary. The people were after Him, just after Him. He was so misunderstood that they followed after Him each step He took just as hounds. Every word which He spoke was misunderstood and pulled first one way and then another to fit into wrong interpretations. Many could not understand why He was wrapped in swadling clothes and placed in Bethlehem's stable at the time of His birth. Nay they could not understand why the coming king should have the lowly birth of a donkey's stable and be placed in that lowly manger. The Pharisees thought themselves better and bigger than Christ. Besides the Pharisees there were the Sadduccees, the Herodians, and the Essenes, other strict jewish sects.

Even in these last days, those sects have ruined and crippled the world. So many people think that they are right and nobody else is. There is only one who is right and that is Christ Himself. Jesus turned one day and said to them as they followed Him from place to place, "You people have followed me a good while, and I am glad that you did for I would love so much to help you." Then He turns and with a pointed, careful, loving, personal, positive, heart-searching, far-reaching question in His mind said, "What think ye of Christ? Whose son is He? If He were merely the son of David, David would not have said, 'Lord, Lord.' But think ye of Christ?" It is not what Joseph thought, it is not what Mary and Martha and Lazarus of Bethany thought, it is not what your neighbor thinks of Christ. It is what think ye of Christ.

We do not need to roll our responsibility over on someone else. We must express ourselves not only in words but also in actions too just to prove what we think of Christ. If we see someone shivering in the cold for the need of food and clothes we must not send them to somebody else when we could lend a helping hand. It is an opportunity presented by God Himself to you that you may shed abroad the light of Jesus Christ in a dark and sin-cursed world. What think ye of Christ? Do I love my neighbors as I do myself? That is, do I think of Christ as the one whose commands I must obey? He it was who said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength, and thy neighbor as thyself."

O, for the tenderness and the sympathy of Christ. It is the Christ who sat at the table with and ate with publicans and sinners. It is the Christ who cleansed lepers and opened blind eyes. It is this same blessed Christ who deals with us so mercifully and tenderly. He is merely the son of David, but He is the Son of God. He is the Christ upon whom God looked and saw Him on the river Jordan with a will to fulfill all righteousness and said, "This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased." It is this Christ the beloved son of God who was misunderstood throughout Palestine. It is this same loving Christ whom to follow aright is to be misunderstood. If you are a follower of Christ, or think you are, find out at once if you are misunderstood. If you are not misunderstood you had better question your motive.

Now what will help me bear all these things which come into the Christian life? When Christ was in the upper room misunderstood and suffering with the weight of the world's sins rolled on His tender, loving heart, Phillip said to Him, "Lord, show us the Father and it sufficeth us." Christ said to him, "Have I been with you so long a time Philip and yet hast thou not known me? He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." O, my friends He has been with us ever since our mothers rocked that cradle and sang sweet hushabys to carry us into slumberland. He has been with us all these years, and yet He turns to us this morning and says, "Have I been so long a time with you and yet hast thou not known me?" O to know Christ in the power of His resurrection and the fellowship of His suffering. Friends, I pause to tell you just as the apostle Paul has that I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day. Do you know Christ personally?

POULTRY

WINTER BROILERS ARE SUCCESSFULLY RAISED IN BATTERY BROODERS

Battery brooders have brought about a big change in broiler production. Broilers no longer are merely a byproduct in the raising of pullets for the next year's layers. Fresh broilers are now available the year round and the consumer is willing to pay a good price for them one of season.

The battery brooder has eliminated to a large degree the hazards of broiler production; not only that, it has reduced production costs so a fair profit may be realized under proper management, making it a worth-while enterprise.

A battery brooder allows one man to take care of many more chicks, as all the work is under one roof and several thousand chicks may be brooded on the same floor space required by a few hundred when a colony brooder is used. Fuel costs are lower, as a smaller area has to be heated.

Feeding chicks in a battery brooder is really quite simple. Battery feeding, however, is a real test of feed. A cheap, poorly balanced ration will not do; the birds will go to pieces, eat each other up, develop crooked legs, etc. The losses from vices alone will generally more than offset any savings that one may make by buying a cheaper feed. Growth is likely to be slower and feed consumption greater, when a cheap mash is used.

By feeding a good ration it takes eight to ten weeks to produce a two-pound broiler at a feed cost of approximately 25 cents per bird. On such a basis it is quite apparent that a fair profit may be realized at the price broilers ordinarily bring through the winter months.

Before Age of Baths

In the days of Cromwell public bathing, no matter how heavily attired the bathers were, was strictly forbidden and our Puritan forefathers brought this rule over to New England with them, so it is very likely that on warm days 300 years ago what bathers might be found on the beaches of Massachusetts were Indians, with, perhaps, an occasional backsliding Puritan.

Another Puritan law was that if a person must bathe, it should be in a dark room, with no mirrors, alone, and at night.

ONE EGG IS WORTH THREE NEXT SPRING— FEED THE HENS WELL

Winter is the most profitable time for a poultryman. Ordinarily, an egg in November or December is worth three eggs in May and June. Spring is the natural time for a hen to lay and most any kind of a hen will lay at that season, but it takes a good hen and proper care to get eggs in the winter time.

In the first place, be sure that you have an adequate water supply and that it does not freeze. Whenever birds have to go without water, they are apt to become constipated, go off feed, get out of condition and go into a winter moult.

The hen's diet should be composed of both grain and mash. Scratch grains are fed primarily to supply heat and energy. The time to feed it is in the evening just before the birds go to roost. Give them all the grain they will clean up before roosting time, but do not give them any grain in the morning. Birds with a full crop of scratch grains, or even a partially filled crop in the morning, are not apt to eat the amount of mash that a hen will eat if she is forced to go to the mash hopper when she leaves the roost. It is the mash part of the ration which supplies the egg-building materials, and the more mash we can get the birds to eat the more eggs it will ordinarily mean. A good egg mash should be kept in hoppers before the birds at all times. To give the flock an unlimited opportunity to eat mash, provide two running feet of hopper space for every ten hens.

In addition to the mash, grain andwater, a flock of layers needs oyster shells and a hard, acid, insoluble granite grit. A good grade of oyster shells is an exceptionally cheap source of shell material.

Little "Miss Clanton"

The lovely young lady pictured above is "Miss Clanton," according to the verdict rendered at the beauty show recently put on at the Wadesonian Theatre. Her real name is Marie Aldridge. She is four years old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Aldridge, of South Clanton.

Little Marie won first prize at the Wadesonian Theatre, being chosen by the judges as the most bautiful among some forty-odd contestants. As a reward she was given first prize, a diamond ring. In the contest she represented the Chicago Sales Company, as is shown by the sash she wears in this picture.

Through the courtesy of Chicago Sales Company, we are able to print this picture of "Miss Clanton," and we are sure it will be a delight to the many friends and admirers of little Marie, who are glad that she has been awarded such enviable distinction.

NOTICE

Parties making bids will furnish truck, tank, and all things necessary to deliver said gas to the various tractors working on the public roads. The Court reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

ORGANIZED SELLING IS ONLY HOPE FOR PECAN GROWERS

"One step from the tree to the table," is the slogan used by J. Lloyd Abbot, member of the Alabama Board of Agriculture, vice president of the National Marketing Pecan Association, which is handling large amounts of Alabama's big pecan crop. Explaining the down to the minute sales and handling methods of the national organization he said, Alabama is lucky with its pecan crop. The crop is the third biggest ever grown. It is proving a big thing for those growers who are facing otherwise flat pocketbooks due to the drouth. The price is attractive, especially to those able to study the market, grade their product, adopt a trade and ship in attractive package."

"The Marketing Association is backed by the full powers of the U. S. Government and its cheap money. The federal farm board has profited by past experiences in forming this co-operative plan and the work has started off on a sound basis.

"As to selling Alabama pecans, the Association has connections with the brokers in the large consuming cities of the U. S., who are able to handle both seedlings and the large paper shell varieties. Not all pecans are intended for eating direct, but the bulk of the smaller kinds and seedlings are ground for use in candy, in ice cream and confections."

"The Association will not undertake any great advertising campaign this year. Effort will be made in several channels to increase the use of pecans and to make them a 12 month table delicacy, instead of a holiday luxury. Pecans are used 12 months in the year and the Association holds that the sale of pecans can also be stablized. Shipments are now being made from 18 local shipping points and the first year of Southern co-operative effort will be a decided success."

Since every county in Alabama grows pecan trees, the news of this recent development in Alabama marketing will act as a stimulant to the trade and business. The pecan crop will help many a farmer to live on easy street instead of economy alley.

Alabama Has Big Crop

Alabama will produce 2,700,000 pounds of pecans this year. This is the third largest crop on record. The national crop is the fifth largest crop of record. Thirty million lbs. of pecans will be harvested in the U. S. this year. The sale of pecans at a profit presents one of the problems of producers that the federal farm board is trying to solve through the National Pecan Marketing Association. This is an organization of growers.

SUGGESTS BULLETINS FOR WINTER READING

Auburn, Ala., Nov. 3.—After a day's work in the field there is little time or inclination left for study, but with the decrease in outside work that comes with fall and winter months recent publications issued from Auburn should prove interesting and profitable reading for farm folks, says Director L. N. Duncan of the extension service, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn.

"One of our most tmiely publications for fall is 'terracing in Alabama,' Circular No. 94, written by L. C. LeBron and M. L. Nichols, agricultural engineers," Mr. Duncan said. "Another very timely bulletin is 'Curing Pork on the Farm,' Circular No. 56, by K. G. Baker."

"One reason why our dairy animals do not produce more is because of improper feeding," the director continued. "How this important problem may be solved is told in detail by F. W. Burns in Circular No. 93, 'Feeding Dairy Cows.'"

Other publications the director mentioned included "The Alabama Home Garden," Circular No. 98, and "The Home Orchard in Alabama," Circular No. 79, both by S. H. Gibbons; "Pork Production in Alabama," Circular No. 101 by F. W. Burns and R. S. Sugg, and "A Sound Agricultural Policy for Alabama," Circular No. 130.

Two experiment station bulletins that deserve study at any time, he said, are "Fertilizer Experiments with Cotton," Bulletin No. 228, by J. T. Williamson and "Experiments with Legumes in Alabama," Bulletin No. 232, by R. Y. Bailey, J. T. Williamson, and J. F. Duggar.

Any of these bulletins may be had free upon application to county or home demonstration agents or to Extionsion Service, Auburn, Alabama.

Of more than 1,800 textile plants located in Southern States, 1,038 are cotton mills, and they produce 67 per cent of the country's cotton goods. On July 31, this year, there were 18,605,734 active cotton spindles in the South, or 59.5 per cent of the country's total.

A study to determine the advantages to cotton growers of "one-variety communities" and to develop methods of adapting this system of production of cotton to sections of the cotton belt in which local conditions vary is to be made by J. A. Shanklin of the U. S. Bureau of Plant Industry.

POULTRY PROFITS

Proportionately, the raising of poultry has brought more profit this year than any other farm operations—and this in spite of the low prices generally prevailing, according to reports emanating from the middle western states. As a consequence, farmers of the central portion of the country are planning to pay more attention to their flocks than ever before.

They are being advised by poultry authorities not to be frightened by the present season of low prices. They are being urged not to do as generally as has been done in the past, stock up heavily after a good season and turn loose of everything after a season of low prices, such as the present.

A government bulletin states that "extreme reduction does not appear to be necessary" and warns that it might be "a mistake to reduce poultry numbers radically now."

Flock owners are being informed that the best way to cut down flocks for the fall and winter is to cull out rigidly all "boarders," or non-producers. It is pointed out that there is no such thing as a poor poultry season when birds of real laying ability are retained and fed, housed and cared for in the proper manner.

The authorities declare that one sure way of realizing a profit from farm poultry is to increase the egg production of the entire flock. By obtaining good stock in the spring to replace the old hens, the productivity of the entire flock can be raised.

Hatcheries themselves furnish the quick and logical method of building up the farm flock to a profitable egg-production level, particularly since the leading ones of the country are organized under the slogan "Hatchery Chicks for Greater Profits," to insure better flocks and square dealing.

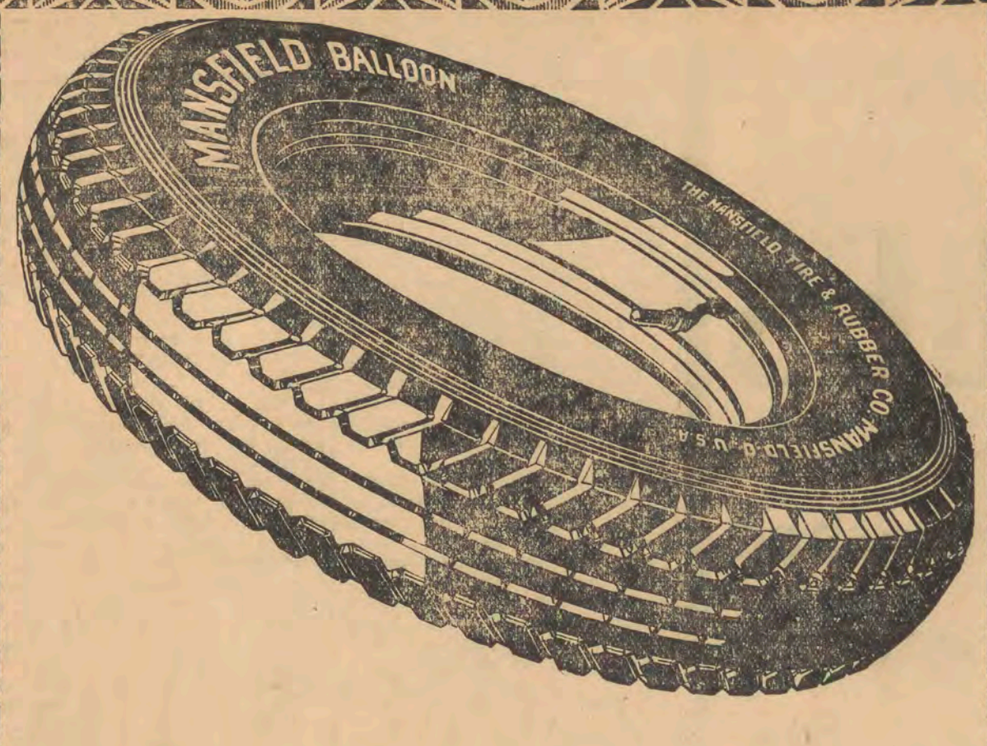
Higher egg production per hen and at the proper time, increased size of farm flocks offer solution of the farm poultry problem, regardless of prices.

"Bermuda grass makes an excellent lawn in the southern states. It is easily kept clipped with a lawn mower, has a smooth surface, and forms an even turf without clumps or coarse stems. The one objection to its use for lawns—that it becomes brown after the first severe frost—can be overcome by seeding the lawn with Italian rye grass in the fall. Italian rye grass dies in the spring about the time Bermuda starts its growth," says Sam F. Brewster, landscape specialist, Auburn.

"HIGH LIFE" WILL KILL CORN WEEVILS

Auburn, Ala., Nov. 3.—Corn weevils, which destroy thousands of bushels of Alabama grain annually, can be controlled by fumigation with carbon disulphide or "high life," a liquid which is heavier than air and deadly to all forms of animal life, when sufficiently concentrated, says Winford Ruffin, extension entomologist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The gas is very inflammable and will explode when brought in contact with fire, Mr. Ruffin warns. But it can be safely used if ordinary precautions are taken. The material is sold at drug stores.



"In especially tight cribs 10 to 15 pounds per 1,000 cubic feet is enough high life, but in ordinary tight buildings 15 to 20 pounds will be safer," the entomologist said. "In cribs that have large cracks in both floors and walls it is almost impossible to get the gas concentrated enough to give good control. The carbon disulphide should be placed in shallow pans on top of the corn and the bin tightly closed. The temperature must be 70 degrees fahrenheit or above for satisfactory results."

Since the gas is heavier than air it penetrates downward through the corn, killing the pests. The fumigation should last 36 to 48 hours, after which the building may be opened and surplus gas allowed to escape, he added.

Small amounts of seed may be treated by fumigating in a barrel, using about three ounces of carbon disulphide to a 60-gallon barrel, he said.

Before storing corn old bins should be cleaned thoroughly, was another point that the entomologist stressed.

Raphael Semmes Bridge, Jackson, Opens Nov. 11th

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 4.—A motorcade from Mobile, representing the Chamber of Commerce and patriotic societies, will attend the dedication of Raphael Semmes Bridge, at Jackson, Alabama, on Armistice Day and the Mobile Associations are joining those of Jackson in urging a large attendance from Southwestern sections of the state most directly benefitted by the construction of this bridge as an important link of highway No. 5, creating the most direct route from Chicago to the Gulf.

John Oliver, Jr., Post No. 85, American Legion, will make the dedication of the bridge the central feature of their Armistice Day celebration and will assist in the entertainment of all visitors. Members for the Lamar Y. McLeod Post No. 3, Mobile will also attend the celebration in numbers, furnishing several cars for the motorcade. The Alabama Department of Archives and History, in charge of the dedication of the fifteen bridges built by the Alabama Bridge Corporation, announces that Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, of New Orleans will take part in the program making acknowledgment of appreciation of the Semmes family. Judge Ben D. Turner of Mobile will preside, Dr. N. B. McLeod of Selma will deliver the invocation and the benediction will be by Rev. W. S. Guice. Other features of the program remain to be officially announced. Dinner will be served by charitable organizations of Jackson. They will have a football game in the afternoon and a dance at Legion Park that night.

The Mobile motorcade will leave the Chamber of Commerce at 8 a.m. November 11th, giving ample time to reach the site of the bridge by the time of the opening exercises at 10:30 a.m. The Mobile organizations are taking steps to give national prominence to the opening of the bridge, improvements of the tourist routes of which it is an important link, and to the excellent trade territory through which these routes pass.

A study to determine the advantages to cotton growers of "one-variety communities" and to develop methods of adapting this system of production of cotton to sections of the cotton belt in which local conditions vary is to be made by J. A. Shanklin of the U. S. Bureau of Plant Industry.

Of more than 1,800 textile plants located in Southern States, 1,038 are cotton mills, and they produce 67 per cent of the country's cotton goods. On July 31, this year, there were 18,605,734 active cotton spindles in the South, or 59.5 per cent of the country's total.

SOME GEMS OF TRUTH

It is the little foxes that spoil the vines. It is best to watch them.

We can't stop the fowls from flying over our heads; but we can stop them from building nests in our hair.

If we would keep a pure mind we must not give place and time for evil thoughts, for evil thoughts are a good foundation upon which Satan may build to get us in bad.

We should keep the heart pure for out of the abundance of heart the mouth speaketh.

We overcome the enemy by the blood of the Lamb and the word of our testimony.

Surely these are days of testing.

If our hearts condemn us not, then have we confidence towards God.

The name of the Lord is a strong tower and the righteous runneth into it and are safe. Proverbs: 18-20.

If we remember our Creator in the day of our youth and live to please him in all we do, then we will be happy in our old age.

When we remember how Christ pardoned us we will have mercy on everybody else.

Christians should always feel that God does all things well.

A better thing for Christians to do than boasting, is trusting. Boasting usually comes because one feels that he is able to do things. Trusting means that we know that we can do nothing but we believe God can do all things and will do for us when we ask him.

When a man who thinks himself strong is changed to see his own weakness he is fit to help his brothers.

TIT FOR TAT

Scientists have invented an earthquake announcer that goes off like an alarm clock. There is a much more general need for an alarm clock that goes off like an earthquake.—Arkanses Gazette.

"Join Red Cross," Urges Vice President Curtis

America's prominent citizens join in urging all men and women to become members of the Red Cross during the period of the annual roll call from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day.

The Honorable Charles Curtis, Vice President of the United States, says: "The American Red Cross is in a position to and does more to relieve those stricken by misfortune than any other organization in the world. Its splendid work has done much to bring a friendly feeling in all parts of the world for the people of our country because they sustain the American Red Cross. This wonderful organization is entitled to the liberal support of our people."

The Honorable Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, says: "No one can predict when or where disaster may occur or acute emergency arise. The American Red Cross represents our community insurance against such misfortunes. The organization stands ready at all times to render speedy relief to any stricken area in the relief of disaster in foreign countries. The Red Cross is the agency which carries on when emergency has disrupted customary modes and means of life in a community."

Six Foreign Countries Receive Red Cross Aid

Relief was given by the American Red Cross during the year in six foreign nations in disasters ranging from a tidal wave in Newfoundland, an earthquake in Persia, floods in France, to help the refugees from Russia and prevention of a smallpox epidemic in Costa Rica.

The $5,000 Red Cross contribution to Newfoundland, following the tidal wave, which took twenty-six lives and destroyed many homes and fishing boats, was the first from an outside country to reach the distressed people.

The sum of $5,000 was given to the fund for the relief of the Mennonite refugees of German descent, who had determined to leave Russia for new lands. About 13,000 passed through Germany, where the German Red Cross, aided by Red Cross societies of other nations, helped them. The majority are being transported to new countries in the western world and the American Red Cross has transmitted contributions from individuals in this country.

When Costa Rica was menaced by a smallpox epidemic, the American Red Cross sent fifty thousand tubes of vaccine, in two airplane loads, undoubtedly saving the country from a serious outbreak of the dread disease.

Siamese Fighting Fish Put Up Hot Contests

Meet Mr. Wat Chant Aiur Bopiter two inches of forked and flailing lightning, famed fighting minnow of Siam. This ferocious though diminutive fish lay immersed in a bowl in the New York aquarium, the object of admiration of a huge crowd, according to a report in Time, the Newsmagazine.

In Siam, fish fighting occupies much the same place that cock fighting once did in the United States. In each of Bangkok's ten halls there are several tables about which are grouped seats for spectators. When the audience is ready, two bowls, each containing a contestant, are placed on the table. A fight is guaranteed if they charge at one another and pump their noses on the intervening glass. The betting commissioner books bets, the limit being $44. The two fish are then dumped into one big bowl together. They charge furiously, first ripping off each other's ruby-red ventral fins. Next to go is the red top fin, while frequently they bite off chunks of side meat, drawing blood. With good fish a fight will last for six hours. Unpedigreed ones are exhausted in 15 minutes. After a fish has lost a battle he is bred no more but spends his declining days training small fry. Trainer fish constantly have their bodies mutilated as do United States fisticuff trainers. Their advantage over the United States equivalents: they can regenerate broken parts.

Damage Done to Trees When the Sap Freezes

Sap in trees frequently freezes during the winter. The freezing point of water is decreased by the addition of substances in solution. Since sap contains various solutes its freezing point is considerably below 32 degrees and accordingly it does not freeze in moderate freezing temperatures. Trees are further protected by the fact that the moisture content is not so great near the surface in the winter as it is in the summer. But the sap freezes during extremely cold spells and sometimes much damage is done to the trees.

The United States forest service says that in the Canadian woods when the temperature is 40 to 50 degrees below zero the ruptures of tissues in trees caused by freezing can often be heard as a sort of sharp report. As a rule freezing that produces sufficient pressure to rupture the tissues results in vertical cracks running up and down the trunk.

In succeeding seasons of growth the tree attempts to heal over these cracks but ridges of protruding scar tissue remain as evidence of the ruptures. The wood of trees is frequently frozen, but generally no serious rupture results because the moisture is evenly distributed through the tissue.—Pathfinder Magazine.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. O. D. Deloach entertained on last Tuesday, October 28th, honoring her little daughter Doris, 6th birthday. The Halloween idea was carried out very effectively in the living and dining rooms with Jack-O-lanterns burning. One of the most enjoyable features of the party was the fishing. The children threw the hook behind the Halloween curtain, which had witches and cats on it, and caught a little bag with a piece of fruit and candy. Many games were played. The children were invited into the dining room where they blew out the candles and were served jello, ice cream and cake.

Those enjoying this delightful affair were: Jessie Charles Mims, Wendol Parrish, Billie Bean, Charles Mims, Walter Mims, Thomas Petty, Charles Neighbors, Frances Smith, Sara Nell Sessions, Helen Maddox, Kathleen Armstrong, Frances Bean, Louise Maddox, Hazel Neivens, Lamearl Deloach, Mary Lee Gray and Doris Deloach.

EMOTION

A man was discovered by his wife one night standing over his baby's crib. Silently she watched him. As he stood looking down at the sleeping infant, she saw in his face a mixture of emotions—rapture, doubt, admiration, despair, ecstacy, incredulity. Touched and wondering alike at this unusual parental attitude and the conflicting emotions the wife, with eyes glistening, arose and slipped her arms around him.

"A penny for your thoughts," she said, in a voice tremulous. He blurted them out:

"For the life of me, I can't see how anybody can make a crib like that for three forty-nine." —Gas and Electric News.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

Those young Americans, who are anxious to get into the Brazilian fight, no matter on which side, should be taken at once to the nearest sanitarium.

Doctor Humphires, of the Weather Bureau, makes the important announcement that human attempts to produce rain are certain to fail. Those who have been engaged in this enterprise might now undertake to work out some tax plan that would satisfy everybody.

There is this advantage in the present industrial depression, that any change is sure to be for the better.

If the ice in Greenland and the Antartic region should melt tomorrow, the level of all the oceans would be raised two hundred feet. It is our opinion, however, that Tammany would not enjoy the change.

Uncle Sam's policies toward South America are the main cause of the rebellion in Brazil, says the editor of a Roman publication. This deluded Italian has been reading for years probably, the stories sent out by European news agencies. Some day perhaps, he will learn that the men who direct some of these news agencies are the most experienced and accomplished liars in all the world.

Many prominent American writers during the last year have been telling us that there was no safer investment than German bonds. This propaganda was being carried on at a time when the international bankers were expecting to market in America most of the German Reparations. These writers are keeping very quiet just at present, but they will probably break out again along some new line trying to hoodwink the American people for the benefit of foreign interests.

THOMAS, THE HONEST DOUBTER

LESSON TEXT—John 11:14-16; 14:5-8; 20:24-29; 21:1, 2.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God.

PRIMARY TOPIC — Learning to Trust Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Thomas, the Man Who Wanted to Be Sure.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Learning to Trust Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Value and Peril of Doubt.

The name Thomas means "a twin." His alternate name, Didymus, means the same. From the linking of his name with Matthew in the listing of the disciples, it is commonly inferred that Thomas was a twin brother of Matthew.

Thomas is constantly presented in the Scriptures as a man of skeptical mind, yet of unquestioned character. He was an honest doubter. The Lord is not displeased when men put him to the test. No honest skeptic has ever been left in darkness. The truth of Christ's declaration still obtains, "If any man will do his will, he shall know" (John 7:17).

I. The Fidelity of Thomas (John 11:14-16).

When Lazarus, the beloved brother in the Bethany home, was sick, the distressed sisters, Mary and Martha, sent for Jesus because they had come to know him as more than a mere man. Jesus, after a strange delay, went to Bethany. He knew, and apparently the disciples knew, that going to Judea at this time meant death. His mission in going unto Judea was twofold: to strengthen the faith of the disciples (vv. 11-15), and to restore to these sisters their dead brother.

Jesus fearlessly discharged his duty, though his life had been threatened. He plainly declared that Lazarus was dead. Thomas was skeptical as to Jesus' ability to raise Lazarus from the dead. In spite of this fact, his loyalty moved him to cast his lot with Jesus.

II. Jesus, the Way to the Father's House (John 14:5-8).

Jesus asked the disciples to trust in him even as they trusted in God, assuring them that he was going to the Father's house and would come back and escort them to heaven. Christ asserted that he is:

1. The Way to God (v. 6).

Jesus is more than a mere guide to the Father's house or a teacher. He is the way itself.

2. The Truth (v. 6).

He is not merely the teacher of truth, but he is the truth incarnate. In him we have the truth about man, what he is and what he ought to be and what he shall be in the future. In him especially we have the truth about God. Only as Christ reveals God can men know him (John 1:18).

3. The Life (v. 6).

Christ is not merely the giver of life. He is the very essence of life.

III. Thomas Makes Absolute Demands (John 20:24-29).

1. Jesus manifests himself to the disciples, Thomas being absent (vv. 24, 25).

He was absent at Jesus' first appearance after the resurrection, just why, we may never know. His absence deprived him of a vision of the Lord. Absence from the assembly of believers always occasions loss. The other disciples went to Thomas with the glad news of the resurrection, but he did not believe their testimony. His stubborn disbelief was such that he doggedly declared that unless he saw the nail prints and put his finger therein and thrust his hand into the Lord's side he would not believe.

2. Jesus manifests himself to the disciples, Thomas being present (vv. 26-29).

Observe:

(1) The Lord's kindness to those who have difficulties (vv. 26, 27).

Thomas deserved rebuke, but the Lord quietly supplied the evidence demanded.

(2) The Lord reveals himself to Thomas (vv. 27, 28).

Upon this revelation of himself Thomas was transformed from a doubter to a confessor.

3. The superior blessing of believing without sight (v. 29).

Having patiently furnished Thomas with tangible evidence of his resurrection, Jesus instructed him that to believe in him without such tangible evidence as he demanded was a higher and better state of mind than his.

IV. Jesus Reveals Himself After the Resurrection (John 21:1, 2).

Thomas had learned his lesson. He was on hand the next time the Lord revealed himself.

BIG BROTHERS BIBLE CLASS TO BROADCAST

The Big Brother Bible Class of Montgomery will broadcast an Armistice service on Sunday morning, November 9, from 9:45 to 10:45 over stations WSFA Montgomery and WAPI Birmingham. A special program has been arranged and the large auditorium in which the class meets, is expected to be filled to overflowing. The services of this class are regularly broadcast over WSFA, and the hook-up with WAPI will enable everyone in the state to enjoy the program. Music on this occasion will include war songs which were on the lips of everyone during the war. Hon. Luther Patrick, assistant Attorney General of Alabama, and popular radio entertainer, will give a patriotic reading. The principal address of the day will be by Judge Leon McCord, class teacher, who is one of the South's best known authors and lecturers. The Rev. Pearce McDonald, Chaplain of the Montgomery Post of the American Legion, will offer the prayer.

The Montgomery Post and the Montgomery Chapter of the Legion Auxiliary will be present at this patriotic service, and a special invitation has been extended to men stationed at Maxwell Field. Legion posts over the State will also be invited to send representatives or tune in.

Armistice Day is not a memorial day; it is a day of rejoicing. In 1918, when the news of the signing of the Armistice was received, throughout the entire nation people poured out on the streets and celebrated. Bells were rung, whistles were blown, sirens were tooted, and enthusiasm and joy were unbounded. Twelve years later it is fitting that we should pause in our daily occupations and recall the importance and significance of this great day.

The program of the Big Brothers Class in Montgomery will reach many who would otherwise not be able to participate in such a service. This will include the sick, and the mothers and fathers of boys who went across, many of whom did not return. Everyone is cordially invited to tune in on this program.

VICTORY DOLLAR DAY ORPHANAGE CAR

The Baptist Executive Board of Montgomery is promoting what they call "Victory Dollar Day" on Sunday, November 23rd. The purpose of this is to meet the payments now falling due on bonds issued some years ago on Howard and Judson Colleges, and the Baptist Hospital at Selma. The suggestion of Dollar Day has met with wide favor. While it is hoped and expected that many who are able will give more than a dollar, according to the suggestion of conscience. It is believed that nearly everyone can give one extra dollar to help take care of the solemn obligation and promise of the denomination.

Dollar Day envelopes will be sent out to the churches for wide distribution. The Baptist churches of our associations are urged to co-operate in this easy but important method of meeting an emergency upon our denomination. Dr. Barton, secretary-treasurer, reports an enthusiastic reception of this undertaking both from the associations and from many individuals in many parts of the state. The rural churches which do not have services on the fourth Sunday are asked to observe the day the most convenient Sunday. The church treasurer should hurry all funds to the Baptist State Executive Board, 127 South Court St., Montgomery, Alabama.

We also commend to the churches of the Unity and Chilton Associations a hearty cooperation in loading a car load of farm produce for our Baptist Orphanage at Troy, Ala. The two associations are sending a car jointly to our children, November 20th. Each church should appoint a committee to gather up all kinds of provisions, chickens, corn, potatoes, syrup, canned fruit, meat, etc., and bring it to Clanton to be loaded November 20th. We urge all our churches to help in this matter.

J. Z. MIMS, Moderator Unity Association; B. LAWRENCE, Moderator Chilton Association.

Green D. Retherford of Pike Roads was in Clanton Tuesday to take in the election. Mr. Retherford is guarding convicts for the State, on a road building project in Montgomery county.

Mr. Burber Farley is in Montgomery this week papering some houses out at Capitol Heights. The houses were built by Messrs. John Farley and Walter Teel, both of Claneon.

Miss Lottie Scarbrough of Birmingham is spending several days in and near Clanton with friends and relatives. She is the charming daughter of Cleve Scorbrough, who is a letter carrier from the Birmingham post office.

World's Winter Egg Record

These ten S.C. White Leghorns, bred by Marshall Farms of Mobile, broke the World's Record for Winter egg production in 1926-27 with a record of 727 eggs; an average of 24.2 eggs per bird per month for three successive months. This famous "egg making" ration . . . Jazz Scratch and Jazz Laying Mash . . . was fed exclusively.

"Cod liver oil puts liquid sunshine in Jazz mashes"

SUPPOSE you could make your own weather . . . have bright, warm sunshine every day this winter . . . wouldn't your birds be stronger, more vigorous and less susceptible to disease and infection?

Beginning this month, you will find LIQUID SUNSHINE in every bag of Jazz Poultry Mash, so that no matter whether your birds are housed up or not . . . no matter how bleak and cold the weather may be . . . they will not miss, even for a single day, the health-giving rays of the sun.

The highest grade of pure, refined Norwegian Cod Liver Oil U. S. P. is aptly called LIQUID SUNSHINE for it is rich in Vitamins "A" and "D." Now Vitamin "A," as poultrymen know, is essential for vigor (at all ages) and for successful reproduction. It is also a great resistance builder. Vitamin "D" is an effective preventative and cure for rickets, a disease to which young chicks are especially susceptible.

Put your flock now on this famous "egg-making ration." LIQUID SUNSHINE in every mouthful of mash they consume means new strength and new vigor in your "egg machines" . . . you should see a distinct improvement in fertility and hatchability . . . and certainly you will produce stronger and more vigorous chicks.

Proteins and Profits

This famous "egg-making" ration . . . Jazz Scratch and Laying Mash . . . has no records to break but its own. And the secret is the kind of proteins used in the mash. The principal source of the protein content is ANIMAL . . . . dried buttermilk and clean meat scrap.

That is why poultrymen are making such fine records year after year with Jazz mashes . . . that is why Jazz fed birds broke the World's Record for Winter egg production . . . that is why every National Egg Laying Contest in America makes sure the source of the proteins in its contest mash is from an ANIMAL source. Our new booklet "Proteins and Profits" is full of helpful information. May we mail you a copy?

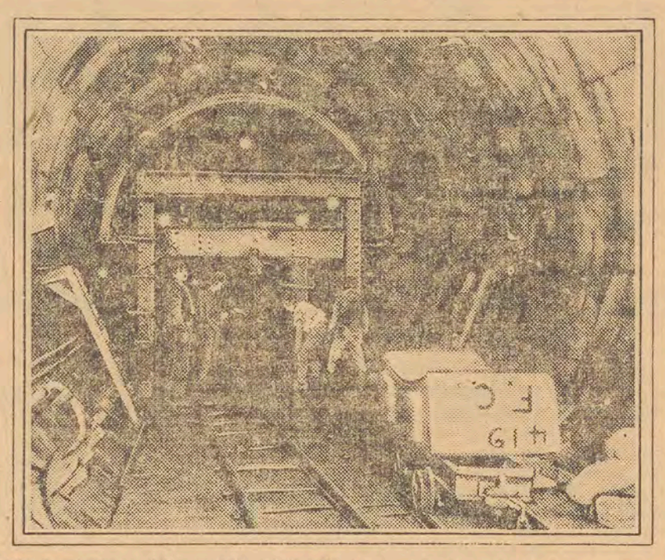
Ford Digs Two Mile Tunnel for A Billion Gallons of Water a Day

NEARLY a billion gallons of water a day—more than is used by the cities of Detroit, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Washington combined—will be the capacity of a huge tunnel now nearing completion at the Rouge Plant of the Ford Motor Company, Dearborn, Michigan.



The tunnel will replace the present water intake system which supplies the Ford plants with 500,000,000 gallons a day. At the same time the company is remodeling its power house to greatly increase the power output. Both improvements, costing several million dollars, are being made to enlarge the production facilities of the Ford plant.

Sixty Feet Under Ground

In constructing the waterway, the largest of its kind ever undertaken by a single business concern, the engineers are burrowing sixty feet under ground for a distance of two and a fifth miles. They have gone under main highways, railroads, street car tracks bridges, a cemetery and a creek.

One of the most difficult tasks was that of tunneling under Baby Creek at a point which is crossed by a railroad bridge and where also a large sewer is under construction by the city of Detroit. The piles that provide the foundation for the bridge and those driven by the company constructing the sewer formed a network on each side of the creek. It was the task of the Ford engineers to burrow under the creek, sewer and bridge, going between the piles without striking or weakening them.

Boring of the tunnel is accomplished by means of a shield—a large steel cylinder fourteen feet long and twenty one feet in outside diameter with a solid steel shell or skin two and a fourth inches thick. This shield has a bulkhead which is made fast near the front end. There are four openings through which the mud streams like toothpaste from a tube, as the shield is shoved forward by twenty powerful hydraulic jacks.

When the shield has been pushed forward sufficiently concrete blocks two and a half feet wide and five feet long, each weighing 3,420 pounds, are placed to form a ring around the circumference of the tunnel. One of them acts as a keystone so that the lining of concrete, which is eighteen inches thick, withstands the pressure of the earth. After this steel forms are set up and filled with concrete to form a solid inner lining which is also eighteen inches thick.

The present intake system of the Ford plant has a capacity of 500,000,000 gallons a day. The new tunnel will be able to carry 913,600,000 gallons.

MAPLESVILLE

Mesdames H. M. Nix, F. A. Shanks and Sallie M. Perry attended the Chilton County Parent-Teachers Association at Chilton County High School last Saturday. They report a splendid program.

The Halloween entertainment at Maplesville School Saturday evening was enjoyed by a full house. A nice sum was realized. We have one of the best schools we have ever had. The teaches are doing splendid work.

The Baptist Church is still without a pastor for the ensuing year.

The B. Y. P. U. has on an interesting program and is rehdering a splendid progress.

Mr. E. L. Stringfellow and little daughter, Julia, were week end visitors of his mother in Tuscaloosa.

Mrs. Sallie J. Shanks has returned from a visit to Selma and other points.

Mr. Abney Brown of the University of Alabama spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Brown.

The many friends of Mr. J. P. Payne rejoice that he has returned home from the Hospital in Selma, where he underwent a serious operation.

Mr. R. C. McFerris, Mrs. Mollie McFerris, Mrs. James Day, and Miss Herman Carter were guests of the Shanks families Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. J. P. Payne and Mrs. C. L. Stringfellow made a business trip to Clanton Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Smoke and daughter, Annie Belle, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Haynes and daughter, Myrtle, of Selma, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Shanks Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Irvin and son, of Portersville, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Cothran and Mrs. Paul Philips of Selma, Alabama, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Irvin Sunday.

SCROGGINS'S STORE BURNED EARLY SUNDAY MORNING

An early morning blaze, about 1 o'clock last Sunday morning, completely destroyed the store house and contents of Jim Scroggins at West End Clanton. The fire siren was turned on but the fuse blew after one short toot was given, and not many paid any atetntion to the alarm. Only six of the sixteen fire fighters were aroused, and the fire was so far gone that the few who were there could do nothing toward extinguishing it or saving the contents.

Isabella High School News

Isabella Defeats Montevallo 12-6

Isabella seems to have awakened to a new spirit last Friday when they played Montevallo at Isabella. During the first quarter Montevallo made two threats to score, bringing the ball within three yards of the goal line but each time they were held for downs.

The second quarter was a punting battle between the two teams. After the half, each team seemed to have come back with a determination to win. Isabella kicked off. Montevalle made a nice return run. Luther Mims made a pretty broken field run for thirty yards through the Montevallo line, and the 3rd quarter ended with the score 6 to 6.

Isabella made several nice off-tackle runs during the next quarter which finally placed the ball within a few feet of the Montevallo goal line. Isabella made a trick pass, which was received by Burnette, who went over for the touchdown. Isabella tried to buck the line for the extra point but found Montevallo too stiff to buck it over. Then leaving but a few minutes to play, the teams did not show any more good plays. The game ended with the score 12 to 6. After the game the boys on each team were served plate lunches by the Home Economics girls at the school.

The Community fair which was held last Friday was well attended. At the lunch hour plates were served in the Home Economics room. Dr. Nix of Maplesville made a short talk explaining the health unit.

On Saturday night, November 8th, two string bands will be at the school auditorium to entertain with a musical. Admission is 15 and 25 cents. Proceeds go for the church benefit and everybody is invited.

A correction is to be made pertaining to those who helped with the exhibit carried to the State Fair at Montgomery. They are: Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin, Miss Ethel Mize, Miss Dorthy Manning, Miss Nellie Hayes, Miss Cora Belle Maddox, Mr. H. R. Oden, Mr. Earle Thomas and Mr. O'Neal Turner.

Southern Architecture

An example of the real architecture of the South is given in the American Home.

Most persons think of southern architecture as having tall white columns and warm brick walls. While many houses of this type were built, these were the mansions.

The less wealthy inhabitants of the southern colonial days lived in attractive small houses of brick, which were much like the houses of the same period in New England, except that they were less austere. Chimneys usually were put at the ends of the house, and porches and dormer windows were common.

Oldest City in World?

It is generally supposed that Damascus, the chief city of Syria, is the oldest city in the world. Although positive evidence is lacking, there is some reason for believing that its site has been continuously occupied by a city longer than any other spot on the earth. The Jewish historian Josephus, who probably based his assertion on a Hebrew tradition, attributed the foundation of Damascus to the great-grandson of Noah.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Famous Santa Fe Trail Linked With Coronado

It was in 1541 that Coronado followed the future line of the Santa Fe trail, probably as far as the site of Wichita, and that date, though the suggestion as to earlier years fails to response, deserves some sort of commemoration. The Santa Fe trail or portions of it, must have known the sweep of more than one ancient migration before Coronado's day—perhaps descending from the North, perhaps coming up out of the crowded old civilizations of the South—but its known history began with Coronado.

And what a history it was through more than 300 years! It was the first of the great beaten tracks which joined the American East and West. It never approached in populousness those later northern routes that went from the Mississippi to Oregon and California, nor was its traffic notable for the riches carried. But where the other trails went into an almost virgin territory, the Santa Fe trail linked two opposing civilizations.

West and south along its course, following the pioneers, the traders and the buffalo hunters, went that tide from the Middle West which battled and finally supplanted and transplanted traditions and life of far-off Spain. —Boston Herald.

Conventional Idea of Lightning Found Wrong

At a meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science in 1856 the Scottish engineer, James Nasmyth, son of a landscape painter, stated that "in no instance among the many thunderstorms whose progress he had most attentively watched had he ever observed such forms of lightning as that usually represented in works of art; in all such the artists invariably adopt a conventional form, namely, that of a zigzag combination of straight lines."

Nasmyth believed the error of the artists originated in the form given to the thunderbolt in the hand of Zeus as sculptured by the ancient Greeks.

Some decades after these remarks were uttered the photography of lightning began to be common, and the photographs all showed that he was right in believing that lightning is never truly zigzag. Its path generally includes many sinuous curves, and it often branches, but a sharp angle is very rarely seen in a photograph, and it is then doubtless an effect of perspective.—Charles F. Talman in "Why the Weather."

Mirror Superstition

It is within the experience of almost every one to encounter bad luck within seven years, whether or not one breaks a mirror, spills salt or walks under a ladder. Such beliefs are pure superstition. Brand's Observations on Popular Antiquities says about the matter: "Mirrors were used by magicians in their diabolical experiments, and in ancient times was practiced a kind of divination by the looking-glass; whence, it should seem, has been derived the present popular notion, according to which the breaking of a looking-glass is accounted a most unlucky accident, being ominous of the loss of his best friend by the preson to whom it belongs. Grose gives it as betokening death in the family circle, commonly of the master."

Size of Canada

Canada is Britain's largest overseas dominion; bounded by three oceans. Coastal distance (per Canada Year Book): Pacific coast line, 7,180 miles; Hudson bay coastline mainland, 6,000 miles; Atlantic coast line, 5,000 miles—total, 18,180 miles. Canada's greatest width in due east and west direction approximately 3,050 miles; greatest distance between southerly and known northerly land extremities, approximately 2,870 miles. Canada-United States boundary, 3,085 miles long; 1,787 by land, 2,197 through water. Canada is larger in area than the United States, with Alaska, by 42,912,000 acres.

Ornate Royal Tombs

Every Persian ruler, like all the great rulers of all the lands, of all time, took great care to see that his body would be preserved and protected after death; and much money was spent in the erection of tombs and the carving of caves to receive these royal remains. Many of them can be seen today not far from the ancient city of Persepolis, near the Persian gulf. Some of these tombs were built of huge blocks of stone, but many others were carved out of the solid rock and their entrances then mortared up with stone.

Sturgeon Eggs for Tractors

The Volga river of Russia furnishes sturgeon from which eggs are taken. These eggs find a ready market throughout the world and are traded for tractors, electrical machinery and cotton goods. A third of the weight of the female sturgeon is sometimes accounted for by the roe and when it is cured and marketed it is caviar, a highly-priced and delicate food. We import 300 tons from Russia which comes to over $600,000 annually.

Hon. J. O. Thompson Here Last Thursday

Representaive of Farm Board Addressed Farmers

Hon. Jos O. Thompson, representative of the Federal Farm Board spoke in Clanton at the courthouse last Thursday. The purpose of Mr. Thompson's visit here and the subject of his talk to the farmers was concerning the plans of the Federal Farm Board in helping the cotton farmers of the South in the matter of safe marketing of cotton.

Mr. Thompson is himself an Alabama cotton farmer, who is thoroughly acquainted with the cotton situation, and his address was of course made on the basis of an experience which the farmer can understand.

The following resolution was adopted by the meeting:

We, farmers, bankers, warehouse men and representatives of various lines of business, who are closely allied with the agriculture of Chilton County, wish to endorse the platform for a safe and sound agricultural policy adopted at a meeting at Montgomery on October 6th, called by Governor Graves at the instance of the Federal Farm Board.

Whereas, we feel that a united effort on the part of all the interests mentioned above througout the state working together will accomplish the end sought.

Therefore, be it resolved, we respectfully request other counties in the state to co-operate with us in putting through the said plans to the end that Alabama may make a large contribution to the other cotton states toward acreage reduction in 1931 and in order that value may be added to the cotton crop of 1931 as well as to the cotton produced in 1930, now being held by the farmers and co-operatives in Alabama, which result will inevitably follow drastic cotton acreage reduction.

Be it further resolved, that we recognize and appreciate the value of the Federal Farm Board, the Extension Service and Alabama Farm Bureau and we wish to endorse their policies and practices, including co-operative marketing, and recommend them to all farmers in the County as being safe, sane and helpful and advise the full co-operation with free use of said agencies.

Be it further resolved, we feel that it is highly important that through co-operative marketing associations and other credit agencies including local bankers, not a single bale of present cotton crop should be sold that can be financed and carried until it will bring to the grower cost of produition plus a reasonable profit.

Be it further resolved, that in this critical moment our bankers, and farmer borrowers should have the fullest and freest contract, understanding and sympathetic interest for their mutual benefit as the result of their full hearted co-opertion will insure to the benfit of all since this section is dependent both upon the stability of our banking institutions and on the wisdom and industry of our farmers.

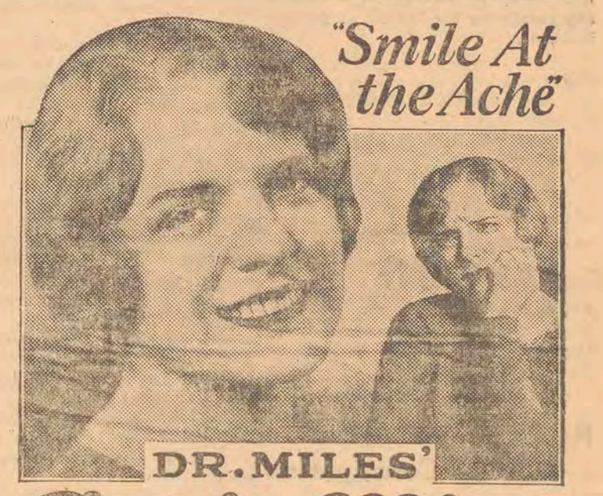
LITTLE LEMEARL JONES

On November 1st, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Jones and took from them their darling little girl. Lemearl was 5 years old. All was done for her that loving hands and tender hearts could do, but all was in vain. She bore her sufferings with good cheer: but God saw fit to take her to a better home alone where there will be no more pain nor sorrow, but all will be joy and bless. Jesus said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me for such is the kingdom of Heaven."

She leaves to mourn her loss; mother, father, three sisters, Hercie Ree, Velma and Mrs. Mattie Lou Crew, two brothers, Newhem and Carl, a host of friends and relatives.

Weep not dear friends for our loss is Heavens gain. Darling Lemearl has let us, yes left us forever but we hope to meet our loved one on that bright and sunny shore.—One who loved her.

TAKES TWELVE POTATOES TO MAKE BUSHEL



Mr. W. L. Williams of Maplesville, Route 2, was in Clanton one day last week showing twelve potatoes that weighed 61 pounds, or one lb. over a bushel. The largest one of the 12 weighed 7 pounds.

Mr. Williams said that he had about half an acre in potatoes and made over 98 bushels.

Central Singers Meet At Providence

One of the best afternoon singings of the season was held at Providence church in Beat 16 last Sunday afternoon. Prof. O. L. Devaughn acted as chairman, and there was a large class of singers present. Everyone seemed interested in singing, and the result was two hours of the best singing one almost ever heard.

Those taking part on the program were: J. W. Clackler, I. D. Huett, W. F. Gilliland, Chester Wyatt, G. C. Powell, Jesse Baker, R. M. Robinson, Willie Mims, A. O. Boswell, C. H. Robinson, S. V. Miller. The closing song was sung by Riley Robinson and the benediction was invoked by Rev. J. D. Hughes.

The society meets next Sunday with the Maple Springs class at 1:30 o'clock. The public has a cordial invitation to attend and help in the service. The interest in the society is holding up fine, and we don't want to let a little disagreeable weather and bad colds interfere with our progress. Meet with us at Maple Springs next Sunday afternoon and let's have another good singing.

Elmore Farmer Fatally Stabbed

Wetumpka, Ala., Nov. 9.—G. E. Hardin, 55, formerly of the Titus community in Elmore County, 20 miles from here, was fatally stabbed in an altercation with Jim Allen, also of Titus, at the home of the former at 7:30 Saturday night.

Allen was arrested shortly after the affair by Sheriff Holbrook and is being held in the Elmore County jail here in connection with the stabbing, pending preliminary hearing.

When officers visited the farmhouse Sunday morning to make an investigation, they discovered a gasoline-burner whiskey still in the house.

According to officers, evidence showed that both Harden and Allen were drinking prior to the fracas. Harden was stabbed straight in the heart with a knife.

The house in which Harden lived, and which the still was found, belonged to Allen, officers said.

Both men had lived in Elmore County several years and were well known, it was said.

Allen has recently completed a prison term, officers said.

Harden is survived by a wife and several grown children. Funeral for him was held Sunday afternoon.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Fiddlers Convention Next Monday Night

Entertainment Will Be Sponsored By American Legion Post

A fiddlers convention will be staged at the courthouse in Clanton next Monday night, November 17, under auspices of the local post of the American Legion.

Some weeks ago when the Legion determined to have the Fiddlers Convention, the date was set, and a committee was invested with the duties of making the arrangements. This committee was composed of E. W. Clenner, Vaughn McKee, and John Cox.

The committee reports that all arrangements have been completed. A list of prizes for fiddlers will be given as follows: First prize, $5.00; second prize, $2.50; third prize, $1.00. All fiddlers in this section of Alabama are invited to come and get in the contest. Any fiddler who wishes to come should communicate with a member of the committee and get his name in the pot as early as possible.

The price of admission wil be 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children. The members of the Legion Post are pushing the proposition earnestly, and they hope that the public will turn out in good numbers to their entertainment.

If this one is accorded the patronage and approval of the public, the Legion promises some other attractive entertainments from time to time in the future.

Don't forget the date and the place. Next Monday night, at the courthouse in Clanton. Come and bring the whole family. You are assured of a good time.

BETTER BUSINESS IS INDICATED NOW

Encouraging Statement From Thos. W. Martin, President Of Power Co.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 10.—"Business in Alabama appears to have begun a definite movement toward improvement and we feel that this movement will continue," Thomas W. Martin, president of Alabama Power Company, declared today following his return from the east.

"This opinion is based upon the figures derived from the operation of the electric and other important industries in the state, which past observations and experience have proved to be reliable indications of the current trend of business. Serving industry, agriculture and homes practically the entire area of the state, it necessarily feels at once a slowing down or speeding up of activities in these primary sources of all business."

Continuing, Mr. Martin said: "Alabama Power Company, having faith that business conditions could, and would, improve, has continued its construction program through the year, and has endeavored to have its entire organization function more effectively than ever before in its efforts to give the public economical and efficient service.

"Our power output and use for the year shows at this time approximately normal figures. During the month of October, the use of electricity in our operation throughout the state has exceeded the amount used during the same month of 1929 and showed an increase over the month of September of this year of 9.6 per cent. In view of the fact that the domestic use of current has been increasing throughout the year, these increases indicate the resumption of activities by manufacturing enterprises as well as the full seasonal use in farming operations.

"Collections for both service and merchandise have improved over 1929, and past due accounts are gratifyingly small. Sales of electrical appliances have gone steadily ahead, the first nine months of the year showing a gain of 9 per cent over the same period of 1929.

"Since our company's service touches practically all business activities in the state, these facts appear to be reliable indications that business is improving and that conditions in Alabama are becoming more and more encouraging."

COTTON REPORT

There were 19,187 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1930, prior to November 1st, 1930, as compared with 17,392 bales ginned to November 1st, 1929.

These are official figures from the Bureau of Census, U. S. Department of Agriculture, given out through R. J. Jones, local representative of the census bureau of cotton statistics.

Mr. H. Glenn Boyd, of Selma, was in Clanton Tuesday looking after some business matters. Mr. Boyd says he is delighted with his new position as vice president of the City National Bank of Selma.

LOCAL STORE GET DIAMOND AGENCY

Upchurch Drug Co. Authorized Representative For Virgin Diamonds

Upchurch Drug Company, well known jewelers of Clanton, today announced that word had been received from the Holland office of the Virgin Diamond Syndicate, confirming their appointment as a local authorized dealer in Virgin Diamonds.

"Virgin Diamonds," said Mr. Upchurch, upon being interviewed by a representative of this paper, "are genuine diamods, which have never before been individually owned or worn, direct from South African mines.

"There has always been a supply of second-handed diamonds on the market, some of them, of course, with none too savory a reputation. Coming through accepted channels, it was impossible to distinguish such stones, although many jewelers have long attempted to handle only diamonds of known history. Since the war, moreover, the supply of such previously owned stones has substantially increased.

"Realizing that the discriminating diamond buyer—unless, of course, he was interested in a rare stone because of its historic background—much preferred to be the first to own and wear the diamond he purchased, I welcome the opportunity to affiliate my store with the Virgin Diamond Syndicate who, for some years, have specialized exclusively on selected rough, direct from the mines.

"Not only are Virgin Diamonds of the finest quality, in all sizes and in a wide range of distinctive mountings, but their prices are standard all over the world."

In addition, says Mr. Upchurch, with every Virgin Diamond, the purchaser receives a registered certificate of title which guarantees the origin and previous history of the stone.

Peoples Telephone Co. Last Call

Mr. Reed Mullins, president of the Peoples Telephone Co., requests us to publish a call for all who are interested in the Peoples Telephone Company to meet at the courthouse next Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

Discussing the matter, Mr. Mullins said: "This is the last call for the Peoples Telephone business. We are out of funds, our contract with the operators is out, and unless enough people are interested to come together next Saturday and perfect some kind of an arrangement to keep the business running, there will be no more service through the central after next Saturday night."

All who are interested are urged to give due notice to this announcement, and attend this meeting. If something is not done on next Saturday, this is the last you will ever hear about the Peoples Telephone business in Clanton. Once it goes down and out, it will be good-bye forever.

If there are enough people who want it, they must come to this meeting and do business, now or never.

Car Of Produce To Troy Orphans

Plans are under way for sending a car load of farm produce and things useful on the farm to the Baptist Orphanage at Troy. The car load of articles will be assembled jointly at Clanton by the members of churches in the Unity and Chilton County Associations. At recent meetings of the Associations, committeemen from each body were appointed and instructed to carry out the matter.

The appeal is to every Baptist home in the two Associations to give something to go in this car. The committee in charge of the matter is J. Z. Mims, J. Watts Moore, W. J. Billingsley, S. J. M. Webb.

The following suggestions for loading and the kind of articles that can be used are made by the committee:

Food, such as canned vegetables, fresh and canned fruit, syrup, dry corn, peas, beans, peanuts hay, cottonseed meal and hulls, flour, meal, sugar coffee, rice, grits, oatmeal, and other cereals, and cured meats.

Clothing such as ready made garments for children, any size, and any kind of cloth for making garments.

Household goods such as quilts, sheets, pillow cases, spreads, blankets comforts, towels rugs, chairs any kind of kitchen and dining room equipment.

Farm implements and tools, such as hoes, rakes, shovels, forks, axes, reap hooks, pruning knives, saws and hammars..

Churches which are planning to send any quantity of this kind of stuff should get in touch with some member of the committee and find out just the kind and exact details about preparing and loading the car.

CHESTER CASSEL DIED THURSDAY

Fatal Result From Stab Received In Fight At Thorsby

Chester J. Cassel, age 23, son of M. M. Cassel, of Thorsby, died Thursday afternoon at the Central Alabama Hospital in Clanton. The body was buried Friday at Liberty Hill cemetery by Mell Martin. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Homer Carroll, assisted by Rev. Deason and Rev. Foshee.

The young man is survived by his father, M. M. (Tead) Cassel, his mother, Mrs. Molsie Cassel, and two sisters.

The report of the trouble which caused the death of young Cassel says that on Tuesday night at Thorsby M. M. Cassel and Wallace Watkins were engaged in a difficulty. When Chester went into the scrap to aid his father, it is said that J. C. Price intercepted the effort of the Cassel boy by stabbing him in the head with a knife. The wound was in the right temple, and penetrated the brain.

The young man was brought to the hospital at Clanton by Martin's ambulance. By aid of the doctors he was able to linger to Thursday.

J. C. Price, who is charged with inflicting the wound that killed the boy, was brought to Clanton and placed in jail, where he remains at this writing.

WHAT DOES THE CHURCH MEAN TO YOU

Friends, what does the church of Christ mean to you? What has it meant to me these passing years? The church would take on new life and increase in attendance and become not simply an organization but a spirit-filled organism if we considered this question from a prayerful standpoint. That is, if you and I, every man and woman who are professed followers of Jesus Christ could realize our individual responsibility to God.

The church of Christ has been the same in all ages. The church today is the same as it was in the family of Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden. The church today is the same as it was in the home of Noah on the hillside of Mount ararat in Syria. The church today is the same as it was in the time of Abraham. The scene in the 12th chapter of Genesis teaches us of the church of the ages. Abram and Sarai were in Ur of Caldee, the most idolatrous country in the world, but God called them saying unto Abram, "Abram, get thee out fro mthy country, from thy father's kindred into a country that I will show thee."

When God spoke to Abram at that time He was calling the church out of Eden. God spoke to Abram commanding him to go, calling him out of an idolatrous country. The Greeks use the word ecclesias, ecco meaning out and clesias, called. That is, the church is the called-out body of Christ. The apostle Paul writes of it in this way, "He, Christ, is the head of the body of the church." John writes, "He loved the church and gave Himself for it." Christ in recognizing Peter's wonderful confession, "Thou art the Christ the son of the living God" says the church, "Thou art Peter, and upon this petra, upon the truth of this statement will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." My friends, think of the church. "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Just outside St. Stephen's Gate, outside the walls of Jerusalem in what is called the plains or fields of St. Stephen is where St. Stephen was stoned to death as he preached that Christ was with the church in the wilderness in the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night. Friends, that was the reason the church came out of the wilderness. Christ was with it and brought it out. Now for the church to get out of the wilderness of criticism, egotism, selfishness, Christ must be with her.

What a strange idea some men and women, some writers have in their minds about the church. My friends, the church is not an organization like a fraternal lodge. She is not the natural meeting together of people. She is supernatural with her supernatural head, Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God. The inspired word of God made men teach this. The church is an organism, a spirit-filled organism. She is composed of the invisible and the visible church.

This invisible church you and I can't see, but it is the church to which our sainted fathers and mothers belonged. This invisible church leads up to the gates of heaven. The visible church may be composed of three thousand members. But there is a great difference in the visible and in the invisible church. Paul belonged to the invisible church and wrote, "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord, Jesus Christ. I bear in my body the marks, the scars, but yet I am willing to go up to Jerusalem not only to be persecuted and abused for Christ's sake, but also to die if needs be for Jesus Christ and His Gospel's sake."

In the reformed catechism we read of the church as being composed of those who believe in Jesus Christ together with their children. One of the great "lose outs" in this country is that children do not love their parents enough to go with them to church. Truly this is one of the greatest losses to America. If Jesus Christ Himself were the preacher it would be the same way. Friends, a child who does not love his parents enough to go to church with them is a lost investment. If you do not love that child enough to carry it to church with you is a lost investment and yet God has trusted it to you for a fruit-bearing branch.

When the Philippian jailer came in trembling and fell at the feet of Paul and Silas, convicted of sin and crying "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" it was not the earthquake that convicted him of sin. There is no preaching, no singing, no praying which convicts men of sin. The Holy Spirit convicts men and women of sin. When the jailer said, "What must I do to be saved? he was convicted of sin and felt the need of Jesus Christ in his heart and life. The greatest thing which can come into your life and in my life is to feel the need of Jesus Christ.

Now the church is not a social organization. The church, however is a place for the dissemination of spiritual life. Truly the church is a place of the holiest friendship on earth, but she is not a social function. Jesus Christ worked miracles to help somebody else. I see Him working the miracles of the loaves and fishes on the plains of Gennesaret to help the hungry multitudes. Again I see Him working His first miracle in Cana of Galilee, changing the water into wine to help relieve emparrassment at the marriage feast. When people are saved by the blood of Jesus Christ they are social anyhow. They do not then have to learn to love each other for they love each other the minute they become saved. They are willing to die for each other.

The church is not a collecting egency. The gifts of the church agency. The gifts of the church and love for each other. Again I must say that the church is not a diplomatic organization. She is the called-out spiritual body of Jesus Christ, composed of people whose sins have been thoroughly washed and cleansed in the atoning blood of Jesus Christ. In the New Testament we find in the Acts of the Apostles, beginning at the last verse and ending at the last, that the church of Jesus Christ was and is an obedient church. The disciples did not tarry at Bethany nor at Jericho, but they tarried in Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high, the descent of the Holy Spirit.

Certainly that churuch was one of faith. The church today must be one of faith. They tarried in Jerusalem waiting and expecting to have what Christ promised. Their expectation came on the day of pentecost, when the Holy Spirit came upon them. We cannot mix the material with the spiritual. The church is a spiritual organization, built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone. Jesus Christ is the head of His body, the church. I am a member of the blood-bought body, the unselfish body, the light-bearing body, the witness-bearing body, the self-sacrificing body, the praying body of Jesus Christ.

We read that "these all continued in prayer and supplication with the women and with Mary, the mother of Jesus." Notice that "these all" continued in prayer. The Greek word for all means a "great missionary body." The church is a great missionary body. She is looking out for others to see the light and be saved. You cannot be wrapped up in self and in the church too. This praying body of believers in Christ Jesus are "out and out" for the salvation of souls.

The church of Jesus Christ is kept clean of merchandising and commercialising with the world. Twice in Jesus' earthly ministry He found it trying to be made a house of merchandise and commercialism. Christ walked in and cleansed it, saying, "My house shall be called a house of prayer by all nations." What a beautiful thought and what a beautiful thing it is that the church of Christ is a house of prayer. It is so sweet just to walk into God's house any time you have and kneel and pray.

The church of Jesus Christ is a house of true worship to God. Jesus taught this when He said to the woman at Jacob's well near Sychar, "the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in truth. God is a spirit; and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." Then we think of the beautiful truths taught in the Psalms, "O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." "Let us worship and bow down." "Worship ye the Lord all ye gods." "Let us worship the Lard at His footstool." "Let us worship the Lord, and come before His gates with praise nad before His courts with thanksgiving."

Friends, we are just as much interested in the church of Jesus Christ as to obedience to her commands of being led by the spirit, at all times opening up our hearts to be filled with the Holy Spirit, bearing witness for Jesus Christ by letting our lights shine for Him, and worshipping Him with our hearts and not our lips only. We are interested in proportion as well as we sacrifice. The church of Jesus Christ means to me that I am going to do more for Jesus Christ.

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you allow me space in your paper to say a few words about Mr. Gillespie as our next Sheriff. I know most all the other officers personally, and want to say for all of them that they are men of the highest type, honest, and men who will give justice and fairness to all.

I want to say this much about Mr. Gillespie: I have known him from boyhood on up to manhood. He was a fine boy, and now he has made a fine man, and we all know he will make a fine Sheriff in Chilton County. Of course Mr. Gillespie just beat by a small majority, but it is like the old saying, an inch is a good as a mile. But I want to say if all the Republicans in Chilton County had voted a straight Republican ticket, he would have won by a large majority. I want to say to the people of Chilton County, stand up for your own party. I am a Republican, and have been for years. I have been taking The Union-Banner ever since it was established. I enjoy reading the dear old Banner of Chilton County. I want to say I am proud of the officers that were elected November 4th. Best wishes to them all.—W. T. Connell, Birmingham, Ala.

W. H. GILLESPIE EXPRESSES APPRECIATION TO VOTERS

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to express my sincere appreciation to the voters who gave me their loyal support and elected me to be the next sheriff of this county. I want to say that I realize the honor bestowed on me, I also realize that the election to the sheriff's office carries with it the greatest responsibility of any of the offices, as the Sheriff is the Chief Executice Officer of the County.

I want to say to those who opposed me, that I have nothing but the kindest feelings toward them and I again renew my pledge to try to make a sheriff for all the people; enforcing the law impartially, giving everyone a square deal, and equal justice before the law.

In conclusion, I want to appeal to all the people of our county, regardless of political opinion, to forget the political bitterness of the past campaign and look to the future with bright hopes for the welfare of our people, their homes, and our county. Again thanking you, I am, Yours very sincerely.—W. H. Gillespie.

Have you passed the noonday of Life?

Then make the down road happy by keeping your strength and health. An unfailing warning of a rundown condition is the diminishing of the red-blood-cells.

A DEFICIENCY of red-cells in the blood is usually followed by physical exhaustion, loss of appetite, underweight, nervousness and pimples and boils. When your red-blood-cells are only 80% you are NOT yourself—60% is very dangerous. Common sense suggests that every possible step be taken to correct such a condition. Take S.S.S. before each meal. It will build up and enrich your blood, give you new life and vitality! Your appetite will pick up—you will feel like yourself again! Keep the down road bright by keeping your red-blood-cells fighting for you. Get the large size. At all drug stores.

Painful Condition

"WHEN I was just a girl at home," writes Mrs. B. F. Riggan, of Baird, Texas, "I took Cardui for cramping and pains in my side and back, and it helped me at that time.

"After I was married, I found myself in a weak, run-down condition. I suffered a great deal with my back, which was so weak it hurt me to get up or when I would stand on my feet. I fell off in weight.

"A friend of mine, seeing how bad I felt, advised me to take Cardui, which I did. By the time I had taken two bottles, I felt stronger and better than I had in a long time."

UNIVERSITY NEWS

Alabama's Crimson Tide again this week swept to a victory over the University of Florida's fighting 'Gators.

A surging Tide completely drowned the Florida 'Gators. The game was played in the rain but instead of helping the 'Gators it only served to swell the volume of the Crimson tide.

The score was 20 to 0, but that told about half the tale. On numerous occasions the Tide was in scoring position only to be tackled by old lady fate and turned back. Florida never once got in Alabama territory.

Alabama Gets New Building and Equipment

The new Metallurgical Laboratory is being completed this week. Scientific apparatus being installed will give this department one of the most modernly eqnipped laboratories in the South. The basement will be taken up for assaying and steel treating furnaces. The second floor with bacteriological chemistry. Third floor with quantitative analysis research, and the top floor with the photomicrographic laboratory for the crystalline structure of metals.

The University has received an offer, and is considering it, for a post season football game with New York University with the proceeds to go to the help of the unemployed people of America.

Did you know that?... 95 per cent of Alabama students are church members.... there are 3,900 students enrolled this year at Alabama.... Alabama students discipline themselves by their own student government and the officers are elected by the students.... that there are 11 students from Clanton at the University, and several more from Chilton County, Maplesville, Thorsby, etc....that the Commerce School rates 3rd in the nation and first in the South.... that the law school and the medical school are "A" grade schools nationally.... that the other eight colleges of the University rates the same way.... Aeronautical Engineering is taught at Alabama.... a large percentage of students work themselves through school each year through the University Self-Help Bureau.... Alabama is headed toward another Conference Championship? Well watch them.

County Farm Agent's Notes

PLANT SPRING FEED CROPS

Again I wish to call attention to the importance of planting early feed crops for next spring.

A report from the Alabama Experiment station at Auburn, shows that oats can be grown profitably, especially when we consider the fact that we can get a good crop of soy bean hay or peavine hay following the oats.

This report shows three bushels of oats per acre, sown broadcast Oct. 20th, with 268 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre, applied February 14th, made an average yield of 55.7 bushels of oats per acre.

LADY PEACOCK IS NOW CHAMPION RED

Auburn, Ala., Nov 10.—The new world's champion Rhode Island Red hen is an Alabama bird. She is named Lady Peacock and was known as hen No. 6-7 in the sixth Alabama national egg-laying contest at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. She laid 345 eggs in 365 days, thereby beating the former world's record of 341 eggs for the Rhode Island Red breed in the calendar year.

Lady Peacock was bred and is owned by Dr. H. B. Peacock of Opelika and Auburn.

The now famous hen has laid nearly six times her own weight in eggs. She is close to standard weight for Rhode Island Reds of her age, tipping the scales at 6.9 pounds. During the year she consumed 88.54 pounds of feed which cost, at 3 cents a pound $2.72. The value of the 28 3-4 dozen eggs she laid, at 40 cents a dozen, was $11.50. Therefore, the return from sale of eggs, less cost of feed, was $8.78.

The average feed cost to produce a dozen eggs with Lady Peacock was 9 1-2 cents. Poultrymen usually say that feed cost is one-half the total cost of egg production. This would mean that it cost 19 cents to get a dozen eggs from the world's champion Red. If the eggs sold for 40 cents a dozen the profit on a dozen of her eggs would be 21 cents.

During the 365 days the champion failed to score only 20 days, which means that she worked more than half of her Sundays.

LONGER STAPLE AIM OF COTTON FARMERS

Auburn, Ala., Nov. 10.—With cotton under 7-8 inch staple being sold at heavy discounts there is now an unusual demand for seed of varieties producing 7-8 inch and longer, and J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist at Auburn, is cautioning farmers to be sure when buying that they get the kind of seed which they think they are getting, and which they want.

"To be sure about it," said Mr. Lowery, "consult your county agent before buying seed unless you know that the seedsman from whom you are buying is absolutely reliable. Unfortunately, there are a few unscruplous men who are willing to sell inferior seed at premium prices. They will do this with no thought of what it means to the buyer. I recall that last year a poor widow bought inferior seed, thinking that she was getting seed of one of the best varieties. It was a complete failure and she a heavy loser."

Mr. Lowery called attention to the fact that the experiment station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute has conducted variety tests and knows the leading varieties. The three leaders are D. P. L. 4-8, Cook 1627, and Cook 307-6, the last named being a wilt-resistant variety.

"It is not unusual," continued Mr. Lowery, "for unscrupulous salesmen to make extraordinary claims for the seed which they are selling. They talk about large yields and the high per cent of lint, but it is well for a farmer to remember that he can get seed from reliable sources with the help of the county agent without running the risk of paying a high price for seed of low value."

RECOMMENDED RATIONS FOR DAIRY COWS

If the available roughage on the farm consists of mixed hay, such as peavine and sorghum or johnson grass and alfalfa hay or similar mixtures one of the following mixtures containing from 16 to 18 per cent digestible protein will be satisfactory.

100 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds cottonseed meal, 4 pounds salt.

100 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds velvet bean and pod meal, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds cottonseed meal, 4 pounds of salt.

150 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds cottonseed meal, 3 1-2 pounds salt.

With roughage such as johnson grass hay or hulls, the following grain mixtures containing from 18 to 2 2per cent digestible protein can be used:

150 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, 200 pounds cottonseed meal, 5 pounds salt, 5 pounds slaked lime.

100 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds velvet bean and pod meal, 100 pounds wheat bran, 150 pounds cottonseed meal, 5 pounds salt, 5 pounds slaked lime.

100 pounds corn and cob meal 100 pounds wheat bran, 150 pounds cottonseed meal, 4 pounds salt, 4 pounds slaked lime.

Rules for Feeding

Roughage is cheaper than grain. Give the cows all they will clean up twice daily.

Feed 3 pounds of grain mixture for each gallon of milk, not foam produced.

Where silage is available 3 pounds of silage will replace 1 pound of hay and improve the ration because it is succulent.

Keeping cows under shelter during cold, rainy weather will result in a considerable saving of both roughage and grain.

Keep a block of salt and fresh water before the cows at all times.

Possible Substitutes of Feeds

1. Wheat shorts may be substituted for wheat bran of the above rations.

2. High grade peanut meal may be substituted for one-half of the cottonseed meal in any of the rations if the price justifies it.

3. Blackstrap molasses is about equal to corn when used in limited amounts and is much cheaper. Feed from 1 pint to 1 quart per day to each cow, poured over either cut hay or hulls. Dilute molasses with 3 parts of water to 1 part of molasses.

4. Soaked velvet beans may be substituted for velvet bean meal in any of the above rations.

5. When no other succulent feed is available, one to 3 pounds of dried beet pulp soaked in water will increase the flow of milk enough to pay for it where whole milk is being sold.

6. One hundred pounds of cottonseed meal is equal in feeding value to 170 pounds of cottonseed. It will pay to trade seed for meal as long as anything like an equal trade is allowed. If not, one-half of the cottonseed meal may be replaced by cottonseed. Wet, moldy, or heated cottonseed should never be fed to dairy cows.

7. Cold pressed cottonseed meal or cake contains a larger proportion of hulls to meal. The protein content of this feed is a reliable guide to its feeding value.

8. Cottonseed hulls are about equal in feeding value to low grade johnson grass hay and are consumed with much less waste. Feed your best legume hay to your best milking cows and let the others rough through the winter on hulls and low grade hay.

9. Cull sweet potatoes, chopped up and added to any of the above rations at the rate of 5 to 10 pounds per cow daily will be advisable. In feeding value 100 pounds of potatoes is equal to 150 pounds of corn silage.

10. Temporary pasture, such as rye, oats and vetch, etc., may replace at least one-half of your roughage and will result in increased milk production. One acre per cow should be provided.

11. Wheat may be substituted for one-half of the corn in the above rations, if the price justifies using it. When fed it should be coarsely ground. Barley may also be substituted for corn in the above rations.

12. When wheat is worth $1.00 per bushel it is equivalent in feeding value to oats at 47 cents per bushel, barley at 80 cents, corn at 96 cents, on the basis of total digestible nutrients.

Hon. W. D. Upshaw Praises Sargon

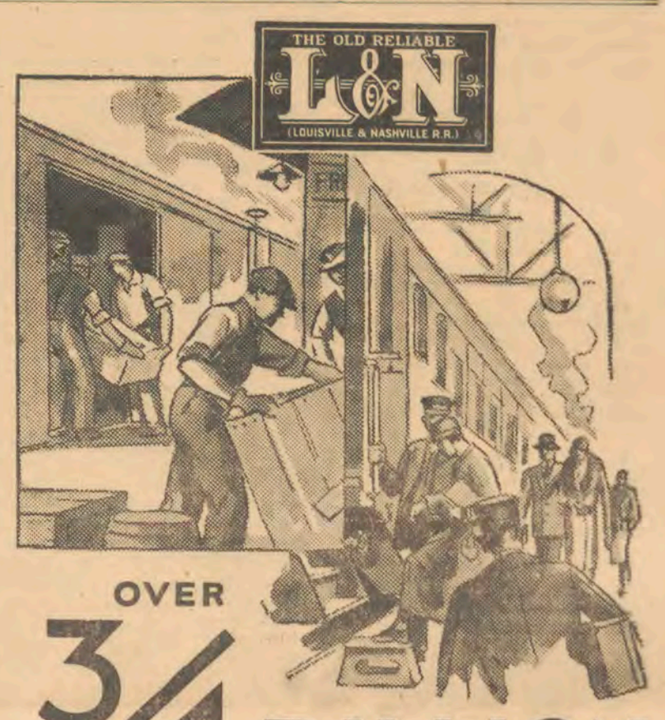
Few men in America are known to more people from coast to coast than William D. Upshaw, former Congressman from the Fifth (Atlanta) District of Georgia. During his eight years in Washington he atttained national prominence. A well known national magazine described him as "the most amazing man in Congress."

Obeying a grateful impulse because of great physical blessing received through the use of Sargon, Mr. Upshaw writes that he is simply doing unto others as he would have them do unto him in making the following voluntary statement:

"My first experience with this remarkable invigorator came in the summer of 1928, when Sargon was brand new. I was suffering from nervous debility and an alarming physical depletion as the result of over work on the lecture platform, and really feared I would not have strength enough to get me through the political campaign of July and August. Unbelievable as it may seem, two bottles taken with the Sargon Pills simply made me over. After the most hectic speaking campaign through which I ever passed, I came out actually feeling far stronger than when I began.

"Later, rushing away on another busy speaking tour covering several states, I did not persevere in the daily use of the medicine until my system was thoroughly cleansed, with the result that twice since then I found myself again suffering from general debility, constipation and dizziness, and each time the Sargon combination has cleared me up and left me feeling tip-top.

"Living now in the aftermath of those refreshing experiences, I am moved by common gratitude to heartily commend this wholesome and effective medicine to everybody whose run-down condition calls for complete restoration."



Sargon and Sargon Pills are sold by Alred Drug Company, Clanton, and Thorsby Drug Company, Thorsby, Alabama.

OVER 3/4 BILLION DOLLARS per Year Saved the Users of Railroad Service..

In spite of the fact that the railroads of the country have spent for improvements to their property, in addition to proper maintenance, over $6,800,000,000 since 1920, and during most of this period have provided almost perfect service, their freight and passenger rates, measured by the receipts per ton mile and per passenger mile, have declined 15.5 per cent and 10 per cent respectively. In other words, if the receipts per ton mile and passenger mile had been maintained for the years 1921 to 1929, the public's freight and passenger bill would have been over $6,100,000,000 greater, or nearly equal to their capital investment, in these years.

During this period, also, the rate of return on the railroad property investment has averaged less than three per cent.

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

The railroads are striving earnestly to continue their excellent service, but it is manifest they cannot continue to do so indefinitely unless they obtain sufficient revenues to meet their obligations, provide adequate improvements, and obtain a reasonable return on the value of their property devoted to public use.

Measured on the same basis as the information given above, the patrons of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company have saved over $150,000,000 by reason of reduced freight and passenger receipts for transportation service over this Railroad.

ECHOES FROM THE ELECTION

The highest vote received by any candidate in Chilton County in the General Election on November 4 was cast for Akins I. Collins, Republican candidate for Tax Assessor. He received a total of 2,041. The lowest vote of any candidate was received by Dr. V. J. Gragg, the Jeffersonian Democratic candidate for the State Senate. His total was 864.

The largest majority of any candidate over his oppenent was received by W. L. Sanders, Republican, for member of the School Board. He defeated his Democratic opponent, Mrs. Parnell, by a majority of 672.

The closest race in the whole business was for Shreiff. Walter Gillespie, Republican, defeated his opponent, J. A. Nivens, Democrat, by only 168 majority.

The highest total vote for any office was cast in the race for Tax Collector. The total vote of Culp and Cox was 3,601. Next to this the nearest high vote was cast in the race for Sheriff. The total combined vote of Gillespie and Nivens was exactly 3,600.

The only race where all three parties had a candidate running was for State Senator. But in that race the high water mark of voting was not registered. Weaver, Republican, Duncan, Democrat, and Gragg, Jeffersonian, received a total vote of 3,503, which was 98 votes short of the total of 3,601 in the race for Tax Collector.

In the Primary last August the total vote received by the four Republican candidates for Tax Collector in the Republican primary was 2,482. The vote for Tax Collector in the Democratic primary was 678. The total vote cast for Tax Collector in both primaries was 3,160. The total vote cast for Tax Collector in the General Election was 3,601, a gain of 441 votes.

In the primaries last August the Republican vote for Sheriff was 2,445, and the Democratic vote was 741, a total of 3,186. In the General Election the total vote for Sheriff was 3,600, a gain of 414 votes.

For United States Senator in the prmiary last August the two Democratic candidates received a total of 681 votes. In the General Election the two candidates, Bankhead and Heflin received a total of 3,048. In the General Election 2,369 persons voted for Senator who did not vote in the primary last August.

For Governor in the primary last August the Democratic candidates received a total of 781 votes. In the general election the two candidates for Governor, Miller and Locke, received a total of 3,027. In the General Election 2,246 people voted for Governor who did not vote in the Democratic primary last August.

The strength of the straight ticket in Chilton County was perhaps best revealed in the running of the candidates for State office who had no opposition. This was from 1,262 to 1,326. The vote for Duncan for State Senator was also another test of the straight Democratic vote. It was 1,189, about 100 short of the strength of the regular Democratic state ticket.

The strength of the county Democratic ticket was not far out of line with the State Democratic ticket. The range of votes for county Democratic candidates ran from 1,363 to 1,716. Mrs. Parnell for the School Board received the lowest vote of any County candidate, 1,363, while J. A. Nivens, Democratic candidate for Sheriff, received the highest vote of any County Democratic candidate, 1,716.

The strength of the County Republican candidates was uniformly steady, ranging from 1,884 for Gillespie to 2,041 for Collins for Tax Assessor. Leaving out Gillespie the range of Republican votes was from 2,021 to 2,041, a difference of only 20 votes between the high man and the low man.

In the general election of 1928 Hoover received 3,186 votes in Chilton County and Smith 1,402, a total vote of 4,583 cast for President. The county Democratic ticket in 1928 received about 1,900 votes and the county Republican ticket ran about 2,600 votes.

The Fort Payne Journal (Democratic) said last week: "On the face of the unofficial returns, the Republicans have captured all the offices in DeKalb County, by majorities ranging from 150 to 500." A few Democrats have been elected to county offices in DeKalb since 1920, but it appears now that all of the county offices are back in the hands of the Republicans.

We understand that Cullman County failed to elect any Republicans to county offices in the balloting November 4th. Cullman has a Republican Probate Judge, and frequently elects Republicans to other county offices.

A statement in the Haleyville Advertiser-Journal last week said all the Republican candidates for county offices in Winston County were successful in the General Election November 4th. John A. Posey was elected to the Legislature. Posey was in the Legislature in 1923. He and John Hawkins of DeKalb, and W. M. Wyatt of Chilton were the only Republicans in the 1923 House of Representatives.

TO MY FELLOW REPUBLICANS

The battle has been fought and the victory won, so now I think all Republicans have just cause for rejoincing for the splendid victory.

It appears to me that since it was a campaign at a time when there was so much confustion, and we might say a considerable lack of co-operation, we may truly look upon the results of the election as a great Republican victory for old Chilton County, and especially so when we are caused to look back over the past history of the party and the past victories and are caused to remember that under much more favorable conditions and with all our forces combined in one strennous an harmonious effort to put the thing over, and then we just get over by the skin of our teeth. I feel that this fact should give us new courage and new inspiration to spur us on to new and greater achievements.

There is ample reason to believe that we have a stronger and a more determined Republican party in Chilton County today possibly than ever before in the history of the party in the county.

In this campaign our people in every nook and corner of the county have taken an active part in the fight and have taken a pride in carying our banner to victory. I know no better way to strengthen our stakes and build up a strong, active, result-getting and interesting party than to do so by and with the interested people of the county; and may I say here that if we can keep the interest and zeal manifest in this campaign aflame we need not have any fear for the continued success of the Republican party in the county.

Now a word to the campaign committee and to the Republican Executive Committee of Chilton County. Words cannot express my very deep appreciation of your untiring efforts in this fight that has just ceased. Had it not been for you and your sincere and effective efforts we dare say what might have been the results of the fight. You are a gallant bunch of men and women and how I wish that time and space would permit me to name each one of you and say just a few words of fitting commendation but you know that it will not, so may I say here that it has been a great source of inspiration to me to have the privilege of working with uch a fine bunch of people and to have an humble part in the direction of your fight. I have fought hard and long in this campaign, but as you know to a great extent with both hands tied, but as chairman of the campaign committee, may I say here I do not claim the victory to myself but rather as an humble servant and as an unselfish Republican, I place the laurels of vectory where they rightfully belong, on your shoulders and on the shoulders of every Republican man and woman who were brave enough to go against the fire.

And now to the newly elected officers, I would not say, "To the Victor belongs the Spoils," as we commonly use the term, but I will say to the victor belongs obligations and responsibilities; and may I further say along with these come opportunities. Remember your glorious victory, though sweet it may be to you and yours, caused your neighbor to go down in defeat, and now it behooves you and each of you as men, and as true Republicans, to take up your fallen neighbor in the sense of servitude and give him the very best service possible.

As candidates you were Republicans, but as officers you must be servants in the true sense of the word.

Remember you are taking the place of some as good officers as Chilton County has ever had. That the people of Chilton County are expecting good service and they deserve it, and will appreciate it. We are glad to say each one of you men are well able to give it, and we believe that it will only be a pleasure for you to serve.

I understand that some of the God-loving, home-loving, and country-loving Democrats helped us elect our ticket. If this be true, we appreciate it and invite them to help us in every way possible to make our county the best possible.

Again thanking one and all for their support and assistance in the campaign, I beg to remain.

Yours very truly,
J. Z. MIMS.

LIQUOR FOUND AT GUICE HOME

Monday afternoon the officers under Sheriff Collins went to the home of Mrs. Guice, near Providence, in Beat 13. The place was searched and five pints of liquor was found. A man named Joe Wright, who was at the place, claimed the liquor. He was brought to jail where he still abides at this writing.

While on the same trip the officers stopped at the place of a Mrs. Deason on the highway near Wessington. They searched a store and found three bottles of home brew. A boy grabbed the bottles and ran away. But of course, George Murrah caught him before he had gotten very far. Mrs. Deason was placed under bond.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

In these more or less dreary days when everyone seems to be wallowing in the slough of despond, ignoring constructive signs which promise better things in the future, it is not to be denied that there are hopeful indications of better things to come. Not only is the amount of public building and home construction on the increase in the United States, but some other industries are showing signs of looking up. But one of the most encouraging signs for the future of America continues to be the awakening interest in our newly developed merchant marine.

Officials of the U. S. Shipping Board at Washington were, the other day, authority for the statement that fifty million dollars will be expended during the next year in the United States, for new ships. This proposed construction will give work to twenty thousand men. The board itself will lend $15,000,000 of the government's money, under the terms of the ones-White shipping act, to bring about this construction of from twenty to thirty new vessels. It is announced that awards have already been made to a New York shipbuilding company for four new ships for the Grace Line. Two new ships were recently launched for the Export Line and two more are to be constructed for the same line. Two new vessels have been contracted for by the Dollar Line to be built at Newport News, Va., and the same line is laying plans for the construction of still two more ships.

All of which not only promises for jobs for Americans, but considerable aditions to our all-important merchant marine. This is of course highly encouraging, but equally encouraging is the solid support which is being given to the merchant marine idea by our people everywhere. There has never been any question as to the importance of a big and active merchant marine to American progress and prosperity. The difficulty was to get the people aroused and to see that Congress enacted the necessary legislation, which has been done. While every American hoped that the great World War would be the war to end all wars, present conditions in Europe indicate that we are apt to be disillusioned. Not for several years have conditions in Europe been so unsettled at present. The future for peace in Europe looks much gloomier indeed than it did in the weeks immediately prior to the outbreak of war in Europe in 1914. It seems to be only the general exhaustion which keeps peace alive. If war should come to Europe, America will make every possible effort to avoid becoming involved. But if two or more of the nations of Europe should so far lose their senses as to become engaged in conflict, then the United States, even as a neutral, cannot well get along without a real merchant marine. We do not want to be caught as we were in 1914, and to have the moving of our products on the high seas at the mercy of European ships, which may be having troubles of their own and unable to pay much attention to our commerce other than that in which they are selfishly interested.

As Senator Robinson, of Indiana, said in a recent address:

"With unrest seething on the European and other continents, I'm assuming that there will be a war in Europe sooner than we believe. I'm also assuming that the United States will not be in it. But it will affect our export trade and threaten to freeze and to paralyze it. Then we must have the largest possible merchant marine to take care of carrying our goods in our own ships when that war comes, to defend our trade with other countries."

Here is a situation with which we hope we shall not be confronted. But there is no reason why we should not be prepared to take care of as much as possible of our foreign commerce in case of international crisis. Even if the crisis does not come we shall still need our merchant marine if we are to develop our commerce to its full possibilities.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES DECLINE

The fire insurance industry has made a splendid record in providing American property with necessary protection at an extremely low cost.

The average rate of premium received by the companies for each $100 of insurance written has declined to .8008, the lowest point in our history. Last year their underwriting credit balance was 5.84 per cent.

The most expensive thing we could have would be "cheap insurance," in the sense of rates not giving the companies a profit adequate to build up reserves out of which to pay losses. The stability of American industry is virtually dependent on insurance. Of equal public interest, is the work of the stock fire insurance companies in combating fire hazards, fighting arson, and the like. Their laboratories test and determine the fire-resistive qualities of building materials, and the fire-protective value of all manner of devices and appliances. It is safe to say that without this work our tragic record of fire waste would have mounted to staggering figures.

Insurance is a basic industry which has quietly and efficiently done an invaluable work in the development of our civilization.

It is only through public cooperation in fire prevention and arson prosecution that fire losses can be reduced with resulting saving to the public.

IT PAYS TO BE CAUTIOUS

In the Circuit Court this week the damage suits against the railroad were settled. We refer to the suits that grew out of the wreck of a school bus more than a year ago in the southern part of our county when the bus was hit by a train. One or more lives were lost in that accident, and the railroad has had to pay thousands of dollars, all because the rule of "Safety First," was not properly observed.

Commenting on the subject, Green Retherford, who is working with the State Convict Department in Montgomery County said: "I have observed the school busses in Montgomery County. They take no chances at a railroad crossing. The driver of the bus stops not less than forty yards from the crossing. One of the boys gets out, goes to the railroad tracks, and sees that no train is in sight. If the road is clear, he waves the truck driver to come on."

That is system and safety. Under such a cautious procedure, no school children will lose their lives, and the railroads will not have to pay thousands of dollars for an accident which they could not avoid.

We do not know what system is used in our county now for precaution in such matters, but the Montgomery County plan is a good one.

THE FIVE-DAY WEEK

The five-day week of course makes a popular political issue. On the plan of the working less, and getting the same pay, sentiment would at first thought be unanimous. There has been a gradual shortening of the hours of labor during our recent period of good times, and the continuance of that progress is inevitable and desireable. As a hurry up remedy for what now ails us however, there is something to be said about the other side.

In the larger industries, with the speed up systems requiring enormous investments in machinery, it is impossible to increase the tempo to the point where production can be maintained or increase with shortened hours. In many industries and employments of smaller kind, however, is impossible. What is to happen to happen to these industries, employing perhaps eighty per cent of the workers of the country, through an increase of 16 per cent in their labor costs, may be left to the imagination.

"Let the smaller and less efficient industries go out of business," seems to be the idea of Mr. Rascob, in plea for general adoption of the five-day week, accompanied by the suggestion that the Federal Trade Commission should be empowered to grant indulgences for violation of the Sherman Anti-trust act. This is Mr. Rascob's theory, too, on high tariff; if the smaller industry can't meet foreign competition, let it close up its shop.

The immediate effect of the generally adopted five-day week would be to cause the absorbtion of most of the smaller, independent industries, by the chains, mergers and combinations which have been sweeping independent industry into their maw at a rapid rate. This would happen because the smaller independent concern could not effect such present economies in operation as would absorb the increase of one-sixth in its payrolls, nor would they be in position to raise prices independent of the co-operationof the heavily captilized and highly organized concerns.

The same thing applies to the effect of low tariffs. The international organizations, trust or corporation can escape the effects of foreign competitions by co-operation with European cartels, as the steel trusts are doing, and by building plants in cheaper labor markets abroad. So, contrary to the impression created by propaganda of these giant concers, such corporations, including most of the big ones in the United States, are quite willing to see independent industry go down under the attack of foreign cheapness based on a low wage scale.

But the final effect of such a policy is to place the fixing of both prices and wages in the hands of a few great combinations of capital, as has been done in Germany with communism and facism as the expression of revolt by the masses. Moreover, the merger policy means the employment of fewer, not more, workers. Whenever a competitive concern is wiped out by a merger, it means the destruction of jobs.

No benefit will come to the workingmen through putting on the industry in which they are employed a heavier load than it can carry. The time for changes of this character is a period of prosperity, when earnings are present, not absent. The breaking down of independent industry in the United States will work harm, not benefit, to the wage earners of this country.

Sheriff Collins and Deputy George Murrah went to Montgomery Tuesday as witnesses in Federal Court. From Montgomery they went to Rockford to answer a summons before the Coosa County grand jury. They returned by way of the new ferry, and report that the road from Rockford to the river was very slick, due to the rain of the last few days.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

From our shop window early Monday morning I saw two way-faring youths enjoying a hot breakfast on the back steps of the Sheriff's house. I suppose they had spent the night in jail. The Sheriff sometimes permits down-and-out transients that priviledge. He knows if they are of good purpose, there will be no harm; and if they are bad characters, likewise there will be no harm, for they are in jail.

These were two hungry boys, not over eighteen. From whence they came and whither they were going is the mystery part of the story. Just two pieces of human driftwood with no destination, no purpose, going up the road one day and down the road next day. An interesting study were these youths.

The pleasure of eating a square meal was beaming from their faces. They did not even look to each other. The yard dog came up and wagged his tail in that eloquence which only the wag of a hungry dog's tail can express. One of the boys pinched a crumb from his biscuit and threw to the dog.

The house cat purred at their feet and his language, though not spoken, was well understood. One of the boys threw it a crumb. It was the same boy who gave to the dog. A pigeon flew down from the top of the jail and perched nearby. His appeal was easily understandable. A crumb was thrown to the bird. It came from the hand of the same boy who had divided with the cat and the dog.

The other boy did not even notice the presence of the dog, the cat, or the pigeon, until he had sopped up from his plate the last speck of gravy with his last crumb of bread. Then he patted the dog on the head and walked away.

The boy who had divided with the dog, the cat, and the pigeon, handed the empty dishes back to Mrs. Collins and thanked her very graciously. As he walked away after his companion, I saw him brush a tear from his cheek.

I got a great lesson from watching this lettle performance. I saw enacted there a great drama that pictured the entire range of human emotions. Those two boys stood within a few feet of each other. As the pendulum swung back and forth between them, it traveled over the space of hundreds of millions of human lives, and it spanned the centuries that mark the ages from Aplha to Omega.

"Now that the election is over, we can all settle down to business, forget we are Democrats or Republicans, and find something else to fight about."—Norwood (Mo.) Index.

I do not exactly like the tone of this paragraph from a brother publisher up in Missouri. I would say now that the election is over, we can all settle down to business, forget we are Democrats or Republicans, and try to keep from finding anything else to fight about.

A pungent paragrapher who has noticed the slogan, "Chilton County, the Heart of Alabama," writes in with this observation on the recent election: "Although Alabama went overwhelmingly Democratic on November the fourth, I observe that the State is still at heart Republican."

Before the election a man said to me, "We will get a barometer of the intelligence of the people of Chilton County when the vote on the Health Unit comes in." Now it has come in, 1,723 against the Health Unit and 1,392 for it. I guess some folks will say that ignorance defeated the Health Unit, while others will say that it was intelligence and wisdom that defeated it. I have my own opinion in the matter, but I think it is no use to express that opinion now.

If we were to vote on the question of whether the defeat of the Health Unit was intelligence or ignorance, I guess 1,723 would vote that 1,392 were ignorant, and 1,392 would vote that 1,723 were ignorant, and by that we would all be convicted of ignorance. Then we would be back right where we are, in the class of backward, poor, unprogressive counties without any kind of systematic, orderly procedure to take care of the greatest and most important asset of our county, public health.

An interesting bit of information was given me the other day about the gasoline business. One man who operates a filling station in Clanton told me that in the last five years he has pumped from his station 585,000 gallons of gasoline, and 20,585 gallons of motor oil. Counting 20 miles to the gallon, this is enough gas to run eleven million seven hundred thousand miles. If the life of the average automobile were 50,000 miles, this amout of gasoline would be sufficient to put 234 cars in the junk pile.

REPUBLICANS, THE RESPONSIBILITY IS YOURS

By vote of the people of Chilton County last Tuesday, the Republican party was again vested with the responsibility of administering the business of this county for a season.

Those officers which were elected were chosen by the people to perform certain duties which involve to some extent, one way or another, the interest of every citizen in the county.

The Union-Banner congratulates the winners. We believe the voters of the county have acted wisely in their selections. The men who were chosen are able to perform that which was committed to their hands.

We say to them: Republicans, the responsibility is yours. You have won the confidence of a majority of the voters of the county. Now it is up to you to make good that confidence. And your responsibility does not end there. You must serve as a public official the interest and welfare of the voter who voted against you with the same diligence, the same consideration, as you serve those who voted for you. You must be a servant of all.

You have a big job. You have a job that calls upon you to be big men, true men, worthy men, wise men, honest men. Your county needs that kind of service.

Again some day your party will stand before the people of this county for trial. The record which you make in the discharge of your duty and in serving your people will be the foundation upon which your party will have to stand. What kind of a foundation will it be?

Republicans, the responsibility is yours. What will you do with it?

W. W. FOX

Prominent Business Man of Clanton, Who Is Forced To Retire From Active Operations On Account Of Declining Health

The face pictured above is doubtless very familiar to most of the Union-Banner readers. But to those of you who do not know him personally (if there are any such in Chilton County) we will say that it is none other that the Hon. W. W. Fox, of Clanton, the only one of the kind ever known. Mr. Fox came to Clanton about 1911 from Huntsville. Before he had been here any time he was known far and wide as a farmer and real estate dealer. Later he started in the auction business, and his name and fame spread farther and farther.

It was evident from the first time his feet were set on Clanton soil that there had come to this town a man who would make his mark among his fellows. His genius for business, for cordiality, and for doing things was self evident. There was an unusual man, which fact was apparent to everybody from the very first of his venture here.

From the auction game the furniture business just naturally grew on Mr. Fox, and likewise the hardware business. So finally, in self defense he opened up one of the larges. stores in Central Alabama. As is well known, his store has done a fine business, catering to more of the general needs of the farmers than perhaps any other business ever established here.

But with Mr. Fox, as with every man, there is the turn of the hill. There are the approaching shadows. There is old Father Time waiting just around the corner. He cuts us all down with his scythe of years, and leaves instead of our active, vigiorous bodies and alert minds only an aged and doty shell of our former selves. Such is the inevitable price we must pay for wisdom and the privileges we have enjoyed in a useful and well-spent life.

We are sorry of the fact that the shadows are falling on the life of our friend, Mr. Fox. If we could have our way, we would keep him forever in the vigor of his former years, going up and down our town and county ringing his bell, and shedding the light of his wonderful jollification all about us. But it is not the desire or wish of us mere mortals which shapes the destinies of men.

Recently this robust scion of our progress and business development (for really a developer he has been) was pronounced a very sick man by an able physician. He has been commanded to retire from his erstwhile busy life of responsibility and activity and follow after the quiet places and peaceful living. This verdict brings sincere regret to Mr. Fox, and no less sorrow to his friends and associates. But when the facts and realities were before him he consented with meekness. He called for his faithful stand-by, Broadus Connaster, to help him liquidate his stock and merchandise, fixtures and business equipment. And by the way, Mr. Fox is fortunate in having Broadus to fall back on in an emergency.

Consequently, on November 6th, last Thursday, his wind-up sale began, and it is to continue until the stock is sold. If it is not sold by December 24th, the doors will be closed and Mr. Fox will cease to operate his store.

Discussing this week the matter of his getting out of business, he said, "I have never attempted anything that has so surely indicated the success which this winding up sale has already showed." In the last five days he tells me he has sold more merchandise than ever before in the same length of time, and his expectations for cash sales have been more than doubled.

As I looked about the store, I said "No wonder people are buying this stuff. Such bargains in furniture have never been equaled." The price on every article is rock-bottom and the people are taking it away. They can't help but buy at these low prices. This is not merely sales talk, folks. It is facts, and I challenge you to visit this store and see what I saw.

Why, here is an example: I found a three-piece bedroom suite there that I know would be a bargain at a hundred dollars. When I asked the price, and was told that it was going to sell for thirty-nine dollars and fifty cents, I could not believe it. I took it before you could say seat. You would not blame me if you could only see the marvelous bargain I got. Therefore, folks, I know that this is a real honest-to-goodness winding up sale.

I tell you now, this sale can't last till Christmas eve day. It is impossible. Folks just won't stand for it. I tell you as a friend, there is something worth your while at Fox's and I know when you go and get it, you will come by the Union-Banner office and thank me for giving you the tip.

Now there is something else I want to tell you readers about right here. When I was talking with Mr. Fox this week, after his sale had already gotten under big headway, he said:

"Mack, I want to tell you, you have one of the finest newspapers I have ever seen. You know I owe your paper no little credit for having made this sale the success it has been and is going to be." Now, kind friends, that made me feel mighty good. I thought of all you folks who read the Union-Banner every week and your loyalty and friendship and confidence which has made it possible for us to build a newspaper that can command such words of praise from men like Mr. Fox.

Concluding, Mr. Fox said, "Mack tell all your readers that I appreciate their goodness to me. I am full to the brim with gratitude for the friends I have all over this good county. Tell them for me that I thank them, I love them, I am just as sorry as I can be that I can not continue my business. I have always loved to be in business, because it affords me an opportunity to help my fellow man and to make a living for myself. I want all of the readers of the Union-Banner, and all my friends everywhere to come to see me before Christmas. After then my doors will be closed, and I will stay close at home in the hope that I may be able to hold out for a few more years against that day when I shall 'fold my tents like the Arabs, and silently steal away,' to that land of the happy hunting grounds of our fathers, from whose bourne no traveler returns."

SHILOH

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to the car of provisions that the Unity and Chilton Association are to send to the Orphan's Home. It is very well understood how it is to be sent, but I am asking Shiloh church and community to carry what you want to send to Bob Owen's Store, or to Mr. John Mullins, not later than 9 o'clock the morning of November 20th, as we will have a truck there at that time to carry it to Clanton.

You may send anything that you can use at home, for they eat and wear just like we do. If it is more convenient for you to carry what you want to send to Clanton than to one of the above places, just turn it over to J. Watts Moore or J. Z. Mims, and they will see to shipping it. Hoping all that can will respond to this most worthy cause, I am respectfully yours.—L. C. Keen.

MAKE FIREBREAKS SAYS STATE FORESTER

Montgomery, Ala., Nov 10.—The surest way of extinguishing a large forest fire is to provide a space in front of it in which there is nothing to burn, says Colonel Page S. Bunker, state forester. A space of this nature is called a firebreak, and may be either natural or artificial, continued Colonel Bunker.

Examples of natural firebreaks are streams, rock ledges and sand strips. If these are wide enough, an ordinary surface fire may stop at their border without any attention from fire fighters. However, this condition is often quite undependable, since what appears to be an adequate natural firebreak often may be wholly insufficient. This is particularly the case with small streams bordered by fairly heavy ground vegetation and saplings and other timber. Many a fire, which might easily have been extinguished by a small expenditure of labor, has jumped such streams and caused enormous damage. The dry vegetation bordering small creeks often leans across so that it almost meets that extending from the opposite side. The water surface of the stream may be ten feet wide, while the gap between the tips of the two strips of vegetation may be only a foot or two. In such cases the flame readily spans the interval and spreads fire to the other side.

Artificial firebreaks may have been built for some other purpose, such as highways, railroad rights of way, or plowed fields. These will usually stop ordinary fires unless the wind is very strong. If such firebreaks do not already exist in front of a fire, it is necessary to make special ones by clearing the ground and plowing up a strip of from five to fifty feet wide. Oftentimes it is sufficient merely to plow two narrow parallel strips and burn the surface rubbish lying between. In this case care must be taken that the clearing fire does not itself escape and cause damage.

After a firebreak is built it must be kept clear of all leaves that may fall upon it during the autumn, winter and spring. Otherwise there may accumulate an inflamable layer which will permit fire to cross the break. This keeping of the firebreaks clean is exceedingly important.

GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENTS

Pointing to the alarming increase in automobile traffic fatalities in recent years in comparison to fatalities at grade crossings which have shown no increase, W. R. Cole, president of the L & N Railroad in the L & N Employees' Magazine for November, declares it to be a problem offered purely and simply by the indifference and recklessness of the motorist. He believes that a sense of safety has not been developed in the minds of the great mass of the motoring public. This indictment is fostered by the fact, pointed to by Mr. Cole, that 40 per cent of the grade crossing accidents on the L & N happen at crossings protected by watchmen, by visible or audible signals or by gates; that 40 per cent of the accidents are caused by the automobile being driven into the side of a train which has already occupied the crossing; and that 5 per cent of the accidents happen in broad daylight mostly to persons who live in the community.

Referring to the grade crossing phase of the traffic problem, Mr. Cole points to the fact that although 180 million dollars were spent in 1926-27-28 eliminating grade crossings, there was a net increase of 2,044 grade crossings over the country in that period. He declares it a manifest impossibility to eliminate even a relatively small part of the 240,000 grade crossings now in the country, and explains that the matter resolves itself into the problem of facilitating movement of traffic at points of density.

The traffic problem as a whole, accroding to Mr. Cole, offered by indifference and recklessness of the motorists, can best be solved by strict enforcement of sensible and complete regulations, made a part of our system of laws.

If the government shale lands in the wild west are worth, as "Raging Ralph" Kelley charged in his paid articles in the New York World, the sum of $40,000,000,000, here is a chance for the government and the World to make some real money. Let the government sell all this shale land to the World for $30,000,000,000, pay off the national debt and distribute the other fourteen billions among the unemployed. Then the World can make a profit of ten billions to use in its campaign to make the world safe for John Barleycorn. The fact that it would cost two or three times as much as the oil is worth to extract it from the shale ought not bother big business men like Mr. Kelley and the editors of the World.

WEST CHILTON

There was a rich profusion of brilliant autumn flowers in West Chilton a few days ago, but the frosts have laid them low. Mrs. Eva Cofer, Mrs. L. G. Posey, and others had quite a display of them.

Well, the long-talked of election is now a matter of history. The people have spoken and the results have made glad the hearts of many of our people. All the loyal ones are glad they did their duty. Yes, they played the man, and they made an admirable selection. Men from whom we expect fine things. Men we are all proud of. Men who will do their duty.

Our officials and our defeated primary candidates are entitled to honor for the way they performed their duty at the close, by lifting their voices and influence in behalf of our standard bearers.

The late box supper at Union Springs is reported quite a success in securing funds to repair the church house.

Manly Atchison and family of Clanton were recent visitors to the home folks in West Chilton.

We learn that L. G. Posey his purchased the Ella Pate farm here.

Mrs. Maggie Latham has sold her farm and is having a home built on the S. E. Waldrop farm.

We learn that Oscar Dobbs and family will move to Pleasant Grove and located with J. N. Childress.

From some view points people are facing a gloomy situation for next year. But each day is carrying us out of the gloom to a brighter day. Then, we were living too fast any way. No need to blame President Hoover with depression that is world wide. Some people always blame the party in power for every depression, and that is a handy weapon for the politician to use.

Mr. Marion Cofer's relatives from Siluria visited him Sunday afternoon.

President Glen Frang of the University of Wisconsin says that the students of his institution have the same right to join the communists as the Presbyterians. But is is hoped that no student will try out the eminent education's sincerity by organizing a society to overthrow the University of Wisconsin and its president by violence, no matter what he calls the organization, however admissable it may be to join a party, proposing that treatment for the government of the United States.

This is the time of the year when the school boys in the country are going nutting and it is also the time of the year when the politicians over the country are going nutty.

What American people need say a writer in one of the current magazines is the "neked truth" but the trouble is that what some of the writers call the naked truth is only an indecent exposure of their own minds.

DEMONSTRATION DAY AT CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL

County Teacher Writes on Improvments

A device, we may say a new device, since its beginning dates back from only the past two years in Chilton County, has been given full play to show the progressive development of the educational system of this county.

This device consists of a co-operative group meeting of the teachers throughout the county. One of its chief aims is to keep constantly before the teachers a standard of excellence to be attained, displaying by select teachers means by which they may be attained.

One of these meetings was held in Clanton at the Grammar school building on November 7th.

The program of this particular meeting carried out clearly its aim through its demonstration in its highest standard of Reading, English, Geography, Writing and Supervised Play. The capable teachers of the Grammar school of Clanton contributed an excellent demonstration under the potent leadership of our well-known Supervisor and Superintendent, to whom this great stride in the educational program of the county is due.

We hope that each teacher will greet with enthusiasm, attend with a desire for betterment, and return to her classroom working more truly toward her goal, these group meetings in the various parts of the county.

Together one and all let us be the stalwart supporters of this great program planned by our competent educational directors.

PARENT-TEACHERS WILL MEET THURSDAY

A meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Chilton County High School is anounced for Thursday afternoon at three o'clock, at the High School Building. A special feature of this meeting will be an address by Mr. Sam F. Brewster, a landscape artist from Auburn. The ladies of the association are especially interested in hearing the message and suggestion of Mr. Brewster, as he is the greatest authority in Alabama on the subject of landscaping. A full attendance of the members of the association is urged for this meeting.

"Yes—and then?"

"We filtered it."

"Yes."

Lesson for November 16

THE BELIEVING CENTURION, A GENTILE WHOSE FAITH JESUS COMMENDED

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 8:5-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Believed Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Man Who Believed Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Being Fair to Other Races.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Overcoming Racial Prejudice.

I. Who the Centurion Was (v. 5).

His name is not given. His title was derived from the word meaning "a hundred." He was, therefore, officially the commander of a hundred men. "The ordinary duties of a centurion were to drill his men, inspect their arms, food, and clothing, and to command them in the camp and in the field."

II. The Centurion's Need (vv. 5, 6).

He had a very dear servant who was greviously afflicted with the palsy, and at the point of death (Luke 7:2). This slave was highly valued for this character and ability. We are not told in this account as to whether the centurion had employed doctors. In all probability they had been employed and were unable to give help. The centurion had, no doubt, heard of the wonderful power of Jesus to heal. Therefore, he came to him as the only one who could help.

III. The Centurion's Request (vv. 5,6).

It was that Christ would come and heal his servant (Luke 7:3). From the account in Luke we learn that the centurion first sent the leaders of the Jews. Being a Gentile, he doubtless believed that he could best secure the attention and consideration of Jesus through the mediation of the Jews. The centurion was of good report among the Jews. The leaders who were sent testified to the good reputation which he bore in the community. They especially mentioned his benevolent deeds to the Jews.

IV. The Centurion's Humility (vv. 7, 8).

As Jesus was nearing the centurion's house the friends were sent to say to him that he was unworthy for him to come under his roof, but because the case of his servant was so grave, he brushed aside all difficulties and personally appealed for help. Jesus is pleased when men realize their utter helplessness and appeal to him for help.

V. The Centurion's Faith (vv. 8-10).

In spite of his unworthiness he committed his case to the Lord. He believed that if Jesus would but speak the word, his servant would be healed. It is most interesting to note his philosophy of authority. He said, "I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me, and I say to this man, 'Go,' and he goeth, and to another, 'Come,' and he cometh, and to my servant, 'Do this,' and he doeth it." He believed that disease was under control, that Christ could order it about just as he ordered his soldiers about. By faith he saw Christ as completely in authority over the most violent malady as he himself was in control over the soldiers under him. His faith was so unusual that Christ marveled at it. He did not marvel in the sense of being surprised at it, but marveled at its intelligence. His faith was based upon the true philosophy of the universe; namely, that the universe is based upon a law and Jesus Christ is the Director and Controller of that law. So greatly was Christ pleased with his faith that he declared that it exceeded anything found among the Jews, that many Gentiles would have a place in the kingdom to the exclusion of many Jews.

VI. Christ's Wonderful Power (v. 13).

He said to the centurion, "I will come and heal him." (v. 7). Note his perfect confidence in himself. He did not say, "I will come and see what I can do," but "will heal him." He knew that all power was given unto him by the Father. He did not need to go and touch the centurion's slave, but needed only to speak the word, and it was done. He could heal from miles away as well as when in the presence of a sick person. How wonderful is the power of the Lord Jesus Christ! Let us trust him at all times and under all circumstances.

DIEF TAKES ON PAN-AM AGENCY

Mr. L. E. Diefenderfer, proprietor of the far-famed Dief's Service Station at Clanton, announces that he has taken on the egency for Pan-Am Gasoline and oils in Clanton. For the past five years, in fact ever since beginning his business, Dief has been selling Standard Oil Company products.

The business of Dief's Service Station has not only been one of the biggest of its kind in Clanton and Chilton County, but its name and fame has been carried to all parts of the United States by many admiring friends of Mr. Diefenderfer among the traveling public.

The placing of Pan-Am products in Dief's Service Station is regarded as the most forward step that has been accomplished by the distributing organization of this product in Central Alabama. Many hundreds of people will become acquainted with Pan-Am through the Dief Service Station. The name of Dief's alone carries great prestige with the motor public. This together with the already well recognized merits of Pan-Am gives assurance that the future holds greater and better business for Pan-Am in this territory.

"That is a skyscraper," announced the guide.

Old Lady—"Oh, my! I'd love to see it work."

A New York City school teacher tells about a little boy whose coat was so difficult to fasten that she went to his assistance. As she tugged at the hook she asked, "Did your mother hook this coat for you?"

No!" was the astounding reply. "She bought it."

You can recognize the typical American anywhere. He is asking somebody for a match.

Two colored brethren were bewailing the hard times.

"Boy," said one of them, "times is harder'n I ever seen 'em before. If sumpin' don't turn up perty soon, I'm gonna start preachin'. I done that oncet an' I ain't too good to do it ag'in!"

STATEMENT ABOUT INCIDENTAL FEES

No doubt everyone knows that recently the Attorney General has held that the law authorizing trustees and the County Board of Education to levy and collect incidental fees for the schools has been held unconstitutional. I believe that all of us will agree that incidentals should be taken care of other than through the assessment of fees. I feel that the Attorney General is contending for the thing which ought to be done.

The only regret that any one can have is the fact that the ruling coming at the time it has, has left many of the trustees facing an embarrassing situation. Fuel, etc., must be supplied in some way. Certainly none of us want the children to remain in school uncomfortable and perhaps be made sick as a result of not having fire. We know furthermore that things must be had for the teachers to use in their instruction. Many of the trustees, in order to provide these things, have created obligations expecting to pay for the supplies out of funds collected as heretofore. Now what are these trustees to do if they have no money with which to meet their obligations?

So far the legislature has failed to make any provision for incidental funds except as the trustees were authorized to collect these fees from the parents. It is hoped that the legislature will make some provision for this in the coming session. At least I believe that the vast majority of us will agree that it should be done.

I have this suggestion to offer. Let the patrons of all the schools contribute according to their abilities to the end that we may take care of these needs until such time as we can secure the funds with which to do it. Personally I am in favor of eliminating the fees but of course we know that the funds will have to be provided otherwise if this is done. Yours for better schools, B. Lawrence, County Superintendent of Education.

Witty Woman—"And what line of work are you engaged in now?"

Clergyman—"I am trying to save young men."

Witty Woman—"Oh, indeed! won't you try to save a nice one for me?"

SEGMENT POETRY

Away out there alone, above,
Without a thing to make it of;
The world was made without a flaw,
Without a hammer or a saw.

Without a bit of wood or stone,
Without a bit of flesh or bone;
Without a board or nail or screw,
Or anything to nail it to.

Without a foot-hold or a trace,
Of anything at all but space;
The only thing the lord did do,
Was simply speak a word or two.

And then without apparent cause,
A thing that was not, now then was;
And if the story told is true,
The world came boldly into view.

And stood out there alone in space,
Without a blade of grass or trace;
Of life or living thing or light,
A bare old world in darkest night.

No rippling rills nor balmy breeze,
No songs of birds nor swaying trees;
There was not e'en a sound on earth,
For none of these as yet had birth.

God made the grasses then to grow,
And made the balmy breezes blow;
He made the sun to give us light,
The moon to shine for us at night.

He then did work at things like these,
Made fish with fins to swim the seas;
Horses, cows, and Indian ponies,
And whales to swallow up the Jonahs.

He made the little birds to sing,
Made Summer, Autumn, Winter, and Spring;
The mighty oak and little fern,
And beds of coal for us to burn.

In this land there ne'er was a weed,
The plant that grew came not from seed;
The will of God had placed them there,
Tempered the breeze and the balmy air.

Flowers of every shade and hue,
The red and orange, white and blue;
With mosses growing on the trees,
And vines that swayed with every breeze.

The mellow light from the midnight moon,
Rays so bright from the sun at noon;
The sweet perfume and singing birds,
Cannot be told in human words.

As down the flowery aisles they walked,
Of loves young dream together talked;
How quickly must the years have sped,
When Eve and Adam first were wed.

To him it was a world of joys,
No jealousy of other boys;
No pangs to cause his soul unrest,
For fear she loved another best.

And thus they did each other please,
Till Eve went shopping mongst the trees;
She wished some apple sauce to make,
And got the apples of a snake.

When Adam came that night to tea,
She said: "Here's apple sauce for thee;"
She made it very nice and sweet,
So Adam took it and did eat.

And on its goodness she larged,
Because no doubt she had it charged;
And then perhaps beside the fruit,
She may have a figleaf suit.

And just as other merchants will,
The snake at last came with his bill;
And Adam then refused to pay,
And tried to send the snake away.

And enmity the Lord did make,
Between the woman and the snake;
That enmity the Lord did quoth,
Should be between the seed of both.

IN HOME AND INDUSTRY

Gas, along with electricity and water, has become one of the most vital services to modern home life.

Up to recent years, it was used almost solely to cooking. But now gas heating and cooling systems, as well as gas refrigerators, are giving the home-owner new standards of convenience, cleanliness, efficiency, economy and comfort.

Gas has long been the preeminent industrial fuel. Now it is taking a foremost place in the house.

Lots of men are failures because they never attempt anything.

The editorial columns of some of the newspapers carry on about the billion dollar rise in the cost of living under the new tariff and the advertising colums of the same newspapers tell about the billion dollar drop in the cost of living.

A little Scotch lad was watching his grandmother packing his school lunch. Suddenly he looked up into the old lady's face and asked, "Grandmother, dinna yer specs magnify?"

"A little my child," she answered.

"Aweel, then," said the lad, "I wad juist like it if ye wad take them aff when ye're packin' my loounch."

A Chicago man was recently convicted of neglecting his family of five children, although he was unusually good to his dog. As he was led away to jail he called to his wife, "Take good care of the dog, Lizzie!"

SOME GEMS OF TRUTH

A friend in time of need is indeed a true friend.

Don't think because someone patted you on the shoulder and said, "fine chap" today, that he will do you a kindness tomorrow.

It is well to remeber that all is not gold that glitters.

The ideals of Jesus were not the visionary dreams of an unpractical enthusiast; but the most statesmanlike laws ever made for the well being of the people.

The song that the angels sang when Jesus was born was not merely a pretty little anthem, but was a most tremendous oratorio, good for all time.

If God be for us who can be against us.

One bridle that is hard for us to adjust to fit is the one we should wear if we are to "keep the tongue with a bridle."

The Church of Christ denotes either the visible or the invisible church. The former (I Cor., 12-28) embraces the entire body of professed Christians in the world whose creed and conduct are not flagrant contridiction to their profession. The latter (Heb., 12-23) consists of the whole number of real believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, both on earth and in heaven. By church history is meant a record of the visible church. Were it possible, indeed, to relate on any comprehensive scale, the history of the great brotherhood of genuine believers, a deeply significant and instructive story would be unfolded. It would be seen how many, of whom no record remains, have been influential agents in the advancement of Christ's kingdom and how not a few prominent figures in the historical panorama retreat into the background of comparative insignificance. It would be found that many incidents and circumstances, unknown to the historian or seemingly too trival for notice, have been potent factors in the accomplishment of the divine saving purpose; while events which fill a large space in the history imperial general councils, ecclesiastical movements, even missinoary enterprises—have in some cases exercised only a slight influence in the edification of the church Invisible. Here and there particularly in Christian biography, glimpses are caught in this inner history of the true church. But the record as a whole, is revealed to the divine eye alone. To the ecclesiastical historian belongs at least for the most part the lower, yet important task of tracing the origin and growth, witness and work, declensions and reformations, eternal conflicts and internal controversies of the church Visible.

When Christ was upon the earth and walked among men and his message was rejected. The religious Pharisees and Sadduces questioned Him and said, "He hath a devil" and put Him out of their synagogues.

Nothing good comes from trying to please everybody. Human nature is so queer. To win in a conflict we must be up and doing every minute for success only comes by diligent effort.

To pick up the papers of today and read the contents or to be even on our highways in these days of fast life is surely efficient proof that the prophet Nahum, knew where he spoke when he uttered the prophesy found in Nahum 3:1-4.

He who wastes his life and time and money will sometimes be wishing for something to turn up to help him out of difficulties.

If we put our feet in the mud in order to help the other fellow out we will both go down.

We can not be of help to the sinner by partaking of his sin.

Depend upon it, ploughing the air is not half profitable as it is easy; he who hopes in this world to get more than he earns will be like the man who looked for apples on a gooseberry bush.

Presumption is a ladder which will break the neck of him who tries to climb upon it. Don't try it as you love your soul.

"Procrastination is the thief of time."

A rich man, lying on his deathbed, called his chauffeur and said, "Sykes, I am going on a long journey, rugged and worse than you ever drove me."

"Well, sir," consoled the chauffeur, "there's one consolation—it's all down hill."

Mrs. Blabber—"You're looking very happy this morning. Have you had good news?"

Mrs. Gabor—"Just wonderful! My husband has just had a nervous breakdown and we're going to Florida for the winter."

Andy Gump—"So your son goes to college!"

Mrs. Teen—"Yes."

Andy—"What's his yell?"

Mrs. Teen—"Money! Money! Money!"

Loyalty to Your School
(Helen Roberts)

Anyone and everyone admires a boy or girl who is loyal to his or her school. Be true-blue to it, and stand for it. Do not down your school; boost it! "Be a booster." Loyalty is one of the big qualities that go to make up a good, all-round student.

There are many ways one can be loyal to his school. One is to stand up for and abide by the laws and regulations; another is to take part in all school activities and school affairs. The third and greatest is to be proud of the chance one has in going to school.

Armistice Day
(By Jewell Taylor)

The greatest day ever known in American history is the day the Armistice was signed, November 11th, 1918. On this day many sad hearts were mad to rejoice. The Armistice differs from anything in the War. It means that the soldiers will see home again and that the war will stop. Many countries which took part with the Allies have made memorials in honor of the American soldiers who came to help them fight.

Armistice Day
(By Alice Petty, 12 years of Age.)

Armistice Day!
It's not far away;
On November 11th, 1918
The hearts at home were pining,
While all the brave soldiers were resigning;
After they were released
Forever the expected peace.

Why should we remember that day?
When we found out that our nation
Would not be taken away?
We don't appreciate it like we should —not even like we could.
But remember that part of the year
And give the Red, White and Blue at least one cheer!

Senior Play at Asembly
(By Virginia Eubanks)

The student body of the Chilton County High School enjoyed a most interesting program given by the Senior II class and directed by Miss Margaret Kendrick, class advisor and English teacher.

The name of the program was "How Pokey Huntas Saved the Life of Captain John Smith." Characters were as follows: Herman Harris, Esther Lee Dennis, Frances Maddox, Ethel Mae Jones, J. C. Maddox, Jane Roberts, Elizabeth Stanley and Sallie Mae Mahan. The curtain was raised on a chorus singing. The wooded scene of the new stage served as the trees. The sun was rising as the cold north wind blew through the trees, and the Captain John Smith came into the Indian village and at once fell in love with Pokey Huntas, daughter of Chief "Powder Can." In the meantime, the chief appeared and ruined the scene, carrying off the Captain to the wood block. At this time Pokey Huntas appeared and told her father he would have to kill her first if he killed Captain Smith. The entire play was in pageant form.

STUDENT INJURED IN AUTO WRECK

Brought To Hospital Here With Fractured Skull

Allen Arvin, age 19, freshman at the University of Alabama, is in the Central Alabama Hospital at Clanton, recovering from injuries received in an automobile accident last Saturday. Two of his college mates face charges of reckless driving and leaving the scene of the accident in which they are involved.

The accident in which the University students figured happened a few miles south of Clanton, and the students facing the charges were arrested in Montgomery. They are Harry Weissburg, of New York, and Richard Palmer of New Jersey. With them was Miss Elizabeth Carpenter, a co-ed, of New Jersey.

According to report made to Clanton officers, the car in which Arvin was a passenger with four students, was forced from the road by the automobile said to have been driven by Palmer. The car plunged down an embankment, spilling the occupants, and crushing Arvin, who occupied the rumble seat.

Montgomery police were told by C. L. Moss, of Birmingham, who appeared upon the scene within a few minutes after the wreck, that Palmer and Wiessburg left Arvin stretched on the roadside and continued on to Montgomery, where they were to attend a football game. Mr. Ross said he pursued the car into Montgomery where he hailed the boys and suggested they call the police. Meanwhile the Montgomery police had received a call from Clanton officers requesting that Palmer and Weissburgh be held.

Arvin was brought to Clanton hospital, where examination revealed that he had sustained a fracture of the skull. He was unconscious for several hours. Reports from the hospital Tuesday said the young man was getting along well as could be expected.

Palmer and Weissburgh were released from the county jail in Montgomery after they had posted bonds of $1,000 each. The boys emphatically denied that their car had forced the other machine from the road, and declared they left the scene because they did not thing Arvin was badly hurt.

HILL GROCERY CO. POPULAR STORE

Largest Distributor of Food Products In State of Alabama

Just now at the completion of a five-year period of business operations in Clanton, the Hill Grocery Company extends to their many friends in Clanton and Chilton County their thanks for the splendid patronage that has been accorded them.

According to statistics, Mr. J. W. McEathern, manager of the local Hill store, says that the Hill Grocery Company, with its several stores in Alabama, is the largest distributor of food products in the State. As pointed out by Mr. McEathern, this accomplishment alone is the best evidence to prove that the Hill Grocery Company has merited a wonderful degree of confidence with the public.

"Our store in Clanton," said Mr. McEathern, "is by far the largest retailers of such staple grocery items as sugar, flour, and lard, not to mention the hundreds of other food products in which our retail trade has grown to marvelous proportions."

Continuing his remarks in this interview, Mr. McEathern said: "We want to re-emphasize to the people of Clanton and Chilton County the fact that we fully appreciate their friendship and their business. We want the public to know that Hill Grocery Company is in reality a Clanton institution, because we seek not only to sell groceries, but to do our part in every way for the upbuilding and betterment of this community.

"Our customers will find it convenient to trade at Hills, because here they can get everything they want at one place and one time. We extend a cordial invitation to our friends and customers to continue to come to see us. We guarantee to serve you with the same efficiency, the same interest, and the same courtesy that has characterized our business ever since the first day we opened our store in Clanton."

Clanton Girl Will Be In Celebration

Young Lady Selected By Kiwanis Club To Go To Birmingham

Some young lady of Clanton will have a delightful time in Birmingham Saturday of this week. Who the lucky one will be is to be determined by the Kiwanis Club of Clanton at the weekly luncheon Thursday. The following nominations have been made, and the selection will be made from this list:

Miss Ruth Sessions, Miss Janice Danforth, Miss Gertie Fiquett, Miss Mary Heard, Miss U. L. Foshee, Miss Louise McSwain, Miss Ruby Warlick, Miss Zora Guy.

The young lady who is selected will go to Birmingham as the guest of the Birmingham Junior Chamber of Commerce. A like selection will be made from 21 towns outside of Birmingham, and the young lady guests will have a part in the parade that will be put on in the city of Birmingham preceding the annual Howard-Southern football game.

The line of parade will be composed of three units. Howard College will lead with the first group, followed by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Birmingham-Southern units.

The parade, more than a mile long, will start promptly at ten a. m. Saturday. The line of march is from Wilson Park down Twentieth Street to First Avenue, then west on First Avenue to Nineteenth Street, and north on Nineteenth Street to Sixth Avenue, where it will disband.

The Kiwanis Club of Clanton has already accepted the invitation of the Junior Chamber of Commerce to send a representative young lady to represent our city in the parade and other festivities. All arrangements have been completed, and it now remains only for the Kiwanis Club to designate the young lady of its choice.

79 FARMERS SELL CREAM SATURDAY

Stapp Urges Continued Faith In Dairy Project Here

Mr. Stapp reports that 76 farmers brought cream to the cream station in the Farm Bureau office Saturday. These 76 farmers brought in 160 gallons of cream. They received pay for 400 pounds of butterfat. This is equivalent to about 460 pounds of butter.

Mr. Stapp urges farmers not to become discouraged with the present low price of butterfat. He thinks the price will surely go up soon.

Mr. Stapp says that there are several thousand acres of waste branch bottom land in the county that could be made very profitable if it was cleared and put in pasture and grazed by good dairy cows.

Last weeks issue of this paper carried a splendid article on how to mix home grown feeds for best results when fed to dairy cows. Mr. Stapp further states that many farmers in Chilton County could well afford to reduce their cotton acreage and grow more feed for good cows. He stresses good cows because low producing cows, handled as dairy cows, never make their owners any profit.

Fiddlers Convention Held Monday Night

Congressman Jeffers Spoke To Legion and Guests

The Fiddlers Convention sponsored by the Clanton Post of American Legion at the courthouse Monday night was an unqualified success. There were enough prizes to give something to everyone who took part in the program.

Each business house in town had donated some article of value to be given as a prize. In addition the American Legion provided cash prizes of $10. First prize, $5 in cash, was won by J. R. Wright. Second prize, $3 in cash, was won by Iron Howell. Third prize, $2 in cash, was won by J. W. Smith. Every other one of the 22 fiddlers was given a prize out of the list of things donated by the merchants.

Congressman Lamar Jeffers, himself a member and loyal supporter of the American Legion, responded to the invitation of the Clanton Legionaires to attend the occasion. He made the speech of the evening, and it was received with loud applause by his comrades.

The attendance was good. The proceeds will go into the treasury of the local Legion Post, and will thereby aid the Post in carrying on its various objectives in this community.

COOSA COUNTY CORN AT ALRED'S

If that meant what it might mean, it would mean that business will be picking up right away at Alred Drug Store. But it don't. It simply means what it says. And if you are a farmer and interested in good corn, you ought to see a sample that Coos Neighbors has from the farm of his father, T. L. Neighbors, of Goodwater, in Coosa County.

Mr. Neighbors used pure Hastings Prolific on his farm last year. He produced as high as 92 bushels to the acre, without fertilizer. I asked Coos how he did it, and he gave me this chesty reply: "That is land, boy, where I come from." And I think that is corn too.

The elder Mr. Neighbors has four to five thousand bushels of this fine corn which he expects to sell in Alabama for seed corn next year. In Clanton it will be handled at Alred Drug Store. When time comes around for planting next year, the farmers of Chilton County will do well to see Dr. Neighbors and arrange to get some of this fine seed corn.

CHURCHES WIPED OUT ALL DEBTS

Two Dedication Services Held In Clanton Last Sunday

Last Sunday marked the biggest event in the history of the Baptist and Methodist Churches of Clanton. At the end of a spirited campaign of two weeks, these two congregations came to the day of dedication with every penny of debts paid and joy and gladness in the hearts of everyone.

During recent years both the Baptist and Methodist Churches have built in Clanton houses of worship that are the pride of the city as well as an honor to God and His cause. These buildings have cost lots of money, perhaps no less than a total of one hundred thousand dollars. The events of last Sunday marked the payment of every cent of this amount, including all outstanding debts for the erection of the buildings as well as all local expenses that have been incurred in the carrying on of the business of the churches.

For the dedication exercises, Rev. Childs, pastor of the Methodist Church, secured the consent of Bishop Ainsworth, of Birmingham, to come here and deliver the dedicatory sermon Sunday morning. All the congregations of the city joined with the Methodists in this event, and it was one of the most joyful services ever witnessed in Clanton.

Sunday night the Methodists and members of other denominations joined with the Baptists in a similar service. Rev. Robert L. Wyatt, of Birmingham was the speaker of the evening.

Several have asked the question "How did Childs and Ezell ever get the people of Clanton to pay off sixteen thousand dollars of debts in these hard times?" We can not answer the question. But we are satisfied and even more than that, glad, that we can say they did it. Never mind how it was done.

A & P STORE IN NEW LOCATION

At Place Formerly Occupied By Moores Drug Store

The many friends and customers of the A & P Store in Clanton will find that popular establishment in a new location this week. On Tuesday morning they opened for business at the building formerly occupied by Moore's Drug Store, on Main Street.

The entire stock and fixtures of the store were moved to the new place Monday and Monday night, and business went right on without a moment's interruption. At the new place every facility for serving their trade will be maintained, and the customers have full guarantee that A & P will continue to serve their needs in that ample manner which has characterized this business since it was opened here a year ago.

There is no change in the management of the store. Mr. Cleve Armstrong will continue in charge of the place, assited by a corps of the most competent salesmen. Commenting upon the removal of the store, Mr. Armstrong said:

"We wish all our friends and customers throughout Chilton County to know that we have changed the location of our store, and we want them to continue to come to see us regularly. Our ample service in the distribution of the best food products will be continually improved, and those who buy from A & P have every reasonable assurance that they are geting the best always at the most reasonable prices possible."

Special attention is directed to the advertisement of A & P in this issue of The Union-Banner. This store will give away 500 loaves of bread next Saturday, one loaf free to each of the first 500 customers who make a purchase at the store. Remember the location, where Moore's Drug Store used to be. Hurry around to A & P when you get to town next Saturday and make your purchase. You will get a loaf of bread free.

Mr. Michel, Alabama Farm Bureau cotton grader, will be at the Farm Bureau office again Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week to grade and sample cotton for those who wish to pool their cotton and draw 90 per cent of the market price.

FEED HENS HEAVIER ON SCRATCH GRAIN IN FALL

The amount of scratch grains to feed layers varies with the different seasons of the year, except in the South where the length of the day is practically the same the year around.

In the winter when the nights are cold and long, hens need more of the heat-forming, energy producing and scratch grains than when the nights are short and warm. For the next three months feed about one quart of scratch grains to twelve hens, or 14 pounds of feed to one hundred hens is all that they need. In the extreme North give them all they will eat.

Scratch grains should be fed an hour before the birds go to roost so they will have time to clean it up before dark. Do not feed any grain in the morning as the hens are not apt to fill up on it and then wait for it to digest before they eat any mash and obtain the egg building materials.

Keep a high grade mash before the hens all the time and encourage them to eat all that they want. The more they eat, the more eggs it ordinarily means.

PROPERHOPPER SPACE INCREASES PRODUCTION

The important features in feeding egg mash to your hens, is to supply plenty of hopper space so that all the hens can eat the mash freely. If more attention were given to hopper equipment, if would mean in a great many instances a 10 per cent to 25 per cent increase in the production of the flock.

One small three foot hopper is often considered large enough to acommodate several hundred hens. What happens if that many of the hens find if impossible to eat enough of the mash to maintain themselves. To provide proper hopper acommodations for your hens, supply at least 2 running feet of hopper space to every ten hens.

Aside from providing plenty of hopper space, it is important to have hopper equipment that does not permit the birds to waste the mash. A good egg mash costs money, so no one can afford to have the hens throw it out of the hopper with their feet and soil it. It is unfair to blame the hens with faulty hopper equipment hampers production results. Hens will actually waste very little feed when a proper hopper is used.

The table type of hopper with a wire top keeps the hens out of the mash, keeps the mash clean and also wholesome, helps to prevent fighting at the hopper and does not clog as do the old type wall hoppers.

CHEVROLET COMPANY TO INTRODUCE NEW MODEL

Definite assurance that Chevrolet will introduce a new car for 1931 on Saturday was revealed here today during the staging by Chevrolet factory officials of the first of fifty dealer meetings to be held in the next five weeks throughout the country.

Included in a carload of equipment brought in for the meeting was a new car substantially bigger than the current model, and extensively changed in appearance.

Although the meeting was closed to the public, it was learned that H. J. Klinger, vice-president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co., who attended the meeting here, told the 500 dealers and associated bankers in attendance at the city auditorium that the car would be publicly announced the coming Saturday, and that, despite its increased size and improved appearance, it would be priced considerably below current levels.

Dramatic incidents attended the presentation of the car. It was trucked under canvass from the freight shed to the stage of the auditorium, and there, boxed in by velvet drops and under a flood of spotlights, disclosed to the audience.

A burst of applause greeted the unveiling of the car, and when the announcement of new lower prices was made, a wild cheering dealer group interrupted proceedings for several minutes.

The car is longer than the present Chevrolet, and changes and refinements are so extensive that it has a decided "big car" appearance, one dealer reported.

MT. PLEASANT SCHOOL NEWS

The Mt. Pileasant P.-T. A. met several days ago and organized. Mrs. L. C. Warr, District Chairman, and Miss Scarborough, Elementary Supervisor were present and assisted in the oranizing. Fifteen joined in the first meeting. Others are expected to join at the next meeting, which will be held at a date not yet annouced. Watch for this meeting and arrange to be present for there are several problems of the community which will be discussed.

The school work at Mt. Pleasant is progressing nicely. Several new enrollments were made this week which brings the total enrollment near the 200 mark. Due to fall gathering and the varied farm work, there are some who have not enrolled. The next two weeks will see the school enrollment go well beyond the 200 mark. Sixty-two have enrolled in Jr. High thus far.

Athletics are now beginning to take full form during the recreation periods. The larger boys have been busy gettting the basketball court cleaned off and smoothed down in readiness for the current season. The prospects for a winning team is good. Mt. Pleasant lost four of her regular players last year through graduation, which leaves only one player to build a team around this year. Curtis Traywick the returning player was "high-point" man on last years team. In 11 match games with other Jr. High Schools he netted the ball for a total of 101 points.

The boys basket-ball team was organized last week. Curtis Traywick being elected Captain. Practice is now well under way, and with the new and inexperienced material we hope to develop a team which will not only exemplify a winning spirit, but real sportsmanship.

Any Jr. high school desiring games with Mt. Pleasant this season write the Principal.

The girls of Mt. Pleasant plan to organize a team this year. A court is being prepared, new goals and boards are being erected.

A chicken supper will be given at the school building at an early date. The P.-T. A. is sponsoring this movement. Watch for the date which will be announced later. A great time will be had by all who are present.

The Elementary teachers, Miss Littlejohn, Miss Bean and Miss Rainy attended the demonstration exercises in Elementary class work held at the Clanton Grammar School on November 8th.

Miss Mildred Rainey, primary teacher spent a pleasant week end with Miss Lesta Cobb, who lives and teaches in the Oak Grove community.

Attendance in school has been very good, even though much farm work had to be done. Mt. Pleasant won the attendance pictures for the months of November and January of last school year.

A beautiful loving cup was presented to the school by the Peoples Savings Bank for the best yearly attendance from last year. We hope to share in these honors again this school year. So lets every boy and girl who attends this school be present every day if possible. Perfect attendance counts most in a boy or girls school work, so lets win two honors in the place of one.

Seventy pupils at Mt. Pleasant were awarded perfect attendance Certificates for the month of October. We hope to raise this figure to 125 for the month of November.

Miss Scarborough, of Birmingham who is a former pupil of Mt. Pleasant visited our school recently.

BIGGER AND BETTER

PRESENTING THE NEW CHEVROLET SIX

Today the Chevrolet Motor Company presents the Bigger and Better Chevrolet Six, a new model of the six-cylinder car which has enjoyed such wide popularity. In both the chassis and body, you will find expressed, as never before, Chevrolet's well-known policy of progress through constant improvement.

The new Chevrolet is longer, lower and strikingly smart. The radiator has been deepened and its appearance enhanced by a curving tie-bar and chrome-plated parabolic headlamps. The long hood sweeps back gracefully into the new body lines. And never was Fisher's fine craftsmanship more evident than in the bodies of the new Chevrolet Six! They are roomier, more comfortable, and throughout exhibit that attention to detail which is the basis of true quality.

Mechanically, too, the new Chevrolet Six is better. The wheelbase is longer. The frame stronger. The steering easier. The clutch more durable. There is a smoother, quieter transmission. Wherever finer materials and more advanced design could increase Chevrolet quality and economy—improvement has been made. The new Chevrolet Six is an outstanding achievement—it is the Great American Value!

CLANTON, ALA.

IN MEMORY

Of our brother, Curney C. Scroggins, who departed this life on November 6, 1930. He had been sick only a few days with that dreaded disease, Black Jaundice, when God caled him. He was one of the first to answer his country's call, and among the last to be sent home, having been kept in France for most two years. Like lots of others, he was a hero, had lots of horrible experience, but came through them all, to be spared to his loved ones for a short time longer.

He was only 38 years old. The American Legion performed the last sad rights of committing their comrade to the dust from which he came. A sweet, sad and impressive ceremony, after the talk to their dead. The body was rested over the open grave, the firing of the salute, then the blowing of the soldier's farewell (or taps), ended the ceremony. His body was lowered into the open grave and covered with the dust, and flowers; and Curney C. Scroggins was no more. Surely there was much rejoicing among the angels as another one entered to be one of them.—Mrs. Jim Scroggins.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Porch and little daughter, Harriet Kate, of Atlanta, Ga., spent the week end with relatives and friends at Mitchell Dam. They were accompanied on the visit by Mrs. J. U. Benziger, also of Atlanta.

The New York Central Railroad wants an increase of forty per cent in the fares for taking people in and out of New York City. Well it ought to be worth that to get out anyhow.

THE NEW CHEVROLET

Thousands of people who thronged showrooms throughout the nation last week to get their first view of the new 1931 Chevrolet commented particularly upon the features new to the low priced field achieved in the current line of Fisher-Chevrolet bodies.

First remarked among the new features are the increased size and roominess made possible by the longer wheelbase, while numerous other changes not obvious to the eye combine to make the bodies stronger, more rigid, and as completely squeakproof as human ingenuity can devise.

A surprising amount of handwork goes into every individual body in the new Chevrolet series. In the application of the exterior finish, alone, 22 individual steps have to be taken along the line, ranging from the cleaing of the metal with an acid solution on through the glazing and wet-sanding operations, the dry-sanding and application of a mist coat, to the final ducoing, touching up and striping.

The combination steel and hardwood method of body construction, the most durable and desirable known to the industry, is continued, although with important changes at vital points. The new roof construction, for example, is now a separate assembly known as the slat-and-bow type, the strongest known to the industry. The bows, instead of being stream bent, are cut to shape so that they will retain their shape indefinitely. Double steel braces easily accesible for servicing, replace the wood strainers formerly used along the sides of the roof, and strong steel braces are now used at the corners to add to the roof rigidity. The roof structure is thoroughly padded to prevent drumming, and is covered with a material consisting of two layers of fabric bound by an inner layer of rubber.

Anti-squeak material in liquid, rubber dough or friction form is used between all steel braces and their respective wood parts. As a further aid to quietness, insulating material is used wherever wood touches metal.

Exclusive patent rights just obtained by the Fisher Body Corporation for a new type of spring never before used in automobile seat construction assure greater comfort for the passengers. The coils of these springs are larger, with strips of burlap running lengthwise to separate the rows of coils.

In the sedan 32 coil springs make the front seat unusually resilient, and 45 coils are in the rear seat, nine more than in the 1930 models. Over the springs is placed a thick layer of padding unusually durable and soft. The upholstery cloth is piped with another layer of padding, and the seats are trimmed with a "Turkish" front, with tufts and buttons ranged along the front side of the cushion, a style of trim which adds much to the tailored beauty of the interior.

For the greater protection of front seat passengers, a layer of jute or felt is vulcanized, this year, to the rubber floor mats, and an insulated pad covers the entire dash to keep out heat or cold and add to quietness. The mats in the rear compartments of the coach and sedans are a round wire tapestry type of great durability, and in the sport sedan the carpet has a high wool content with a new mottled pattern.

Option of broadcloth or mohair upholstery trimming is provided with every closed body in the new Fisher line. Curtains on all bodies have a high luster, and curtain tassels are provided in the special sedan and sport coupe.

All interior hardware has been newly designed and beautified. Exterior handles have the protectalok feature which foils the would-be thief. Doors are locked from the inside simply by lifting the door handle.

Dome lights come with the coach, sedans and sport coupes. A highly polished robe rail is found in the sedan, while a silk cord type is used in the special sedan. Foot rests, comfortably located in all sedans and the coach, are regulated from the front seat adjuster.

MAN CAN'T SLEEP, GETS NERVOUS, HATES PEOPLE

"I could not sleep and got so nervous I hated everybody. Since taking Vinol, I can sleep 10 hours and feel full of pep all day."—Julius Bender.

For 30 years doctors have prescribed Vinol because it contains important mineral elements of iron, calcium and cod liver peptone. The very FIRST bottle brings sound sleep and a BIG appetite. Nervous, worn-out people are surprised how QUICK Vinol gives new life and pep! Tastes delicious.—Upchurch Drug Company, Clanton, Alabama.

Lesson for November 23

THE RICH YOUNG RULER, REFUSING A LIFE OF SACRIFICIAL SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:17-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—And he said unto them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Failed Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Man Who Failed Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Choices Which Must Be Made.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Following Christ Means.

I. The Young Ruler (v. 17).

For a complete view of the characteristics of this young man see also Matthew 19:16-30 and Luke 18:18-30.

1. His virtues.

(1) He was courageous.

He was a man of high standing—a rich young ruler (Luke 18:18, 23). With manly courage he came to Jesus.

(2) Earnest (Mark 10:17).

He came and knelt before Jesus, thus showing his earnest sincerity.

(3) High aspirations (v. 16).

He wanted eternal life. He felt the need of preparing for a life beyond.

(4) Pious and moral (v. 20).

He professed to have conformed to God's only law from his youth.

(5) He believed that Christ could inform him of the "good thing" to be done to inherit eternal life.

2. His errors.

(1) About Christ (v. 16).

He esteemed Jesus to be good, but did not apprehend him as God.

(2) Concerning himself.

He was self-righteous. He thought he was good and that he could do something good.

(3) Concerning eternal life.

He had a defective theology. He thought that eternal life could be obtained by good works.

II. Jesus Dealing With the Young Ruler (vv. 17-22).

Jesus skillfully led the young man to see his errors and then put his finger on the weak spot in his life.

1. His question: "Why callest thou me good?" (v. 17).

His object in this was to lead the young man to a correct apprehension as to who he was. Before giving him a chance to answer he declared that only God was good, as if to say, "I am good and therefore God."

2. Jesus' answer to the young man's question (vv. 17-20).

"If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." Christ met him here on his own ground; namely, that of the law. He took the young man's level that the young man's real worth might be revealed. If one insists on getting life by doing something, the law declares what must be done. It must be perfectly kept.

3. Christ's command (vv. 21, 22).

Replying to Christ's citation of the commandments of the law, the young man glibly asserted that he had kept them from his youth up. He no doubt was sincere, but deceived. In Christ's command to go and sell his possessions and distribute to the poor, he put his finger upon the weak spot.

4. The young man's fatal decision (v. 22).

His going away sorrowful proved that he was covetous and did not love his neighbor as himself.

III. Jesus Showing the Peril of Riches (vv. 23-27).

This teaching concerning the peril of riches was most timely. Covetousness was fast taking hold of the people. Even one of his disciples, Judas, was well under its sway.

1. It is difficult for the rich to enter into the kingdom (vv. 23, 24).

This difficulty lies not in the possession of riches, for a man may possess great riches and be an heir of the kingdom. The difficulty lies in trusting in riches.

2. Entrance into the Kingdom is possible, though difficult (vv. 25, 26).

(1) It is possible for the grace of God to sanctify riches.

The very thing which hinders may become a great influence for good in the hand of a regenerated soul.

(2) It is possible for the grace of God to open man's eyes that he see his downward course and repent.

(3) It is possible for the grace of God to change a men from self-seeking to self-sacrifice.

(4) It is possible for the grace of God to make men humble.

IV. Rewards for Following Christ (vv. 27-30).

Those who turn their backs upon their kindred and possessions for the sake of Christ shall receive an hundredfold in this life, and eternal life in the world to come.

Wheelbarrow Conscience

Most people follow their conscience as a man follows a wheelbarrow, pushing it before him the way he wants to go.—King's Business.

The Carnal Mind

"The carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."

Seed Thoughts

Nothing can make a man truly great but being truly good, and partaking of God's holiness.—M. Henry.

Mr. S. A. Jones made a business trip to Florida last week.

CLASSIFIED ADVS.

LOST CHAIR—Will the party who took away a porch chair from my home on Hallowe'en night please bring it back?—J. R. Popwell, Clanton, Ala. 11-20-1p.

CARD OF THANKS

To our friends in far away Texas:

We take this means of thanking you all for your many acts of kindness and sympathy shown us while in your midst, and at the grave of our brother, Curney C. Scroggins.

The doctor and nurses who worked so faithfully to save him, the undertaker, who prepared and held his body for our arrival, and the American Legion, we doubly thank you for that sweet service at the grave of your dead comrade. The ones who carried flowers, we thank you too. Such kindness and sympathy as was shown us helps so much to lighten the sorrow and hurt of giving up a loved one. When you are called on to give your loved ones up, may such kindness be shown each of you is a prayer of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Scroggins and Mrs. Grace Cox.

IN MEMORY OF WILLIAM JESSE LAMBERT

On Sunday, October 26, the death angel came into our midst and took from us our loving father and grandfather, William Jesse Lambert.

He had been sick several months, which time was spent in the Alabama Baptist Hospital, Selma, Alabama.

He realized from the beginning of his illness that time with him on this earth was short. All that kind doctors, nurses, children, relatives and friends could do was done, but God called him and he answered him and said unto his children, "Do not try to keep me here my children for it is God's will and mine that I must go."

He was good and kind, and everyone who knew him loved him. His home was in the Cane Creek community, but for the past few years business called him away.

He was a loving husband, father and grand father. He was 63 years of age.

He leaves a wife, 7 children, 3 sisters and 8 grand children to mourn his loss.

He was laid to rest in the Cane Creek cemetery Tuesday, October 28, to await the resurrection morning. May God help us to live so as to meet him some day in that land where there will be no more parting.

Russia is said to be getting ready to export a lot of salmon. When it gets to the United States no doubt the Amtorg will advertise it as Russian Red salmon for American pinks.

Down South they have discovered a way to make news print from "slash" pine. Print paper from "slash" pine ought to be especially appropriate for some of our ultra modern journals.

TOOK SODA FOR STOMACH FOR 20 YEARS

"For 20 years I took soda for indigestion and stomach gas. Then I tried Adlerika. One bottle brought complete relief."—Jno. B. Hardy.

Adlerika relieves GAS and sour stomach in TEN minutes! Acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, removing poisons you never knew were there. Don't fool with medicine which cleans only PART of the bowels, but let Adlerika give stomach and bowels a REAL cleaning and see how good you feel!—Upchurch Drug Company, Clanton, Ala.

HOME FOR NEGROES

Gulledge Brothers of Chilton County Help Negro Institution By Donating 120 Acres of Land in Chilton County.

Gulledge Brothers, donated 120 acres of land to erect a home for dependent and aged negroes. The citizens of Montgomery have raised more than $5,000 to erect the building. The building will cost approximately $16,000, the balance of $11,000 is to be raised in different sections of the state. The Association now has 320 acres of land for said purpose, and their object is to serve the state at large. For this reason, we deem that every citizen in the state should encourage the movement, from the fact it will be an asset to both races and a help to the state.

This being the only institution of its kind for the negroes in Alabama, we deem it expedient that every loyal citizen will encourage the movement. The drive for the balance of the funds is now on. The Association is soliciting the cooperation throughout the state.

The home office at present is located at 111 1-2 Monroe St., Montgomery, Ala. All communication should be sent direct to the office of the Association. Officials of the Association are requesting that the funds needed by January 1st, will be contributed by each loyal citizen of the state.

It is impossible to meet each individual in person, so they are resorting to the method of advertising through the newspaper that all citizens might respond. Any information desired, you might address the office of the Association. We believe they would be glad to furnish any information desired.

Rev. Hallock Writes From China

Editor Union-Banner:

I wonder if you have any boys and girls among your readers? If so, can they imagine a place in all the world without Christmas and its joys? One such place is down here on the "bottom side of the world." The slant-eyed "yaller" kiddies here do not have Christmas trees. They do not "hang up baby's stockings, the biggest you can get." Santa Claus, with his sleigh and reindeer and bags of toys seldom finds his way to China, It may be because the roads are too narrow and the reindeer fear getting their feet wet in the rice fields, or because there is so little snow and ice, or it may be because Chinese houses have so few chimneys, or perhaps Santa Claus is afraid of falling off the "bottom side" of the earth, or maybe even because nobody has shown him the way here.

Chinese children do not wait up at night to get a sly peep at him. Nor do they run down stairs very early on Christmas morning to see what Santa has put on the Chritmas tree or with what wonderful things he has filled their stockings. Just think of it! A land with no Christmas. I say "no Christmas," but it is not quite "no," for once in a while some English or American store will have a Santa Claus or a Christmas tree in the window for the sake of English boys and girls. Then lots of wee chinese noses interestingly press against the window glass.

Then, too, I and my American friends, friends of little children, are trying to be Santa Claus to at least nine hundred little kiddies in my ragged Sunday Schools in Shanghai. The happiest little brownies you ever saw are my little "Chinks" as on Chritmas day I and my helpers tell them the glad Chritmas story and distribute among them apples, oranges, and peanuts, dolls and balls, toys and candy. How the eyes of my little people sparkle. How happily they smile and how gratefully they say "zia-zia-noong" (thank, thank you), as they receive the gifts of American friends. I wish all your boy and girl readers could be with us and see how happy my boys and girls are with the simplest gifts. They would be glad not only for the delight of my little ones; but they would better appreciate their own Chritmas gifts. They would also realize how much boys and girls in China are like American boys and girls with their likes and dislikes, their joys and sorrows, their tears and smiles, and would feel that they are indeed their own brothers and sisters.

Some say there is no Santa Claus. I think of him as that great big heart of love that tries to make other people happy. Don't you think that true, Mr. Editor?

Now may I ask you to carry to all your good readers, children and grown-ups, my best wishes for a merry Christmas. Keep lots also for yourself. Yours from the land of the "China Chinks."—H. G. C. Hallock.

PAPER A DAY EARLY NEXT WEEK

The Union-Banner will come out on Wednesday of next week, because Thursday is Thanksgiving Day. All correspondents and advertisers are urged to take notice of this fact and be governed accordingly. All copy must be in the office not later than Tuesday noon. Better get it to us by Monday night to make sure it gets in the paper.

PURE SUPERSTITION

One of the worst myths about maternity is the supposition that offspring will be marked or influenced in any way by maternal impressions or prenatal influence.

SOME GEMS OF TRUTH

Boomorangs, when thrown out, will come back to the thrower; and angry words spoken in a fit of temper will stab the heart of the speaker.

Satan knows when we are afraid to trust God.

It is the lost sheep the shepherd is anxious about. The ninety and nine are safe in his fold.

In giving attention to statistics we are likely to miss the real meaning of truth. If reading the Bible does not transform our lives there must be something wrong; most likely we did not read with the intention of letting Christ have first place in our heart.

Don't give up in despair and think there is no use of trying. If God be for us we will win.

There can never be, there never will be peace, until the Prince of Peace comes and establishes His reign upon the earth.

There is great meaning in the advice, "Give till you feel it." It is by this principle that churches are maintained and the Gospel carried to "every creature" as our Christ commanded. Matt. 28:19.

If we wish to succeed in any vocation in life we must be perserverving, "Knock and it shall be opened unto you."

He that is mastered by Christ, is master of every circumstance.

Christ can never be more to us than we will let Him be. He becomes greater each day as we have fellowship with Him.

Put your trust in the one who said, "By me are the worlds framed," and you will have an everlasting and substantial arm to lean upon.

PERCY M. PITTS

Again, we present to our readers the picture of Hon. Percy M. Pitts, who will represent Chilton County in the next legislature of Alabama, which will convent in January, 1931.

Mr. Pitts won this honor in the election of November 4th. He had a little scrap for the nomination in the Republican primary in August, but was winner by a large majority. Again in November he was the winner by a handsome margin.

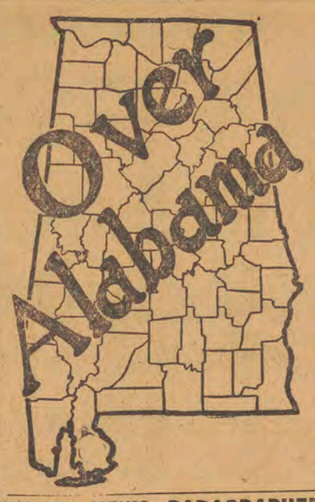
The record which Mr. Pitts made in the last legislature won for him the commendation of most of the people of Chilton County. He proved himself a worthy representative of his county, and able to do things worth while in Alabama's law making assembly.

He has on his mind very valuable constructive measures which he hopes to get enacted in the next legislature. If he is not kept too busy trying to keep down iniquitious measures that have a habit of popping up in every session of the legislature, maybe he will have time to devote his efforts to some constructive legislation that our county really needs.

FIRST THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

The original Proclamation of Thanksgiving, and, indeed, the first presidental proclamation ever issued in the United States, reads as follows:

"By the President of the United States of America.



"Whereas it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of almighty God, to obey His Will, to be grateful for His benefits, and humbly to implore His protection and favor, and whereas both Houses of Congress have by their joint committee requested me 'to recommend to the people of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many signal favors of almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity to establish a form of government for their safety and happiness.'

"Now, therefore, I do recommend and assign Thursday, the 26th day of November next, to be devoted by the people of these states to the service of that great and glorious being who is the beneficent author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be—that we may all unite in rendering unto Him our sincere and humble thanks—for His kind care and protection of the people of this country previous to their becoming a nation—for the signal and manifold mercies and the favorable interpositions of his providence, which we experienced in the course and conclusion of the late war—for the great degree of tranquility, union, and plenty,which we have since enjoyed—for the peaceable and rational manner in which we have been enabled to establish constitutions of government for our safety and happiness, and particularly the national one now lately instituted—for the civil and religious liberty with which we are blessed and the means we have of acquiring and diffusing useful knowledge; and in general for all the great and various favors which he hath been pleased to confer upon us.

"And also, that we may then unite in most humbly offering our prayers and supplications to the great Lord and ruler of nations, and beseech Him to pardon our national and other transgressions—to enable us all, whether in public or private stations, to perform our several and relative duties properly and punctually—to render our national government a blessing to all the people by constantly being a government of wise, just, and constitutional laws, discreetly and faithfully executed and obeyed—to protect and guide all sovereigns and nations (especially such as have shown kindness to us), and to bless them with good government, peace, and concord. To promote the knowledge and practice of true religion and virture, and the increase of science among them and us—and generally to grant unto all mankind such a degree of temporal prosperity as He alone knows to be best.

"Given under my hand at the City of New York, the third day of October, in the year of our Lord 1789. (Signed) GEORGE WASHINGTON."

Celebration of Thanksgiving Day in America can be traced back to the earliest days of the Massachusetts Bay Coloney. From there the custom spread to all parts of the United States.

It seems the "Irony of Fate" that this man, an employee of the Bureau of Labor, of the U. S. Government at Washington, engaged in gathering statistics from manufacturers and others, regarding activities to reduce lost time hours of labor among their employees, should on vacation in a Massachusetts town, while crossing a street on foot, be run down by an auto driver, and so badly injured that he died within two days.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. EVEREE (COX) DUKE

Mrs. Duke was a young woman only 20 years of age. At the age of 10 she united with the Baptist church at Poplar Springs and since then has been a faithful worker, always striving to do something for God's Kingdom. She worked faithfully with the Sunbeams for several months; later she served as President of the Missionary society. Also she had charge of the B. Y. P. U. Intermediates and how nicely she carried on the work. The children loved her dearly. O, how we miss her service, but we must submit to God's will. He does all things well and he prepares us here through his service for a better kingdom.

So we feel sure that Everree now is sweetly resting from her loyal service. Just a word to the young people who seem careless in regard to working for the Lord. As Brother Jones told us, try to follow her footsteps. I would to God that all young people could see the bright future and strive to follow the footsteps of this noble character, for we know heaven must be a beautiful home.

She is survived by her husband, Carlson and little son, Erskine, father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. Cox, four brothers, Lee Cox, Wallace Alvin and Douglas, four sisters, Ruth Marvreen, Delene and Nell.—One who loved her.

Beautiful little wife thy work all done, beautiful soul into glory gone, beautiful life with its crown now won. God giveth the rest.

Rest from all sorrows, watching and fears, rest from all possible and sighing tears, rest from God's endless wonderful years at home with the blest.

Beautiful spirit free from all stain and ours the heartache and pain. The slumber is sweet, peace on the brow and the eyelids so calm, peace in the heart beneath the white folded palm. How we shall miss her the beautiful dead, who'll take the place of my precious wife fled. But God knoweth best.

W. O. Rich of Birmingham is in Clanton this week visiting among relatives and friends. Mr. Ocie is looking fine—just like he did when he left Clanton several years ago.

Rev. Ernest Childs left Tuesday morning where he will attend the Methodist Conference this week.

Rev. S. J. Ezell went to Bessemer Tuesday where he will attend the Alabama Baptist Convention this week. The convention will be in session Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

More Milk for Less Money

MANY herd owners find Quaker (16%) Dairy Ration is ideally suited for feeding in combination with home-grown roughages. Perhaps you, too, can use this clean and fresh concentrate to good advantage. Let's talk it over and see if this isn't the feed to get you more milk for lowered feed costs.

DAIRY COWS REDUCE WHEN ON A DIET

Dieting for the purpose of reducing weight has become a great American habit, especially among the women folks. More bathroom scales have been sold in the past few years than during any period in history. A lot of harm has been done as the result of unwise and rigid diets. It is surprising the number of people who are willing to risk health for a graceful figure.

In the dairy industry we find a similiar situation although for a different reason. In the last few years a good deal has been said about keeping records. And every modern dairy farmer maintains an accurate check on the milk production of his herd and also the cost of feed. Naturally, in order to show a profit, all efforts are directed toward securing big production at a low feeding cost, and there is where the trouble is apt to start.

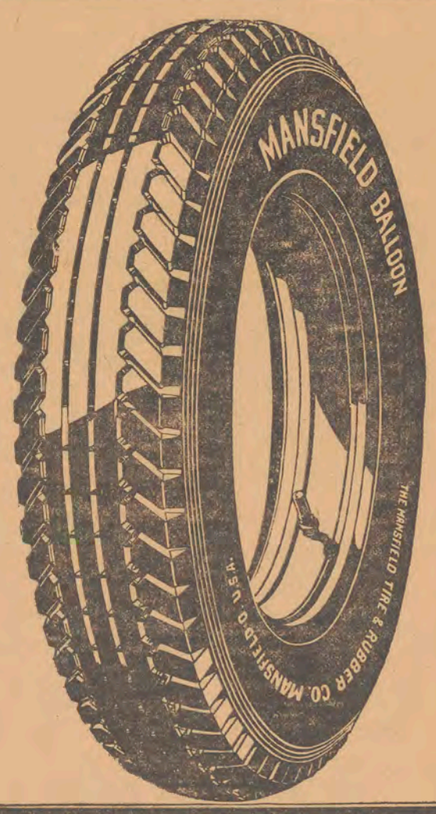
J. C. McDowell, of the U. S. Bureau of Dairy Industry tells us that "a study of the records of the half-million dairy cows on test in dairy-herd-improvement associations has indicated that few dairy herds are overfed, that quite a number are underfed, and that many of the herds are fed injudiciously."

Take the case of the farmer who fed all the cows alike, regardless of the size, age, and amount of milk produced. Only an accident will enable them to make profits in most cases. But if those same farmers will keep an individual feed and milk record on each cow, and sell off the poor producers and feed the remainder correctly, profits are certain to follow. Time after time it has been proven that cows which eat the most dollars' worth of feed produce the most milk, the most butterfat, the greatest gross income and most important of all the greates average income over the cost of feed.

A little study will show why this is true. A cow needs food for two purposes, to keep alive and to produce milk. Under normal conditions about half of the food is used for the maintenance of the body and the other half goes into the milk. But that does not mean that if you increase the rations above the amount the cow ought to have, she will give more milk. In other words, there is a well-defined limit.

A cow that is fed too much will produce the same amount of milk that she would if she was fed just enough. The excess food will be utilized in adding weight. That extra weight is of no value unless the cow happens to be underweight, or unless she happens to be preparing for a period when it will be necessary to draw upon a reserve. Overfeeding, therefore, leads to reduced profits.

Underfeeding also leads to reduced profits but from another cause. Self-preservation comes first always. That 50-50 division of food between what is needed to maintain the body and the amount that goes into the production of milk will not hold good when the cow is fed too little, for the simple reason that the body needs come first. When they are satisfied, then production starts. Take a cow weighing 1,000 pounds, that produces 3 gallons of 4 per cent butterfat milk when fed normally. She will produce that same amount of milk if overfed but possibly only half that amount if underfed. The amount that goes for body maintenance remains the same in all three cases.



A study of thousands upon thousands of individual records shows that a cow which produces twice the milk of another cow will eat about fifty per cent more than the second cow. A 100 percent increase in volume and from 50 per cent in investment is a pretty good bargain. There are a number of general rules for feeding dairy cows. An old one is to feed Holsteins one pound of grain for every three pounds (pints) of milk produced. Jerseys are supposed to require one pound of grain to every foud pounds of milk, with Guernseys in between.

Cows are just as individual in their eating as humans. You have to study each cow and feed according to her production. You must also study the combinations of food. Silage, legumes hays and grains when fed to the dairy cow in the right proportions will produce milk at a profit. For every dollar spent in feed you should receive from two to three dollars in milk. Study your records, weed out the poor ones and buy new cows to replace them. Weigh your food and your milk. It is much safer than measuring. Do this at least once a month. Or better yet, if you do not already have a testing association in your community, get a few herd owners together and strat one. Then you can have an experienced cow-tester visit your farm once a month.

PITTS EXPRESSES HIS THANKS TO THE VOTERS

To the voters of Chilton County:

Allow me to express to you my deep appreciation for the nice vote I received at your hands in the general election. I can assure you that as your Representative in the next Legislature, I will be very mindful of the responsibility and duty that I owe the peope of my county and State.

The experience that I had as your Representative in the 1927 Legislature, I feel, should make me more competent to serve you during the 1931 Legislature. I desire to work for and vote for those measures which in my judgment will be for the best interest of our county and state.

Regardless of your political affiliation or whether you supported me or my opponent in the last election I will be glad to have any constructive suggestions relative to any legislation, or proposed bills which would be to the best interest of the people.

During the time the Legislature will be in session my headquarters will be at the Exchange Hotel and I will be glad to either see or hear from any Chilton Countians.—Gratefully yours, Percy M. Pitts.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

A prominent Englishman, who has had much experience in dealing with the liquor problem, recently made some observations on our troubles in America. He thinks that those who favor the repeal of the 18th amendment would help their cause by outlining a program for the sale of liquor that would save the country from the corrupt political influences of the retail dealers, brewers and distillers, for that he says was the greatest evil of the old system.

We are finding new evidence every day that as a nation, too, it pays to mind our own business.

No administration in the history of the government has worked more intelligently and effectively in dealing with a serious business depression than the present administration at Washington, and the work is beginning to show results.

Our League of Nations advocates are still urging us to enter some agreement that will bind America to take sides against the aggressor in any European war. But how would we decide who was the aggressor? Our information would come mainly from those news agencies that for years have specialized in misrepresenting the facts to the American people. Might we not find ourselves fighting on the wrong side? Why isn't it better anyway to let the Europeans settle their own quarrels?

MRS. LITHA WATKINS

November 13, 1930, about 10 o'clock the death angel visited the home of Mr. Jim Watkins and took away his dear wife. She has been a member of the church for some years. She leaves to mourn for her a husband and 4 children; Clara Mae, 10; Olene, 7; Willodene, 4; and James Alton, 1. Three brothers, Mr. T. M. Davenport, M. L. Davenport, and Henry Davenport; and one sister, Mrs. T. M. Robinson, all of Jemison. A father, Mr. Davis Davenport of Calera.

She had been sick 17 days with pneumonia. All was done for her that loving hands could do, but God saw fit to call her home to rest, where she will suffer no more pain and sorrow. We feel that Dr. Lawrence did all that was in his power to save her, but all in vain.

Why God called her from the walks of life and her little children we'll never know, but God knows best and we must feel that it was done for the best.

She was loved by all who knew her. She was kind to every one. She leaves a vacant place that can never be filled. Weep not dear husband and children for we feel that our loss is heaven's gain.

She was laid to rest in Providence cemetery about 6 miles north of Jemison. Rev. R. M. Honeycutt conducted the fueral.—Mamie Davenport.

GRAVES PROCLAIMS ARBOR DAY

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 17.—Governor Bibb Graves has designated Friday, December 5, for general observance throughout the state as Arbor Day. The Governor's proclamation setting aside this date is as follows:

Whereas, the economic and cultural welfare of the people of Alabama is largely dependent on the trees and forests of the state, and

Whereas, trees collectively in the woodlands are of great importance to our industries, and in our towns and cities enhance the beauty of the surroundings and afford comfort to mankind, and

Whereas, thousands of workers engaged in the timber industries are dependent on the forests for a livelihood, so that with forest depletion and consequent lumber importation many of them would be thrown out of employment, and

Whereas, realizing the importance that trees have in our well being, and that with their absence standards of living would be reduced greatly, now,

Therefore, I. Bibb Graves, Governor of Alabama, do hereby designate and set apart the day of Friday, December 5, 1930, as Arbor Day, and I do hereby urge all people of this state to give thought to the resposibilities that rest on them as good citizens and demonstrate their appreciation of such responsibilities by observing Arbor Day through planting trees and participating in exercises appropriate to the occasion.

The State Commission of Forestry is preparing to issue an Arbor Day program for the use of schools, clubs and other organizations. Copies may be obtained by writing to the State Forestry, 500 Dexter Avenue, Montgomery, Alabama.

BRIEF RURAL NEWS

Selma, Ala.—There is a shortage of corn in Dallas County this year and to offset it farmers have planted more oats than ever before. John Blake, county agent, reported that farmers of the county bought three carloads of oats and rye seed cooperatively through the Dallas County Farm Bureau.

Toscumbia, Ala.—Farmers of Calhoun County are showing tremendous interest in better cotton seed. County Agent Yarbrough reports that 10,000 bushels of seed of the Cook 1627 and D. P. L. 4-8 varieties have been saved for planting next spring. To keep the seed pure "gin days" have been held. At one of these 350 bushels were saved.

Troy, Ala.—Many Pike County fields will soon be covered with a green blanket as 56,000 pounds of Austrian winter pea seed have been planted by farmers of the county. "I think it will be impossible for any farmer to go to mill next spring without seeing Austrian winter peas growing," said Fletcher Farrington, county agent. The legume crop was planted primarily to enrich the soil.

Opelika, Ala.—County Agent C. H. Bedingfield is engaged in making an agricultural survey of Lee County. The work is being done in cooperation with agricultural committees of luncheon clubs of Auburn and Opelika, and teachers of vocational agriculture at Auburn, Smith Station, and Bouregard. When completed, Mr. Bedingfield will outline a farm program to meet needs revealed by the survey.

Relief From Curse Of Constipation

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.—Upchurch Drug Company, Clanton, Alabama. 11-24-30.

PUT GILLESPIE OUT OF BUSINESS

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to have a little chat with the voters of Chilton County. What I want to say is this:

We have elected Mr. W. H. Gillespie as Sheriff of this county, and I think he is a mighty good man for the place. I voted for him in the primary election, and also in the general election. While I realize that some of you were against him and voted against him, yet he won in both elections.

Now, I want to see him put out of business for the next four years. If you voters who were against him will take my advice and will help me, I will guarantee to put him out of business, and I tell you, I want to see it done. Will you help me and take my advice?

My plan is a sure one, and if you will do as I say, and help me, we will put him out of a job. We will also run most of the lawyers of Clanton out on the farm where they can make a living. They are all good man, and I like them, but if you will help me in my plan, the people of the county will not need them any longer to sit around in Clanton and wait for our people to get into trouble.

Here is my plan. If we will carry it out, we will break all records in our county and we will do the greatest honor to God and man in all the world:

Let us go on record as good citizens and resolve that not a man be found violating the laws of our state and county. If we do this, I will guarantee it will put all of those fellows out of business, and do away with so much going to court and paying out so much money to keep them up.

So I hope that every man and boy will think over this plan and see if it is not a good one. Instead of running around on Sunday breaking the laws, let us resolve that each of us will go to church and Sunday School, and also keep God's laws, to keep the Sabbath holy. God will smile on each of us for so doing. Begging for your help, I hope for a better day.—J. N. SCOTT, Jemison, Ala.

State Capitol News

The unemployment probelm in Alabama is receiving the attention of leading industrial and business leaders of the state, who met in conference with the Alabama Industrial Development Board November 15 at the capitol and launched a definite program to aid the jobless. The meeting resulted in formation of the Alabama Emergency Employment Commission, consisting of members of the state industrial board, all of whom are leaders in industry in the state, and the other prominent business men attending the conference. Theodore Swann of Birmingham was named chairman of the emergency employment commission; Crawford Johnson of Birmingham, vice-chairman; and Thad Holt, secretary, the work of this commission to be conducted through the Birmingham office of the state industrial board.

Plans were perfected for an employment survey of the state, and for this purpose a chairman was appointed for each congressional district, who in turn were requested to name chairmen for each county in their districts. The district committees are to find out the status of federal, county or municipal public work projects in their respective districts; estimated employment on such projects and obstacles to carrying out such projects, if any; the status of employment in manufacturing plants and in the building trades; and data as to commercial trade, wholesale and retail, and agricultural conditions.

Hope was expressed at the conference that the federal government can be induced to speed up public works for which appropriations have been made but on which work would not normally be begun in a year or so, and to make available up to five years ahead of the schedule originally intended the feweral appropriations for roadbuilding. It was pointed out that the federal government wants specific information on existing conditions. It was for the purpose of getting this data that the district organizations were set up. An executive committee was also named, consisting of members of the Alabama Industrial Development Board district chairmen, and others to be appointed by Chairman Swann. This committee will meet in Birmingham November 25 to go further into the matter.

The state government is already doing everything possible to combat the unemployment problem. Work has been given to every man who could be legitimately employed in the service of the state, and public works in which the state is interested have been developed as rapidly as possible. The policy of state cooperation in meeting the unemployment menace is in line with the similar policy of the federal government, and has the approval of business and industrial leaders generally.

The newly created Alabama Emergency Employment Commission has for its executive comittee the members of the state industrial board:—Theodore Swann, Thomas W. Martin, H. C. Ryding, Benjamin Russell and Lindley C. Morton, all outstanding leaders in various phases of the industrial life of the state; and the following as congressional district chairmen: First district, John T. Cochran, Mobile; second, Algernon Blair, Montgomery; third, R. D. Thomas, Eufaula; fourth, C. A. Hamilton, Anniston; fifth John Drakeford, Tuskegee; sixth, Hayes Tucker, Tuskegee; seventh, Otto Agriculp, Gadsden; eighth, N. C. Elting, Florence; ninth, R. I. Ingalls, Birmingham; and tenth, Judge E. W. Long, Jasper. The recent conference at the capitol was attended by industrial, business farm leaders from all sections of the state. The conference was called by Governor Graves, chairman of the Alabama Industrial Development Board, who presided at the session.

It is estimated that 20,000 cars will be taken off the roads of the state on account of defective equipment, but defective equipment in the heads of drivers is a greater peril for all who use the roads.—Springfield Republican.

LEAGUE NON-ACTION

The League of Nations appears continuously to demonstrate its helplessness and inutility as an agency for the working out of major international problems. Just now it has been put off until next year. Its judgment on the proposed amendments to the covenant designed to bring it into line with the Kellog Pact.

Is it unreasonable to assume that this postponement is merely a euphemism for abandonment? On the contrary, is it not a fair supposition that most countries will remain still of same mind?

In any event, the peace-provocative proposal goes over for a year. It is strange that this should be so, because the main intention of the amendment is to make all resort to war illegal under the covenant, as it already is under the Pact.

Have the ways of diplomacy and the instincts and impulses of humanity, greatly been changed since the world's latest carnival of blood-letting by Christianity's most representative nations? It would appear at least to be doubtful that they really have been transmuted into better estate.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SOME THOUGHTS ON THE NAVY

It is well for the American people to be reminded on Navy Day that an understanding among all naval powers remains yet to be accomplished. The signatories to the London treaty have set a noble example. Among the three of them, they represent the vast bulk of the world's sea power. But with the French and Italian navies outside a limitation agreement, it cannot be said that the ideal of total abolition of international rivalry has been achieved. Indeed, until France and Italy arrive at what President Hoover terms "a complete understanding," limitation is only partially obtained. The famous escalator clause definitely gives Japan, Great Britain and the United States the right to build beyond the treaty provisions if other powers—i. e., France and Italy—do not come to terms. Mr. Hoover asserts that never again must a race in naval armaments be allowed to develop. Pending the readiness of two great Latin countries of Europe to support the Japanese, British and American peoples in making naval limitations an enduring, and not an ephemeral, stuation, the American President's noble aspiration is doomed to remain a pious hope.

With Europe filled with more unrest than immeriately preceded the World War in 1914, with four-fifths of South America in revolution, and with China and India in various stages of civil war. Mother earth can hardly be said to be enjoying a placid existence or one designed to strengthen the world's craving for peace. Happily, no omen darkens the horizon which is designed to disturb our own fair land. But no man lives who can predict what may portend. That common sense which President Hoover today glorified should persuade the Congress of the United States to enact with a minimum of delay the legislation necessary to build the "treaty navy." Our statesmen fought for such fleets at London. It is the plain duty of Congress to construct it.—Washington Star.

BRITAN IN THE CARIBBEAN

The slow shift and breakdown of the British Empire in its classic form shows, it would seem, that the day of widespread conquest and foreign holdings is near an end, and through France, Britan and other allied powers, excepting the United States, acquired huge areas abroad as a result of the World War, the intergration of them working into empire is feeble and thus far without great value. France, it is true, prospers in military and other ways by levying on her subject populations, but at dangerous expense to Europe as a whole; and while the bonds of the British empire are weakening slowly, either by voluntary choice or by the pressure of revolt, Europe pitches on towards what may be final wreck and disintegration.

Conquest and capture are less adequate than a century ago as builders of social and political power; economic continuity, geographical proximity become more influential. In the Caribbean, for example, are the fleets of British islands that remain British only for reasons in their history. The Bahamas, Barbadoes, Jamaica, the Leeward Islands, are clustered in the tropic seas about the southern shores of the United States, all under the British flag. Their trade is bad in many cases, and their attachment to the British empire is more sentimental than sound. They belong in the same system with the United States as the other Americas. They are detached only by artifical cause.

The European powers could probably relieve themselves of much of the burden of debt to the United Stats by offering to transfer some of their alien prosperities to western hands. All members of the transfer would gain therby.—Chicago Tribune.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Now the election is over and the analysis of the results has begun. Fortunately this will soon be over and then there will be nothing for the politicians to do except to get ready for 1932. It is not to be denied that the results this year were a sweeping victory for the Democratic party. But the conclusions which have been drawn by enthusiastic members of that political faith to the effect that the recent election presages the election of a Democratic President in 1932 are a trifle premature to say the least.

It is true that the Democratic party has made a wonderful comeback after its rout in 1928. But the Republican reverse was not due to any desire on the part of the voting public to elect a Democratic President in 1932. Ordinary folks do not look that far ahead, even if the professional politicians do. The result this year was due to a number of causes. First was the natural reaction from the Republican tidal wave of 1928. This would have resulted in the loss of Republican congressmen in many districts which they had no business carrying, speaking from the political standpoint. This natural reaction however would not have destroyed Republican control of Congress except for additional Republican handicaps, the principal one of which of course is the economic depression.

The depression, as has been often said, is of world-wide dimensions. In fact Uncle Sam is better off than most of the civilized nations of the globe. There have been revolutions and overthrowing of government in various parts of the world. In the United States we take out our spite on the party in power when a depression comes, although we are not in the habit of doing it with revolutions. We accomplish it through the ballot and can do it thoroughly when necessary. And so the Republican administration, being in power, had to take the punishment, although not even a Democratic statesman would have the hardihood to say that the panic would have been avoided had Al Smith been chosen President in 1928.

The liquor question undoubtedly had something to do with the results in many states, and in most instances where there was an out and out fight of this kind the wets seemed to have the better of it. But it is not to be forgotten that the wets had the advantage of the panic, and had the country been prosperous the people would not have been so disturbed about all things, including the liquor question. That the depression was the paramount cause of Republican disaster is evidenced by the fact that in most states Republican wets and drys suffered alike.

But the election of this month in itself does not presage a Democratic national victory in 1932, although of course a continuance of hard times for two years longer would undoubtedly go a long ways toward assuring such a political rarity. But the chances are that before the 1932 election the country will be on the upgrade again. And while Democrats have a habit of pulling together in off-year elections they have the equally pronounced habit of splitting up during presidental campaign years. The reason is that in congressional elections the candidates stand pretty much on their own platforms, while in national campaigns the party leaders must meet and formulate a platform for the party in the entire nation. In national elections the presidental candidate must run on the same platform, in New York, in Alabama and in California. This is not the case in congressional elections. And so when 1932 rolls around it is barely possible that the Democratic party will not be so unitedly militant as it was this year. It may be militant when Mr. Raskob, and Mr. Josephus Daniels, and the wet Tammany delegates and the dry Georgia delegates get together but the militancy will probably be displayed by the delegates against one another. Of course the Republicans may have similar troubles. Only time itself can tell. A lot of water must flow under the political bridges before November, 1932, and conditions will doubtless be far different than they are today, politically as well as economically.

In the light of our whole past as a nation it is the part of wisdom to keep the navy that is dictated by the London treaty in the best of fighting trim. Admiral Pratt's description of it as a "nucleus of a fleet" is not a happy one. Reductions all around that leave relative strength the same provide room for a navy that is no nucleus, but complete in itself, and able to operate as a unit.—New York Sun.

At that, the Tower of Babel was not so bad as an American politicial campaign.—Buffalo Courier-Express.

CANADA APPLIES PROTECTION

A year and a half of discussion of protection in the United States, followed by enactment of the tariff law, has not persuaded Canada that high tariffs are the road to ruin. Instead of listening to the calamity howelers on this side of the border, Canada is going quietly about the business or adjusting its own tariff. The arguments that converted the Canadian people to protectionism are precisely the same as those enunciated by the Republican party in this country. It is absurd to supose that the Canadians would be content to watch their neighbors grow prosperous by giving a preference to home industry without trying to apply the same methods. The majority in both Canada and the United States realize that encouragement and protection of domestic enterprise is absolutely essential to give employment to a great nation of workers.

Trade between the United States and Canada is greater than that between any other two nations in this hemisphere. Under the new tariff policies each country will reserve for its own producers those markets which they can best supply. But Canada needs innumerable products that it does not produce, and the United States must draw upon Canada for many commodities that are deficient in the states. This trade is not affected by tariff changes and it will continue to expand. The new industries that Canada plans to foster will no doubt inaugurate an era of prosperity in that country. The United States will rejoice in Canada's prosperity, as a good neighbor should. Moreover, Canada's progress means a larger commerce with the United States.

THE TYRANNY OF BUREAUCRACY

The President's reference in his speech at King's Mountain to the tyranny of bureaucracy, needs no elaboration for Americans who understand and value their heritage of liberty. But there are many Americans who do not. If there were not many we should not have had in recent years a vast growth of bureaucracy, repeated invasions by government in spheres of private activity, the tendency of discontent or impatient reform to turn to politics and government for relief which could better be had from private initiaive and co-operation.

Our fathers know better. They were wisely jealous of all forms of political government or governmental power, and sought earnestly to put checks upon it and restrict it within the limits of essential authority.

Socilaism seeks to escape from the oppressions of private self-interest by submitting us to the oppression of government. Its appeal is based upon a fallacious idealization of the state and nature of officialdom. Socialism in actuality is and can be nothing but bureaucracy, the imposition upon the individual of the will of the official.

To establish the tyranny of bureaucracy in America would not only barter our heritage for a mess of pottage, turning away from the inspired lessons of our own progress and submit American free men to an intolerable regime of pestiferous interference and restriction. Moreover, it would be the most difficult of all forms of tyranny to escape or overthrow. Its evils would be subtle and persuasive, not concentrated and dramatic. A monarch may be be-headed. But the tyranny bureaucracy, a many-headed monster, entrenched at the sources of all power, would be almost impossible to destroy.—Chicago Tribune.

FEWER IMMIGRANTS COMING

Those experts who profess to believe that the government can do nothing to help the economic situation ought to be interested in the recent report of Harry E. Hull, U. S. Immigration Commissioner to the effect that the order of the administration against admitting aliens who might become public charges caused a thirty-six per cent decline in immigration during September. During the month 17,792 immigrants were admitted as against more than 28,000 in the same month in 1929.

The full effect of the order will not be felt for another month or two according to Mr. Hull with respect to the labor coming from Europe, especially, for the reason that immigration visas previously issued are valid for four months. It is expected however that from now on labor immigration from Europe will be considerably reduced.

It might be argued that the laborers have slowed up in coming because of economic conditions in the United States but it is to be remembered that economic conditions in other countries are in most instances much worse than in the United States. Mr. Hull says that the invasion of the United States by cheap Mexican labor has almost ceased and that labor immigration from Canada is also at the vanishing point.

This decrease in immigration labor, brought about by administration order, is one instance of the effect of governmental attempt to help the economic situation. Now when there are millions of unemployed, or working part time in the United States we do not want additional labor coming in from the countries of Europe which are not so well off as we are.

Our system of restricted immigration in America has doubtless served to lessen the effects of the present era of unemployment. Without the system there would have been several million more alien workers in the United States today seeking jobs.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Rev. Albert Foshee, of Liberty Hill, went squirrel hunting last Saturday over on Mulberry. He passed by the old Jim Rasberry place, and noticed a peculiar tree with a peculiar kind of fruit on it. He brought a sample of the fruit to The Union-Banner office and left it. What he wants is somebody to tell him what is the name of the fruit or the tree. The fruit is about the size and color of a large grapefruit, but has a pimpled surface. What is inside of it we do not know. He did not say whether he killed any squirrels or not. If he did, he failed to bring us a sample of them.

The members and friends of the Clanton Baptist and Methodist Churches surely had a joyful time Sunday. Under the leadership of the pastors, Rev. Ezell and Rev. Childs, the churches completed the payment of all their debts, and the victory was celebrated with dedication services.

In these two houses of worship there is perhaps a hundred thousand dollars dedicated to the kingdom work in Clanton. It is an investment that our people are proud of, and well may they rejoice that it is now all paid for and given wholly to the great cause which should be very close to the hearts of everyone.

Some are wondering if the Methodist Conference is going to keep Ernest Childs here or send him somewhere else. If they pay any attention to the wishes of the folks in Clanton, they will surely keep him here. God may whisper to the Bishop now that Childs has led the Methodists of Clanton out of debt, he should be sent to another place. But we hope he doesn't do that. I believe a preacher ought to have a year or so now and then to work in a field where there are no debts to worry about; just nothing to do but lead and inspire his flock in the joys of religious service.

Even the hard-boiled banker, the one with the glass eye, is glad that the Clanton churches have paid their debts. But that is nothing unusual. A banker is always glad when anybody pays his debts, whether it be heathen or Christian, Jew or Gentile. And as I come to think about it, there are just two best things to do about a debt. The best one is to make them, and the second best is to pay them.

Now and then as I go around and hear the hard times stories, somebody pops up and mentions that hundred and fifty thousand dollars which the people of Clanton planked down for the cotton mill. My goodness, why bring that up. I hope we will get far enough away from that hundred and fifty thousand to forget it some day; but I fear it will be a long time. That much cash put out by the people of Clanton and Chilton County leaves a void that will ache for many more days unless something happens to fill it up a little bit.

You remember some years back Monroe Parrish got a watermelon off the Christmas tree at Providence. Next he came out with a story about a bull frog that caught one of his chickens. Last year when the snow was on the ground about the first of January he killed a big rattlesnake. Now he has advanced his 1930 freak story. He gets one of some kind out of his system every year, a new model, just like the new model automobiles that are put out about the last of each year.

Mun, as his friends call him for short, has been sick for the past few weeks, mighty sick too. He has had something the matter with his head, and he laughs when he tells about the numerous jokes that his friends have got on him about that too. He says people have always acted like they thought there was something the matter with his head, but only this winter has it got so bad as to give him any particular trouble.

He is much better now. I know he is about all right from the way he told this story: One night while he was sick something got after his chickens. Henry Miner, who lives in a house close by, heard the racket, and knowing Mr. Parrish was not able to go out in the night and see about it, came and got the lantern and went to see what was the trouble. He found a great big 'possum at the chicken house door preparing to devour a chicken. He caught 'possum and chicken and brought them to the house.

Before he left, at the suggestion of Mrs. Parrish, Mr. Miner went back to the chicken house to see if everything was all right. When he peeped inside, there was another 'possum as big as the first one, sitting inside the house eating a chicken. Mun says he never knew before that 'possums go in pairs. But he did find a 'possum and a fox squirrel in the same hollow tree over in Coosa once upon a time.

THE LESSON FROM OUR CHURCHES

The action of two churches in Clanton in paying off all their debts has given us something that is worth studying with more than ordinary interest. If one will analyze this matter thoroughly there will be found a number of very valuable lessons.

This accomplishment impresses us anew with the power of cooperation. The Boards of Stewards and Deacons, together with their pastors, very carefully and prayerfully determined the course that should be pursued at the outset of this debt-paying drive. Their plans were sound, and the people of the two churches went in with them determined to put the proposition through. There were no objectors. Everybody was pushing in the same direction.

What a bit of rivalry can cause folks to do was also demonstrated. The Methodists were pushing for their goal with one eye on the Baptist clock. The Baptists were pushnig their own load and watching the progress of the Methodist clock. Each was determined that the other should not surpass in giving, in sacrifice, in love, in loyalty to the cause.

People can yet do the thing they know to be the correct thing to do, even in spite of the handicaps of poor business, cheap cotton, and other discouragements. Debts ought to be paid, and first of all should come the debts which we owe to God's cause.

Perhaps the most beautiful thing of the whole performance was the sweet spirit of brotherhood and fellowship that was displayed between the Baptist and Methodist congregations. All were humbled to the task in common sacrifice, moved by the impelling power of the same loving God. And when victory was won all united with one voice and one song in praise to the same God from whom all blessings flow.

It is reassuring to see beyond all doubt that the people of Clanton love the cause of God's kingdom, and have faith that an investment of time and dollars therein is worth while. "We were glad when they said, let us go into the house of the Lord."

The University of Illinois finds that the average person speaks 30,000 words a day in talking to relatives, friends and business associates. But success with them, as with cards, depends upon getting them in the right combinations.—Boston Transcript.

CONCORD—BILLINGSLEY

On account of bad weather there wasn't any preaching service or Sunday School Sunday morning, but we had a very commendable Christian Endeavor program Sunday night. Several good talks were made, and special music was rendered, which was very appropriate for the occasion. A special music commitee was elected Sunday night. This commitee consists of two, Mr. Hudson Williams and Mrs. Gertie Mae Little. They will render special music along with our Christian Endeavor programs. Sure, it will make them more interesting.

After the Christian Endeavor program our new pastor, Rev. Larce Headley, delivered a wonderful sermon. We are sure that he will make us a good pastor if the people will cooperate together and do their part.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Y. Sims and family spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Williams and family.

Rev. Larce Headley, and Mr. T. L. Williams took dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Williams Sunday.

Mrs. J. P. Williams and daughters, Bessie and Jettie were in Clanton shopping last Saturday afternoon.

Come to Sunday School next Sunday and bring some one with you.

Big Ben's Message Now Heard in Many Lands

London's most famous clock, Big Ben, which ticks off the hours in the tower above the house of commons, and whose bells have been heard in remote parts of the globe through the instrumentality of the microphone, gives "wise counsel" to at least one well-known Briton, Sir Duncan Grey, traveler and writer.

As Sir Duncan puts it, "Bells by some trickery of our cheating senses says to us what we are actually saying to ourselves."

During the World war Big Ben was silenced and was never illuminated, for it was feared that through sound and light it would give accurate direction to the German air raiders.

On still and clear nights it is often possible to hear the resounding thud of the hammers on its bells a distance of eight miles or more.

For most night owls the message its bells convey at 12 midnight is the fear that the last street car or omnibus has departed and that a costly journey in a taxicab will be one at least of the disadvantages of such belated peregrination homeward.—New York Sun.

Followed Indian Trails Over the Appalachians

A century after the first settlements were established it was evident that the future of the country depended upon overcoming the barrier of the Appalachian mountains and the great forests which clothed them. New colonists pushed inland along the rivers and later struck into the mighty forests from the head of navigation. They followed the Indian trails which they found and these trails came into general use. Thus Nemacolin's path which Washington followed on his mission to the French (1754) was the forerunner of Braddock's trail (1755) and the national road. The Kittanning path up the Juniata to the Allegheny furnished the route of Forbes' trail (1758). The Warrior's path from the Shenandoah valley through the Cumberland gap to the falls of the Ohio became Boone's wilderness road (1769) over which Kentucky was settled, and the Iroquois trail from Albany to Lake Erie developed into the Great Genesee road.

Determining World Time

Standard time seems to have been first suggested by Charles Dowd of Saratoga Springs in 1870. In 1879 the question was again raised by Sandford Fleming, chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific railway. It was brought to the attention of the leading governments of the world, and an international conference was called in 1882. It met in Washington on October 1, 1884. The delegates of 26 countries were present, but did not unanimously agree. However, most of them favored the adoption of Greenwich, England, as the origin of longitudes. The French were the only representatives of importance that would not agree, and it was not until March 10, 1911, that France abandoned the meridian of Paris and adopted that of Greenwich as its prime meridian.

Oklahoma Windiest State?

The weather bureau says that the question as to which is the windiest state in the Union has never been accurately determined and it is probably impossible to make a positive statement. However, it is quite probable that Oklahoma as a whole is the windiest state in the Union. This is due to the fact that the winds are rather constant at moderately high velocities during the entire year in this state; in many other sections the winds may at times average higher than in Oklahoma, nevertheless, they are not so constant, or cover so completely the entire state.

Wrote His Own Letters

Grover Cleveland never dictated any of his correspondence or public addresses, but always made the first draft in his own hand, recalls George F. Parker, quoting George B. Cortelyou, in his "Recollections of Grover Cleveland." "During my stay at the White House as his executive clerk there was but one instance in which he dictated anything and that was the beginning of a very brief note. . . . He dictated a few sentences of the letter and then, turning to the stenographer, said, 'Oh, you know what I want to find out; fix it up and bring it in to me.'"

Sacred Bunny Cats

The smallest cat show ever held in London took place recently, when 20 Abyssinian cats contended for the championship of their own exclusive world. Many experts say that they believe this breed to be descended from the sacred cat of ancient Egypt, which the Egyptians used to embalm. An elegantly built animal with large tufted ears, lustrous eyes and slender limbs, the Abyssinian cat has a silky coat not unlike a wild rabbit, hence the popular name, bunny cat.

$200 OFFERED IN HIGH SCHOOL PRIZES

$100 for Best Student Paper and $100 for School

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 17.—The Commission on Interracial Cooperation, with headquarters at 703 Standard Building, this city, announces the offer of a cash prize of $100 for the high school pupil submitting the best paper on "America's Tenth Man," and a prize of like amount for the school making the best use of the commission's "Tenth Man" project. The contest is open to all pupils of high schools and junior high school in the fifteen Southern states. It closes April 1, 1931. Full information and a 5,000-word booklet of source material will be furnished free to anyone interested, according to the commission, and correspondence is invited from high school principals, teachers, and pupils.

The announced purpose of these prizes is to encourage as widely as possible the study of the negro's part in American history, in the belief that this will be helpful to the children of both races, promoting more intelligent attitudes on the one side and wholesome race pride on the other. More than 150 high schools participated in a similar project last year, and several thousand papers were prepared by students. The project, it is said, has met with general approval on the part of Southern educators.

IN MEMORY OF BILLLY WELLS

On Sunday evening, November 9, at the hour of 2:00 o'clock, the death angel visited the home of Festus and Iowa Wells of Clanton Rte. 2, and took away their darling boy, who was the bloom of the family. He was two years old two days before he died.

We know not why God saw fit to take this little flower, but He knows best. It is said the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. So weep not dear parents for Billy is happy on heaven's shore with God, for he is not dead, but sleepeth.

God took this bloom away,
We know not why;
But we hope to meet him there some day,
Whenever we come to die.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his grief-stricken parents, one sister, two grandmothers, two grandfathers, and a host of other relatives and friends.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of expressing our most heartfelt thanks to the neighbors of this community for their sweet sympathy and kindness extended during the illness and death of little Billy Wells. May God's richest blessings rest upon them, is our prayer. We also thank Mr. Nelson.—His grief-stricken parents and relatives.

Bro. Bryan's Weekly Message

LOYALTY TO JESUS CHRIST

In the 10th chapter of the Gospel according to Matthew we read of a great mountain peak in the life of our Lord. In the 11th chapter is very thrilling and uplifting and really one of the greatest high points, cornerstones or mileposts in the three years' ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Now Christ had sent out the twelve apostles, giving them power to heal diseases, raise the dead, etc. That is a power which He does not give me, a poor humble pastor of forty-one years, four months, and nine days at six o'clock this 2nd Sunday in November. Christ gave those apostles that power that they go forth and manifest His glory in them with whom He was so closely asociated.

I believe that Christ had not as yet sent out the seventy disciples. This is the thought expressed in the harmony of the Gospel. These men had now come back from a ministry in which no doubt, great things had taken place. One of these men had given a clear testimony concerning Christ. The real Greek name of the man was John the Baptiser. He had given testimony for Christ in such words as these: "I must decrease, but He must increase," "I am just the voice of one crying in the wilderness, 'repent, for the kingdom of heaven, Christ, is at hand.'" "Behold the lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world."

When a man fearlessly stands for the truth, puts Christ, the church, and the Sabbath first in his life, the road isn't going to be very easy. You may be forced to look into empty trays. This John had baptised, preached, and taught all over Palestine. He had many disciples. Among the great themes of his preachings was the fact that he assailed sin, licientiousness in those kingly, drinking eastern courts. He assailed King Herod in all his pomp and splendour and told him that he was living an illegal, adulterous life with his own brother's wife. Friends, you and I have got to come back to the real awfulness of the violation of God's law. Sin is any want of conformity unto or transgression of God's law.

John, because of his clear testimony to Christ was placed in a prison, not in Samaria, where Herod's palace was, but he was placed in a prison across the Jordan where one today sees the old stones of that prison called Machaerus. Did it ever occur to you that being discouraged is a mighty good thing? Christ comes when you are discouraged. Sometimes when we are discouraged, disheartened, we take up our Bibles and Jesus Christ comes and stays by us, just a brother to us. Christ is always near to the discouraged and disheartened. Christ is near the man or woman who has not a mouthful to eat and no money to pay the rent.

John, down there in that lonely prison, was lonely and discouraged just like you and I are many times. Sometimes I just long for a friend to call me over the phone and say a word in prayer. Many times you and I have longed for a friend to say a kind word to us. John was feeling just this way and it was really his greatness because Christ encouraged him as no other man who ever lived. John said to his disciples, "Go across the Jordan to where Christ is preaching and ask Him if He is the Messiah or do I look for another?"

I believe that the reason so many men and women doubt God is because they do not pray and read the Bible and go to church. There isn't a man who can intelligently read the Bible and not be a believer in Jesus Christ. Now these two disciples John sent to Jesus were kind and courteous and loved Jesus and John. Christ did not answer that direct question like we would do. He did not say, "I am the Messiah of prophecy." He said, "You go tell John, my brother, my friend, that you have seen the blind made to see, the deaf to hear, the dumb to speak, lepers cleansed, and tell John, my good man, that the poor are having the Gospel preached unto them." He is the same loving Christ who comes and encourages us when we have sicknesses and sorrows, our loved ones or friends die. "Tell John that of all men born of a woman he is the greatest." Then Christ turned to those near Him and said, "What went ye out into the wilderness to see a prophet? Why you certainly saw more than a prophet. You went out there to see a messenger, the man whom God sent to prepare the way for the Lord."

My friends, the way is prepared by prayer, by reading the Bible, and by repentance of sin. Christ said, "Did you go out there to see a reed shaken by the wind?" I saw reeds which grew on the banks of the Jordan. They are something like one sees on river banks in Alabama, Georgia, and Mississippi. "But what did you go out there to see? A man with a spike-tail coat and a walking cane?" "Did you go out there to see a man clothed in a camel's hair coat with a leathern girdle about his loins? Ye went out there to see a messenger." I have resolved to, and am going to pray to just be a messenger for the Lord as I have never been before. That is what every Christian should be.

Then Christ said, "Blessed is the man who is not offended in me." That is, "Blessed is the man who does not get mad with me when somebody steals all his money. Blessed is the man who does not blame me with his sorrows. Blessed is the person who does not blame me when he or she is taken sick and becomes disabled to work. Blessed is the man who does not blame me when he gets only two days work a week. Blessed is the man and women who does not blame me for the many perplexing problems and trials which come into their lives. Blessed are they who do not blame me because they find that Christianity is not to be found a bed of roses."

After having read my Bible and the life of John the Baptist many times I had a dream or vision. This is what I saw or visualized. I saw the throne room of King Herod, visualizing Herod to belong to the most corrupt line of eastern courts. Herodias, his wife, hated John the Baptist because he had told her how adulterous and sinful she was to live with Herod as she did. She hated anyone in Samaria who believed in John. One day in great revelry in the court her daughter danced before Herod and pleased him greatly. He at once promised her anything she would ask, to the half of his kingdom. She at once ran to her mother to advise her as to what she should ask. Her mother said, "You go back there and tell that old scoundrel, that old fool, that you want the head of John the Baptiser in a charger." Was not that awful? Just to think what indulging in sin will do.

Herod, although sorry for his rash promise, sent two executioners to Machaerus Prison on the Jordan. They walked up and the jailer said, "What do you wish?" They said, "We have come to sever John's head from his body and take it to King Herod unless he will take back what he has said that so offended Herod's wife." They go inside the prison. I visualize their presence there as they looked John in the eye and said, "If you will take back those words of reproof and rebuke to Herod's wife, we will leave you as you are. But if you will not then we shall sever your head from your body and take it back as a trophy." John said, "I will not take it back. It is the truth for which I will die." Then the executioners said, "Come place your head on this rock." There his head was taken off and the gates of heaven flew open for him to enter. I heard one angel, no doubt Michael say, "Lift the gates high, and raise the windows for John the Baptiser is coming up." I saw the heavenly host of angels peeping over the embankments with eager, anxious, happy faces as the soul of this great wilderness preacher and heralder and forerunner of Jesus Christ went into heaven. Before I will line up with the evil forces I will do like John the Baptiser, just say, "You may take my head and my life." Like Ridley and Latimer, I will be burned at the stake before I will be untrue to Christ and this Bible.

Today's Good Telephone Service Must Be Better Tomorrow

Not long ago very few long distance calls were handled while the calling subscriber remained at the telephone. Today more than 70 per cent are handled that way.

Today the average time required to complete a long distance call is only 2.4 minutes as compared with 7.5 minutes five years ago.

Similar improvements have been made in your local service and errors now average less than two in every 100 local calls.

These achievements are the result of new inventions, improved operating methods, new equipment, combined with the skill and interest of experienced operators, linemen and engineers cooperating with an army of loyal workers, many of whom are technical experts.

Proud as they are of these accomplishments, the telephone organization is not satisfied. There is no standing still in the Bell System and every day organized effort is directed toward making your service even better tomorrow.

MAKING OF CHEVROLET BANNERS EMPLOYES THOUSANDS

The extent to which the industrial structure of America leans upon the automobile, was vividly illustrated following the placing of an order incidental to announcing Chevrolet's new models.

The order called for 171,846 feet of material, or a ribbon of canvas 33 miles long and 36 inches wide, to be made up into banners for dealer's showroom displays and for signs to be used in sales meetings being held throughout the country.

Less than 5,0f Fox ds of the material were available in Detroit. Due to low inventories resulting from curtailed operations this year, a search of wholesalers, bleacheries and mills in strategic parts of the country, revealed a supply of white canvas on hand still 20,000 yards short of filling the order.

To meet the demand within the specified time, a mill in South Carolina which had lain idle got into production on a 24-hour day schedule. Mills in other parts of the country were put to work overtime. To produce the finished banners and drops, two plants manned with artists, sign painters, carpenters and laborers had to work on three eight-hour shifts a day.

"This one resulted in the opening of three plants not then in production, and the employment of hundreds of men," explained H. J. Klinger, vice-president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, who directed the purchase. "Yet this order was not measurably larger than others we have placed from time to time for similar materials to meet the needs of our dealers.

"What happened in this instance—in the unusual activity brought about through placing an order only for materials to announce the new car—may be taken as pretty good indications of how all industry benefits through the automobile. Purchase of a car means work for the cotton picker and mill hand. The steel miner and worker, the lumberman—in fact all those people employed in the production or preparation of the large number of raw materials which go into the building of the finished automobile."

Mr. W. W. Fox has been confined to his home for the past week. His many friends hope he will soon be able to get out again.

Mr. and Mrs. George Trotter of Martin Dam were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Page during the past week.

TOM McKEE HAS COME BACK TO LIFE AGAIN

Our friend, Tom McKee has bobbed up again. This time he writes from Chandler, Arizona. We had lost track of him for several months past. Usually he spends a few months in Chilton County about election time trying to beat the Republicans. This time he failed to show up, and we knew he was either bad sick or mighty far away.

But he did not forget it was election time in Chilton County. Read what he says in his letter and you will see.

"Mack, this is a great spot out here. Plenty of sunshine and dry air. Still it is a very productive land with water and work. (I don't think much of the latter.)

"I wonder how the election came out in Chilton County. If not too much trouble, send me a copy of the Banner with the returns in it.

"I am improving here, and when I get to weighing 199 pounds I am coming back home to stay. If you are not a Democrat by then, I will still be ready to go out and try to beat you. Tell all the boys to go to work and they will not have time to think about the hard times everyone insists are upon us."

Now that's Tom up and down. I bet half of the readers of the Union-Banner would have kown who that letter was from if I had not told you. Anyway, Tom, we are glad to hear from you again. We hope that you get along fine and soon get to 199. We like you, even if you are a Democrat, and we would be willing to take chances on politics with you against us here in Chilton County. Hurry back home, old boy. There is no place under the sun like it.

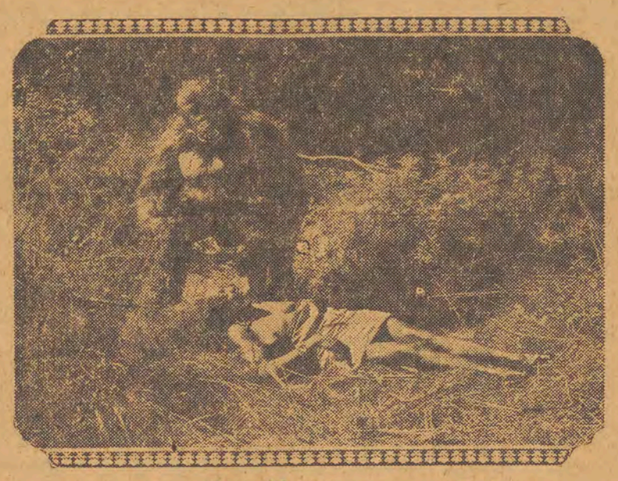
P.-T. A. Meeting
(By Hilda Hart)

The regular monthly meeting of the high school P.-T. A. was held last Thursday afternoon, November 13. There was not as many mothers present as would have been, on account of the bad weather. After the business of the meeting was over, Mr. Brewster, of Auburn, made a most interesting talk on plant life, and the general improvement of the campus. He gave some very interesting suggestions on the planting of shrubbery and flowers, and gave helpful points for beautifying our home grounds. He answered questions by individuals as to their home problems of pruning and arranging shrubs.

The P.-T. A. has many plans for the year. At present they are trying to equip the stage with suitable furniture. The school is already very grateful to the P.-T. A. for their activities in getting our new stage curtain and interior furnishings. The P.-T. A. urges very impressively that all members attend their organization regular, and please invite others to join and take part with them. They need you, and you need the P.-T. A.

Clean-Up Week At C. C. H. S.
(By Tina Hyman)



As we are trying to beautify our campus, we are also going to keep our rooms clean. Each class is to have monitors for aiding and keeping the classrooms clean. The home economics class is sponsoring the contest. You can always tell whether a pupil keeps his room clean from the way in which he keeps his desk. We hope that all the classes will cooperate in keeping their rooms, as well as the campus, in a neat and orderly manner.

Senior I Assembly Play
(By Joe Moore)

The Senior Class, directed by Mr. J. B. Varnell, put on a Thanksgiving play in chapel last Wednesday morning. The program was opened by the singing of Thanksgiving song by the entire class. Tina Hyman told the story of Thanksgiving, and Lois Miller recited a poem entitled, "When the Frost is on the Pumpkins." This was followed by two selections on the guitar by Herman Lowery. Another poem, entitled "Harvest Time," was given by Grady Carter. Alex Hayes was master of ceremonies. The school enjoyed this program, and hopes to have others like it again soon.

Planters Here Next Friday
(By Dan Smith)

The football game between Plantersville and C. C. H. S. was called off last Friday on account of bad weather, but they will be here next Friday in full form and ready to go. We are seeking revenge this time, because Plantersville is one of our keen rivals, and we hope that the town and school will come out and support the team. Every member of the squad seems to be in tip-top condition now, with "Moose" Melton and Robert Sumner back in the line-up, things have picked up quite a bit. "Get Plantersville," seems to be on the tongues of every student. This will be the last game of the season on the local gridiron for the high school. Come on and see your team in action against the strong Dallas County High from Plantersville. The game will be called at 3:15.

Mr. Brewster Visits C. C. H. S.
(By Walter Kelley Gillespie)

Last Thursday afternoon we were visited by Mr. Sam F. Brewster of Auburn, who is one of the best landscape gardeners in the South. The Senior I boys from the soils and crops class, and the Junior III boys from the agriculture class were called out on the campus to hear the suggestions which he gave for beautifying our school and campus.

Among his suggestions was that of the removal of some of the trees on the south side of the building and the use of the space thus gained for the parking of cars. He also pointed out the fact that the driveway was not an arc, and should be made to form a perfect arc; also it should have a concrete curb. By means of a drawing of the front of the building, he showed exactly where flowers and shrubs should be planted, and what varieties would be best suited.

These sugestions are to be carried out with the financial aid of the local P.-T. A. The Senior I and Junior III boys are planning to do all the work possible towards making this a success.

Improvements Made At C. C. H. S.
(By Nell Neighbors)

C. C. H. S. has made some great improvements since school began. One, is the making of new bulletin boards, by Mr. Walker and his manual training boys. These boards are used for various purposes; such as poster making, charts, and map drawings. The pupils are assigned work by thear teachers and if it is judged very good, it is posted on the bulletin board. These pupils consider this an honor, and is also a fine plan to help the pupils to become more interested in their work.

MISS DENNIS IS IMPROVING

The friends of Miss Maye Dennis are glad to learn that she is better. She has been seriously ill for several days. She has been in St. Margaret's Hospital since October 13. We have missed her very much, and will be indeed glad when she can go home again.

J. C. PRICE WILL HAVE PRELIMINARY TRIAL

Preliminary trial of J. C. Price will be held next Monday in the Justice Court of Major H. M. Simpson at the courthouse in Clanton.

Price has been held in jail at Clanton since the night of November 4. He is charged with stabbing Chester Cassel, when the two became involved in a fight at Thorsby. Cassel died as a result of the wound.

CARD OF THANKS

We want to thank the people of our community for their kindness shown us during the death of our wife and daughter and also for the beautiful offering.

We want to thank our undertaker, J. Mell Martin, and Brother Lowery and Bro. Jones for their kindness and comfort.—Carlson Duke and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cox.

ISABELLA DEFEATS PIPER

Isabella football team seems to be determined not to be defeated upon their new football field. They demonstrated a new spirit when they played Piper November 11th, which resulted in another victory.

During the first half the Piper boys who outweighed our boys several pounds, were unable to make a threat. Most of this period was played in mid-field. In the third quarter Piper hooked at the heels of Isabella backs twice as they carried the pigskin across their goal. The first touchdown occured when Luther Mims intersepted a forward pass and made a beautiful 30-yard run.

Burnette made the second touchdown possible by interference from a trick play.

OAK HILL

The United Singing Society will sing at Oak Hill Sunday afternoon. A good quartet will be there. All singers and the public are invited.

TAYLOR-LAWRENCE MARRIAGE

Mr. Reedie Taylor and Miss Pauline Lawrence were married last Sunday morning at the home of Dr. S. J. Ezell, in Clanton. They left immediately by automobile for Montgomery, where they stored their car and continued their wedding trip to New Orleans and other interesting points in the South.

The marriage of Mr. Taylor and Miss Lawrence is an event that will be of keen interest to many people, as both are very popular Clanton young people.

The bride is the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Lawrence of Clanton. She is one of the sweetest young ladies of our city, and in winning her for his life partner, Mr. Taylor has captured a prize that is worthy of all the chivalry that was ever displayed in the days when Knighthood was in flower.

Mr. Taylor is one of the finest young men of Clanton. He has already attained the honor of being one of our most successful business men. His popularity has been publicly attested by the fact that he was elected some years ago to membership on the Town Council of Clanton, and was only a few weeks ago re-elected for another term.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will return from their wedding trip one day this week, and will make their home in Clanton. As one of their many friends, The Union-Banner extends congratulations and best wishes.

WILEY GORE DIED

Mr. Gore is survived by his wife and three sons, John L. Gore, former Sheriff of Chilton County, Green Gore and Perry Gore.

Wiley Gore has been in the Collins Chapel settlement for many years, where he was loved, honored, and respected as a good citizen.

REV. CHILDS SENT TO TROY CHURCH

Rev. D. W. Hasker Will Be Methodist Pastor Here Next Year

Much interest was manifest in the question of whether Rev. Ernest Childs would be sent back as pastor of the Clanton Methodist Church, and the announcement Monday morning that he would go to Troy was received in Clanton with universal regret. Not only the members of his own church, but everybody else in the city was hoping that he would be permitted to stay here for at least another year.

Brother Childs has been in Clanton for two years. With all due regard for every pastor that has preceded him, we feel that it can be truthfully said that he has filled the place with more universal satisfaction, and accomplished more for his church than any one who has ever been here in the position.

It is with genuine sorrow that Clanton gives up this good man. We love him dearly, because he deserves to be loved. He is one of those kind whom people can not keep from loving.

While caring for his duties to his church and to the great cause for which he and his church stands, he has at the same time taken an active interest in the civic affairs of this community that has been worth a great deal to Clanton. As a member of the Kiwanis Club, and Secretary of that organization he has been very active. Through this means he has been a moving spirit in the building of fine ideals and the accomplishment of some noble purposes.

Clanton congratulates the city of Troy upon the going of Rev. Childs to that field.

While the folks of Clanton regret the going of the beloved friend we have in Brother Childs, at the same time his successor, Rev. D. W. Hasker, will be received with a full measure of cordialty. He will come to Clanton with every condition favorable for a good season of work. The Methodist Church, we are happy to say, is in a fine spiritual condition. In fact all the churches of Clanton are in a fine spirit, and we believe that Brother Hasker will find here a situation that will make his heart glad, and inspire him to the fullest measure of service in God's kingdom.

Clanton welcomes you, Brother Hasker, as we say good-by to Ernest Childs.

STATE OFFERS $250 FOR ROSS'S SLAYER

State reward of $250, was authorized Tuesday, November 18, by Gov. Graves for the arrest and conviction of the slayer of H. E. Ross, who was mysteriously murdered in his home in Huntsville on the night of September 27, by a marauder who also wounded Mrs. Ross. Several arrests were made by investigators of the case, and the suspects are now awaiting grand jury action.

ANOTHER EFFORT FOR LOCAL PHONE

Meeting Called For Next Saturday Afternoon At 2 O'clock

Another meeting of the 'Peoples Telephone company is called for next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the court house.

The meeting last Saturday afternoon was a success, so far as it went, but there were not enough lines represented to arrive at anything definite. 27 lines were represented out of about 125. $550 was in sight from the representation Saturday, but that is not enough to make a start for the coming year. It is believed that there are as many more who will pay as those who have promised, but this is not known.

So, if your line did not have a representative present last Saturday afternoon, get your report in by next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock; so that something definite may be determined.

Central fees may be paid now at The Union-Banner office, with the understanding that in case the board of directors decide that the central cannot be operated, the money will be refunded.

JOINT SINGING AT THORSBY BAPTIST CHURCH SUNDAY

At the regular meeting of the Central Singing Society at Friendship church last Sunday afternoon, it was decided that the society would meet jointly with the United Singing Society at Thorsby Baptist church next Sunday afternoon, the fifth Sunday. The singing will begin at 1:30 o'clock. Everyone bear in mind the hour to begin and don't be late.

The singing last Sunday afternoon at Friendship was a good one. There were plenty of singers present and the rest of the house was about filled with listeners. Prof. O. L. Devaughn presided, and the following directed 2 songs each: T. E. Wyatt, Willie Mims, Ralph Grant, R. E. Powell, J. W. Cleckler, N. A. Smith, Emmett Wilson, J. B. Hammonds, Dr. J. B. Williams, L. T. Grant, G. C. Powell and J. W. Cagle. Two special numbers were sung by Jesse Jones, Renfroe Jones, Jean Wyatt, and L. T. Grant, which were enjoyed by everyone. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Zac Y. Appleton.

We wish to make special mention of the presence of Prof. N. A. Smith and Prof. J. B. Hammonds, both of Elmore county. Another visitor, a former member of Friendship church was Mr. W. O. Rich of Birmingham. Also, we noted with interest the presence of Rev. Renna V. Jones, of Coopers and Howard College. We were indeed glad to have these gentlemen with us, as well as all the other visitors.

The next regular meeting of the society will be at Chestnut Creek, Coopers, the first Sunday in December, at 1:30 o'clock. Everyone is invited to meet with us next Sunday afternoon at Thorsby and the following Sunday afternoon at Coopers. We believe that you will enjoy it.

SPECIAL THANKSGIVING SERVICE

A special Thanksgiving service will be held at the Clanton Baptist Church tonight (Wednesday) at 7 o'clock. The public is urged to come and join in the service.—S. J. Ezell, pastor.

BAPTISTS URGED TO COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY

Members of the Baptist Church of Clanton are especially urged to come to church next Sunday morning. The pastor will bring a special message to his congregation on the subject: "A Program of Work for 1931." It is hoped every member of the church will be present. All others, not members of the church, or members of other churches, are cordially invited to the Baptist Church at all times.

"Safety First" Play At Co. High School

Will Be Put On By Faculty of the Grammar School

Arrangements are now being made for the presentation of the farce-comedy, "Safety First," by the faculty of the Clanton Grammar School. The play will be for the benefit of the Clanton Grammar School and is to be presented in the near future at the auditorium of the Chilton County High school.

"Safety First" is a new and sparkling farce that has a story of sustained interest, abounding in mirth-provoking situations. Its leading role is that of an innocent and inoffensive young husband, Jack Montgomery, who is plunged into the abyss of the law after trying to rescue a Turkish maiden from the hands of the police. Jack and his chum, Jerry, visit Zuleika to aid the interests of Jack's cousin, Elmer Flannel, a shrinking young man. Jack, Jerry and Zuleika are arrested and sentenced to thirty days in jail.—Well, we can't tell you the whole story, so look for further announcements and come to the high school and see the play. It is a wow!

Better Variety Of Cotton Is Sought

To Avoid Penalty For Short Staple Cotton In Future

County Agent Stapp is making an effort to help farmers of Chilton County get a better variety of cotton.

The farmers of the county were heavily penalized this year because of the shortness of the staple of their cotton. A report from Auburn shows that several of the varieties of cotton being grown in the county have averaged less than 7-8 inch staple. Among these are: Rucker, Half and Half, Beat 'em All. Of course a good year these varieties, like several other varieties, barely make 7-8 inch staple, and a dry growing season will invarably give us short staple. This is true of Cook's 307-6 and several other similar varieties being grown in the county.

The Alabama Experiment Station says for Central Alabama, a comparatively new variety known as D. P. L. 4-8, has for the past four years led all other varieties, and that it has a splendid staple averaging one inch.

The following report shows the yield of lint cotton per acre and length of staple on several varieties being grown in Central Alabama:

Variety	lbs per acre	Staple
D. P. L. 4-8	467	1 inch
Cook's	440	29-32 inch
Dixie Triumph	431	29-32 inch
Piedmont
Cleveland	414	28-32 inch
Rhyne's Cook	411	28-32 inch
Rucker	351	27-32 inch
Addison	321	27-32 inch
Half & Half	366	27-32 inch

In view of the fact that D. P. L. 4-8 has led other varieties in yield of lint cotton per acre and length of staple, County Agent Stapp made an effort to secure a carload of these seed from the breeder. He announces that he has succeeded in getting a carload at $2.00 per bushel. Farmers interested in getting this leading variety of cotton at the above price should see Mr. Stapp at an early date. Mr. Stapp announces that he is desirous of getting a group of farmers in the county to plant these new seed under conditions as near as possible that will prevent them being mixed with other varieties. If such arrangements are made, gin days will be fixed next fall and plans worked out for saving these seed to be sold to other farmers for planting the following spring.

Mr. Stapp advises that he has been able to get only one car of these seed and that farmers interested should see him at the earliest date possible.

FIRE DAMAGED BATES GARAGE

About two o'clock Sunday morning fire was discovered in the plant of the Bates Garage. The city fire fighting department responded to the alarm, and were able to hold the blaze in check and prevent the destruction of the building.

Considerable damage was done to the fixtures and stock in the building; also to several automibiles that were in storage. The building belongs to Dr. J. P. Hayes.

Dewey Smith of Wetumpka was in Clanton on a visit last Sunday. Mr. Smith is manager of the Elmore 5c and 10c Store at Wetumpka.

LAY DAM SUNDAY SCHOOL GIVE MONEY FOR WELFARE WORK

The Sunday School pupils and the teachers of Lay Dam have a little bank that they use to put in a penny for each year old they are, when one has a birthday. They open this bank eack October and use the money to help people who are in need. This year they asked that the Welfare Department use it and when they learned from the welfare worker that there was a person in need in their district, they very happily spent the $5.00 to make this person more comfortable by getting some necessary clothing. Lay Dam is active in welfare work with Mrs. Woodson as chairman.

Dry Forces Plan To Co-Operate In 1932

Militant Reorganization Slated For Whole United States

Washington, Nov. 22.—Plans are under way for a militant reorganization of dry forces, pointed toward the 1932 presidental campaign and having such goals as the creation of group of business men 25,000 strong for an educational campaign and a federation of all 47 dry organizations.

Assurance was given both plans will have an airing at a massing of dry organizations in a series of national conventions to be held here soon.

The first, already initiated by the Anti-Saloon League, was described by F. Scott McBride as having a proposed budget of between $3,000,000 and $6,000,000, and a purpose of "putting dry candidates into office from the White House down to local communities."

McBride said this enlisting of business men in a nation-wide educational campaign was "strictly an offensive and not a defense move." At the same time he said reports of a weakening of the league's organization were "bunk."

The plan for creating a "federation" among the more than two score dry groups was explained by Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary, Methodist Board of Temperance, who already has announced that whether coming presidental candidates be Republican or Democratic they must be dry to obtain the support of his organization.

"Only a short time ago," Dr. Wilson said, "there were at least 16 wet organizations. Now they have narrowed down to two—the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and the Crusaders.

"There has been too little correlation between our forces during the last year. We now consider it an absolute necessity that the dry organizations in the field come through to form boards of strategy in every state to combat the organized wets. It was patent in the last election some of us were working for one thing and some another."

Dr. Wilson said his forthcoming annual report would make clear the stand of his own organizations toward the presidential race of 1932 He added it also would contain some criticism of present prohibition enforcement.

The Unity and Chilton County Baptist Associations completed their contributions to the Baptist Orphans Home last Thursday when a solid car load of 20,397 pounds of farm produce was sent to the home from Clanton. All day Thursday the gifts were coming in by truck, automobile and wagon, adding the donations of different churches and different families to make up the grand total.

LEGION MEMBERSHIP ALREADY IS 237,879

Indianapolis, Ind.—The national telegraphic roll call of American Legion membership, conducted at the annual conference of Department commanders and Adjutants held at national headquarters here, showed that 237,879 Legion members for 1931 were enrolled as of November 18. This is the greatest early membership in Legion history, according to national headquarters, and is 63,179 ahead of the total reported at the same time last year.

Alabama, of course, was the first state called on for a report and when Rufus Bethea, the Alabama Department Commander, reported that Alabama had already received 45.64 per cent of her 1931 quota loud applause rang through the hall. On the completion of the roll call it was stated that Ala. had been placed 7th among the 55 departments of the Legion. This is regarded as quite a feat as it puts Alabama ahead of such Legion strongholds as California, Illinois and New York. In commenting on this, Rufus Bethea, the Alabama Department Commander, said "the real credit for this splendid showing is due to the excellent work of the post officers and individual legionaires in Alabama. These men realize that a large membership is the first essential in putting into effect the Alabama program of 'maximum service for the disabled.'"

CLANTON FIRE FIGHTERS BETTER FITTED FOR WORK

Night Marshal, Red Sherrod, informs The Union-Banner that the Clanton Fire Department is now better equipped to locate and extinguish fires than heretofore.

A Bell telephone has been installed in the place where the fire truck is kept, and when the fire alarm is turned in to Dief's Service Station, the party answering there will be connected up with the phone at the fire station. When Earl Gore gets there to take out the fire truck, he will answer the phone and be told where the fire is.

Therefore, it is absolutely necessary for parties turning in fire alarms to tell Dief's where such fire is located. Dief's telephone number is 9114.

J. N. Scott of Jemison was in Clanton Tuesday morning. Mr. Scott is putting on a sale at his store in Jemison. Read the particulars elsewhere in this issue of The Union-Banner.

Film At Wadesonian Ranks With Best

"Common Clay" Is Feature For Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Night

Perhaps it is a truism to say that good drama is always good, but the fact remains that worth-while offerings of the stage will find an even greater field in talking pictures.

A case in point is that of "Common Clay," Cleves Kincaid's Harvard prize play in which Jane Cowl rode to fame before the footlights. Under the skilful direction and guidance of Victor Fleming, Constance Bennett seems about to reach international eminence in the screen version of this drama, judging from the reception accorded the film at the Wadesonian Theatre here the first three days of this week.

Miss Bennett's work is, of course, the outstanding feature of the production. Her portrayal of the pleasure-loving girl whom Fate seems bent on destroying, and who eventually manages to reach some measure of happiness after a heart-breaking struggle, is unquestionably one of the finest things the speaking screen has yet given us. For the first time since her advent in pictures this noted actress has full opportunity to develop her unusual abilities, and she takes commendable advantage of it.

Lew Ayres, the youngster who before scored so heavily in "All Quiet on the Western Front," is remarkably convincing in the featured male role, that of the likable but thoughtless youth who causes Miss Bennett's major difficulties.

Those fine players, Tully Marshall, Matty Kemp and Beryl Mercer, give splendid performances. Hale Mamilton, Purnell Pratt, Charles McNaughton, Ada Williams and Genevieve Blinn all do notable work in their roles—in fact, the entire cast is quite perfect, for which Director Fleming may receive much credit. He deserves it. "Common Clay is a real achievement of Fox movietone.

Tonight, Wednesday, November 26th, will be your last chance to see this stupendous picture. And the admission price is very seasonable at the Wadesonian Theatre.

ROCKETTS BUY JONES HARDWARE

Business Will Continue At Same Location Under New Management

Announcement was made Monday morning by C. Fenn Jones and Tom Rockett that a deal had been consummated whereby the stock and store fixtures of the Jones Hardware Company had been sold to Tom Rockett and son, Dewey Rockett. The sale did not include the building occupied by the store. Mr. Jones retains that himself, but it was stated that the hardware business will be continued by the new owners at the same location.

The store was closed the first of this week for the purpose of taking stock. After this is completed the place will be re-opened by the Rocketts.

By this transaction Mr. C. Fenn Jones reties from a long and successful engagement as one of the foremost merchants and business men of Clanton. He came here about thirty years ago and started out in the hardware business. For more than twenty-five years he has done business at the same location where the store now stands. He has attained a remarkable success as a business man, and has endeared himself to hundreds of people whom he has come in contact with during his business career.

For the past four years the Rocketts have been engaged in the operation of the Clanton Building Supply Company, under the direct supervision of Mr. Dewey Rockett. This business has been a distinct success. While a definite statement from Mr. Rockett was not available as to his future plans, it is presumed that with his acquirement of the Jones business the two places will be combined for future operation.

Tom Rockett is a well known and prominent business man, as well as the very popular Tax Collector of Chilton County for the past 10 years. At the conclusion of his term of office next year he will give his attention to the hardware business with his son.

SWEET POTATOES TO BE SHIPPED FROM CHILTON COUNTY

County agent, Stapp, announces that at recent meetings held at Jemison, Thorsby and Clanton, considerable interest was shown in crops in addition to strawberries that will be grown next year for carload shipments. There was much interest shown in increased acreage to strawberries.

Mr. Stapp as well as many berry growers of Chilton County could ship annually more than twice as many strawberries as are being shipped at present.

In addition to strawberries, the 2 other crops discussed at these meetings were dewberries and sweet potatoes. There will likely be good acreage set to dewberries next year.

Mr. Stapp announces that groups of farmers of the County hae already signed up for sweet potatoes that will assure shipments from Jemison, Thorsby, Clanton and Verbena next August.

BAPTISTS OBJECT TO THE NEW JAIL

Ask Commissioners Not To Build It On Potts Property

At the regular conference last Sunday morning the membership of the Clanton Baptist Church unanimously voted that the pastor and deacons petition the Probate Judge and County Commissioners not to build the new county jail adjacent to their $60,000 church property.

It was brought out in the discussions that such location of the jail would be of great interference with the Sunday School and church services. It was also brought out that the old church property was sold and the new church built at the present location a few years ago to avoid the disturbances and nuisance incident to the former location.

Much interest is aroused over the matter, and earnest hope is expressed that the county authorities will take into consideration the great sacrifices the church has made in building a fine plant to bless the community, and build the new jail on the property where the old jail is now located.

IF YOUR COWS COULD LOOK OVER A MENU

Animals Have their Likes and Dislikes in Food the Same as Human Beings

Every mother who has prepared meals for her children knows how difficult it is to please the little ones. It takes plenty of coaxing and sometimes constant threatening to get children to eat what is good for them. Even adults will take a dislike to certain foods and refuse to eat them.

The owner of a dairy herd should realize that cows, too, have different tastes and appetites the same as people. Feeds that will be gobbled up freely by some cows will not be touched by others. Like children, however, cows can be taught to like certain things even after they refuse to eat them at first.

I have stressed in previous articles the necessity of proper combinations of food and the quantities necessary for the maximum production of milk. Therefore, every attempt should be made to tempt the cow's appetite so that she may eat all that is put before her.

Frequently, molasses is mixed with feeds to induce the cows to eat. It is quite desirable to have in the diet a feed that contains juices similar to the juices of pasture grass. Silage is one of them, and wet beet pulp another. Because of the nature of the digestive system of the cow, bulk is important. The more common bulky grain foods are wheat bran, ground oats, and corn and cob meal. In mixing a grain ration so that it will have both bulk and an appealing flavor usually three or four grains are mixed together. In the case of cows that are in the midst of heavy production a still greater variety in the diet is recommended.

The effect of certain foods should be known to every farmer. We know, for instance, that cottonseed meal is constipating, while linseed meal has the opposite effect. It is important that neither one be fed in too great quantities. Three or four pounds a day is the miximum. Silage, clover hay, and alfalfa hay are laxative. On the other hand, timothey hay, oat straw, and corn stover are constipating. In winter this should be watched carefully. If the roughages you are using the constipating, the grain mixture should have some sort of a laxitive content.

Minerals are very important. Dairy cows and all animals, except those which eat meat, require a large amount of salt. It should be available at al times to dairy cattle. If the salt is given to them with the grain the proper proportion is about one pound to each one hundred pounds of grain mixture.

The grinding of grain may help to digest it, especially where there are seeds. Sometimes as high as 20 per cent of the grain seeds will pass through the digestive tract of the cow untouched, unless it is ground. The roughages are easier to feed when they are cut up. The cow will eat more of it if it is in small pieces, although the cuting does not have any particular effect on digestion. Sometimes grain is soaked before it is fed. A bran mash made of wheat bran mixed with warm water is frequently given to cows especially before and after freshening.

An interesting two-year experiment is being conducted at Cornell University for the purpose of finding the protein content of various grain mixtures. Three lots of cows are being used and they are being fed rations of 16 per cent, 20 per cent and 24 per cent protein, respectively. It might be interesting to know the proportions of feed that are being used in this test. The hay for each animal is fed at the rate of one pound for every one hundred pounds of live weight. Silage is at the rate of three pounds to every one hundred pounds of live weight. Grain is at the rate of one pound to every three and one-half pounds (pints) of milk.

But having determined the proper quantities of food each cow should have, be sure she eats all you give her. If she does not clean up her box it may not be a sign of overfeeding but an indication that the feed is not palatable. You will, therefore, have to do as mothers do for their children, mix in flavors that will tickle the appetite.

POULTRY

The hungry hen means profits for the poultry raiser, while the hen without an appetite is the loafer of the flock as far as egg production is concerned. It is the last 10 or 20 per cent of feed the hen consumes that fills the egg basket. The rest of the feed is required to maintain the bird.

The farmer who induces his hens to eat more feed automatically causes them to lay more eggs. Five suggestions for boosting feed consumption and thereby increasing egg production have been made by R. E. Cray, extension specialist in poultry for the Ohio State University, with the full endorsement of leading poultry authorities.

The suggestions are:

1. Artificial lights during the winter months so that the hens will have more time in which to eat. However, if the consumption of feed is not increased, the lights will be of no benefit.

2. Feed the largest part of the grain ration at night. This has a tendency to keep the birds hungry during the day and hence causes them to eat more mash. Grain should be fed in hoppers rather than in the litter.

3. Provide a sufficient amount of mash hopper space—one foot for every five or six birds. In every flock there are always timid birds that will eat more if there is sufficient hopper space.

4. Feed mash each day of the same hour. When the hoppers are filled with a quantity of mash sufficient for several days, the birds will pick it over, eating only what they like best and leaving the rest. When the leavings are reached, feed consumption and egg production both will slump.

5. Use a wet mash. Hens will eat more mash when it is moistened with milk, just as a small boy will eat more bread if it is spread with jam.

Still another factor increases egg production, authorities agree, and it is good poultry stock to begin with. When replacing their old hens, farmers are assured of good stock if they purchase baby chicks from a reliable hatchery. Leading hatcheries of the United States are operating together on the slogan, "Hatchery Chicks for Greater Profits" to insure better flocks and square dealing.

FAMILIES TO OFFER PRAYERS ON THANKSGIVING DAY

Cleveland, O. Nov. 25.—Five thousand needy families of this city will offer up prayers of genuine gratitude on Thanksgiving Day. Their thanks will be due to the generosity of a proinent Cleveland physician and business man, Dr. S. B. Smith, for through the Associated Charities he is supplementing their Thanksgiving menu with a gift what he considers the virtually perfected food—a carload of eggs.

The consignment, numbering 12,000 dozens of eggs, is already being distributed among the needy by the charities organization, its officials announced. They declared that Dr. Smith, after inquiring into the needs of Cleveland's poor families and considering various foods and their present market prices, chose eggs because they offer more food value per dollar than any other commodity.

"The egg has been a staple article of diet so long that it has come to be one of those things that are simply taken for granted," Dr. Smith was quoted as saying. "Few people realize that eggs rank with milk as our most nearly perfected food. Eggs contain everything that the body needs for development and because of this they form an especially desireable food item for our poor families.

"Furthermore, eggs are great builders of vitality in the human bodies. They are rich in all vitamins except C and they rank next to cod liver and other fish oils in the richness of the vital vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin, especially needed at this time of the year. They rank high in proteins, those food nutrients which build the new body tissues in the growing child and replace adult tissues that have suffered wear and tear."

ZACCHAEUS THE PUBLICAN, A BUSINESS MAN CONVERTED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 19:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.
PRIMARY TOPIC — A Man Who Thought Jesus Would Not Care.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Man Who Righted His Wrongs.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Religion Changes One's Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making Business Christian.

I. Jesus Passing Through Jericho (v. 1).

Jericho is noted as the stronghold of the Canaanites, which was miraculously delivered into the hands of Israel in response to their faith (Josh. 6), and also for the faith of Rahab which saved her from destruction with the city (Heb. 11:30, 31). It was thus noted as a city where faith and unbelief played against each other. It was fitting that Jesus should pass through Jericho. Faith and unbelief again were manifested. Two notorious sinners, Rahab and Zacchaeus, were saved at Jericho.

II. Zacchaeus Seeking Jesus (vv. 2-4).

1. His object (v. 3).

He sought to see who Jesus was. Though perhaps prompted by curiosity, he eagerly sought Jesus.

2. His difficulties (vv. 2, 3).

(1) His infamous business (v. 2).

He was a tax collector for the Roman government. The very fact that a Jew held such an office under the hated Romans would make him extremely unpopular. Then, since he was rich, it was evident that he had practiced extortion in collecting the taxes. Many men and women have a hard time in coming to Christ because of their questionable business relations.

(2) His shortness of stature (v. 3).

He was too small to crowd his way through to Jesus, and being hated by the people they had thrust him aside.

3. His persistence (v. 4).

He ran before the multitude and climbed up into a tree. What he lacked in stature he was determined should be made up by the height of the tree. Though Zacchaeus' legs were too short to enable him to see Jesus they were long enough to run past the crowd and enable him to climb the tree.

III. Jesus Finding Zacchaeus (vv. 5, 6).

While Zacchaeus was trying to see Jesus, Jesus was looking for him. This is always the case. When desire is stirred up in a heart to see Jesus, Jesus is seeking that one. When Jesus saw him he commanded him to come down from the tree and declared his intention to go home with him. Zaccheus got more than he expected. Jesus called him by name. He did not utter a word which would humiliate Zacchaeus. Jesus knew his heart's desire and dealt accordingly with him. All souls who earnestly seek Jesus shall be found of him. How wonderful his grace, that regardless of one's past life, Jesus will receive him as a friend and enter into fellowship with him! Zacchaeus quickly responded. He came down and with joy received Jesus.

IV. Zacchaeus' Conversion (vv. 7-10).

His conversion was sudden and thorough. He was converted before he had reached the ground.

1. What the crowd said (v. 7).

They said just what they say today when sinners come to Christ. They call to mind the man's former sins. They also reproached Christ, saying that he had gone to be a guest of this notorious extortioner, the tax collector. That for which they reproached Jesus was his glory. His supreme mission was to save sinners (v. 10).

2. What Zacchaeus said (v. 8).

His conversion was thorough. It took hold upon his heart. His new life began with resolution and restitution. He dedicated half of his goods to the poor. The man who a little while ago was a grafter was now a generous giver. His conversion got hold of his pocketbook. His determination to make restitution wherein he had wrongly exacted taxes shows the genuineness of his conversion. While God forgets the past of a sinner when he comes to Christ, the sinner who is converted will seek to right all wrongs, be they unkind words or unrighteous deeds. Sorrow for sin is not enough when restitution is possible.

3. What Jesus said (vv. 9, 10).

"Today is salvation come to thy house." The publican was now a child of God, a son of Abraham. Salvation is a present reality when one receives Christ.

TOURIST TRADE LOST IN FOREST FIRE REGIONS

Much tourist trade is withheld from Alabama on account of the spoiling of the natural attractions of the state by woods fires during the height of the tourist season, points out Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. The late fall, the winter and early spring are the seasons during which people from other sections of the country turn their steps toward the South, but many sections do not profit by the business thus brought into the region, since the tourists do not care to view blackened wastes and drive through palls of smoke.

The United States Forest Service had made careful observations in connection with the avoidance of forest fire regions by tourists, and the resulting compilations are highly instructive, says Colonel Bunker. In some parts of the country the tourist business has fallen off as much as 88 per cent during the period of forest fires. This decline of business hurts banks, building trades, real estate values and local tax resources.

In one case a hotel had 85 guests the day before the fires started, and 6 days later only ten were registered. Gasoline stations, restaurants and other establishments serving the tourist trade lost 50 per cent of their business within four days after the beginning of the fire period. According to government investigations the loss in tourist business, direct loss in timber and young growth and decrease in the protective value of watersheds are frequently quite severe to cities and counties supported wholly or in part by forest resources or industries. It simetimes happens that the very localities making the strongest bids for the tourist trade are the worst offenders in the matter of community neglect to care for the woods that form a large part of the attraction to visitors.

The remedy is not at all complicated, says Colonel Bunker. If the woodland owners and the local public will use the same care toward this form of real property that they exercise in connection with their residences and places of business or occupation, fires will not be started intentionally, and when they occur through accident they will be promptly suppressed by the owner and his neighbors.

BOX SUPPER AT THE COOPER SCHOOL HOUSE THURSDAY

On next Thursday night, November 27, there will be a box supper at Cross Roads Schoolhouse at Cooper. Also there will be a short Thanksgiving program. Everybody invited to come. The girls are supposed to bring the boxes and the boys come prepared to buy them. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the B. Y. P. U. of Chestnut Creek Church.—Secretary, Mrs. Louanna Calloway.

TROUBLE WITH THE STEERING

After the recent election in Oregon an old-timer remarked that the State made him think of the steering gear on his automobile, which would work alright for a certain length of time and then turn the car into a ditch or chase a cow out of her pasture.

Relief From Curse Of Constipation

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.—Upchurch Drug Company, Clanton, Alabama. 11-24-30.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

STAPLE LENGTH CAUSES HEAVY PRICE PENALTY

The question of staple and variety of cotton has become a very serious one with farmers in Alabama, since staple lengths under 7-8 inch are being penalized $5.00 to $10.00 per bale, according to J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Alabama farmers produce a large amount of short staple cotton, according to figures from the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The crop of 1929 was divided as follows: 44.8 per cent was under 7-8 inch; 52.6 per cent was 7-8 inch and 29-32 inch; 2.2 per cent was 15-16 and 31-32 inch; and 2.4 per cent was 1 inch and up.

Commenting on these figures, F. W. Gist of Montgomery, agricutural statistican, said: "If this season should find a like proportion of short staple in Alabama and elsewhere, in addition to the original penalty in price, the large proportion of the carryover of these staples will furnish a further penalty attached to overproduction; or in other words, the undesirable staple and untenderable staple will be furnishing the surplus and keeping down the price of the longer staple."

Mr. Lowery is convinced that the short varieties must go. "Now, the trouble is right before us, and it is the time to take steps to correct it," he said.

"Secure seed of the varieties found by the Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute to be good for your section." he continued. "The experiment station has found that, at present prices, there is a difference between the best variety and the poorest of $10.20 per acre in north Alabam; $14.30 per acre in central Alabama; and $9.10 per acre in the cotton wilt sections. Consult your County Agent."

FIRE-BREAKS AROUND WOODS EASILY MADE

The need to prevent forest fires becomes greater every year as timber in Alabama becomes scarcer. Indiscriminate cutting and the "red forest rubber" have seriously depleted the timber resources of the State which were at one time almost inexhaustable.

These facts have caused Lyle R. Brown, extension forester of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, to lay great stress on the prevention of fires.

"A fire-break placed around your woods will usually keep a fire from coming from the other fellow's place into yours," he says.

"A very satisfactory way to build a fire break, he explains, "is to plow furrows about 10 feet apart and to burn between them. Two furrows on each side of the break are usually sufficient to keep the fire between the furrows while burning the break.

"If there are too many roots or rocks to permit plowing, or if furrows are likely to start gulleys, fire breaks may be established by raking or scrathing the litter from two lines and burning between them. Advantage should be taken of the natural breaks, such as streams or open fields."

Trees should be treated as a cash crop, Mr. Brown advocates. The average Alabama farm contains about 30 acres of land that is neither cultivated nor pastured, and will not pay a profit in any crop except in trees, he says.

Authorities claim that if properly handled a good stand of trees on poor land will pay a net income to the owner of $2 to $6 per acre per year in growth at present prices. Such an income is not to be despised, the Forester comments.

SQUIBS FROM AUBURN ABOUT CURRENT FARM PROBLEMS

Discovery by Dr. Charles H. Herty that white paper can be made from slash pine opens up the possibility of another new industry for the South. Pines grow faster in the South than in northern climates.

Per capita consumption of all dairy products, except butter, is now at the highest point in the nation's history, says the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics. There has been a marked upward trend, especially in the last 10 years. The peak in butter consumption was in the year 1889.

A notable decrease in the cost of living has been a compensation of the economic depression of the last year, acording to the New York Merchants Association which inquired into retail prices. In many lines of goods, the association found $10.00 was equivalent in retail purchasing value to $11 or $12, or even more a year ago.

The annual mid-winter meeting of north Alabama editors will be held in Birmingham on January 10th, and south Alabama editors will meet in Montgomery on January 24th, according to announcement made by Marcy B. Darnall, editor of the Florence Herald and president of the Alabama Press Association.

THE COST OF A HUG

What is the monetary value of a hug in the event one—or even both—parties, get hurt while hugging? An Ohio judge recently had occasion to give his opinion about it when a young woman had two ribs broken while her gentleman friend was hugging her. She sued him. She asked for $75, of which $3 was for repairing the breaks, and $72 for the physical pain suffered. The judge emphatically disallowed the full amount of the claim. He held that the girl was entitled to cost of repairs only, that any hug of sufficient intensity to crush two of the girl's ribs is worth even more than $72.

The Jackson Daily News thinks that the girl was entitled to have her repair bill paid, and that this is not to be questioned. "Even when you bust a fender on the other fellow's car, you are expected to pay for it. But there are some questions we would like to raise, and which do not seem to be made sufficiently clear." These questions as raised by The Daily News are as follows:

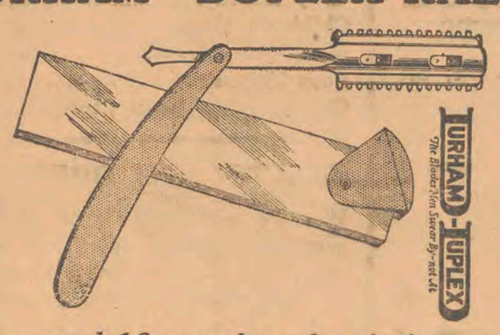
1. Is a hug really worth $3 to a man?
2. Is $72 of physical pain worth that much to the woman?
3. Will insurance companies issue two-way policies offering protection against damages of this nature?
4. Just where, and to what extent, does the law of contributory negligence enter in adjusting claims of this character?
5. How tight can a female of the species be hugged before her ribs crack—how many pounds to the square inch?
6. If the girl tells the man to stop, is there any way of knowing that she means stop?
7. Will the law of supply and demand be offered as an extenuating circumstance? The number of girls eager to be hugged nowadays is nothing short of astounding.

In conclusion the inquiring editor of Jackson says: "We vociferously applaud the decision of the judge, but these other important questions ought to be cleared up, in order that huggees and huggors may know just how far to go. Any words or figures offered on the subject from persons with first-hand experience will be a valuable contribution to current jurisprudence."

Going back to the original cause at issue: Our private notion is that it was not the broken ribs, it was not the physical pain, that made the Ohio lady sue, but the embarrassment suffered when the accident—if it was an accident—caused her to be exposed. We holler loudest when we are caught.

DRY SALT METHOD CURING PORK GIVEN

Auburn, Ala., Nov. 24.—To prevent losses from spoiled, low quality and over-salty meat farmers of Alabama should give more attention to methods of curing, in the opinion of Prof. J. C. Grimes, head of the animal industry group of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.



One of the most practical methods of curing meat is the dry salt method. Details of this method follow:

1. Allow the meat to cool thoroughly, over night.
2. For each 100 pounds of meat mix thoroughly 7 pounds of common salt, 2 1-2 pounds of sugar, and 2 ounces of saltpetre.
3. Rub 1-3 of the mixture on the meat and pack it on a table or in a box and allow to remain 3 days.
4. Break the pack and rub 1-2 of the remaining mixture on the meat, repack and allow to remain 7 days.
5. Pack it in a box or barrel and allow to remain until thoroughly cured. It should remain packed 1 and 1-2 days for each pound that the piece averages in weight.
7. When cured, unpack and wash in lukewarm water.
8. Hang 6 to 8 feet above the floor in a house located in a cool dry place and sufficiently light to hold smoke.
9. Smoke continuously for at least 3 or 4 days with any kind of hard wood or with corn cobs.
10. Take down, wrap each piece separately, using paper first and a suitable cloth second. Flour sacks are good.
11. Paint the outside of the sack with yellow wash.

"Sargon rid me of a complication of ailments and restored me to splendid new health, strength and vitality.

JOHN YOUNG COBERN

Few men ever suffered worse with indigestion than I did. My circulation was mighty poor, while a disordered liver and constipation helped pull me down to where I was so weak at times I was almost exhausted; Sargon completely ended all of these troubles and I haven't a complaint in the world.

"For stimulating the liver and effectively regulating the bowels Sargon Pills beat anything I ever tried in my life. There is no nauseating or upsetting of any kind. I'm in fine shape in this respect, and my gratitude to this remarkable Sargon treatment is beyond words."—John Young Coburn, 2227 Clarendon Ave., Bessemer, Ala., vice president of the Patton Clothing Co.

NO MYSTERY

There is no mystery in the American high standard of living or in our incomparable wage scale. They are both due to the fact that private initiative in the United States has applied more mechanical power, most of it electrical—to industrial operations than has been applied anywhere else in the world.

Today one American worker produces three times as much as the European worker and it is said that our output is twice the combined output of Great Britain, Germany, Italy and Belgium. Add to this the vastly superior circumstances of the American worker as compared with his foreign counterpart.

Those who are at present leading the political attack on the electrical industry, whether they knew it or not, are attacking prosperity and a fundamental American doctrine. It is also undisputable that had the government controlled electric power production and distribution 25 years ago the phenomenal industrial progress of this century would never have occured. Witness Europe. No argument can dim the historical fact that most of the great civilizing movements have been the result, not of politics, but of the hopes, dreams and ambitions of private individuals.

AUBURN BRIEFS

The way to get better prices for home-grown feeds is to feed them to high-producing livestock.

Fresh stains of cod liver oil may be removed easily by applying carbon tetrachloride and washing the garment in warm soapsuds.

A regular diet of wholesome, well-cooked meals which contain the necessary vitamins and minerals is one of the best means of wearing off winter ills.

With the outlook for hogs relatively good for 1931, farmers who can produce feeds at a low cost may profit by choosing this as a time to expand their swine production.

A cow not in good condition because of disease may be helped by a tonic. The tonic is a medicine and should be used as such. A healthy, well-fed cow needs a tonic no more than a healthy person needs medicine.

"Every desirable material thing one sees and would like to have in his own possession has come from two or three things—saving, thrift and industry."

Keep Up Old Custom of Blessing Fishing Boats

For more than three centuries the annual departure of the fishing fleet from the picturesque fishing port of St. Malo, France, has been preceded by the solemn blessing of each boat. The rite dates back to the days when passage across the western ocean to the Grand banks of Newfoundland was likely to be a terrifying experience. Vessels were small, disaster and disease took frequent toll in human lives, and so the mariner made his peace with heaven before he set sail. Today the devout fisherman follows the custom of his forefathers with peasants grouped everywhere in native costumes watching the ceremony. His need is less, however, for hazards of the voyage are not so great as they were 300 years ago. Vessels are larger, and it was noted at a recent ceremony at St. Malo that a majority of the fishing craft had modern auxiliary motor power to supplement their sail areas.

Reedie Taylor Making Important Move With His Business In Clanton

Capitol Dry Goods Co. Is Merged With Chicago Sales Co., and Both Stocks Moved To Building Formerly Occupied By the A. & P. Store

Mr. Reedie Taylor anounces this week the consolidation of his two stores in Clanton. The Capitol Dry Goods Company is being merged with the Chicago Sales Co. Both stocks of goods are being moved to the building formerly occupied by the A. & P. Store, where the business will be located under the name of Chicago Sales Company.

The store will open at the new location Friday morning of this week, with what promsies to be the largest sale of the season. Extensive advertising matter has been sent out announcing the event, and lots of bargain hunters are expected to be on hand when the doors of this big store open for business Friday morning.

In announcing this change in his business organization, and calling attention to his special Consolidation Sale, Mr. Taylor says:

"We are forced to reduce stocks, because we are combining two stores into one, and moving the combined stocks to a new location.

"We have just moved the stock of Chicago Sales Co. to the building just vacated by the A. & P. Store, and at the same time we have also combined the stock of Capitol Dry Goods Co. with Chicago Sales Co. In the future we will operate only one store in Clanton. This consolidation finds us with a large amount of merchandise which we have no place to take care of, and the only thing we can do with it is to sell it. There you have the whole story behind this sale. We simply have more goods than we can handle in one store and the surplus stock must be sold down to where we can handle it.

"The merchandise which we offer is every bit high-grade and up-to-date. We are willing for it to speak for itself. You can see it and judge for yourself as to its quality and value. The prcies we have put on this merchandise are the lowest we have offered before because we must sell it.

"This is not a quit business sale. We are only getting fixed so we can do more and better business in the future. Therefore, you can be assured that every offer we make is sincere and geunine. When we sell you once, we want you to be so atisfiend and pleased with the bargain that you will continue to be one of our customers.

"Remember this sale begins Friday morning, November 28th. Look over our circular and see what we offer you. You will surely agree that you have seen nothing like this in the way of a sale in a long time. Come and look through the stock. You are to be your own judge. It is a plain straight-out sale to reduce our stocks—and we have offered it to you at prices which you will know are worth taking now while you have the chance.

"This is the biggest sale ever held in Clanton, because it is the biggest stock of goods ever offered at sacrifice."

Mr. Taylor will continue to operate his branch store of the Chicago Sales Co., at Jemison.

Curtain and Coverlet Ensemble

The quaint charm of this early American bedroom is accentuated by its net curtains and harmonizing coverlet reproducing the sampler figures.

DECORATIVE unity between bedspread and window curtains is this year's style development in bedroom furnishing.

If the spread and overdrapes are flowered chintz or cretonne, a floral motif is an appropriate selection for Milady's glass curtains. On the other hand, for the masculine room, where simplicity is desirable, a plain or small geometric-figured glass curtain will be better.

With the vogue for furnishing in periods such as the Colonial, Georgian, French, and other "schools," new designs in net curtains and harmonizing coverlets are keeping pace, and patterns authentically styled to period rooms are appearing.

For the bedroom in the early American manner, there are Colonial net curtains, reproducing sampler figures typical of the "raught" needlework of old, and created especially to companion them are coverlets designed in pastel colorings. Some reproduce sampler figures similar to those in the curtains. The woman clever with her needle can carry her bedroom ensemble still further by copying these designs for dresser-scarf and runners. Other designs are drawn from the hand-blocked patterns or simulate tufted candlewick spreads.

In tune with the more elaborate English-style of furnishing, there are spreads which carry rich embroidery designs on a natural background. These spreads are reminiscent of the embroideries on linen popular in the early 18th century, and harmonize with new Georgian designs in net curtains, which also find their inspiration in needlepoint and embroidery motifs.

The coverlet should harmonize with, rather than match, the curtain according to general preference.

Naval competition has ceased. Limitations of armament have begun. This is as it should be. But until the day dawns when international good faith and the banishment of fear of one nation of the intentions of another come to bless humanity, navies will be maintained. The London naval conference conceded the right of the United States to equality with Great Britain. This right may not be exercised in full, but we are deficient in some branches of the naval service, notably in cruisers and submarines. If we are to maintain efficiency there will have to be considerable building strictly within the London agreement. The Navy Department is ready with a program designed to cover several years, and even if it is not completely authorized, much new employment is assured.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A SUGGESTION TO THE PROBATE JUDGE

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me a small space in your paper to say a few words to our Judge of Probate and the Commissioners of Chilton County in regard to the people of this county.

Many people are really in need. Also some of our roads are in great need of gravelnig. I have heard lots of men say they would be glad to work for a dollar a day, and use their teams for three dollars a day.

I think right now you could help the unemployed and also the roads. If you knew the condition of the people as I do, I believe you would give them work at once.

I am for the betterment of the roads and the welfare of the people of our county.—L. G. Posey, Jemison, Ala.

In view of the large number of revolutions down there, they ought to call it South Amerry-goround.—Ohio State Journal.

State Capitol News

Tobacco taxes are playing an increasingly important part in revenue systems of a number of states, and are an important factor in providing funds for educational advancement in Alabama and in other states. Some interesting information along this line was brought out at the fourth annual conference of administrators of tobacco tax laws, held in Montgomery November 19-20. Thirteen states have tobacco tax laws, and in most of them the proceeds from this tax goes to the public schools. In Alabama, the legislature of 1927 which levied the tobacco tax also voted numerous additional license or privilege taxes on various corporations. Proceeds from the tobacco tax and also from privilege taxes levied on railroads, water power companies, severance taxes, etc., were placed in an educational trust fund. For the three years ending September 30, 1930, the tobacco tax produced more than three and one-half million dollars, or approximately 40 per cent of the total taxes collected for the educational trust fund set up by the 1927 legislature. The tobacco tax produced more than twice as much as the tax of two and one-half per cent of gross receipts levied on railroads, and more than five times as much as the kilowat tax placed on hydro-electric power.

It was brought out at the recent conference of administrators of tobacco tax laws that this form of taxation is being utilized to an increasing extent over the country. It was pointed out that levying the tax on "smokes" brings into the class of taxpayers numerous citizens who hitherto had paid no taxes whatever, and tended to keep down tax burdens of property owners by requiring others to contribute something to the upkeep of the public school system.

The association of administrators of tobacco tax laws was formed to promote an interchange of helpful ideas and reaching a solution of mutual problems among men engaged in the same work for the various states having such laws. R. A. Little, of the South Carolina tax department, was elected president of the association; W. E. Hawse, Iowa tax man, vice-president; and D.E.Dunn, of Montgomery, assistant to the Alabama tax commission, secretary. Governor Graves delivered the address of welcome at the opening of the conference, which was also addressed by C. L. Davis, assistant to the tax commission, Professor C. H. Knight of the University of Alabama, and tax men from Georgia, Mississippi, Iowa, Tennessee, South Carolina and a federal tax expert. Des Moines, Iowa, was selected for the 1931 annual conference.

Alabama's tobacco tax law went into effect October 1, 1927, and therefore had been in force three years at the close of the last fiscal year, which ended September 30, 1930. During these three years the tax produced $3,634,586.87, while the total receipts from all sources going into the new educational trust fund were $8,714,912.89, leaving $5,080,326.02 from sources other than the tobacco tax. Collections for the three years were divided as follows:: Railroad gross receipts tax, $1,623,077.39; telegraph companies gross receipts tax, $1,213.98; the similar tax levied on telephone companies, $407,716.32; hydro-electric power kilowat tax, $687,978.98; gross receipts tax on express companies, $27,022.22; privilege tax on sleeping car companies, $60,000; coal tonnage tax, $1,327,749.69; iron ore tonnage tax, $864,214.82; and severance taxes on sand, gravel, slag and minerals other than coal and iron, $31,352.62.

Our own America, with all its faults, economic, political and otherwise, is a better place in which to live than many other lands—China, Egypt, India and all Asia seethe with dread and trouble. Europe is an armed camp. For those who are, or who may be, intrigued by the glamor of Fascism the spectale is presented of the Italian government's petty persecution of the wives and children of exiled anti-Fascists. They are made to suffer for the alleged crimes of their husbands. These wives and mothers do not make an easy living, cut off from their husbands. They are held prisoners of the government. They may not leave Italy.

There is violence and horror in Russia, where shooting of eminent men of science is charged in a strong protest just now signed by a number of distinguished Germans, which protest alleges that the facts "seem to prove that every scientific activity claiming even the most modest measure of intellectual freedom is becoming impossible in the Soviet Union."

There is terror in Poland. In Eastern Galica, whose population is overwhelmingly Ukranian, a reign of "pacification" by Polish troops goes merrily on, while at Warsaw the majority of the opponents of Marshal Pilsudski are either dead or are in prison. The "punitive" expeditions into Galicia have terrorized the inhabitants—gloggings, killings of inocent Ukranian peasant farmers are said to be the rule of the hour, the burning of private households a common pastime of brutal soldiery. In all Poland the politics of the people are influenced, it is said, not so much by persuasion as by intimidation. It is stated by an English authority that the arrests of opposition deputies have been continued recently until about 12 per cent of the members of the last parliament are now in prison on vague or unspecified charges.

Palestine is in turmoil. South America reeks and revels in revolution. In the United States is peace and swiftly coming prosperity, a steady crushing of "enthusiastic pessimism."

The lure of foreign propaganda should fall on deafened ears in our America, even where citizens have the right to complain of inept policies and disrupted economic conditions.—Cincinnatti Enquirer.

WORKS OF ULTIMATE NECESSITY

President Hoover's announcement that he will ask congress to grant an emergency appropriation to pay for projects already authorized by that body will be generally approved. The appropriation which Mr. Hoover requests will cover projects which would not otherwise have been started for one or two years more. Even to the strictest bookkeeper there can be nothing wasteful about this. In the words of the White House announcement, "the whole purpose is to provide further employment during forthcoming year upon works of ultimate necessity."

Much has already been done. A total of $500,000,000 will have been spent by the government at the close of the current fiscal year and the number of actual federal employees has been increased. On October 31 it was announced that there were 1,033,000 persons on the federal pay roll—an increase of 43,000 over the period nine moths before. As the personnel of the navy has been reduced by about 4,000 men, this will make an increase of 39,000 federal employees, wholly apart from the employment which will be more indirectly provided by the government through construction.

Importance has been properly attached to the construction of roads, dams and public buildings, but there are other items which, to use the White House's happy phrase, are of "ultimate necessity." One such item is the building up of the navy to the minimum established by the London treaty. The attainment of this treaty limit is estimated to cost in the neighborhood of $750,000,000. It should, of course, be accomplished before the next conference meets in 1936. Eighty per cent of the total spent on a warship goes to labor. Naval building is thus an expenditure which would relieve depression besides giving us an adequate national insurance and a proper diplomatic position in the future.

Luckily, the importance of building up the navy seems to be realized in Washington. Colonel Arthur Woods announces that contracts have just been let for an aircraft carrier and a cruiser amounting to $32,500,000. This is good beginning, which should be followed up by more appropriations and authorizations. The dispatches announce that Japan has just launched the Maya, the next to the last of the 10,000-ton cruisers which she is allowed to build. But where Japan has only one more to launch, the United States has ten! Clearly naval building has an important place on that program of "works of ultimate necessity" which the President is so wisely encouraging.—New York Tribune.

The financial experts on the metropolitan papers assure us that money is plentiful—but where is it?

Will some political shark please explain to us just now the significance of the vote in Maine last September?

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Now that the election is over and the American people are getting into their normal stride again, the next effort will of course be toward getting the country back on a prosperous basis again. This is not a matter for partisan politics but for general cooperation. Already there are some encouraging signs. Certain Democratic leaders, high in the inner circles of the party, have pledged to the administration their support of constructive legislation looking toward the restoration of normal conditions. The Republican leaders have accepted with thanks. It now remains to see just how well the two political organizations will pull together in Congress. Some political writers have professed to see in these latest maneuvers the first signs of an attempt to organize a bi-partisan political bloc in opposition to the bi-partisan insurgent bloc, or rather the Democratic-insurgent bloc of the present Congress. Already enough has transpired to indicate that there may be some interesting changes in the next Congress. Of course, nothing may come of all this. When the new Congress meets, we will be approaching the 1932 election and it is more than possible that the temptation then to play politics will be strong enough to overcome the cooperative instincts in both parties. For the present the more encouraging thought is that unless there is a special session of Congress the new legislative body will not meet for a year, and by that time the country will probably have turned the corner economically speaking. Most conservative leaders of both parties do not desire a special session after March 4, as they believe that it will be a disturbing influence. They recall with some shuddering—on the part of the Republican chiefs at least—what happened in the last special session of lamented memory.

In the meantime the best thing that can be done will be to hold the ship of state steady in the storm, and this is what the administration will doubtless try to do. After all the business interests of the country and the people in general must, to a great extent, work out their own salvation. Depression is like a fever and generally must run its course, although naturally efforts made to relieve it will be helpful if properly directed.

One thing political observers and economists are pretty well agreed and that is that if we are going to set our house in order with any degree of swiftness we will have to begin at home. The world is looking to the United States to lead the way to stability and progress. Americans, during the past few decades, have won for themselves a reputation for boundless optimism and for ability to accomplish things. We have the natural resources, the high standard of living and the potential productive and consumptive power. If there is to be general world prosperity again it will have to begin in the United States.

For that reason, in the opinion of most observers, our statesmen and our business leaders will do well if they confine the principal amount of their attention in the immediate future to Uncle Sam. If the unemployment problem can be solved in America, if our purchasing power can be restored and the gloom lifted, then our foreign trade will increase and European nations will benefit from our increased buying power. These problems will not be solved by our internationalists who are continually seeking to distract our attention to some far-off program of international political cooperation, but by hard headed American business men and statesmen who are trying to help the world by first restoring Uncle Sam to his accustomed place in the leadership toward world rehabilitation. Let us as Americans now think less of Europe and her problems of peace and war and more about the economic restoration of the United States.

NICARAGUA VOTES

Speaking of elections, it is not to be forgotten that the people of Nicaragua recently had an election too. The liberals won and there was no disorder. One reason there was no disorder lies in the fact that the election was held under the auspices of the American naval personnel and an American election commission. Having had experiences with elections controlled by Uncle Sam's marines, the people knew the election would be a fair one. So there was no anxiety and no dissatisfaction.

The election was a fair and free one. It was preceded by several weeks campaigning in which the people heard all the issues discussed by public speakers and there was no gun play. The people decided which candidates they wanted to support and then supported them with the ballot rather than the machete.

The liberal government, which will continue in office is committed to a policy of cooperation with the United States, and to the solution of economic diffieulties which Nicaragua faces along with the rest of the world.

The election result is virtually an endorsement of the American policy toward Nicaragua. American army officers and an American election commission handled the election by invitation of the people of Nicaragua who knew from their experiences with American military forces that everyone would get a square deal.

Since this satisfactory Nicaragua result, have you heard any exclamations of satisfaction from the so-called "liberal friends" of Latin-America? We should rather think not. Our "liberals" inside Congress and out, who a few months ago were vehemently denouncing our policy in Nicaragua and declaring that it was imperialistic and would forfeit every friend we have in Latin-America are now strangely silent. Not a word of commendation for the conduct of our representatives there nor for the quiet and satisfactory election. All of which leads to the conclusion that these "liberal" statesmen of ours are not so interested in benefitting Latin-America as they are in injuring the prestige of Uncle Sam among his neighbors to the South.

Well in some instances the defeated candidate has it on the fellow who wins the office. He doesn't have to make good on his campaign promises.

Another thing which ought to console the defeated candidate is that they can't put you in jail for losing an election, and the Senate never investigates you unless you win.

General Ludendorff says there will be another war in 1932 and Germany will be completely annihilated. He must be getintg ready to touch some Frenchman for a loan.

Republican national chairmen would get more accomplished if they didn't have to spend so much time denying reports that they are going to resign.

A contraption has been invented to milk cows by radio, but judging from the sour notes we get over ours every night we don't think this would be so good.

Russians say they are going to abolish money in the soviet country. Probably on the theory that there is nothing left to spend it for.

When a woman of uncertain years bobs her hair and buys a rouge pot it means that she is getting ready to deflate her age.

SHOULD WE DISARM?

In spite of all the pacifist propaganda to the effect that Uncle Sam must disarm as an example to the rest of the world, there are many sane minds among us who still remember the advice of Washington and who have learned from the stories of history what usually happens to the nation unprepared and disunited. Among these we can list, of course, Gen, John J. Pershing, who led the American forces in the World War and who knows whereof he speaks. General Pershing, as every one knows, is not a militaristic jingo but a cool-headed patriotic American.

"People say we should disarm." The leader of the American armies in the World War is quoted as saying. "America already is disarmed. Good men and good women tell us that we should throw away our armaments. We have very little to throw away."

Declaring no one hates war more than he does, he says:

"I pray fervently that there will be no more war. With all my soul I hate it. I have seen it in all its horrors. The great war was called a war to end war. Yet, in these dozen years, think how many disastrous wars have been fought and how many others seem to be in the process of making.

"We know that we will not provoke war. But what is there in history which authorizes us to conclude that some one else will not provoke one some of these days? It it not a question of whether or not we believe in war. It is a question of whether we shall defend this wonderful country of ours if some other nation which does believe in war should attack us."

The fact is that the United States is now the least armed nation in the world, taking into consideration its size, population and wealth. Our army though efficient and capable of rapid expansion in time of necessity, is little more than a national police force in size. Second and third rate countries in Europe have greater armies than we. Now if our ardent pacifists really want disarmament why do they not confide their efforts to Europe where their influence is needed. From their actions and their wild words we are led to believe that what they most desire is not to disarm the world but to embarrass Uncle Sam.

25 YEARS AGO

News Items as published in The Union and in The Banner, issues of November 23, 1905.

The people of Chilton county are in the most prosperous condition now that they have ever been in, and we are proud of it.

Will West, who escaped from jail here last December, has been returned by Sheriff Mogan.

C. C. Billingsley of southeast Chilton, sent The Banner a potato that weighed 5 pounds last Tuesday. Mr. Billingsley is 90 years old.

Mrs. Wilder Johnson, wife of J. H. Johnson, of Alpine community, died on November 10th.

The Wyatt and Robinson boys of Providence killed 52 squirrels and a number of ducks and geese on the river last week.

E. H. Mims attended the circus in Montgomery Wednesday.

Married this week:—Eli Jines and Miss Allie Jones, Joe Horton and Miss Josie Busby, W. A. Cox and Miss L. J. Jones, C. W. Scott and Miss Leila Langston, W. T. Veazey and Miss Maud Lenoir.

Bernard Shaw, knocking Shakespeare, says he was no sociologist. Neither was he a clown in shorts and long white whiskers, but what of it? He will be quoted when Shaw is as celebrated as Colley Cibber.

European politicians who think that the Democrati gains in Congress will result in our joining the League of Nations and cancelling the war debts are due for a rude awakening some of these days.

Well, if the Republicans didn't win such big vitories in the presidential years they woudn't have so far to slip back in the off-year elections.

Cheer up. Even if your side didn't win the election, remember that the next one is less than twenty-four months away, and they come around lots quicker than they did when we were younger.

The birth rate in the United States is said to be the lowest since 1915. And any free trader can tell you that the Smoot-Hawley tariff is to blame.

Civic leaders say that one way to help the average state's difficulties would be to abolish one branch of the legislature and have only one house in the law making body. That would remedy at least half of the difficulty.

Americans are not in favor of the cancellation of the European debts but they would like to see a moratorium declared on the wet and dry argument.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

My first observation this week was that it is entirely too cold to be comfortable on the corner. Therefore, I may say that all I know is what I heard "on the fly."

Those who attended the Baptist State Convention last week in Bessemer came home with more laurels for Chilton County's precaher products. According to Buford Lawrence, the two biggest sermons of the convention were delivered by two Chilton County boys, Fred Barnes and Greil Williams. Rev. Ezell, in his report on the convention Sunday, paid a very high tribute to the wonderful sermon of Rev. Barnes.

Folks in Chilton County are justly proud of Barnes and Williams. Fred Barnes is now pastor of the Clayton Street Baptist Church, in Montgomery. He was born and reared in the southwestern part of Chilton County. I understand he is a nephew of Mr. Shelby Barnes, one of my good friends, who lives at Stanton.

Greely Williams is one of the boys in the well-known Williams family, of Clanton. Beginning with Toy, who is a missionary in China, we come on down to Jerome, one of the biggest preachers in the Southern Baptist territory. Then comes Greely, a young man, who holds a good pastorate in Birmingham, and is destined to be a great power in the Baptist denomination. In between the three preachers, there are other boys who are bankers, electricians, and otherwise notable successes in business and life in general.

Leonard Williams, manager of the Alabama Power Company, in Clanton, is one of them. He is all right and a plum good one. The mother of the boys lives in Clanton. To see her and sense the sweetness of her beautiful disposition is all that is necessary to make one know where those boys got the inspiration that has carried them to success.

"Never, never has one forgotten his pure right-educating mother. On the blue mountains of our dim childhood, towards which we ever turn and look, stand the mothers who marked out to us from thence our life; the most blessed age must be forgotten ere we can forget the warmest heart."—Richter.

The church and the jail promises to be an interesting matter for us in the next few weeks. The folks of the Clanton Baptist Church are objecting to the location of the new county jail on the Potts property just across the alley from the Sunday School annex. It is true that a church and a jail makes an odd combination in more ways than one.

The surprise of the week in the business realm of Clanton is the selling of his hardware business by Mr. C. Fenn Jones. For thirty years Mr. Jones has been one of the pillars of business in our city. It will seem odd to the rest of us for him to get out of the way of his customary business engagements. And no doubt it will seem more odd to him as he begins to move about in the new atmosphere of freedom from his cares and responsibilities.

There is at least one reward that Fenn Jones has won while he has been in the hardware business in Clanton. He has stayed in one place with one business long enough for everybody to get used to designating has place as the Fenn Jones Corner. That will last a long time in the popular expression of our people.

I am thankful for another Thanksgiving Day, and for all the things for which the day is supposed to give expressions of thankfulness.

Uncle John Gore says he is going to hire the whole Posey Marcus family and put them to painting apples. The reason for this is the fact that people come to his fruit store one day and want red apples, and the next day they all want yellow apples. That will be all right if he can succeed in having them the right color on the right days.

And the Methodist Conference did take Ernest Childs away from us and send him to Troy. That was about as big a disappointment as the Bishop could have visited upon Clanton. I am not inclined to object to the action more than to say that I am sorry of it. Since I heard the Bishop preach at the church dedication here a few weeks ago, I would be willing ot accept his judgment on most anything.

I went to the fire at Bates Garage Saturday night. I was standing right at the spot where the fire hose exploded. Then I exploded, or I thought I had. The truth of the business is I got thoroughly wet, and believe me, I left the fire to the care of the other spectators and went home to a fire of the right sort.

Those who feel moved to express themselves about current topics of interest are directed to our column on this page under the heading "Voice of the People." This is a space we have set aside for our readers to express themselves. We want you to use it, consistently and to good purpose. If you have anything on your mind that is worth imparting to the public, write it and send it in.

Mr. Tobe Posey of Jemison offers a suggestion in "The Voice of the People" this week that is worthy of the consideration of our county officials. He is right when he says some of the people of the county need employment, and some of the roads in the county need the work. Why not put the two needs together and help everybody?

GOOD SALESMANSHIP

A family moved from the city to the suburbs and were told they ought to get a watch dog to guard the premises at night, so they bought the largest dog that was for sale in the kennels of a nearby dealer.

Shortly afterward, the house was entered by burglars who made a good haul while the dog slept. The house-holder went to the dealer and told him about it.

"Well, what you need now," said the dealer, "is a little dog to wake up the big one."

TRUSTING THE PEOPLE

A Scotch travelling salesman, held up in the Orkney Islands by a bad storm, telegraphed to his firm in Aberdeen: "Marooned here by storm. Wire instructions."

The reply came: "Start summer vacation as from yesterday."

A Noble Experiment—A young colored couple were sitting at the foot of the Statue of Liberty. Henry was holding Mandy's hand.

"Henry," said Mandy, "does you kno' why dey has such small lights on de Statue of Liberty?"

"I dunno," replied Henry, "unless its because de less light, de mo' liberty."

Well when we get a five day week it ought to increase the consumption of gasoline quite a bit.

W. L. SANDERS WRITES

To the voters of Chilton County:

I wish to extend to you many thanks for you hearty support in the November election. As a member of the Board of Education, I shall try to serve the people in a way that they will not regret giving me their support.

I hope to have the co-operation of the Board and the people that we will make it possible for every child in the County to get an education.—Yours as a servant, W. L. Sanders.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY

On Thursday night October 30th, the members of Walnut Creek church and surrounding community gave Rev. P. A. Lynch a surprise birthday party, celebrating his 47th birthday and presented to him a suit of clothes. Brother Lynch was very much surprised about this and seemed to be very grateful for the gift.

The young people enjoyed a number of games and afterwards everybody enjoyed the refreshments, consisting of cake and hot coffee. The cakes were furnished by the ladies, Mrs. Nora Zimmerman baked the birthday cake which was prettily decorated with candles.

Those contributing a dollar each for the suit are as follows: J. J. Johnson, J. A. Thompson, J. T. Thompson, G. N. Easterling, Cary Easterling, Sam Johnson, Josie Johnson, Bill Coggins, Reese Baker, R. F. Wyatt, C. D. Duke, R. E. Powell, Lester Powell and Mrs. Nora Zimmerman. The rest was paid by the Sunday School.

Those present were: J. J. Johnson and family, R. F. Wyatt, J. A. Thompson and wife, Joe Powell and family, C. D. Duke and family, Ed Minor and family, Lester Powell and family, R. F. Wyatt, Jewel Minor, Clarence Mims, Mae Mims, Tommie Easterling, Lelan and Ruby Easterling, Mr. and Mrs. John Baker, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Reese Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Coggins, Clyde Easterling, Elijah Easterling, Herman Easterling and Marion Easterling.

SKILLET BISCUIT

There are two kinds of camp cooking—that which one enjoys simply because one is ravenous from the fresh air and exercise; and that which wins favorite favor on its own merit and would be just as delectable served in the home. In the latter class undoubtedly falls skillet biscuit which is so quickly made that the most impatient appetite can wait upon it and so simple that even the amateur camp cook can achieve success. Another point in its favor is the fewness of the ingredients and utensils required.

Girls love to make "skillet biscuits" with a self-rising flour when out camping. It's fun to "flop" them. It's also fun to make them with a prepared flour which is so easily handled out of doors.

Here's all you need: three cupfuls self-rising flour (soft wheat flour that has the baking powder and salt already properly added and blended), three tablespoonfuls of fat and seven-eighths of a cupful of milk. If dried, evaporated or condensed milk is used in place of fresh, dilute according to the directions on the can until you have the equivalent of seven-eighths cupful of whole milk.

First mix the fat and flour thoroughly either by cutting or rubbing. Then add the milk and mix quickly. Roll or cut, of if that is not convenient, simply drop by the spoonful on a hot, greased skillet. When brown on one side flop the biscuits and brown on the other. They must cook quickly. This recipe will make 24 biscuits, so let your appetites be your judge as to how many batches you're going to need.

Self rising flour is the ideal flour for camping purposes. Time is saved because the baking powder and salt are already added in proper proportions at the mill.

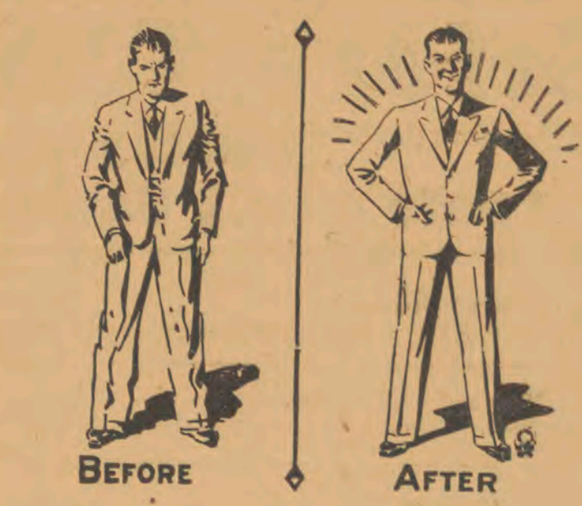
CEDAR GROVE

Last Sunday was regular preaching at this place. We are glad that we are to have Bro. Lynch with us another year. He preached a very interesting sermon last Sunday a.m. Sunday School was very interesting also.

The Liberty Hill-Cedar Grove Singing Society met Sunday afternoon. They elected new officers. They are as follows: Mr. J. W. Lowery, president; Hiram Littlejohn, vice-president; Mrs. Lela Thornton, secretary; Bro. D. T. Melton, chaplain.



Directors for the afternoon were: Prof. J. W. Lowery, D. T. Melton, Zackie Lowery and Gresham Lowery. Organists, Mrs. Lela Thornton, and Miss Gertie Lee Lowery. We hope that every new officer and all the members will try to do his or her part toward making the society what it should be through the coming year. This singing society has been invited to Thorsby next Sunday afternoon. We hope that as any as can will go. We have been having some visitors lately and lets pay those visits back and show them how we appreciate them coming. Meet with us the second Sunday afternoon in December at Liberty Hill and help us.

Rev. J. Robert Bean was in Clanton Saturday night and Sunday, to fill his appointments at Friendship. He preached at Friendship Sunday morning and Sunday evening, both times to a nice and attentive audience. Rev. Bean will announce his subjects in The Union-Banner every week before he preaches at Friendship on the fourth Sunday in each month.

Senator Borah is still in favor of the recognition of Soviet Russia, but the obstacle is that the American people already recognize the bolshevists too well.

. . . SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING

By GRACE VIALL GRAY

Self-Rising Flour a Time-Saver to Woman in Kitchen

Within the last few years there has been a steady, ever-increasing interest in solving homemakers' problems. Anything that would cut the working time in the kitchen has met with great favor. All sorts of modern machines, such as the power washing machine, the pressure cooker, the dishwasher and the vacuum cleaner are now recognized equipment for the modern home.

In the matter of foods, considerable progress has been made to lighten woman's work. Possibly no one food material has contributed to greater efficiency in cooking than self-rising flour. There is no doubt but that self-rising flour is a great time saver in cooking. For example, laboratory experiments prove that a cake calling for three cupfuls of flour can be mixed with self-rising flour in eight minutes against the fifteen minutes required for the same cake made of plain flour.

Self-rising flour makes the mixing and baking of biscuits a simple matter. Hot breads are always welcome on the table and with this efficiency flour, containing the leavening agent and salt properly blended in the right proportions with Soft Wheat, hot biscuits can appear frequently on breakfast, luncheon, or dinner tables.

Of course the explanation for this is as follows: Self-rising flour is sifted once only, there is no baking powder to measure, the eggs are added unbeaten, and the cake is mixed as quickly and gently as possible.

In addition to being a time saver, self-rising flour is dependable and this one feature, dependability, is worth its weight in gold to homemakers. To know that each day her products will be perfect and always the same is a godsend to every one of us who prepare three meals a day, 365 days each year.

In self-rising flour, a trained chemist has prepared the proper proportion of leavening, which is baking powder, and flour in a chemical laboratory, with the greatest of accuracy and with accurate weights and measures.

So the chemist in giving us flour blended with baking powder in the right proportion assures us of that accuracy that we cannot always get. In using self-rising flour, sift flour before measuring. Never add soda or baking powder.

The following recipes are delicious, and illustrates the efficiency of self-rising flour:

Drop Cookies (50 Cookies).

4 cups sifted self-rising flour
¾ cut fat
¾ cup milk
2 eggs
1½ cups sugar
3 tsp. flavoring

Place fat in a warm place until it becomes soft, though not melted. Combine with sugar. Stir in eggs. Beat well. Add alternately the flour and milk. Add flavoring. Drop small portions of the mixture on a greased baking sheet and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.).

Doughnuts (40 Doughnuts).

4½ cups sifted self-rising flour
1 cup milk
1 tbsp. melted fat
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ tsp. cinnamon
⅛ tsp. nutmeg

Combine melted fat and sugar. Stir in eggs. Add flour and milk alternately; add flavorings. Roll out the dough about one-third inch thick without handling it any more than necessary. Cut out the doughnuts and fry in deep fat hot enough to make a doughnut rise to the surface quickly and to brown each side in about one minute (about 375 degrees F.).

Before Age of Baths

In the days of Cromwell public bathing, no matter how heavily attired the bathers were, was strictly forbidden and our Puritan forefathers brought this rule over to New England with them, so it is very likely that on warm days 300 years ago what bathers might be found on the beaches of Massachusetts were Indians, with, perhaps, an occasional backsliding Puritan.

Another Puritan law was that if a person must bathe, it should be in a dark room, with no mirrors, alone, and at night.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

The local Boy Scouts met last Thursday at six o'clock for a troop meeting. The roll was called and then we began on our first aid study. The two Patrol leaders, Dan Smith and Joe Moore, showed their patrols the bandages used in first aid. When we were through praticing first aid we played a few games. In the first game the Scoutmaster spelled different names of articles using the deaf and dumb sign language with his hands, and after finishing the spelling of one word we were supposed to go and touch the article which was somewhere in the room. The Wolf Patrol played against the Kangaroo Patrol in this contest and won out.

After this game we played another game called "Tractor." This game could be played among any four people. Two acting as horses and two acting as jockeys, and when each horse with his jockey had had their turn in this game, we closed up and went home.

There will be no Troop meeting Thursday night, November 27th, on account of the absence of our Scoutmaster, Mr. H. T. Walker.—Dan Smith, reporter.

Congress Faces Big Legislative Program

Solons Divided In Two Distinct Camps Over Possibility Of Extra Session

Washington, Dec. 1. — Congress, which met today, found itself confronted with one of the heaviest legislative programs that it has had in recent years and with just seven legislative days in which to dispose of it.

It will find itself divided into two distinct camps, one of which is determined to avoid a special session of congress, the other, equally determined that certain controversial legislation must pass now or at a spring session of the seventy-second congress.

It will find members of each of its major parties entirely unable to agree on a program for either the short session or the sessions that may follow it.

In this situation, the annual appropriation bills will be the central point about which many controversies will revolve. Each department of government must be provided with funds for the fiscal year beginning next July 1. If the bills are not all passed when the short session ends March 4, a special session will be necessary.

And before the appropriation bills are passed, certain other matters must be decided.

Request will be made for funds probably totaling $60,000,000 to be used in seed loans and other extensions of credit for farmers suffering from the drouth after effects. Extradinary expenditures for immediate construction of public buildings, flood control projects, and other public works will be proposed as a measure of unemployment relief. Appropriations will be made for beginning river and harbor work authorized at the last session, and funds for some of the projects will meet with opposition.

First, however, on the program for the senate will be the report of its special committee to investigate campaign expenditures of senatorial candidates. This is a privileged matter taking precedence over all others.

Next the senate will consider confirmation of presidential appointments. Thirty of these are pending, and more than a third of them will probably cause opposition and debate on the floor.

When the senate reaches its regular order of business, it will find the house bill for regulation of interstate bus lines first on its list. The senate debated this matter at length last spring but without agreement.

The house will consider tax reduction early in its program, debating the recommendation President Hoover will make as to discontinuing last year's temporary reduction. It will discuss also, the matter of continuing to retire the war debt at the present rate, or diverting some of the funds to emergency needs caused by falling revenues, and increased expenditures. In this same connection it will discuss issuance of bonds against the allied war debt to enable payment by the government of cash bonuses at once to former service men.

The four most controversial matters, upon which Senator Norris will insist on action at the short session are Muscle Shoals, the lame duck amendment, Wagner unemployment bills, and the anti-injunction bill.

Muscle Shoals is still in the conference committee which was deadlocked last spring by Rep. B. Carrol Reece, since defeated for re-election.

The senate has passed the Norris lame duck amendment but the house committee has reported a different bill and a parliamentary tangle is threatened.

One Wagner unemployment bill is in conference committee, the other waits action in the house judiciary committee. The anti-injunction bill is on the senate calendar with an adverse committee report, but with strong support on the senate floor.

Reapportionment will be considered at this session and will probably cause the bitterest fight of all. Unless congress, at this session, alters the law passed in 1928, the apportionment announced by President Hoover becomes effective. Southerners, middlewesterners and other drys will fight to prevent this since wet urban districts gain under the new apportionment.

Farm prices, still low, will force discussion of the federal farm board, its policies, and the act which created it.

Prohibition will come before both houses in connection with appropriations, the Sheppard purchase bill, and reapportionment. Tariff debate may be renewed when the tariff commission reports on some of the schedules congress asked it to investigate. Immigration is certain to bob up with Rep. John C. Box, now a lame duck, making a last effort to get through his quota bill for Mexicans, and with the administration's recess plan for cutting down European immigration for debate.

The power issue will come before congress when new federal power commisioners are discussed for confirmation, with Muscle Shoals, and with consideration of the Couzens bill for federal regulation of interstate power transactions.

YOUNG AUTAUGA MAN KILLED IN OKLAHOMA BANK ROBBERY

The remains of Jimmie D. Jackson were buried at Big Springs in Autauga County, near Haynes, Wednesday afternoon of last week. Rev. Hill and Rev. Mitchell conducted the funeral services.

Jimmie D. Jackson was 22 years old and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Jackson of Haynes. R. L. Jackson read in a Birmingham paper the copy of a telegram from Bartlesville, Oklahoma, stating that a young man by the name of Jim Jackson from somewhere in Alabama had been shot and killed in an attepted bank raid in that town. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson knew that their son was somewhere in the West, so they thought that probably it was their son. Mr. Jackson and son, George, went to Bartlesville and identified the young man as being the missing member of their family. So the body was shipped back home and arrived at Haynes Tuesday.

Mr. Jackson has the information that his son and another man were employed as secret service men, and these two had succeeded in trapping a gang of bank robbers just before they had taken the money from a Bartlesville bank. It seems that the leader of the gang, knowing that the two men had trapped him and his colleagues, opened fire on them, killing young Jackson and injuring the other detective.

The report that young Jackson was a member of the bandit gang cannot be substantiated, but on the other hand, the information is straight that his part in the affair was the apprehension of the bandits.

Jimmie D. Jackson had been out in the West for six years, during which time he has visited most of the large cities of that section. He is survived by his father, three brothers and one sister.

MRS. BOB BAKER IS WITH THE NEW STORE HERE

Mrs. Bob Baker, who for some time has been connected with the Chicago Sales Company of Clanton, announces that she will be with the Falkenberry Cash Store when that place opens for business next Friday morning.

The many friends of Mrs. Baker are invited to come to see her at Falkenberry's. The new store will be located in the same building recently vacated by the Capitol Dry Goods Company.

FOOTBALL BANQUET AT BAPTIST CHURCH FRIDAY NIGHT

Expression of Good Will For Boys Who Made Up High School Team This Year

One of the big events, in fact the crowning glory, that has been looked forward to during the present football season, is the promised banquet for the boys when the season was ended. This dream will be realized Friday night at seven o'clock when about fifty-three plates will be filled with something good to eat, and set before the twenty-five boys who made up our team this year.

Each boy is to bring his girl, his father and mother also, if he desires. All the teachers are invited.

It was first planned to carry this program out by the Home Economics Department of the High School. But the equipment being inadequate, an arrangement was made to have it at the Baptist Church.

The cost of the banquet will be borne by the Athletic Association of the High School. A splendid program will be carried out, and letters awarded at this meeting.

NEGRO KILLED IN WRECK HERE

Sterling Oliver, negro, age 24, of Wetumpka, was killed when a truck he was driving wrecked at South Clanton Monday night. Three trucks of Alabama Mills Company were enroute here with loads of looms from the Dadeville Mill. Oliver, with his truck was ahead of the other two. When he came over the little hill at South Clanton, he apparently missed the road and went into the ditch. The truck struck a pole and was badly demolished. The load of machinery was completely wrecked, entailing a damage of about two thousand dollars.

The negro's skull was fractured. He lived at Wetumpka where he was a truck driver for Alabama Mills Company.

These twenty-eight girls have been divided into three patrols, and have the following leaders and assistants: Nell Neighbors, Frances Resberry, assistants; Pauline Plyler, Elizabeth McSwain, assistant; and Margaret Jones, Dixie Johnson, assistant.

KIWANIS CLUB HONORS CHILDS

Resolution Commends Pastor For His Good Offices In This Community

With many expressions of profound sorrow, the Kiwanis Club of Clanton, on last Wednesday, extended the parting hand to Rev. Ernest Childs, Secretary, and one of the most active members of the Club. The voice of the Club was expressed in the following resolution:

Whereas, we feel the keenest disappointment that Rev. Ernest Childs is to be removed from our city, and whereas, Rev. Childs has been a most worthy blessing to our community in every capacity in which he has found opportunity to serve, and whereas, we regard his going away as a loss that we fear can not be fully recompensed, therefore, be it resolved,

1. That the Kiwanis Club of Clanton, express our genuine sorrow and regret that he is to be taken away from us.

2. That we express to Rev. Childs our appreciation for his good works in this community. It is a rare thing to find in a man such a combination of virtues as we have been permitted to see and enjoy in our associations with Ernest Childs. While he has stood in his place as God's messenger to his people in this field, he has shed a wonderful influence for good upon every phase of our community's welfare. His life, his ideal, his purposes, his accomplishments, have been an inspiration to men; a great force by which men have been drawn closer to God and made more interested in useful and righteous living.

3. That we, therefore, acknowledge our thankfulness to God that it has been our blessed privilege to have Ernest Childs with us for these two years. He has been to us one of God's refreshing fountains from which we might drink when weary, continue our journey with hearts and souls reconsecrated to good things.

4. That we especially appreciate the faithful and diligent manner in which he has served as a member and as secretary of our Club. He has demonstrated and imparted to us the kind of Kiwanis spirit and ideals that have been the power to move the hearts of hundreds of thousands of men to greater service and greater usefulness.

5. That we pray for his continued growth in grace and in service to humanity. May he ever keep close to God.

6. That we assure him here and now that wherever he may go, he carries with him the purest love of every heart among us.

TRULL SMITH MARRIED

The Union-Banner has come in possession of the information that Mr. Trull Smith of Haynes, Autauga County, got married on the night of November 26th. We apologize for the fact that we could not learn the last name of his bride, but her first name is Nan. The Union-Banner and the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Smith in Chilton County extend congratulations.

Jail Building Question Here Is Still Unsettled

Vigorous Opposition to Proposed Location Is Expressed By Clanton Baptist Church

At the meeting of the Commissioners Court Monday, the Court gave a hearing to representatives of the Clanton Baptist Church, who expressed the opposition of the church to the proposed location of the new jail on the Potts property across the alley from the Sunday School Annex of the church.

At a previous conference between Judge Reynolds and the Board of Deacons, Pastor S. J. Ezell stated that the church would take the Potts property off the hands of the county at a profit of fourteen hundred dollars rather than have the jail built there.

At a hearing Monday the Commissioners Court made an order stating that the court would let the church have the property for five thousand dollars and not use it for building a jail. Representatives of the church asked for a little more time, and it is already agreed by the court that Friday of this week should be set for the day for finally settling what should be done with the property.

PAY YOUR CENTRAL FEE BY SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6

At the telephone meeting at the court house last Saturday afternoon it was decided by the board of directors that the central could be operated the coming year, provided those who have promised to pay central fee will pay and a few more on the side could be persuaded to come across.

So, next Saturday, December 6th, was set as the last day on which to pay central fees. You may pay any time between now and then at The Union-Banner office. Of course, you pay with the understanding that if the central does not begin operation your money will be refunded.

The way to get telephone service for the coming year may be summed up in just a few words: Put your line in shape to the corporate limits of Clanton, pay up your fees, and demand the board of directors service; and you will get it.

Every single phoneholder on Line 47 has paid his fee, and they are putting their line in shape. Several other lines are doing the same. This is the way to go at it; if all lines will do this the company can and will give service during the coming year. The fee is only $2.50, and everyone can afford to pay this.

DR. HENRY M. EDMONDS ACCEPTS STATE CHAIRMANSHIP OF FOUNDATION

Announcement is made by Dr. J. Calvitt Clarke, national secretary of the Golden Rule Foundation of the nomination and acceptance by Rev. Henry M. Edmonds D. D., pastor of Independent Church, Birmingham, of the state chairmanship of the organization in Alabama.

In comenting upon his appointment Dr. Clarke stated, "Mr. Edmonds was chosen because of his deep interest in social welfare especilly that pertaining to needy children and because he is so generously known and loved throughout the state by people of all creeds and beliefs." The Golden Foundation feels greatly honored at his acceptance.

The Foundation is an international community chest operating where local chests do not function. During the past twelve months it has made grants in aid to fifty-three different child welfare and relief agencies scattered in twenty different countries including the United States.

The Foundation sponsors the observance of International Golden Rule Sunday and Week, December 7th to 14th.

According to Dr. Edmonds, the urgency of supporting this excellent philanthropy is greater this year than ever.

Great appalling needs exist. At home unemployment, in China 5,000 children dying daily of hunger, in Porto Rico, according to Governor Roosevelt'es statement, "More children in peril of death from malnutrition and tuberculosis than anywhere else under the American Flag." Half of all babies born in the rural districts of Mexico die at birth. Four hundred and eighty neglected children died of exposure in the migrant labor camps in one small area in Colorado and Wyoming last fall.

The national offices of the Foundation are, Lincoln Building, New York. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman is the national president.

Samuel Martin, who is attending school in Cincinnatti, Ohio, spent a few days last week at home in Clanton with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Mell Martin.

REPRESENTATIVE SINGING AT THORSBY BAPTIST CHURCH

Even though the weather looked threatening, a very good singing was held at Thorsby Baptist Church last Sunday afternoon. A good portion of all four of the singing societies of the county were in attendance, and a dozen or more communities had representatives there. So it might be called a county singing convention.

Mr. Gresham Lowery presided, and besides half a dozen numbers by the Clanton Quartet, the following directors made up the program: T. E. Wyatt, Martin of Providence, E. L. and A. H. Glasscock, O. L. Devaughn, E. M. Wilson, Dr. J. B. Williams, Akins Collins, W. L. Sanders, Archie Devaughn, Jessie Jones, D. T. Melton, Houston Melton, Rev. M. Lockhart.

This was one of the best afternoon singings ever held in Chilton County. It is hoped that a similar one will be held somewhere in the county every fifth Sunday.

GARAGE BURNED SUNDAY NIGHT

Grover's Garage, owned by Grover Looney, negro, was destroyed by fire Sunday night. The building, owned by Dr. J. P. Hayes, was located on the Highway south of the J. C. Jones residence.

THANKS FROM ORPHANS HOME

Rev. S. J. Ezell, pastor of Clanton Baptist Church, has received from Dr. J. O. Colley, superintendent of the Orphans Home at Troy, a letter expressing the thanks of those at the home for the car load of things sent from the Unity and Chilton Associations.

Dr. Colley says: "We wish to thank all the good people of Chilton County and Unity Associations for the many things sent us last week. These have been stored away and will mean so much to us from time to time. You have sent just the things we need at the time most needed. Words fail to express our real appreciation for every donation. Please thank all the people for us."

The statement of Dr. Colley is published at the request of Dr. Ezell, in order that everybody may see the expression of thanks from the Home.

MAN KILLED IN WRECK NORTH OF CALERA

A man by the name of King, from Birmingham, was killed instantly Tuesday morning in an automobile wreck at Dad's place just north of Calera, on the Birmingham Highway. In the car with Mr. King were Mr. and Mrs. Pinton. They were seriously hurt. Martin's ambulance brought them back to Clanton. The three, Mr. King and Mr. and Mrs. Pinton were going to Montgomery in Mr. King's car.

The people in the other car were from Columbiana, we understand, but we were unable to learn their names.

R. J. SUMNER IS HURT IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Returning from Birmingham last Thursday night, R. J. Sumner, prominent business man of Clanton, was seriously hurt when his automobile collided with another machine just south of Thorsby.

It is reported that Mr. Sumner was alone in his own car and going rather fast when his machine struck the other car, which is said to have been standing still in the road.

Mr. Sumner was rendered unconscious by the injuries he sustained. His car was completely demolished, and caught on fire and practically burned up. The other car, a new Chrysler, was seriously damaged.

Mr. Sumner was brought to the hospital in Clanton by Rufus Brown who happened along at the time of the accident. He is reported to be recovering satisfactorily.

SEVERAL BOYS MIXED UP IN BAD WRECK ABOVE HERE

Last Saturday night two Ford cars tied up in a life and death grapple on the highway near Reynold's swimming pool. The result was almost complete extinction of two flivvers of somewhat ancient vintage, and the placing of about half a dozen of the boys in the hospital. Martin's ambulance brought them in.

It is reported that the following boys were in the wreck: Pink Whatley, Clyde Parker, Ellis Foshee, a Gentry boy, and another boy whose name was not learned, all from the neighborhood of Thorsby. These were coming south along the highway. In the other car going north were Dewey Robinson and Auburn Jones, from Clanton.

It was given out from the hospital that Robinson and Whatley were in a serious condition.

Mr. Dalton Bice of Alverson Business College, Birmingham, spent the past week end with relatives here.

New Store Opens In Clanton Friday

Falkenberry Cash Store At Place Recently Vacated By The Capitol Dry Goods Co.

Mr. H. C. Falkenberry, of Selma, has come to Clanton to enter business. Tomorrow, Friday, he will open the Falkenberry Cash Store, at the place recently vacated by the Capitol Dry Goods Company. His business will include a full line of dry goods and ready to wear.

For the past 15 years Mr. Falkenberry has been connected with the Southern Clothing and Notions Company, a well-known wholesale dry goods house in Selma. He was a member of this firm, and travelling representative. "I made up my mind to get off the road and settle down in business for myself," said Mr. Falkenberry, "and I chose Clanton as a location out of a number of Alabama towns which I investigated. I am coming here to run a business. I hope to make a living and believe that I will, because I am going to offer the people good merchandise at the right price, and will treat them right when they trade with me."

Mr. Falkenberry expects to bring his family here to live about the first of the year. Besides Mr. and Mrs. Falkenberry, the family includes a daughter sixteen years of age, and two small boys.

The opening sale of the Falkenberry Cash Store will begin Friday morning at eight o'clock. Announcement of this sale has been made by advertising matter distributed all over Chilton County. Those who trade in Clanton will be received with a cordial welcome at this new store.

DAMAGE DONE BY FIRE AT CALERA SATURDAY NIGHT

Considerable damage was done at Calera last Saturday night when fire destroyed Mr. Wade's picture show and a garage in the same building. A pressing shop in the adjoining building was also destroyed.

The buildings were located in the block across the street and directly south of the railway station.

It is thought that the fire started from a defective stove flue in the picture show building.

FAREWELL GIVEN TO REV. CHILDS SUNDAY

A union service was held at the Clanton Methodist Church last Sunday night, when a large congregation of all denominations came together to say farewell to Rev. Ernest Childs and family, who go to Troy.

A short message was delivered by Rev. Childs, after which Rev. Ezell of the Baptist Church made extensive remarks. In response to a request from Rev. Ezell, C. E. Stapp and W. M. Wyatt spoke briefly of the high esteem in which Rev. Childs is held by the citizenship of Clanton.

The meeting last Sunday night emphasized the universal regret which exists over the departure of Rev. Childs and his family from Clanton. Everybody is sorry to have to give them up.

ROCKETT HARDWARE IS NOW IN OPERATION

Concerning their plans, Mr. Rockett states that they will continue for the present to operate the Clanton Building Supply Co., as heretofore, together with the hardware store at the Jones location. "We may decide to combine the two places in a few months," he said, "but we will not make definite plans for that just now."

Felt Bad After Eating

"BEFORE I started taking Black-Draught, three years ago, my health was very bad," writes Mrs. C. C. Carson, 945 Concord St., Beaumont, Texas. "I suffered constantly from constipation. I had headache when I got up in the morning, and I felt dull and sluggish. I hardly ate a meal that my food agreed with me. Frequently I would have gas on my stomach, and felt awful.

"I read about Black-Draught, and I thought it might help me. After I had taken it a little while, I felt much better. It relieves constipation. I keep it on hand so when I need a laxative I will have it. In the three years I have been taking it, I have never found anything as good for constipation."

MRS. F. M. MOORE PASSES

On Tuesday, November 25th, 1930, Mrs. F. M. Moore passed to her home over the river. She was laid to rest at Alpine Baptist Church the following day. She was sick with cold and contracted pneumonia, which caused her death. All was done that loving hands, friends and doctors could do, but the Lord had need of her and called her home.

Mrs. Moore was better known to all the people in her community as Aunt Nannie. She was a kind loving wife, mother, friend and neighbor. She made her home a social place where the young people loved to go, as well as the old. For many years before the consolidation of the public schools her home was the home of the Alpine teachers. The writer boarded with her three years, not only myself, but every other teacher that boarded with her dearly loved her. I have never seen her angry at any time or on any occasion. She wore a smile all the time and greeted each one with a smile.

This good woman was ever ready to visit the sick and lend a helping hand to do what was needed. It was her happiest hours when doing deeds of kindness for others.

Mrs. Moore married two brothers, and to the first union she leaves four sons, Frank, Houston, Jonh and Trell also many grand children and many great grand children.

Aunt Nannie was a great lover of music and this song I heard her sing many times while her son, John, played it on the violin:

What a fellow-ship, what a joy divine,
Leaning on the everlasting arms,
What a blessedness, what a peace is mine,
Leaning on the verlasting arms.
Leaning, Leaning safe and secure from all alarm.
Leaning, Leaning, Leaning on the everlasting arm.

Loved ones weep not for the Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord.
Not now but in the coming years,
It may be in the better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears,
And there sometimes we will understand.

A loving friend.—Mrs. Charlie C. Gay.

Statement of Commissioners Relative To Location of the New Jail

The following statement was given out Wednesday morning from the office of Judge Reynolds, being a copy of the order which was passed by the Commissioners Court relative to the question of the proposed location of the new county jail on the Potts property, and the opposition of the Clanton Baptist Church to the said proposed location:

"Owing to the protest of the Baptist church and a petition signed by 144 people requesting the county not to locate a jail on the Potts property adjoining the courthouse, the Commissioners Court does not want to hurt or injure the Baptist church. The first time they heard of any protest was December the first. However, complaint had been made to the Judge of Probate a few days before and the court had been very open in locating a jail on the above named property. Several weeks ago we had a public meeting to which the public had been invited to look over said lot and select a location for a new jail, and not a single protest was made to the court. Besides the publicity given to this matter by the Commissioners court, The Union-Banner carried an article about the first of November referring to the purchase of this lot by the county to build a new jail on. The architect had been selected. The Court had held several meetings with him and Dr. Glenn Andrews, state jail inspector, and had adopted plans for said jail.

"To our surprise several men signed a petition asking the county not to build a jail on this property after they had met with the court and helped the court locate the place on the Potts property to put the new jail.

"Now we are surprised at the wording of the petition signed by 144 people stating that the Baptist Church sold their old church property near the old jail to get away from the noise and fuss of the jail. As we remember the record in this matter the Baptist Church arranged to purchase the lof in front of the court house, occupied by the Woco Pep Station, for $1,500, and when the property was put up and sold a committee representing the Baptist Church run this property up to $3,100.00 and the property was sold to Dr. Gowan. Dr. Gowan buying this lot was the only reason we ever heard for the Baptists not building back near the jail.

"The committee representing the church having offered the county $5,000 for the Potts property, and in view of the fact that the county does not want any roperty that it can not control, and not wanting to dissatisfy the church in the least, it be and is hereby ordered and agreed by the Court that if the Baptist Church will pay the county $5,000 for the Potts lot on or before Saturday, December 6th, at 1:30 P. M., the county will deed them said property."

This order and statement of the Commissiioners Court was dated December 2, 1930.

"Yes," answered Bobby, "all but the music."—Liberty.

COURT DECIDES MT. PLEASANT SCHOOL SUIT

The Circuit Court of Chilton County this week rendered a judgment against the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland for the payment of certain matters in litigation in connection with a bond of Ed F. Emerson, contractor for the building of Mt. Pleasant School.

The history of the case briefly stated is as follows: Emerson contracted to erect the building. He was bonded by the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland. Hardware was bought from Farmers Hardware Co., of Clanton. Heaters were bought from Alabama School Supply Co. Brick were bought from the Watkins Brick Co., of Birmingham. A labor bill was incurred by Monroe Foshee.

Emerson left the job unfinished, and the bonding company took charge of the job and completed it. When completed the bonding company refused to pay the claims of the above named parties. Suits were entered by them to recover payment for materials used in the building by Emerson. The court rendered judgment in favor of the plaintiffs.

This decision of the court brings to a settlement the affairs of the Mt. Pleasant School in so far as the Emerson contract applies.

PUBLIC ROAD WORK

The following order was passed by the Commissioners Court December the 1st, 1930. Mr. A. P. Vinson was not present in Court.

It was ordered by the Commissioners Court that each road overseer be allowed $2 per day, all road hands, $1.00 per day, two-horse team and driver, $3.00 per day, one mule and one hand to drive road scrape, $2.00 per day and all trucks not over $6.00 per day.

The Commissioners Court has been appealed to help relieve the financial distress situation that exists by furnishing employment to people out of a job that have nothing to live on. It is the purpose of the Commissioners Court for the overseer to employ hands to work on the public road who are in needy circumstances and who live close to the work to be done. Each commissioner in his respective district be and is hereby ordered to look over his district and to instruct the overseer the work to be done in their district.

We urge all people who are in needy circumstances and want work to apply at once to the Commissioner in their respective district.

This the 2nd day of December, 1930.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.
J. P. Bean,
T. A. Maddox,
J. L. Burnett,

SEES BRIGHTER DAYS FOR ALERT DAIRYMEN

Auburn, Ala., Dec 1.—A relatively bright future for dairymen is foreseen by F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. "On the whole we may say that dairying is on a profitable basis and will continue to be so for those who keep high-producing cows that are fed on plenty of home-grown feeds," he said, and added that he expects the dairy industry to continue its growth in Alabama.

Though it has been sorely tried during the past year, the dairy industry has weathered the storm and is now in a more favorable position than almost any branch of agriculture, he continued.

He mentioned seven factors that have been resposible for what he calls the "remarkable comeback" of dairying. They are a spirit of confidence due to better price outlook, the elimination of poor producers, the use of more production-bred sires, more efficient methods of feeding, housing, sanitation, and care, increased efforts to promote consumption, lower prices which resulted in decreasing the surplus, and greater pride in the industry.

Speaking of prices he said that the low figures of last winter caused demoralization but that now since definite and effective efforts at recovery have been made, even though the price has not returned to its former level, there is a beter morale among producers. They have greater confidence, he declared.

In eliminating poor producers the dairy herd improvement associations have played a big part. Thousands of low producing cows have been eliminated from herds, according to reports received from the associations.

FIFTEEN CLUBSTERS MAKE 4-H CONGRESS

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 1.—For high achievement as members of Alabama 4-H clubs, six girls and nine boys were given free trips to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, November 29 to December 5. They were accompanied to Chicago by T. A. Sims and Miss Bess Fleming, specialists in 4-H club work.

The girls who made the trip were Alice Knight of Walker County, style review winners; Rebecca Rauschenberg of Franklin County, health contest winner; Adelle Hughes of Dallas County, winner of trip given by the L. & N. Railroad Co. for general excellence in club work; Cele Fell of Baldwin County, winner in demonstration in judging canned products at Montgomery fair; Julia Helms of Dale County, winner in demonstration in judging pictures at Montgomery fair; and Albena Pierce of Macon County, winner in Kerr canning contest at Montgomery fair.

The boys were Hollis Murray of Macon County, Henry Shaddix, of Talladega, Louis Wilson of Butler, Clyde Gammon of Cullman, Herman Youngblood of Covington, Clifton Ryland of Conecuh, Roy Fowler of Marion, Ted Calhoun of Etowah, and Daniel Kaylor of Cleburne.

Murray was high individual in judging all clases of livestock at the Birmingham fair, and Shaddix was high individual in judging all classes of livestock at the Montgomery fair. Wilson had the best 4-H cotton exhibit at the Montgomery fair. Gammon made the highest yield of cotton of any club boy of north Alabama. Youngblood made the highest yield of cotton of any club boy of southeast Alabama, and Ryland made the highest yield of cotton of any club boy of southwest Alabama. Fowler won the trip on general excellence in club work. Calhoun had the best 4-H cotton exhibit at the Birmingham fair and Kaylor had the best 4-H corn exhibit at the Birmingham fair.

The trips are being financed by the Birmingham and Montgomery fair association, the L. & N. Railroad, the Chilean Nitrate of Soda Educational Bureau, the Illinois Central Railroad, and the Kerr Glass Co., and other contributors.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

California here we come

On Thanksgiving Day Alabama's Crimson Tide removed the last barrier between it and the mythical Southern Conference championship, by beating Georgia 13 to 0.

Alabama played under wraps and Scouts from Washington State carried back only 3 different plays to work on.

Twenty nine thousand people thrilled to the spectacular runs by Campbell, Cain, Suther and company. I wonder if you were one of the 29,000.

It seems as though Clanton was there by a large majority, Sumners, Dewey Rockett, Bob Alred, Paul Cox, Houston Nivens, Lande, S. A. Jones, Buck Hart, Red Wagoner, Floris Harris, and many others.

Early Friday morning Dr. Denny received a wire from the Rose Bowl Committee. He accepted and the cry went up over the campus, "California, here we come."

Coach Wade and Neeley scouted the Washington State-Villanora engagement at Phillidelphia Saturday.

Alabama was glad to see that Auburn finally broke into the winning column again. Lets go Auburn.

It is only three weeks now till Christmas vacation starts and it is home again for a few days.

A few of Alabama's statistics follow:

Alabama 248	Opponents 13
Alabama won 9	Lost 0

Less than two first downs made against Alabama per game. Alabama has averaged over four touchdowns per game. Only two touchdowns made against Alabama and that was by passes. Alabama's line averages 196 and the backfield averages 178.

Head Coach, Wallace Wade, assistant coaches, Crisp, Neeley, Hewitt, Haygood, Burnam, Hicks, Propst and graduate players. In 8 years Alabama has won four southern conference championships. Three times she has been invited to represent the South and the East in the Rose Bowl classic at Pasadena. In 8 years Alabama has not lost to the same team more than twice. This is Wade's 5th time to go to the Rose Bowl.

THREE ARRESTED HERE LAST WEEK FOR SELLING WHISKEY

Federal prohibition agents last Friday arrested Elijah Thomas, Richard Wilson, and Odis Jones, on charges of selling whiskey. The three were carried to Montgomery where they were released after bonds were approved.

It is reported that an undercover man working with the prohibition afficers had bought whiskey from each of these three men.

MISSOURI VOTERS UPHOLD AMERICAN IDEALS

In the last election the people of Missouri were called upon to vote on a proposal to prohibit private insurance companies from writing workmen's compensation in that state and to provide a monopolistic state fund to handle the business. The proposal was rejected by a vote of 200,000 and returns indicate that it was defeated in every county.

In this day of proposals for "government experimentalism" in business, it is encouraging to see that a great state like Missouri has not lost sight of American ideals. We are not yet ready to prohibit private citizens from engaging in legitimate business, nor to set the government up in business to the exclusion of everyone else. A state insurance monopoly would be as unhealthy as a private insurance monopoly. It would give political appointees absolute power over a tremendous amount of the people's money and would leave in their hands the administration of a form of insurance which is vital to employers and workers alike.

The people of Missouri, by their vote, have upheld a fundamental principle of our government—that it is the business of government to govern, not to destroy the enterprise and ambition of taxpayers.

THE CRIME INDUSTRY

Crime is now one of our most flourishing industries—an industry which is unaffected by hard times or taxes or any of the other banes of legitimate business.

Likewise, it is a publicly-owned industry, to the degree that the public pays the bill which is said to total $16,000,000,000 a year, according to the Committee on Youth Outside the Home and School, in a report to the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection. The criminal population is estimated to be 1,000,000 and it is unquestionably growing.

The state of Illinois alone has 23,000 laws designed to prevent crime, and many other states probably equal or exceed this record. Every year witnesses a flood of new legislation. And, in the meantime, the criminal class goes evenly about its business, seemingly growing more prosperous and secure. It is not a coincidence that "the criminal age" is likewise the age in which law-passers and crime reformers have flourished to an unprecedented degree.

Like all our other problems, that of crime will eventually be decided by the public. The people, through their vote, determine whether we shall have a constantly increasing volume of laws, or whether we will go back to fundamental laws that prosecute the criminal without putting good citizens at a disadvantage. The past few years have proven that restrictive, sumptuary legislation is, more often than not, a boomerang.

PLANNING AHEAD FOR ROADS

According to the Sixth International Road Conference recently held in Washington, D. C., all countries face the problem of providing secondary and local roads suited to the needs of the farmer and modern motor traffic.

To do this, the Conference points out that it is necessary to create highway programs years in advance. Funds must be carefully budgeted. Adjustments to meet changing conditions or improved methods may be made as the projects develop.

In this country few states have given sufficient attention to their far-to-market or rural road problems. Within the last few years, however, the agricultural depression has brought vividly to the front the fact that farm progress in the future will depend largely on good roads. Secretary of Agriculture, Hyde, has pointed out that living standards are higher where roads are good, than elsewhere. In short, fast and efficient, year-round transportation is as vital to the farm as to industry. By the use of inexpensive, waterproof surfaces, it is possible to build serviceable, year-round roads at low cost.

As civilization advances, communication of all kinds becomes of increasing value. Good roads produce benefits—social and economic—that cannot be adequately expressed in terms of money. They are the ground work on which to build a greater and more prosperous nation.

NO CHANGE OF POLICY

European politicians, who at first thought after receiving the word that the Democrats had made sweeping gains in the American Congress, declared more or less joyfully that America was about to embark on a new European policy, are now changing their tunes, upon sober second thought. For instance, Jacques Bainville, in one of the leading French journals said recently:

"When Republicans replace Democrats or Democrats defeat Republicans we always think it will be favorable for Europe, but the Democrats are just as indifferent to Europe as their adversaries. It would be better if they did not mix in European affairs at all rather than follow the methods of President Wilson who in the period from 1918 to 1919 contributed so much to the European mess.

"The Hoover regime remains, and so long as it continues there will be no change in debts or tariffs nor will there be any difference afterward."

There is a great deal of sound thinking displayed in the above. The election does not mean that Uncle Sam is going to change his foreign policy. He will continue to practice the doctrine of helpful cooperation with the rest of the world but avoiding entangling aliances and embarrassing political commitments. There was a time at the close of the World War when it seemed that he might abandon his old doctrine of avoiding entanglements, but this day has passed by. On two or three occasions the people have rendered a sweeping verdict at the polls against any such change, and no political party, with any sort of judgment, is going to involve us in the European political mess. To do so would be to invite political annihilation. For those who think the drift among the people is toward internationalism, a perusal of the platforms of the two great parties in the 1928 campaign ought to prove enlightening. Nobody is now pledged to mixing in European pclitics now except a few college professors and paid international agitators.

It may be true that after each election the European politicians, who want our influence in Europe, for some selfish reason or other, find renewed hope that Uncle Sam is changing his mind. But it is a vain hope and one which is aroused not by any action of the American people but by the noise of our own internationalist agitators.

ALABAMA

Alabama was the Indian name of a Mushhogean tribe of the Creek Confederacy of Nations found living in the southern part of the state. "Alabamu" is from the Choctaw words, "alba," "aya," "mule," meaning "I open, or clear the thicket."

In 1519, the Spanish government of Jamaica sent Pineda to explore the gulf coast of Florida. Pineda reported that in the course of his adventures, he entered a fine body of water and ascended up the broad river flowing into it some forty miles, seeing many houses and natives on the banks. It is generally conceded that it was Mobile Bay he entered and went up the Alabama River.

Ferdinand de Soto, in 1539, then governor of Cuba, landed on the coast of Florida with 1,000 men to fight their way into the unknown west. De Soto reported a hard fought battle with native tribes under the leadership of Chief Tuscaloosa at the junction of the Tombigbee and Alabama Rivers. De Soto pushed his way westward, discovering the Mississippi River. He found in the region now known as Alabama, a high order of Indian tribes, living in log houses and having log barns or out houses for storing corn, pumpkins, etc.

After LaSalles exploration of the Mississippi valley in 1700, Alabama was included in French Louisana. In 1721 three slave ships unloaded their cargoes in Mobile which had been found in 1702 by a French Canadian named de Bienville, and made Alabama a slave state, but saved the sickening white colony that were dying rapidly from heat and fevers, in trying to clear up the country.

Early in the 18th century, the French ceeded the northern part of Alabama to England and it became part of the Illinois country. In 1789 Spain seized west Florida and southern Alabama.

After the Revolutionary War, the Mississippi Territory was formed in 1798, taking in Missisippi, northern Alabama and part of Georgia. In 1817, the Mississippi Territory was divided, the western half becoming the State of Mississippi and the eastern half, the Territory of Alabama. Andrew Jackson had wrested the Mobile area from the Spanish in 1812 and on December 14th, 1819, Alabama in its present form was admitted to the Union as the State of Alabama.

THE CLARION CALL

The Reverend Jones was pastor of a small and struggling congregation at Falmyra, Tenn., one of those smug little river valley communities nestled away in the rolling hills of the Tennessee river valley country.

Parson Jones was a meek and humble man, who gathered his flock at the old frame church building on the side of a hill each Sunday morning and vainly exhorted them in a weak and quivering voice to turn from their wickedness and lead honest and upright lives. The hard-crusted farmers, who with their wives and children made up the congregation, patiently sat through the long service with sad and sactimonious looks on their faces, but Sunday being over, they went back with a will to their plowing and horse trading.

The county seat, some ten miles away was a larger and richer community. Deacon Smithers, who ran the leading hardware store on the square down town and the moving spirit in the county seat church, which was made up of the Lord's chosen people, had come out to Palmyra on a Saturday afternoon to transact a little business and had remained over night.

Sunday morning, he attended service at Parson Jones' church, taking a seat down in the "amen" corner. At the conclusion of the sermon, Rev. Jones commented upon the fact that their distinguished brother, Deacon Smithers, had graced their church by being present and would make the closing prayer.

Every one stood up. The deacon cleared his throat, closed his eyes and tilted his face aloft. In a loud voice called upon the Lord to have mercy upon these sinful people, to blot out their transgressions, to lead them ont of the paths of unrighteousness and to make their lives as white as snow. On and on he prayed, growing louder and louder. His deep stentorian voice reverberated up through the rafters of the church, floated out of the windows across the fields and seemed to echo back from the sides of broad barns half a mile away. Finally he came to the end and service was dismissed.

As the congregation was filing out, Parson Jones made his way over to Deacon Smithers and asked him to go home with him to dinner, which invitation was promptly accepted.

Nothing was said about the service until the meal was well under way. Parson Jones was troubled and just a little angry but hardly knew how to come raound exactly to the subject. Finally he summed up courage enough to speak of the matter that was on his mind. "Deacon," he said, "that was a good prayer yer said at the service this mornin', but Deacon, I jest wanted to say somethin' to yer, yer know Deacon, the Lord ain't deaf."

"Yeh, I know," snorted the Deacon, as he reached for another piece of chicken, "the Lord ain't deaf, but He's a long ways from Palmyrie."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

OPPORTUNISM IN BUSINESS

"Our economic and political structure is seriously threatened today by opportunists and theroists," says F. Robertson Jones, general manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety Executives. "Diametrically opposite in their immediate purpose, nevertheless these two classes are headed for the same destination—complete socialization. The theorist seeks ideal conditions without taking into account the realities of life. The opportunist sacrifices principle to selfish expendiency."

Mr. Jones gives his point a practical illustration by the fact that seven states have monopolistic workmen's compensation insurance funds and ten state have competitive state funds. These funds came into existence largely through the efforts of men who would bitterly oppose government competition with their own businesses. Employers who saw an advantage in the promise of lower insurance rates through tax-free state funds instead of through heavily taxed private funds, supported them. Even at the expense of principle, they were perfectly willing to inject the government into a business in which they had no personal interest, in order to benefit themselves.

The nation, at present, has an over-supply of these opportunists. They advocate government-operated electric plants, railroads, waterways, insurance companies—but never government operation of their own industries. They oppose socialism in principle—and support it in practice. And, whether they know it or not, they are largely resposible for the attacks made against private initiative and ambition.

PRINCIPLES OF DEMOCRACY UPHELD BY GOVERNOR

We should not be hostile to business or to big business. We have the right to ask that business look not to government for special favors and privileges, that it leave the door of opportunity open for all to enter, and that the economies and efficiencies of big business insure in fair measure to the benefit of the consumer. Those things granted, business is as much entitled to grow as it is to stay small, and government should keep its hands off it and out of it as far as possible.

I have no fears about our ultimate prosperity, but I would like to see it with less concentrated power to make it or break it. If our prosperity is to be maintained or to be revived, this will not be because of burdensome or discriminatory tariffs, or multi-billion dollar budgets, or governmental benedictions, or all the inspired wisdom which is now being handed out by some four million office holders.

With our unlimited natural resources, a hundred million workers filled with the spirit of enterprise and initiative will assure prosperity, if you but make them feel that they have equality of opportunities and free play for their free energies in a free country.—Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland.

HISTORY TEXT BOOKS

There is something new under the sun after all. The other day word came through cable dispatches to the effect that American historical text books, in one instance at least, were being criticised for use abroad as too American and not sufficiently internationalist. According to a dispatch from Melbourne, Australia, Mays and Moon's modern history, a standard schoolbook in the province of Victoria, written by Americans, is the storm center because of certain statements made about the World War. The book is charged with being "biased, untrue and insulting. Two paragraphs which are particularly objected to are the following:

"The British collected a motley army, composed chiefly of Colonial troops, and landed it on the tip of Gallipoli Peninsular, close to the Dardanelles."

"The United States was the only great power that fought in the war without demanding or even desiring territorial gains for herself. She should be credited with a liftiness of purpose and usefulness that could hardly be matched in all history."

To the average American who remembers the great lengths to which internationalists went during and after the World War to propagandize American text books for the benefit of certain European nations, this criticism ought to be particularly amusing. It is to be remembered that an effort, which came near to being entirely successful was made to change the teaching of history in our own schools so that it might appear that the patriot soldiers in the Revolution were a motley army of disturbers and smugglers, that they ought to have known better and that the real folks in the colonies during the latter part of the eighteenth century were the tories.

If Australia, and we have considerable admiration for that sturdy colony, wants to object to the assertion that Britain's colonial troops were a "motley army" that is all right with us. But we would like to know what great power other than the United States fought in the war "without demanding or even desiring territorial gains for herself."

Remembering our own experience with history text books we are reminded by this protest that what is sauce for the gander is not always considered sauce for the goose.

THE HOME GOES FORWARD

If consumption of electricty is an index of progress, the beneral business difficulties of the present year have not seriosuly hampered the forward development of our living standards.

For the first nine months of 1930 the total consumption of electric power by all classes of consumers was slightly above that of 1929, and 14.3 per cent above 1928. Domestic use was 14.4 per cent greater than in 1929—a rate of increase comparing favorably with that of former years. This increase is a reflection of the stimulated use of electric appliances.

Small commercial consumers showed a gain in consumption of 10.2 per cent over 1929 and large industrial users a decrease of 5.1 per cent. However, even in the case of the latter, consumption was 10 per cent greater than in 1928.

The fact that electric rates go down as sales go upward was again demonstrated. Domestic rates, on the average, have decreased 3.1 per cent since the beginning of the year.

Nineteen-thirty has generally been considered a "poor year," which makes electric progress all the more remarkable. But electric power and living standards have virtually become synonymous. Each year finds the American home on a higher plane than ever before.

HOW TO PREVENT STATE DEVELOPMENT

The most successful way to keep capital out of a state is for its legislators or voters to pass "experimental" or "class" tax laws. Such laws work on the principle that one type of property can be "relieved" of its tax burden by shifting it to another type.

Tax shifting and new methods of taxation are merely used to obscure the sad truth that there is but one way to achieve real tax reduction—to spend less money.

THE FARM FLOCK

If he fails to maintain a flock of laying hens, the general farmer, who raises a variety of produce for the market, is overlooking an activity which ranks among his most profitable purpits. He is not recognizing the fact that eggs and poultry meat are always in demand. Like milk, eggs always bring cash if the farmer has the mon hand.

From 200 to 500 laying hens constitute an ideal flock for the farm of from 50 to 100 acres, which is the average size, investigations of state and national agricultural departments have revealed. Fifty hens are supposed to be the equivalent in value and profit of one good cow. Mixed or general farming calls for from five to ten cows. Hence, it is logical that their equivalent be carried in the finest kind of poultry, say agricultural authorities who have made a study of this type of farming.

They point out that farmers as a class have not yet come fully to appreciate the advantage they can enjoy in keeping a few hundred high class hens for profit. The farm offers everything that is needed to feed the birds and keep them comfortable, corn, wheat and other grains and remnants of green stuffs that are produced.

However, the poultry flock should be kept in as systematic a manner as are the cows and pigs. The poultry plant should be securely fenced in, as is the case with the dairy plant or the hog pasture. The brooding department should be enclosed so that no chick can get out or no animal can get in.

Under such conditions, it is declared, the poultry department of the farm should insure an annual profit of at least $2 a head for every hen kept.

However, the authorities warn, the farmer should keep good hens or none at all. One way of insuring good stock is to obtain baby chicks from a reliable hatchery, especially since the leading hatcheries of the country have banded together under the slogan "Hatchery Chicks for Greater Profits" for the purpose of promoting quality breeds and fair business dealings.

TRANSPORTATION A MAJOR PROBLEM

That the transportation of school children has come to be a major problem in the administration of the public schools of Alabama is shown by the data printed below, released by the Alabama Educational Association.

The increased number of children transported and the resulting rise in expenditures for this purpose, has been brought about by the aggressive program of consolidation of rural schools effected in Alabama during the past ten years. As commonly administered the money needed for transportation is taken from the general school fund of the county concerned. This plan, in a number of cases, has made necessary curtailment of moneys spent for other educational services.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw—and Some He Saw Not.

Greetings to Billy Smith, who is from henceforth the editor, publisher, and chief mogul of The Chilton County News and the The Rockford Chronicle. Billy takes very justifiable pride in being the youngest editor in Alabama. I hope he attains such a degree of success as will compensate him not only in the measure of success, but in a cup full of satisfaction as well.

The Faulkenberry Cash Store opens tomorrow. The location is the old Parrish place, where Capitol Dry Goods Company moved from last week. I want you to meet Mr. Faulkenberry, the newcomer to our town, and proprietor of this new business. He is a genteel, likable man. I have it on good authority that he is a man who will make us a very valuable citizen, and I hope he meets with success in his business from the very start. Go around to see him.

Part of my job is seeing sights. Some of the sights I saw, and some I saw not. But there is one sight I have seen this week which I have never seen before, viz: Fenn Jones walking about on the streets of Clanton utterly out of a job. I wonder how long he is going to be content with doing nothing.

Four weeks ago today was the last time Mr. W. W. Fox was able to get away from his home. His friends are constantly inquiring of his welfare. His smiling face and jolly good humor are greatly missed. Day by day the time comes closer when his store will be closed.

Things looked like prosperity had returned at Chicago Sales Company last Friday and Saturday. People were buying things right and left. Reedie Taylor always offers his customers something worth while. This was a very special event, combining the two stores into one. It caused a congregation of many lines of goods that just simply had to be relieved.

I notice that Mr. H. B. Oliver is now president of The Bank of Verbena. With all that the bank means to the people of Verbena, and with the consistent faithfulness shown by Mr. Oliver in times of crises, the people down there ought to have a very deep sense of appreciation for this good man. He has virtually saved Verbena from disaster more than once.

Although Glenn Boyd has gone to Selma to sit in a high backed chair of one of Alabama's biggest banks, he still holds on to his connection with the Peoples Bank at Jemison. "The bank at Jemison is my child," said Glenn to me one day. "I am going to keep it." I hope he does hold on to it. Jemison needs the bank. With Glenn Boyd behind it and Reuben Foss to run it, you may rest assured that everything will pan out right.

Uncle George Willis dropped by the corner for a chat. Said he was feeling fine, taking things easy. Plenty of meat in the smoke house, taters in the hill, and turnip greens a growing. Just a waitin', said he, for the blue birds to sing again, when I will start to 'musin myself makin' another crop. Yes, he said, prospects for farming look a little slim, but I tell you boys, their aint but one thing to do, just back your ears and dive in.

Another epidemic of wrecks has been with us for the past week. Almost every day someone gets hurt or killed. Dozens of folks have had misfortune in the last few days right close to Clanton. The hospital here is full of the victims. Some have already gone to the graveyard, and it looks like others will do likewise.

THE PRIMARY

In a recent speech in Boston, former Senator Frederick H. Gillette, of Massachusetts, a man of ripe political experience, said:

"I favored the primaries, but I have changed my mind. I am not too old to learn. It seems to me that with the multiplicity and complexity of its use and the large number of candidates the judgment of the people would be better registered by the convention than be the primary. I should be glad to have us consider that we have given the primary a fair trial, that the results are against us and that we should go back to the convention."

Senator Gillette is not the only student of political affairs who has changed his mind on the value of the primary system. The arguments against the primary are so varied and so obvious that it hardly seems necessary to repeat them. First the primary results in the breakdown of party control and brings a resultant confusion similar to that in European governments where the bloc system prevails. This is perhaps the greatest evil of the primary, and it is especially injurious because of the fact that our constitutional government is based on the theory of party control. The United States can only be governed effectively through party control, with the present governmental machinery, and the primary has done more than anything else to destroy party government in America and to put the personality of the candidate above principles of government and political economy.

Again the primary is expensive. It was the theory of the primary advocates in the old days before the primary was tried, that the primary was the poor man's chance, and that "wicked" conventions always nominated for office rich politicians with the most pull. A review of our recent experiences with primaries is not necessary to convince the average reader that mony is used more lavishly in the primary than it was ever used in conventions. This is not saying that it it employed to corrupt the electorate. The primary is naturally expensive, since the candidates must attempt to recah all the people by literature or personal appeal.

Taken all in all the primary has outlived its usefulness if it ever had any and it is to be hoped that more legislatures this winter will adopt a modified convention system with delegates chosen by the body of the voters, under proper safeguards.

Among the most interesting phases of a general election are the after-election statements of the candidates, both victorious and defeated.

The last election had this in common with its predecessors—from it can be "proved" almost anything anyone desires.

A "discontent" vote—multiplied by unemployment and business depression, likes to experiment.

In one great state the winning candidate for the governorship, who had a power plank in his platform, was a man who, as an individual, is superior to his issues. His general record of usefulness, integrity and intelligence unquestionably brought him a large vote from persons who, on the score of public ownership of power, disagree with him violently.

The political parties, in the old sense, are disrupted. We elect individuals, not platforms. There is not a single major issue which is the exclusive property of one party.

Those who are attempting ownership to show that the last election was a great victory for government ownership or private ownership of industry, wets or drys, high tariff or low tariff, may be sadly mistaken.

AT REST

The death angel visited the home of Mr. Frank Moore last Tuesday morning about 2 o'clock, and bore away the spirit of his beloved wife. She was sick only a short while. The doctor and loving ones did all they could to restore her back to her wanted health, but God called her and she had to go.

Aunt Minnie, as everybody called her, was a good and faithful Christian. She always had a kind word for everybody and everyone was glad to see her. She was getting old and she knew that her days were shortening and she said that she was ready to answer her Master's call at any time. She was a member of Alpine church.

She is survived by her husband, four children and a host of friends and relatives. She was laid to rest in Alpine cemetery the following day with Rev. J. E. Moore officiating.

Farewell dear mother, sweet the rest, weary with years and worn with pain. Farewell, till in some happy place, we shall behold thy face again.

Tis ours to miss thee, all our years and tender memories of thee keep. Thine in the Lord to rest, for so, he giveth his beloved sleep.—Written by a loving friend, H. C. Gray.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF RAISING A BULL

Great Care Should Be Exercised In Feeding and Training of the Young Animal Who Is to Play So Important a Role In the Herd.

We have seen in a previous article how necessary it is in the success of a dairy herd to have a good sire. He is "half the herd," in other words. We take up now the problem of the owner who decides to raise his own bull.

Feeding is an important item in a young bull. For the first six months he should receive about the same rations as the heifer calves. Many farmers feed skim milk to the bull calf for eight or ten months because it is so healthy for bone growth. A grain mixture, say five parts wheat bran, four parts ground oats, one part linseed meal, and plenty of legume hay, after weaning is recommended.

There is a strange notion among some breeders that bulls fed on silage will not be as potent as those to which no silage is given. There is no scientific basis for such a deduction that I know of.

Be careful not to let the bull get too fat, especially after he reaches the age of service which is around ten months. He must be well fed, and not too thin for the best results.

Separate the bull calf from the heifer calves at about six monts of age. At this time start his lessons in leading, a little every day. By eight or ten months put a light weight ring in his nose, say one and a half inches in diameter, non-rusting, of course. At the age of two years a larger and stronger ring should be substituted and at age four about a three-inch ring is necessary. After the ring is installed teach the young bull to lead with a staff.

You can prevent the growth of horns by rubbing caustic potash on the place where they appear when the calf is a day or two old. Or at age two you can dehorn. Unless you wish to use him for show purposes better take the horns off, as they are dangerous.

It is true that bulls at the head of famous herds usually have horns. Some breeders feel that dehorning handicaps his breeding powers. I know of no foundation for this. Of course, it does injure his chances in the show ring.

Do not let the bull run with the herd. Keep him in separate quarters altogether, if possible. See that he gets proper exercise. One way is to string a wire cable with a rope from the ring in the animal's nose to the cable. Some herd owners use a tread mill.

If you have barn yard turn the bull in there after the cows have been sent to pasture.

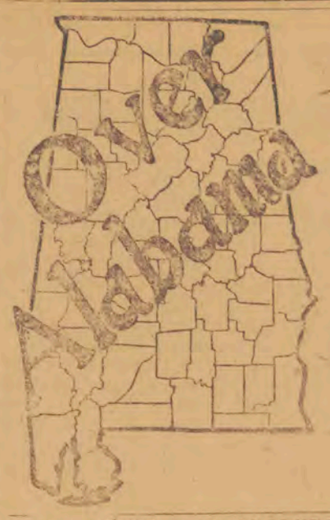
Above all do not keep the bull in a dark, uncomfortable stall. He needs good ventilation and should be hardened to the weather.

Teasing a bull should never be allowed. They become vicious enough as it is. Sometimes it is best to have two persons handle him. If you can arrange a breeding pen next to the bull's pen, so he will not have to be handled at all, so much the better.

Remember this, proper exercise, proper feeding and comfortable housing will enable a bull to give service until eight or ten years of age.

One mistake breeders make is to dispose of a bull before his real value is known. His offspring may be marvelous producers but you can't know that until his daughters have come into milk. He will be four or five years old by that time. Sometimes breeders put their bulls out with others under an agreement they can recall them at a stipulated price.

I have frequently been asked whether it is safe to keep a bull that is the first calf of a young heifer for breeding purposes. I know that bulls from older cows command higher prices. About the only basis for such a feeling is that we do not know how good the mother is when she is a two-year-old heifer, therefore, it is sometimes safer to wait until she has proven herself before taking a son to be sire of a herd.



As a final word of caution, do not give the bull a chance to demonstrate its physical powers. A bull has enormous strength. It can break fences, untie straps, and gates with comparative ease and without much injury to itself if it wants to. Once he learns how easy it is to jerk away from a keeper, he will be a pretty dangerous animal from then on.

Speaking again of unemployment. Various theories are set forth as to the cause of the present depression. Some say it is due to overproduction, and others say it is under-consumption. Others say the financial powers are afraid to invest their money. Others say it is due to the elimination of man-power by machines, and from some view points all these theories are true. After all, the whole matter can be traced to selfishness. Eliminate the love of self and all will be all right, which eventually will be in the future, when good will will abound toward all.

Obituary

A late Banner carried the death notice of Mrs. Annie Childress of Pleasant Grove.

Mrs. Childress was a noble Christian lady. Her husband preceded her to the grave some 26 years ago. She was baptised by Rev. S. M. Adams about 1880 when he was a young man. She was a daughter of an immediate relative of Mordicia Robinson, who was the first Judge of Baker County (now Chilton) in its early history. It was before this county had a courthouse.

All her neighbors have preceded her to the grave. She lived about a quarter of a century beyond man's allotted time on earth. She lived to see the ushering in of a new world or dispensation. Her noble life beamed out as a beacon light after all her old friends had gone. We can but admire those aged ones beside the chilly wave, as they totter the border of life. We could lay our admiration down at their feet. She is now dead. Our only source of light as to man's eternal destiny is in the Bible, she believed. It tells us of man's fall and man's future restoration to life for all the willing ones in the sweet beyond. We have abundant hope that she will have eternal life in the ages to come. She leaves 4 sons. They have a rich heritage in the life of a noble mother.

Softly fades the twilight ray,
Of the Holy Sabbath day,
Gently as life's setting sun,
F'r the Christian race is run.

$10,000,000 DROUTH AID ASKED FOR ALABAMA

Seth P. Storrs, commisioner of agriculture and Industries, and chairman of the Alabama Drouth Relief Committee, has asked for an appropriation of $10,000,000 for farmers living in the drouth stricken areas of Alabama to be used in the purchase of feed, seed and fertilizer.

Commissioner Storrs reports that he is confident that the United States Congress will pass a Drouth Relief Bill immediately after it convenes December 1 and that it is understood from press reports that the bill will provide $60,000,000 for all drought stricken states.

"I feel confident that the bill will pass and that the money will be available by the first of January," he said. At this writing it has not been learned the amount that will be allotted to each state.

DAIRYMEN AND MILK CONSUMERS PROTECTED

In Alabama the general public is protected as to the purity of the milk and by-products it purchases. Not only is this true but producers of milk are protected against fraud in the prices received for milk and cream.

This protection is given by a law administered by the Agricultural Chemistry Division of the State Department of Agriculture and Industries. George Marsh is in charge of this division and has recently issued the following statement regarding the work:

"The purpose of this division is to secure to the public wholesome, clean and nutritious milk, cream, butter and by-products, and to prevent frauds upon the public. Under the laws and regulations the sale of adult treated milk and cream the adding of fat or oil with milk or cream is prohibited. The premises and utensils used in the handling of milk and cream are required to be sanitary; the sale of milk or other products from diseased cows is prohibited; and the operation of testing equipment by milk and cream stations is so regulated as to prevent fraud in the purchase of milk and cream. The producer of milk is therefore protected in securing a fair price for his produce and the buying public is protected as to purity and sanitation of the milk and by-products purchased."

Mr. Marsh reported that during the past year 1,261 inspections were made of dairy products establishments; 219 ice cream samples collected; 2,116 cream samples tested; 2,685 milk samples tested; 69 samples of butter collected for analysis; 17,425 pounds of butter suspended from sale; 663 inspections made of food establishments; 31 food samples collected; and 17 inspections made for drug establishments.

Inspections were made in 803 towns.

FARMERS PROFIT BY POOLING THEIR EGGS

Last spring when eggs were bringing the producers from 15 to 18 cents a dozen, 185 Alabama farmers pooled 4,000 cases, or 120,000 dozens of eggs in cold storage on a cooperative basis and were advanced 20 cents a dozen by the Alabama Farm Bureau. Recently these eggs were sold, and the farmers were yesterday advanced 4.5 cents a dozen more, making the eggs bring 24.5 cents a dozen. This was reported by J. B. Sylvest, marketing specialist. In the final settlement, the farmers received $5,400 above the inital advance of 20 cents a dozen. The cost of storing the eggs was only three cents a dozen. The project was conducted by the Alabama Farm Bureau and the Extenstion Service.

EFFECTIVE WAR WAGED ON RATS

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 1.—Rats are being exterminated in large numbers at many points in Alabama. They are being fought on a wholesale basis and are suffering large casualties. Already battles have been fought at Guntersville, Boaz, Wetumpka, Vernon, Sulligent, Millport, and Russelville.

In Guntersville alone more than 1,000 rats were killed. One groceryman in Guntersville found 16 dead gophers the morning after the battle. The work is being done under the direction of Roy Moore of the United States Department of Agriculture and W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, in cooperation with county agents and local people. Powdered red squill is the only weapon used. It kills rats only.

Each of 218 girls have at least four vegetables growing in a fall garden; the majority have 10 or more vegetables growing. Tendergreen, a new vegetable which grows rapidly and is very palatable, is being grown by 134 girls. Eighty-four grew fall tomatoes.

FORESTRY PRIZE ESSAY REGULATIONS

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 1.—Rules have been prepared for the competition for the forestry essay prizes offered by the State Commission of Forestry, says Colonel Page S. Bunker, state forester. These rules answer the questions of who, how, when and what.

Any pupil of a high school or school of equal grade in Alabama may enter an essay in the contest. The papers will be handled in the high schools in a manner that will keep the identy of the writer from being known until after the announcement of the best paper has been made. Each high school will submit one paper. The essays must be completed and in the hands of the principal of the school on or before Wednesday, February 25, 1931.

The essays should comprise approximately from 1,500 to 2,000 words. They may be on forestry in its general sense or may bear on a particular phase of forestry, but the subject taken should be well handled and the essay informative and interesting with the conclusions well drawn. The facts therein may be obtained first hand or from published material, but the composition must be original.

The writers should confine their papers chiefly to the subject matter of actual forestry, and not include to any material extent mere arboriculture or incidental considerations involving trees. The students should keep in mind that forestry is the economic and profitable production of timber in perpetuity primarily for commercial use, in the same way that agriculture is the production of field crops for similar purposes. While incidental benefits from forestry, such as watershed protection, hygenic influences etc., may be considered somewhat, the main theme should not be subordinated.

The first prize has been fixed as a year's scholarship at one of the collegiate institutions of the state. The second prize will be a trip to California and return, and the third a round trip to Washington, D. C. The rules as promulgated by the Commission of Forestry give details as to the exact procedure to be followed by the students, the judges and the high school principals. Copies if the rules may be obtained by writing to the State Forester, Montgomery, Alabama.

Mr. Aubrey Taylor, student at Auburn, spent the Thanksgiving holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rowland W. Taylor, in Clanton.

The little three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Watson, who underwent an operation at the office of Dr. S. C. Wood, is at this time slowly recovering.

Lesson for December 7

STEPHEN, AN EARLY INTERPRETER OF CHRISTIANITY

LESSON TEXT—Acts 6:1-7:60.

GOLDEN TEXT—And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Stephen, Jesus' Helper and Friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Standing Up for Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Standing Up for Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Stephen's Contribution to Christianity.

I. Stephen Chosen as Deacon (Acts 6:1-8).

The early church was threatened with disruption over suspected partiality in the distribution of alms. As soon as the church had relief from external troubles, difficulties arose from within. A congregational meeting was called, the case placed before the church with instructions to select seven men of good reputation, and Spirit-filled, to administer the temporalities of the church, thus giving the apostles the necessary time for prayer and the ministry of God's word. Among the seven deacons chosen, Stephen occupied first place.

The essential qualifications for the deacon's office are:

1. Integrity. They were instructed to look for men of good report, of unquestioned integrity.

2. Sagacity. They were to look for men full of wisdom, men of common sense and good judgment.

3. Spirituality. They were to be men full of the Holy Ghost.

II. Stephen Before the Council (Acts 6:9-15).

1. Disputing with Stephen (vv. 9, 10). Certain foreign speaking Jews took the lead in this controversy. Perhaps the fact that Stephen was a Grecian-Jew provoked them to this action. He was more than a match for them while the debate was carried along the lines of reason and Scripture. Beaten along these lines, they had him arrested and brought before the Council.

2. Charged with blasphemy (vv. 11-14). They trumped up this charge against him and endeavored to support it by secretly finding and inducing men to perjure themselves in their testimony. Stephen showed in his preaching that God's purpose was progressive and that the policy instituted by Moses would be superseded by the new faith, since it was but the culmination of what Moses began. Christianity did not destroy Judaism but caused it to blossom forth into the glory of the new order.

3. Stephen's face transfigured (v. 15). He was so completely filled with Christ that as he saw the angry mob and realized how soon he would be violently dealt with and thus pass into the presence of the Lord, his face shone as the face of an angel.

III. Stephen's Defense (Acts 7:1-53).

In refuting their charge he showed by the history of God's dealing with the Jews that they had always resisted him. Therefore, their present attitude was because they were unwilling to move forward with the divine purpose. According to Dr. Stifler, four points emerge in this defense:

1. God's dealing with the Jews showed progress. It was not reached by a single leap, but by gradual stages.

2. The temple was not the only holy place. God appeared at different times and in different places.

3. Israel invariably opposed God in his effort to lead them on.

4. He showed his loyality to Moses by constantly referring to him.

IV. Stephen Stoned (Acts 7:54-60).

His words cut them to the heart so they gnashed upon him with their teeth.

1. Looking steadfastly into heaven (v. 55). Instead of looking upon his murderers he looked up to heaven.

2. He saw the glory of God (v. 55). A vision of God's glory is only possible to those who are loyal unto death.

3. He saw Jesus standing on the right hand of God (vv. 55, 56), showing that he was actively interested in the suffering of his faithful witness.

4. They cast him out of the city and stoned him (vv. 58, 59).

5. His prayer (v. 60). He kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." How like the prayer of Jesus on the cross.

6. He fell asleep (v. 60). The Christian's death is only a sleep. This sublime scene must have vitally affected Saul who was consenting unto his death.

Faith draws out our stops . . . While the sympathy of our Lord is expressed in the briefest verse in the Bible—"Jesus wept"—that verse requires as a foot-note the many pages which describe his crucifixion.—John Andrew Holmes.

BETTER TIMES ARE ON THE WAY SAYS CHEVROLET

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 1.—Pointed indications of a resumption of buying interest throughout the nation are manifest here today in hundreds of reports on file at the home office of the Chevrolet Motor Company revealing that the reception accorded the new 1931 Chevrolet Six during the early days of the national showing had only one parallel in the history of the company.

To meet the needs of dealers, the manufacturing organizations consisting of 20 domestic plants is working on a tentative production scale for the month of November of more than 60,000 cars. Despite the fact that this is a high goal for the month, the output of cars has already fallen considerably behind orders already booked, the sales division reported.

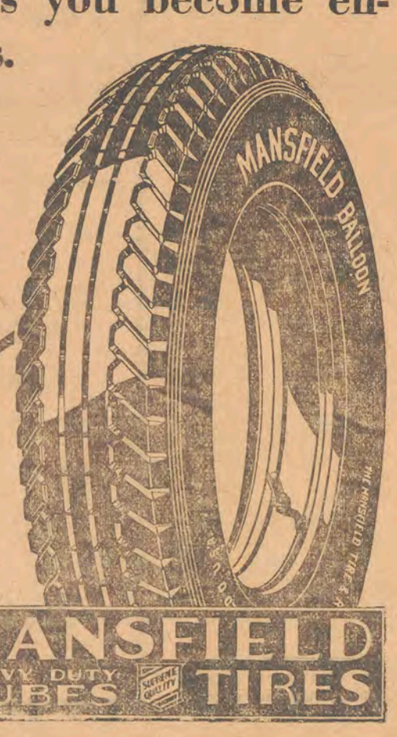
Telegrams from dealers and field officials in all parts of the country, offering an excellent cross-section of public attitude, reveal that despite general business conditions unusual buying enthusiasm is being displayed. Particular interest is centering on the new sport models on this line, as well as the new commercial cars which are constantly accounting for a larger proportion of each year's output.

The price reduction, coupled with the increased size and improvements, attracted to dealer showrooms large crowds estimated as second only to the attendance during the early showing of the new six at the time of the change-over from the four cylinder car in 1928. Many points reported a greater number of appraisals than in previous years. When the tabulation of orders being made is completed, the mark for the first 15 days is expected to compare favorably with any similiar peroid during a normal year.

A particularly significant feature of the reports reaching H. J. Klingler, vice-president and sales manager reveal that public interest shown in the new car is not confined to any section, but seems general across the country. Not only in the larger centers but in the smaller communities dealer show rooms were crowded for several days, and marked buying enthusiasm was displayed.

A dealer in a small Kansas town reported that because of the large number of rural visitors, a count of attendance at his show rooms the first day exceeded the population of the town. Great Falls, Mont. dealers despite fourteen inches of snow, reported attendance for the first week equal to that a year ago.

The Harrisburg zone, comprising several counties in the keystone state reported 100,000 showroom visitors. The city of Cleveland reported 59,000 visitors and San Antonio 20,000. Buffalo reported a larger crowd than last year, and Chicago wired that appraisals exceeded last year's figures.



The reception of the new car received throughout the country lent substance to the statements of the Chevrolet officials that business conditions during the year were due primarily to a buyers strike, and that an upward trend is imminent. To lend impetus to this move, Chevrolet advanced by seven weeks the date for the announcement of new models and thus insured extraordinary activity during two normally dull months for thousands of people directly dependent upon the company for a livelihood.

FOOTBALL BOYS ENJOY BANQUET

Spicy Program Under Direction of Toastmaster, John P. Lawrence

The football banquet of last Friday night was an occasion that did great credit to the Chilton County High School, and offered an unusual pleasure for those who were fortunate in attending this occasion. About thirty of the high school boys, who composed the football team of this year, were present, as well as an equal number of girls of the school. A number of other invited guests were present, as well as the teachers of the High School.

The occasion was one of pure fun, and the lid was clamped down good and tight against every kind of seriousness. The spirit of the boys and girls was of the kind that was ready to break with amusement at every turn of the table. Everything that was said or done was caught up with levity by someone. Original wit and humor was plentiful and enjoyable.

John Ponder Lawrence, popular high school boy, acted as toastmaster. And as a toastmaster he was a big success. His managment of the affair was masterful.

Each and every member of the 1930 football team was presented, with fitting recognition for the heroic efforts of each individual player. The girls came in for their share of the honors. It was evident that the football players have received great inspiration from the interests and support which the team has received from the fair members of the high school student body.

The program was suitably spiced with the piano selections by Miss Nell Wells and Miss Jane Roberts.

The dinner which was served by the ladies of the Baptist Church was all that the palate could desire.

At the close of the program, it was unanimously voted that this occasion be made an annual affair in connection with the athletic program of the school.

The editor of the Union-Banner heartily endorses the movement, and here and now makes application for another invitation at the board in 1931.

POLK BROTHERS MOTOR CO. NOW OFFERING 12 CTS. FOR COTTON ON ALL USED CARS

According to George C. Polk, sales manager for Polk Brothers Motor Company, due to the exceptionally large stock of good used cars, that they now have in stock, which they are very anxious to dispose of before annual inventory time, and due to their confidence in higher prices for cotton next spring when the trade sees that we will have an acreage reduction, which they think is inevitable, they are offering to allow 12c basis middling 7-8 staple for cotton taken in on used cars.

This, we think, is the most liberal offer we have heard of, and as explaied in their advertisement found elsewhere in this paper, it will be wise to take advantage of this offer immediately, for at the present time the cotton market is in a very weak condition. Should the price continue to decline, naturally, they will have to withdraw their offer, and take the cotton in at a cheaper basis.

Twelve cents, we believe, is as much as the most optimistic of us believe this season's crop will sell for even next spring. So, if you are in the market for a good used car it would seem good business judgment to take advantage of this very liberal offer of Polk Brothers, and let them assume the risk of holding cotton, warehousing, insurance, etc., while you enjoy the pleasure of riding in their better used cars.

SINGERS MEET AT WALNUT CREEK SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The central singing society meets in regular session next Sunday afternoon at Walnut Creek church. Everybody is cordially invited. Don't stand back on bad weather, for there will be singing unless it is exceptionally bad.

The society met last Sunday afternoon at Chestnut Creek, Coopers, and had a fairly good singing, however it was not what it should have been, considering the large crowd of singers present. The following constituted the list of directors:—L. T. Grant, N. A. Smith, W. G. Culp, Jean Wyatt, J. B. Hammonds, S. V. Miller, Ralph Grant, Dr. Williams, J. W. Cagle, Jasper R. Robinson and Emmett Wilson.

The society was presided over by O. L. Devaughn, who is first vice chairman and who has presided most of the time for the past two months. It was voted at the session Sunday that the secretary be instructed to sell three dozen of the society's books, since they have more books than are needed. This will leave plenty of books, but it will be necessary to have on hand all the books belonging to the society at every singing. There are about a dozen books that have been taken away by somebody, so those who have been using the society's books, please be sure and have them at every singing as they will be needed.

Famous Show Will Come To Erlanger

"Strictly Dishonorable" Will Be Feature of Big B'ham Theatre

"Strictly Dishonorable," Brock Pemberton's production of Preston Sturges' enormously diverting comedy, that has proven to be one of the most conspicuously successful hits of recent years in the theatre, is to be given by a selected New York company at the Erlanger Theatre, Birmingham, for one week, starting Monday night, December 15th.

This production, personally staged by Mr. Pemberton and Antoinette Perry, who gave the original its adroit direction, contains a cast of high merit for its widely varying characters. Hailed as a masterpiece of deft playwriting, with a wealth of alert and intelligent humor, intriguing romance, and maintaining a sprightly buoyancy in its never-lagging merriment, the comedy has taken its place as a worthy and lasting contribution to the theatre.

The crisp dialogue of "Strictly Dishonorable," bubbles with shrewd and witty observations and glows with whimsical pleasantries among the humorous goings-on in a congenial, cozy speakeasy. The story chronicles the philanderings of a bachelor opera singer and an innocent, but love-curious, maid from the provincial Yokum, Mississippi. At this atmospheric drinking nook there assembles also the arrogant, outspoken fiance of the girl, a philosophical judge, who enjoys alcoholic beverages during ex-office periods, a waggish policeman and Tomaso, the ebbullient proprietor of the speakeasy.

Just as the Yokum miss, abandoned by her unbearably opinionated escort is preparing herself to be a martyr of love, music and experience, under the Neapoditan fascination of the opera singer in his apartment above the speakeasy, the author extricates, with ease and plausibility, his ingratiating characters—and does his extricating satisfactorily and with great fun. The comedy is now in its second year at the Avon Theatre, New York. Among those who will have roles are Margaret Sullavan, Cesar Romero, Willard Dashiell, Rudolph Badaloni, Joseph McCallion, R. B. Williams, Leo Leone and Edward Hartford.

There will be two popular priced matinees, Wednesday and Saturday. Mail orders will be filled promptly.

County Play Day At County High School

Plans Being Made For Event of Interest To All Schools

The committee at work on plans for play day, or field day had the first week during the latter part of November.

The object of this play day is to increase the school spirit, not so much in competition as in the real play spirit. The plans are to have the games, etc., for all elementary children in the morning and the contests, such as three legged race, 100 yard dash, standing high jump, for boys; and 50 yard dash, relay races, basketball throw for distancee, etc., for girls, in the afternoon.

Two important features will be, 1. the parade from the high school on through town. In this parade, the plan is for all pupils and teachers in each school to march behind their various banners. 2. There will be a spelling bee in the Auditorium during the morning. The best speller in each school will have an opportunity to spell in this contest. The pupil that is champion speller of the county, then, will go to Jacksonville or to Birmingham to take part in the State Spelling Contest.

The schools desiring to enter an exhibit of the regular school work will be provided with the list of desireable entries. It is not to be understood that these entries are to bring on an extra work, but they are to be samples of the best work done in the school during the year.

More detailed information will be published as the plans are developed by the committee of teachers and other school officials.

PEOPLES TELEPHONE COMPANY NOW RUNNING IN HIGH GEAR

The board of directors of the Peoples Telephone Company are pleased to announce that the company will operate during the coming year, notwithstanding they had to draw on their imagination quite a bit to see the way through. This was decided at a meeting of the board Monday afternoon.

The services of A. L. Giles have been retained for the coming year, and a rigid contract will be drawn up between the operator and the Board of Directors the latter part of this week. So the phoneholders who pay their fees will be assured of the best service possible under the present condition of the system.

As we have said before, if you want telephone service the coming year you have only two things to do and they are these: Put your box and line in shape to the corporate limits of Clanton and pay your fee of only $2.50. When you do this and demand service from the Board of Directors, you will get it in accordance with hte provisions printed at the bottom of your receipt.

There are a number of people over the county who are profoundly interested in the Peoples Telephone, and they are justly so, for it is a great thing for the people out in the rural districts. The Board of Directors are greatly indebted to all those good people who have so generously lent their help. The spirit in general seems to be better than usual this year.

Now, let everybody talk payment of telephone dues the next few days, and urge all phoneholders to pay up. But do not expect to get service with your line down and buried up in the sand. Fix up your line with a good sized wire to the corporate limits, get new batteries, and let's build back one of the greatest assets to rural Chilton County.

O. R. ROBINSON, Chairman.
T. E. WYATT, Sec'y-Treas.

Mr. Cecil Armstrong is in Clanton visiting friends and relatives this week.

State Banks Are In Improved Condition

Cash Reserves In Excess of June Figures With Less Overdrafts

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 8.—Dent F. Green, state superintendent of banks, in a prepared statement Monday, said that a report of 218 state banks and 17 branch banks in Alabama on Nov. 20, showed them to be in a better stragetic condition by far than they were in June.

Superintendent Green reported that on Nov. 20, the state and branch banks showed cash reserves of $3,000,000 over the June figure, with overdrafts having decreased approximately $11,000.

Pressing Collections

"Banks and merchants have been pressing their collections," Superintendent Green said, "and in spite of that demand deposits are only $400,000 less than they were in June, while savings deposits are approximately $1,500,000 than June 30.

"Upon the whole I believe our banks have made splendid progress when we take into consideration the adverse conditions that they have been facing all fall. If your people will continue to co-opertae and do their best, I believe our banks will be able to carry on another year and help our people in a reasonable way in caring for their needs."

Banks Owe Much Less

Superintendent Green stated that in June the banks owed approximately nine and ahalf million dollars in bills payable and rediscounts, while on Nov. 20 they owed $4,372,000 only, showing nearly $5,000,000 less in bills payable and rediscounts.

Total resources on Nov. 20 were reported at approximately $6,000,000 less than total resources on June 30, 1930, with the decrease in bills payable and rediscounts attributed by Superintendent Green as "almost wholly accounting" for the smaller figure for Nov. 20 in total resources.

Buy Christmas Seals Fight Tuberculosis

Liberal Support of This Cause Is Asked of Alabama People

No appeal for sympathy and support has met with the same degree of success as has the appeal to buy Christmas seals to fight tuberculosis. Throughout the entire nation and the world, at this season, the attention of people is called to the winning fight against this disease.

Twenty years ago tuberculosis was the first cause of death, taking an annual toll of 200 lives from each 100,000 people. Today it is sixth cause of death and takes a toll of 75 lives from each 100,000 people. A remarkable achievement.

The physician has learned much about tuberculosis during these years. We are in a better position to do something to control the disease. We can recognize it in its incipent forms as it occurs in children. We know something of its habits and its habitat. Scientists, chemists, technicians, have spent and are spending much time and effort to give to the world the latest information concerning it. Prevention is the watchword of health workers everywhere.

This achievement is all the more remarkable when we consider that the largest part of the resources in the battle to conquer tuberculosis, has been, for the most part, the proceeds of the Christmas seal sale. Everywhere in every hamlet throughout this nation, people have learned that Christmas seals fight tuberculosis, and have made the fight a vigorous and winning one.

Because of the democracy of the appeal, its universality and its success, we commend it to you. Seventy five per cent of the proceeds remain in each county for work with those who are engaged in our local county work, twenty per cent supports the work throughout the state, and five per cent goes to the National Association to support the work throughout the nation and make possible continued research.

Buy Christmas seals—use them on your mail and packages. Buy as many as you are able to buy, knowing full well that the proceeds will be used to continue the efforts to bring the disease into control, to make life more secure and to give health to thousands yet unborn.

COUNTY OFFERS HELP TO NEEDY

Chance To Work On Roads Is Given To Men Out of Jobs

According to Judge Reynolds, there seems to be some misunderstanding among the people of the county as to the purpose of the announcement which was made last week, wherein the Commissioners propose to help the people who need work by giving them employment on the county roads.

In further explanation of the purpose of the Commissioners, Judge Reynolds gives out the following statement this week:

"The intention of the Commissioners Court was for the overseers to hire hands who are in needy circumstances, and who need the work in order to get the necessaries of life. Also to hire teams and trucks from persons who are in distress.

"While we want the county to get full benefit from every dollar we spend, we also want every dollar we spend to help relieve distress.

"People who are in distress and need work are requested to give their names to the Commissioner in their district, if convenient; if not convenient to see the Commissioner, give your name to the road overseer in your beat. In this way those who need the work can be given employment.

"I urge the people of the county to help the Commissioners to carry out the intentions of this movement."

The determination of the Commissioners Court to use the road working operations of the county to help relieve distress is most commendable at this time. There are many people in our county who need work in order to obtain the necessaries for their families. This opportunity for them to obtain employment should be brought to the attention of every man who has a family in need.

People of the county should give this matter due consideration. The man who can get along without work should stand aside and let his neighbor who really needs the work have the jobs.

Already it has been said that the fellow who does not need the work will be the one who gets the jobs. This is not the intention of the Commissioners, and the overseers and the citizenship of the county should see that such is not the case.

If the intentions of the Commissioners Court are carried out in this business, it will go a long way towards relieving the distress in every part of the county. There should be a united and hearty co-operation on the part of every citizen with the Commissioners Court to the end that those who need help may get it.

CLANTON BERRY GROWERS TO MEET NEXT FRIDAY

You are hereby notified that all members of the Clanton Berry Growers Association are called to meet at the court house on Friday, December the twelfth at 1:00 p. m. It is very important that each member attend this meeting.

All other farmers interested in cash crops other than cotton are specially invited to come and let us plan together to get other cash crops. —W. T. Bean, Pres., J. N. Dennis, Sec'y, Clanton Berry Growers Association.

JIM DUNLAP WILL OPEN STORE

Mr. Jim Dunlap, for the past three years employed by Reedie Taylor, will go into business for himself this week. He will open a grocery and fruit store at the building recently vacated by Chicago Sales Company. He has already bought his stock of goods, and expects to be ready for business by the last of this week.

The new store, known as Dunlap's Place, will handle a full line of staple and fancy groceries, fruits and candies. Mr. Dunlap will make special preparations for the present Christmas trade, having arranged for a complete stock of fruits, nuts and candies.

Since he has been connected with business operations in Clanton, Mr. Dunlap has made a wide acquaintance with the people who trade here. In setting out in business for himself, he extends an invitation to all his friends to come to see him.

Gross farm receipts in the United States in 1930 will probably be about 16 per cent less than in 1929, largely because of widespread drouths in the country and the world-wide business depression, reports Arthur M. Hyde, United States secretary of agriculture, who said in his annual report that it has been an unusually bad year in agriculture.

TAX BURDEN ON MOTOR OWNERS IS ENORMOUS

The tax burden on owners of motor vehicles in Alabama, which seems to be the subject of some discussion at the present time, is enormous both relatively and in the aggregate. F. W. Gist, the statistician of the Department of Agriculture, has done some figuring on this matetr, which, while it is rather rough and tentative, discloses the tremendous size of this burden in its aggregate and incidentally in its serious effect on agriculture. Mr. Gist says:

"In 1929 there were registered in Alabama 286,000 motor vehicles, of which 248,000 were passenger automobiles and 36,000 were trucks. A conservative estimate of the investment in these vehicles is $230,000,000. This is about 7.7 per cent of the gross value of all property in the state. The taxes paid on these vehicles, including property tax, licenses, and gas tax, was for state, county, and city approximately $16,000,000. The portion of this tax going to the state was about $13,500,000, or 28 per cent of the gross receipts of the state. On the estimated value of all motor vehicles the tax burden amounted to 4.87 per cent, while on the estimated total value of al property in the state the average tax burden was 1.65 per cent and the state tax burden carried by all property other than motor vehicles to the state was about five times in proportion to value that paid by other property owners.

"Farmers have invested about $39,000,000 in 56,000 motor vehicles. It is safe to estimate that their share of the tax burden on these vehicles was $2,670,000, or $2,250,000 to the state. In other words he pays on his general property value of $300,000,000 only 58 per cent as much taxes as he pays on $39,000,00 invested in automobiles and trucks.

"In the general economy of road building the urban auto owner gets the full advantage of such road improvement as has been acomplished so far, while the farmer still has to travel over a very large distance of roads which has had no improvement whatever. These facts, especially as they apply to farmers, are worthy of careful consideration in the future."

PEANUT HAMS ARE GAINING FRIENDS

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 9.—Hams that come from hogs fattened on peanuts in southeast Alabama have made a good start in establishing themselves in the commissaries of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company in the Birmingham district. Three weeks ago they were stocked and President H. C. Ryding has information from the commissary managers that repeat orders are being received from the consumers and that no complaint has been heard.

This information was obtained by LeRoy Holt, purchasing agent for the Company, who called the commissary managers and butchers together for a talk with them about the peanut hams. Other than a little difference in handling them on the block they offered no complaints.

Buyers for the commissaries said that the price of the peanut hams is the same as corn-fed hams. On the other hand growers of peanuts hogs are being penalized 1½ cents per pound.

With a demand for them already created it is the intention of the company to carry them in the commissaries all the time, Mr. Ryding said.

This action on the part of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company is a part of an established policy of the company to use Alabama products wherever it is feasible to do so. Their commissaries are now stocked with numerous food products from Alabama farms. Butter eggs, cheese, canned products, and fresh vegetables produced in Alabama are handled in large quantities by the commissaries; and hay and other feed products from Alabama farms are fed to livestock of the company.

AN APPEAL

Kind Friends:

After reading this, if you can come to my aid, God knows I will thank you all my life. I have been a member of the Methodist church more than 40 years, and as God is my judge every word I write is true.

I am a badly deformed man having but one hand and it is deformed. Both my feet are deformed, and I have to use a crutch. I can not put on or take off my clothes without aid.

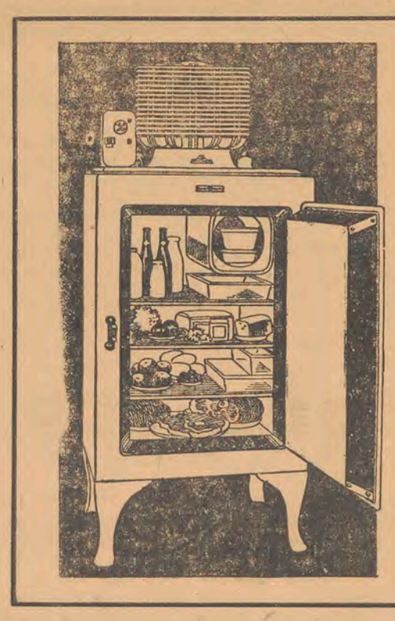
In spite of my deformity I have taught school 27 years. All my teaching in Alabama. I can no longer stand on my feet to do this work.

Now my wife is in a hospital at Montgomery, and we need help. Will you aid us? It is for that, that I ask help.

As you are about to enjoy the Christmas holidays, wont some of you remember us? Please don't one wait for the other.

As the blessed Savior hung upon the Cross his eyes turned heavenward, he cried: "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." So, my friend, it is with you. You do not know my need for help. I can only hope and pray God that this will touch a tender spot in your heart, and cause you to respond.

Send donations direct to Mrs. L. C. Pearce, 129 Bell St., Montgomery, Ala., or to the writer. Many, many thanks.



Truly yours,
L. C. PEARCE,
Luverne, Ala.

SAUL OF TARSUS: HOW A PHARISEE BECAME A CHRISTIAN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 22:3-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ.

PRIMARY TOPIC—An Enemy Who Became a Friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—An Enemy Who Became a Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What It Means to Be a Christian.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Conversion: Its Nature and Effect.

I. Saul's Training as a Pharisee (vv. 3, 4).

1. Taught to love his own nation. ("I am a Jew.") The Pharisees were the nationalists of their day. Saul being a strict Pharisee was a patriot.

2. Taught to love God's Law. "Taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers." Love for the Bible is a valuable asset in life. One may misinterpret the Bible and dangerously misapply it, but if there is love for it, he may yet come into right relation to it.

3. "Was zealous toward God." The root meaning of the word "zealous" is "to boil." It signifies a passion for God and his work.

4. Was conscientious (Acts 26:9, 10). Saul was conscientious in his opposition to Jesus. He regarded Jesus as an imposter. While Saul is to be condemned for his attitude toward Jesus, he is to be praised for responding to the dictates of his conscience. Conscience is the law of life for every man, but should be regulated by God's Word.

II. Saul's Burning Hatred of Jesus (vv. 4, 5, cf. Acts 9:1, 2).

He knew full well that unless the movement set on foot by Jesus was stopped it would supersede Judaism. However, he was entirely ignorant of the genius of Christianity. He did not know that "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." Stephen's noble display of faith intensified Saul's hatred of Jesus. It made him more determined than ever to stamp out the Nazarene heresy.

III. Saul Kicking Against the Pricks (vv. 6-11).

The figure here is of an eastern ox driver following the animal with a sharp iron attached to a pole. The ox is prodded along with this instrument, and if it is refractory and kicks against this iron, it only injures itself.

1. A light from heaven (v. 6). The time had now come for Jesus to interpose in behalf of his own. Saul is stricken with blindness and falls to the earth.

2. A voice from heaven (v. 7). This was the voice of Jesus saying, "Why persecutest thou me?" Jesus Christ is so closely identified with believers that he regards treatment of them as treatment of himself.

3. Saul's inquiry (vv. 8, 10). "Who art thou, Lord?" "What shall I do, Lord?" The dictator is now willing to be dictated to.

4. A second voice from heaven (vv. 8, 10). In response to Saul's inquiry, Jesus revealed himself, and instructed Saul what to do.

5. Saul entering Damascus (v. 11). This hitherto savage persecutor went humbly into the city, led by attendants. What went on in his soul during three days of blindness and fasting we can only surmise.

IV. Ananias Ministers to Saul (vv. 12-15).

1. Sent by the Lord (Acts 9:10-12). In a vision the Lord showed him that Saul was now a praying man. The name of Saul's host and the number of his street were made known to Ananias.

2. Ananias' hesitancy (Acts 9:13-16). Knowing Saul's violent hatred of Jesus, he was afraid to go near him until he received the divine message.

3. Ananias' message (vv. 13-15).

(1) "Brother Saul, receive thy sight." (v. 13). Sight was given.

(2) "The God of our fathers hath chosen thee" (v. 14).

This choice was for three things: a. "That thou shouldest know his will." This is true of every one chosen by the Lord. b. "And see that Just One." The sight of Jesus Christ transformed Saul's life. c. "And hear the voice of his mouth." How wonderful that even a savage persecutor should come to hear the voice of Jesus.

(3.) "Thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard" (v. 15).

Choice Is With God

Wretches that we are! to be keeping up jealousies of our Lord, when we should be rejoicing in his love. As if any man could choose Christ before Christ hath chosen him; or any man were more willing to be happy than Christ is to make him happy.—Baxter.

Charity resembleth fire, which inflameth all things it toucheth.—Erasmus.

COTTON SAID TO BE OF BETTER GRADE

Cotton of the present crop, ginned prior to November 1, was slightly better in grade and different in staple from the ginnings for the same period last year, and the total number of bales ginned prior to November 1 was reported to be 10,855,562 as compared with 10,891,900 for 1929, according to Bureau of Agricultural Economics in the monthly cotton, grade and staple report received by the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries.

"Of about 10,855,100 bales of American upland cotton ginned prior to November 1, 90.5 per cent was estimated to be white in color, compared with 89.1 per cent ginned during the corresponding period last year; 78.3 per cent was white, middling and better, compared with 75.4 per cent last year; cotton other than white and extra white was 7.5 per cent, compared with 8.9 per cent last year," the report said.

"The estimates of staple length of upland cotton show 14.2 per cent shorter than 7-8 inch, compared with 20. per cent ginned during the same period last year; 76.7 per cent, 7-8 to 1 1-32 inches, inclusive, compared with 68.1 per cent; and 9.1 per cent 1 1-16 and over, compared with 11.5 per cent a year ago.

"From the standpoint of tenderability in settlement of contracts made subject to section 5 of the United States Cotton Futures Act, an analysis of the figures indicates a total of 9,261,700 bales, or 85.3 per cent tenderable, compared with 78.8 per cent tenderable in the cast of cotton ginned prior to November 1, last year. Of tenderable cotton, 8,267,500 bales, or 76.1 per cent of total upland, ranged in staple from 7-8 inch to 1 1-32 inches, inclusive, and 994,200 bales were over 1 1-32 inches in staple. One million five hundred ninety-three thousand four hundred bales, or 14.7 per cent, of upland cotton were untenderable, compared with 21.2 per cent of last year's crop ginned up to the same date."

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Watson, who was operated on over two weeks ago at Dr. S. C. Wood's office, was able to be removed to their home on Monday of this week much improved, and we hope for him a speedy recovery.

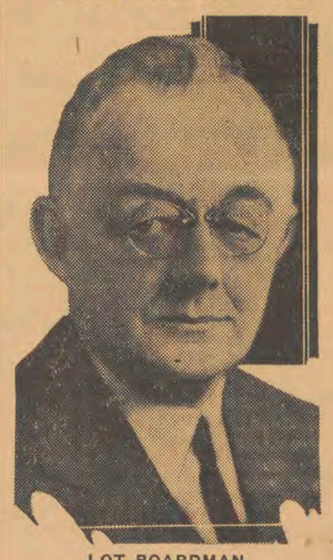
Style Trend For Windows

Net curtains in a new Georgian period design here soften the formality of the over-draperies and reflect the gracious atmosphere of the room.

THE well-dressed window, like the well-dressed woman, keeps pace with style. And in style details make up the correct whole. In curtains these all-important points are design, color, mesh and arrangement. With these satisfactorily solved, the window becomes, literally, well-dressed.



Heretofore glass curtains have been a difficult problem in carrying out the "period" room treatment. The fact that net curtains are hung straight against the pane stresses the design. If the motif is alien to the furnishings and wall-treatment, it spoils the unity of the room. If it is "just something neutral," the room becomes commonplace.

Net curtains authentically styled to period interiors are now seen in the shops in a considerable variety of designs. The ever-popular Colonial interior, for instance, will be enhanced by curtains featuring historic motifs. A variety of such timely designs have appeared "raught" in a natural color that simulates the unbleached tints associated with those early days. Or for the home in the English country house manner, there are designs in a new shade known as "pongee" to recreate the charm of Georgian days.

The new patterns seem sufficiently varied to meet all tastes and lighting requirements. Where wallpaper of pictorial interest is used, for instance, a more set pattern is required for contrast. For the room where daylight is precious, there are designs in light tracery. Still other patterns grow heavier in design toward the bottom so that an objectionable view may be concealed.

The usual mesh is ten point; that is to say, there are ten threads to the inch.

From 1889 to the 5-year period, 1922-1927 all important foodstuffs, except cereals, registered advances in consumption, a survey by the Department of Commerce reveals. Per capita consumption of sugar rose 44 pounds, milk 150 pounds, vegetable oils 10 pounds, while meat showed practically no change. The baking industry had a tremendous growth during the last decade, the report said.

...SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING

By GRACE VIALL GRAY

CHEESE STRAWS

Cheese straws made at home are one of the most appetizing delicacies one can serve with soup or salad. The only way I can account for their not being served more frequently is that there must be some idea lurking in the back of most women's minds that cheese straws are difficult, tricky things to make successfully. If this is how you feel about it, do try this recipe at the first opportunity!

Take a cupful of self-rising flour, which is simply soft wheat flour that does not need any baking powder or salt to be added because these ingredients have already been perfectly blended into it in the right proportions at the mill. Sift just once before measuring. Add to this three-fourths cupful of grated sharp cheese (sometimes referred to as "bitey" cheese) and one-fourth cupful of fat. Half a teaspoonful of paprika and a dash of

To make good pastry, such as cheese straws, with self-rising flour, cut the shortening into the flour with a "dough blender." This combines the flour and shortening quickly and efficiently. The advantage of using self-rising flour is manifold. It is economical, dependable and a great time saver, as the flour, baking powder and salt are all properly portioned and perfectly blended by the miller.

cayenne pepper complete the ingredients with the addition of enough cold water to make a stiff dough.

Add the water a little at a time. Roll the pastry out till a quarter of an inch thick and cut into strips a third of an inch wide and five inches long, using a pastry jagger or sharp knife. Place the strips on a baking sheet in even rows and bake in a hot oven.

Well Insulated.—"I wonder why it is that fat men are always good-natured,"

"Probably because it takes them so long to get mad clear through."—Capper's Weekly.

GRAPE FRUIT AND ORANGES FROM LAKELAND, FLORIDA

Once a good friend of The Union-Banner said to the editor: "If you fellows don't quit putting a long spiel in your paper every time a fellow sends you a mess of turnip greens I am going to stop subscribing." This was partly a joke and partly the truth.

Nevertheless, we cannot pass up this gift this week from Florida. Our good friend, Col. Cecil Smith of Lakeland, sent us a bunch of seven nice grapefruit Tuesday morning. They were brought here by Bulldog Kemp, who, in partnership with Tip Popwell, are hauling citrus fruits from Florida and distributing it throughout this section of the State. Besides the grapefruit, Mr. Kemp donated The Union-Banner a nice sack full of ripe oranges directly from the tree.

We wish to express our thanks from both Mr. Smith and Mr. Kemp for this fruit.

New Process for Dry Cleaning Now in Operation

We are glad to announce to our customers and friends that we have just installed and put into operation in our plant the very latest and most efficient dry cleaning device known to science.

This new machine carries out a process whereby all dirt and sediment is removed from the dry cleaning fluid just as fast as the fluid takes it out of the garment. Therefore, the garment is washed in absolutely clean fluid.

After the garment is passed through the dry cleaning fluid it goes through the drying machine, and on through a scientific deordorizing process. When finished, it is absolutely cleaned by a process that takes out all dirt and leaves no smell.

The absolute perfection of our dry cleaning process makes us able to handle the most delicate fabrics without any damage to texture or color.
We cordially invite the public to come in and see this equipment in operation.

State Capitol News

Expenditure of state appropriations for the national guard were $73,130.80 under the total amount authorized, as shown by the quadrennial report of General F. E. Butler, the Adjutant General, for the four years ending September 30, 1930.

The report, now ready for submission to Governor Bibb Graves, covers all of the operations and expenditures of the Military Department of the State and shows marked progress in all branches of this service, notwithstanding the economics practiced in handling state appropriations for this purpose.

The report states that "Economy in State expenditures has been obtained by utilizing the Federal funds allotted to this state to the fullest extent. It is the policy of this Department to practice economy and to safeguard the interests of the tax payers at all times."

The actual strength of the national guard exceed that authorized by the War Department, Militia Bureau. The report of General Butler shows that the actual strength of the organization as of October 1st, 1930, was 220 officers, 2 warrant officers and 2,491 enlisted men, and that the full authorized strength has been maintained throughout the four years.

"If the State of Alabama was aloted additional personnel, it would be an easy matter to recruit same. Several towns and cities of the State are anxious to secure a national guard unit," the report states.

Distribution of the sixty or more authorized units is shown to be equitable, so that no part of the state is far removed from a national guard organization. This distribution is shown:

1. 'In the extreme northern part of the state, at Huntsville, Athens and Hartselle, there is located the 127th Engineer Battalion. In the northern and central sections of the state, at Montgomery, Opelika, Gadsden, Talladega, Tuscaloosa, Greensboro, Selma, Guntersville, Albertville, Jacksonville, Ensley and Birmingham there is located the 167 Infantry Regiment. Headquarters Troop 23rd Cavalry Division is located at Birmingham.

In the southern part of Alabama, at Florala, Enterprise, Dothan, Andalusia, Greenville, Evergreen, Luverne, Geneva and Troy there is located the 117th Field Artillery Regiment. The 31st Infantry units and Special Troops are located at Mobile and Ozark. The Air Corps units are located at Birmingham. The 121st Motor Transport Company is located at Fort Deposit. The 106th Motorcycle Company at Foley. The 106th Ordinance Maintenance Company is located at Mobile. The 106 Ammunition Train is located at Elba. The 111th Motor Repair Section is located at Montgomery."

Expenditure of Federal Funds for the maintenance and equipment of this extensive organization within the State of Alabama runs into the millions of dollars.

The Adjutant General's report shows that the value of the federal property on hand with the various national guard organizations and in the state arsenal at Montgomery is approximately three million dollars. The safekeeping and the preservation of this property are entrusted to the Commanding Officers of the various units. The major items are clothing and equipment, airplanes, motor transport equipment, trucks, guns, horses and other miscellaneous supplies.

The system of inspection and accounting in force, and applied alike to state and federal property funds, is thorough and efficient. The present system of property accounting was inaugurated May 1st, 1927.

2. In comparison to the old method the necessary paper work has been doubled. One master accountant is maintained for all federal property shipped into the state for which the United States Property and Distributing officer is accountable. A seperate account is maintained for such organization.

The Finance Department of the regular army conducts a thorough audit of these finance and property accounts annually and it is shown in the report on each audit made during the past four years, no inaccuracies or imperfections were noted.

Prior to 1927 there were no regular and scheduled annual inventories of federal property on hand. In that year assistants from the Adjutant General's office were detailed to the various organizations for the purpose of inventorying the property and by the annual inventories since that time property shortages have been practically eliminated, and the amount of unserviceable property on hand greatly reduced.

A comparison of the federal expenditures for the past four years with those for the previous four year period reveals that $868,267.20 was expended during the present administration as against $659,579.78 during the former four year period, a difference of $218,687.42, and this does not include the $25,074 disbursed from the Atlanta office for expenses of sergeant instructors in Alabama. This averages a total increase of $58,410.43 annually, and the report shows that many expenditures formerly made from state funds have been executed from federal funds during the past four years.

Successful efforts have been made during the present administration to buy such supplies as forage, animal supplies and many other items within the State of Alabama. The purchasing department of the National Guard of Alabama has had an important influence in the decentrlization of such purchases.

3. The work of the national guard during the flood of March, 1929, and in other emergencies is reviewed by the report, which concludes with recommendations that the present State Military laws be rewritten for the purpose of clarity and brevity and to obviate certain present duplications also that the annual state appropriation be increased from $94,000.00 to $100,000.00 to care for present and prospective increased federal allotments to the Military Department of the State of Alabama.

LABELING AMERICAN GOODS

Whatever interest a buyer at retail may have in giving preference to American goods over the imported variety, he is often at a loss to find out whether he is doing so. In men's wear, for example, the shirt one buys usually bears the name of the maker of shirts, which may or may not be known as an American house to the purchaser. There is nothing to inform him whether the goods in the shirt have been woven in America or whether the shirt maker is taking advantage of woven material dumped into the American market by a foreign producer. The same is true of a suit of clothes, whether it be bought ready made or is made to measure from a piece of goods exhibited by a salesman. Not only is there nothing on the cloth to show its origin, but not infrequently the salesman and the storkeeper cannot tell whether the goods are domestic or imported.

This absence of conspicuous labeling is probably due to a realization on the part of manufacturers that few people are interested enough in the origin of goods they buy to warrant the cost and labor of labeling them. It is conceivable that a wider interest in the origin of goods would be stirred if manufacturers adopted the labeling process in spite of the apparent indifference. Having become accustomed to noting the "Made in America" legend, buyers would be apt to mark its omission and to be more persitent in asking the seller about it.

It is evident that a campaign in behalf of preference for domestic goods will not produce such results as are desired if people who stand ready to boost the campaign cannot discover without a good deal of trouble whether in their purchases they are helping along the good cause.—Fall River News.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

The largest monument left us by the mound builders is located near East St. Louis. It is 100 feet high, 1,060 feet long and about 700 feet wide, covering 16 acres. The culture of these Indians is now being carefully studied by our archeologists. Egypt is not the only country that has an interesting history.

We adopted the primary in order to give the people the oportunity to name their representatives. And we are now discovering that even under the old convention system the people had much more to say in the election of candidates for office. Americans are patient and long suffering, but some day a new method will be substituted for the present primary that will not be so far out of line with our American system of representative government.

Three hundred sixty-eight milion bushels is our potato crop for this year, which means three bushels for each of us if we get our share.

Studying methods to prevent unusual profits during a war and equalizing its burdens, is the commendable purpose of a congressional commission.

If the great nation across the Atlantic had expended intelligently for the prevention of war, one-tenth of the money and energy that they expended preparing for it, there probably would have been no European war.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

One of the facts concerning the recent election most commented on by political writers is the closeness of the vote in many states and in many districts where in a number of instances a corporal's guard of voters could have changed the results by voting differently or where a few more voters going to the polls might have decisively altered the result of the election. Quite often we have heard the so-called soverign citizen say that he did not intend taking the trouble to go to the polls because his vote would not alter the result in any event.

This closeness of the result in many parts of the country has inspired some writers to delve into the past for examples of where one or two votes might have made decisive changes in the result. Mr. W. H. Smith, writing in the Washington, D. C., Post, has revived the story of the famous DeKalb County, Indiana, instance, which has often been quoted in the past by politicians in their efforts to get out the vote. As Mr. Smith puts it:

"The vote of one farmer in DeKalb County, Ind., has been credited with bringing on the war with Mexico, with all its tremendous results of giving to the United States the vast empire now composing the states of New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah, Nevada, and California, and making, first Gen. Taylor President, and then Franklin Pierce."

According to the story the farmer didn't go to the polls in the morning but remembered late in the afternoon that he had promised his support to one of his friends who was running for the state legislature on the Democratic ticket. Being a man of his word, the farmer mounted his horse and rode to the voting place several miles away where just before the polls closed he deposited his ballot according to his promise, little dreaming of the tremendous influence that ballot would have on the history of the country. The friends for whom he cast his ballot was elected to the Indiana legislature by one vote. He went on his way to the state capitol and in due time came the day for the election of a United States senator. The Democratic candidate was Edward A. Hannegan and he was elected to the United States Senate by one vote, this ballot presumably being cast by the representative from DeKalb County who was elected by the one vote of his farmer friend. Senator Hannegan went to Washington. There was a long and bitter contest over the resolution declaring war on Mexico and for a long time with Senator Hannegan undecided on the resolution, the question of peace or war hung in the balance. Finally Senator Hannegan was induced to vote for the resolution and it was adopted by one vote, and war with Mexico was declared.

This is the story and politicians who dwell on it in their speeches when urging the people to vote, like to assume that the unsuspecting farmer in DeKalb County, Indiana, changed history by the vote he cast just before the polls closed that election evening. At any rate it is a good story and illustrates what it is possible to accomplish with one vote. The facts that the change of less than a thousand votes in New York in 1884 would have elected Blaine instead of Cleveland, and that the change of a few hundred votes in California in 1916 would have elected Hughes instead of Wilson are also frequently cited in appeals to the voters. Still it is hard to get the average voter to think that he individually may have so much influence on his country's destiny and as a result there is usually a big stay-at-home vote. The year 1930 was no exception.

NEEDLESS ALARM

In a recent statement, Frank L. Dame, president of the North American Company, expressed his belief that the investors in public utility securities have been neednessly alarmed by rumors and talk of adverse legislation as an outcome of the election. "Whether one party or the other is in power in nation or state," he says, "whether a legislative deadlock or a majority in opposition to the Executive administration, there is the satisfaction of certainty that the aim is now to help and not to harm business. Psychologically the effect of this condition should be most beneficial to the public utilities because they have been the chief target of unfounded rumors of adverse legislation."

Enclosed herewith is check for one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50), for which please renew my subscription to your paper.

I enjoy reading your paper and the contact with the people whom I know and with whom I spent so many pleasant years of my life. I particularly enjoy reading of the progress being made in that county, the new ideas and modern methods being carried out, and the very keen interest in education and determination on the part of the people to improve their surroundings.

Having progressed to a position in life considerably better than my native surroundings offered, I can thoroughly appreciate the many obstacles to overcome when breaking away from tradition, and can therefore understand the motives and purposes which have prompted the wonderful improvements in that county.

May I suggest, in my own opinion, Judge Reynolds has done much for the people of that county in the way of school and road improvements, and other improvements and developments.

I noticed while there last December, that the farmers are planting diversified crops which add to their incomes as well as improves living conditions. I was indeed surprised at these marvelous innovations and improvements. It really made me feel proud of my old home county. Your schools appear to be much better than those in many sections of the country, and great progress was noticed in road and other improvements.

My best wishes are with you all.

BRADFORD N. HEADLEY.

P. S.—Mr. T. E. Wyatt: Please extend to your wife, her father, and other friends of the Pleasant Cherry District, where I taught school, also others of the county, the seasons greetings and my best wishes.—B. N. H.

G. G. WILLIAMS THANKS FRIENDS

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to express our deep gratitude to the people of Concord for the surprise party they gave us Monday night, November 24. There was almost every good thing brought in the way of edibles—Canned fruit, vegetables, pork, flour, sugar, etc. Also, they brought five or six hundred pounds of cow feed. Being a preacher, of course I can not forget to mention the chickens they included. In all there were about $35 in value.

It would have been ungrateful in us to enjoy it all alone, so we carried a widow and her four children some of the edibles. Again we wish to thank you.—G. G. WILLIAMS.

THE SHORT SESSION

Certain internationalist statesmen and newspapers of similar faith in the United States are expressing the opinion that the World Court resolution ought to be brought up and considered at the coming short session of congress or in an extra session. Their reasons for this are not quite clear, for, so far as the average person can see, there is no crisis, either national or international, confronting us, which demands the consideration of the question of our membership in the World Court at this time.

The coming session of Congress will have plenty to do without dragging in controversial issues of this kind. First and most important are the great appropriation bills, and such legislation as may be needed to lighten the effects of the industrial depression this winter. If all of this is taken care of in the short session beginning in December and ending the forth of March with time out for the holidays, Congress will have functioned well indeed.

The President and the leaders of Congress in both parties quite properly are anxious to avoid the necessity of a special session of the new Congress after March 4. Such a session, it is believed, would very likely have the effect of further disturbing the economic equilibrium of the country, not because the country mistrusts the Congress elected this month, but because any session of Congress creates more or less uncertainty which is for the moment disturbing to business. But if controversial questions, the adjudication of which is not of immediate necessity, are thrust into the short session of Congress, a special session will be inevitable. This is an excellent time to refrain from rocking the boat and for devoting the principal portion of our time to the task of ending the depression which is adversely afecting all of the people of the United States at this time.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Sight No. 1: Earle Marcus pushing a baby buggy along the sidewalk in the business section of town. Just a buggy; no baby in it.

Christmas is just around the corner. Perhaps you knew that. Some say times are too hard for Christmas; and I will agree that they are a bit tight. I am sure, however, that Santa Claus knows about the condition of things. He will no doubt fill up his sack with things that are suitable to the times as well as the occasion.

"People in the South ought to be jumping up and down and rejoicing," said Boogy Roberts as he returned to Clanton Tuesday from Newark and New York. "You don't know anything about poor business and unemployment unless you could see a place like New York City," he continued. "When I was there one day last week, it was stated that seven hundred and fifty thousand people in New York City were out of a job. Think of it. That is about three times the entire population of Birmingham." Mr. Roberts is employed by Westinghouse Electric Co.

Talking with a fellow this week about becoming a member of the Kiwanis Club. He said he did not have time to devote to things like Kiwanis; that it requires every day and every hour of his time to keep his own business running. As I went away I began to think. As I thought I gathered together in my mind a considerable group of business men whom it seems to me ought to be in the Kiwanis Club, and thereby render some kind of beneficial service to this community. That is what the Kiwanis Club is seeking to do.

Generalizing the thought I concluded to leave it with an expression something like this: A man who is in business in Clanton, and making his living from this community, certainly ought to be willing to render some kind of community service in return for what he gets out of the community. I am sorry, however, that we have plenty of men who seem to be concerned only with making their own success, and not caring whether the community improves or not.

Some are just naturally that way. They do not help out in any of the community enterprises that must be constantly attended to by public spirited citizens. Yet they expect the community to give them a fat living. Then when they die I guess they expect the preachers to say that they were among our most useful citizens; and they expect the editors of the papers to use about two gallons of ink telling all about how valuable they were as citizens, and how much they will be missed.

I am glad of the action of the Commissioners Court in offering the road jobs of the county to men who need the work to secure the necessities of life for their families. That program, if carried out in the manner intended by the Commissioners, will mean a great deal of assistance to lots of needy people. Let us hope that the movement will gain the attention of our people all over the county. Every citizen should voluntarily help the road overseer to place the jobs with the men who need them most.

One man said to me Tuesday while discussing this road business: "I guess the fellow who could get along without the work will get those jobs; and the fellow who really needs the assistance will go on in want." I surely hope such will not be the case. The man who can get along without the job ought to stand aside and let the man in distress have the job. The road overseer should see that the fellow who can get along without the job does not get it. I believe that is what the Commissioners intended when they suggested this procedure.

As a toastmaster, John Ponder Lawrence is really a hot shot. He handled the football banquet last Friday night in great style. I found much satisfaction in the prospect of John Ponder becoming some day one of our most useful public men.

Percy Pitts left Tuesday for the annual deer hunt at the Allison Reserve in Sumpter County. All the newly elected members of the Alabama legislature will be assembled for this occasion. No doubt they will hunt deer, and otherwise have a most enjoyable time. But I guess the biggest business they do will be to settle the matter of who will be the Speaker of the House in the next legislative session.

As I stood on the corner I saw nearby an old negro sitting on the curb in the sun eating a can of sardines and a box of soda crackers. It made me think of the days long ago when one of the chiefest of my pleasures was to come to town with my daddy on a load of crossties, and get sardines and crackers (now and then candy) at the store of Uncle Jean Evans.

I heard a fellow say the other day that he knew of a fellow out in the country who killed hogs one day this week and threw away the chitlings. Now I am surprised to hear that anybody in Chilton County is so foolish as to do that. If I had a hog and had to choose between keeping any particular part of the hog against all the rest, I would just take the chitlings and throw away the hog.

Somebody in DeKalb County is going to have a greasy chin before long. A fellow came through here Tuesday with a truck load of fine shoats carrying them to the farmers of Sand Mountain. They came from Covington County.

WHAT THE ELECTRIC INDUSTRY IS DOING

In the face of a tremendous amount of political and partisan criticism, the privately owned American electric industry is going quietly ahead in its effort to extend, broaden and reduce the cost of service to its customers.

One utility management alone recently announced a $200,000,000 permanent improvement program to take care of the great potential future demand for gas and electricity. The expenditure of this sum will provide employment at good wages for thousands of American workmen. It will act as an example to other companies which may be curtailing expenditures due to "hard times." It will benefit, directly and indirectly, the farmer, the miner, the business man. everyone, in fact, who has a social or financial interest in American industry.

Throughout the nation other utilities are engaged in the greatest expansion programs in history. An almost incalculable sum of money is being spent so that homes and industries may receive the highest standard of service at the lowest possible price. So long as electric development depends on private iniative and enterprise, subject to fair public regulation, we will not lack investments needed to produce an abundant supply of power at reasonable prices.

Head and Back Quit Hurting

"A FEW years ago, I found that I was very weak and nothing I ate seemed to give me any strength," writes Mrs. R. B. Douglas, 704 South Congress St., Jackson, Miss.

"I suffered intense pain in my head and back. At times I would have to hold to something to steady myself, so as to do my little work. I was worried about my condition.

"My mother told me that I should take Cardui. After taking two bottles, I felt stronger, but I kept on taking it until my head and back quit hurting. I took about six bottles in all, and have never quit praising Cardui."

DEMAND IS GROWING FOR FEED AND GRAINS

With the coming of winter days the demand and market for feed and coarse grains strengthened during the last week in November, reports the grain, hay and feed market news service of the United States Bureau of Agriculture Economics. "Corn and oat prices advanced at the principle distributing markets, feeds were steadier to slightly higher, but hay prices were not materially changed," the report said.

Corn husking made generally good progress east of the Mississippi River but in the western part of the country the weather was unfavorable for field work, and some corn was too wet to crib or shell.

Is This $53,000,000 Pay Check Worth Keeping?

ALABAMA'S coal industry pays normally into the pockets of Alabama people the mighty sum of $53,000,000 annually. There is no part of Alabama—no citizen of Alabama—that does not share in this huge outlay, paid yearly in payrolls, in purchases, and in taxes.

Alabama's coal industry releases normally in wages to Alabama coal miners and employees $34,500,000. It furnishes employment directly to approximately 26,000 Alabama men. Allowing 4.9 persons to each family, that means that Alabama's coal mining payrolls actually support 127,400 Alabama people. This great group, the largest in the employ of any single Alabama industry, spends its wages for food products raised on Alabama farms, for merchandise bought at Alabama stores, for rent of Alabama homes, built on Alabama soil.

In addition to this huge sum, paid in normal years to its own employees, Alabama coal is directly responsible for state-wide employment in many other lines. To move the coal produced in Alabama mines the railroads use approximately 400,000 cars, or an average of about 1,333 cars a day throughout the normal year. Each train provides employment for a minimum of five men per train on each railroad division. Based upon the distribution points, it is conservatively estimated that Alabama coal normally provides 80,000 working days for trainmen and enginemen throughout the year in addition to the working time for other railway employees including shopmen, repairmen, clerks, etc.

Alabama's coal industry spends annually on the average of $6,200,000 for operating supplies and machinery, including lumber, cement, building supplies, etc. This does not include the sums ordinarily invested in good years for expansion and improvement programs. This $6,200,000 helps to support many hundred workers engaged in businesses which sell these supplies and in those Alabama industries, machine shops and foundries which make them.

Alabama's coal industry is one of Alabama's largest taxpayers, contributing about $2,000,000 yearly to our state treasury in ad valorem, franchise, capital stock license and tonnage taxes, which go to the support of schools, highways, courts and other State agencies in every county of the State.

As goes Alabama's coal industry, so goes general business in Alabama. When Alabama coal mines are working normally, Alabama's coal pay rolls are sending a steady srteam of wealth throughout our State. Railroad men are working full time. Farmers are getting good prices in a good market. More money is flowing into our State coffers. And all down the line, throughout our whole business structure, every citizen earns more and has more to spend.

—BUT when Alabama coal mines are working only one to three days a week, when Alabama's skilled coal miners can hardly buy the bare necessities of life, when Alabama railroads have thousands of cars standing idle, when train crews are laid off for lack of work, when Alabama farmers have no home market in which to sell their products—then every citizen of Alabama feels the full effects of depression.

It doesn't take imagination to picture this condition. It is here now. And it is here largely because Alabama's coal industry, which is Alabama's greatest key industry, is being destroyed by outside competition, that is sapping the roots of Alabama's great coal tree which for a hundred years has sheltered and protected Alabama business.

Natural gas pipe lines are pushing into Alabama and pushing Alabama men out of jobs. Natural gas pipe lines are cutting off the market for Alabama farm products and cutting down the huge payrolls which have heretofore made her prosperous.

Regardless of your occupation and regardless of your place of residence, YOU are a profit-sharing partner in Alabama's coal industry. YOU can help make it or help break it. If you burn fuels other than Alabama coal, you are taking money from your pocket and your neighbor's pocket. If you would bring back better times to Alabama you will keep your fires burning brightly with Alabama's own native fuel—ALABAMA COAL.

This is the first of a series of advertisements to be published by the undersigned coal companies about ALABAMA COAL and the Alabama Coal Industry.

"Oh John!" screamed the excited woman driver, "the car is running away!"

"Can you stop it?" asked thee worried husband.

"No."

"Well, then, see if you san't hit something cheap."

ANCESTOR WORSHIP

Here is where the far-famed American humor triumphed over the much abuseed English humor. We were all assembled at the dinner table at the house of a very respectable English family. They were, in fact, of the peerage, and thus were exteremely proud of their ancestory. The dienner having progressed, the host, who sat next to me, dug his hand into his pocket and pulled out a coin. We were all on edge, expecting a sleight-of-hand trick, but no.

"Do you see the picturee of the king on the coin?" he said. "Well, he made my father a great-grandfather, a lord."

One of our party quite dissappointed that it was no trick, pulled out a coin from his pocket saying, "See that Indian on this nickel? Well, he made my great-grandfather an angel."

NINETY DISASTERS CALL FOR RED CROSS RELIEF, AT COST OF $1,200,000

Vice Chairman Fieser Cites Readiness to Act of National Society, Which Lessens Loss of Life—3,500 Chapters Aid in Work.

Readiness to act in an emergency, should a disaster strike, has become part of the Red Cross Chapter program in thousands of communities. The need for this training of local committees was revealed last year, when more than ninety communities required disaster relief work by the Red Cross.

As in former years, tornadoes brought the greatest damage. Twenty-four serious tornadoes occurred. Fire also took toll of life and property in twenty-four communities. Seven forest fires did great damage; eighteen areas were affected by floods, and nine storms caused heavy losses. Other disasters were cloudbursts, cyclones, epidemics, mine explosions and shipwrecks. In the insular possessions of the United States the Red Cross gave relief in twelve disasters, chiefly from hurricanes. In foreign countries relief was given by the American Red Cross in six instances of earthquakes, floods and to refugees.

The disaster relief work of the Red Cross cost $1,208,151 last year. Statistics showed an approximate death rate of 790 persons in these disasters; buildings destroyed or damaged, 19,578; persons injured, 1,487, and persons assisted by the Red Cross, 96,872.

Through disaster preparedness of Red Cross Chapters, undoubtedly great numbers of lives were saved, and much distress and grief following the calamities was prevented, according to James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations of the Red Cross.

. . . SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING

By GRACE VIALL GRAY

Pre-Leavened Flour Takes Guess-Work Out of Muffin Baking

Quick breads, of which muffins are a type, have an important place in our meals since they act as an emergency bread and are enjoyed by our families for their freshness and variety in flavor and texture.

Success with muffins as with all other quick breads depends largely upon the kind and amount of leavening agent used and the method of baking. Accurate measurement and good material are necessary, with close attention to oven temperature.

To be wholesome, quick breads must be thoroughly baked and free from all heaviness. Inasmuch as muffins depend for their success upon the kind and amount of leavening agent used, that should be of utmost importance to us in their making. And we can have good muffins every time we make them if we use self-rising flour in making them.

Self-rising flour is pre-leavened flour. That is, it is flour to which the baking powder and salt have been added in the proper proportions. This combining of the main ingredients of muffins makes baking simple and easy for us. A chemist, highly trained and experienced, does all the actual hard work for us. All that we have to do is to add the egg or eggs, the milk and the fat and then we have our muffin batter.

Not only has the chemist done this accurate, difficult task for us by combining the flour and leavening in correct proportions, but under his direction the self-rising flour has been sifted and mixed together by machinery for 15 minutes, which means that we have our principal ingredients, flour, baking powder and salt, sifted for us as we could never sift them ourselves. Because of this we get finer grain muffins.

I find it best to have a standard muffin recipe which can be used as a base for variations. If we master one good muffin recipe then we can make an endless variety of muffins. Such a basic recipe is as follows:

2 cups self-rising flour
3 tbsp. sugar
1 egg
1 cup milk
4 tbsp. melted shortening

Sift and measure the flour. Add eggs, milk, melted and cooled shortening. Beat vigorously. Pour batter into well-greased muffin tins, half filling them, and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) 18 to 20 minutes. This recipe makes 14 muffins.

Now, you can take this foundation recipe and make blueberry or date muffins, poppy seed, chocolate or coconut muffins. And then there are cereal muffins, nut muffins, and french muffins, and I suggest you try some of the following delicious muffins:

Date or Raisin Muffins.

Use basic recipe with but three-fourths cupful of milk. Flour two thirds cup chopped and pitted dates or raisins and add to batter. If you like a sweeter date muffin add one-fourth cupful more sugar. For variety one-half cupful finely chopped citron and candied cherries may be used instead of the dates or raisins.

Coconut Muffins.

Use basic recipe, omit shortening and add one-half cupful shredded coconut. These are best baked in tiny greased muffin tins so that you have about 24 small ones.

Jam Muffins.

Use basic recipe and stir in four tablespoons raspberry jam, strawberry jam or any other desired jam.

Poppy Seed Muffins.

Use basic recipe and sprinkle poppy seeds over the top.

Artists' Troubles

Apropos the alleged neglect by the public of modern artists, Miss Frances Dodd, A. R. A., tells the story of a wealthy lady who had come to a certain artist's studio to look at his pictures.

At the end of two hours she made no indication that she would like to buy one, though the artist had patiently gone around explaining their different points.

At last she said: "My dear man, I wonder if there is anything vainer in the world than you artists over your pictures."

"Yes, madame," was the reply, "our efforts to sell them."

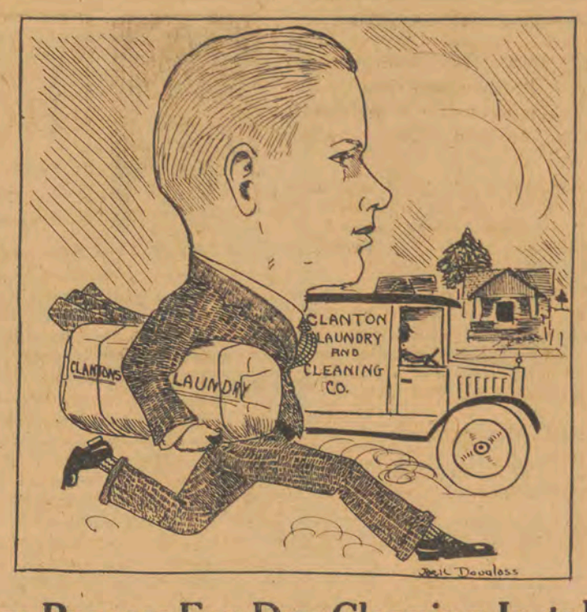
The Boy and the Pin

The business man was telling a friend of the beginning of his successful career. "I got my start in life," he said, "through picking up a pin in the street. A wholesale merchant that I had asked for work had turned me down, and on my way out I saw a pin. I—"

"Yes, yes," interrupted the friend. "You picked it up, the merchant was impressed by your carefulness, called you back, and made you the head of the firm. I've heard of that boy very often." "Not at all," retorted the business man. "I picked up the pin and sold it. It was a diamond pin."

White House Baths

"Charming Dolly Madison," one of the most gracious of White House mistresses, set aside rooms for bathing, and instituted the first Presidential bathtubs. These bathtubs remained in the White House only until the entrance of Andrew Jackson, first plebeian President, who promptly chucked them out of doors for representing something decidedly undemocratic, and therefore offensive to the common people. However, the bathtub returned with the fastidious Fillmore to remain evermore enshrined, although the Fillmore tub has long since been replaced.



Too Big to Lose

Billy Brown was dreaming of the glorious game of football he was going to have as soon as he got out of school. He wasn't a bit interested in the elephant, which was the subject of the lesson to which he ought to have been listening. The teacher saw this and pounced on him.

"Brown, where are elephants found?" he demanded sternly.

Billy was staggered for a moment, but rose gallantly to the occasion.

"P-please, sir," he stammered, "elephants are so big that they're hardly ever lost!"

New Process For Dry Cleaning Installed At Plant of Clanton Laundry

In keeping with his policy to provide the very best service for his customers, Mr. Leo Thompson, proprietor of the Clanton Laundry and Cleaning Company, announces the installation of a new process for dry cleaning. It is the latest and most efficient dry cleaning device known to science.

This new machine involves a process of filtering, whereby all dirt and sediment is removed from the dry cleaning fluid just as fast as the fluid takes it out of the garment. Therefore, the garment is washed in absolutely clean fluid, which fact naturally gives better results than washing in a fluid that is heavily laden with impurities.

After the garment is passed out of the dry cleaning fluid, it goes through the drying machine, and on through a scientific deodorizing process. When finished it is absolutely cleaned by a process that removes all dirt and leaves no smell.

This absolute perfection of the dry cleaning process makes the Clanton Laundry able to handle the most delicate fabrics without any damage to texture or color.

Mr. Thompson extends a cordial invitation to the public to visit his plant and see the various operations which are carried on in serving his customers. You will find a trip through the plant very interesting, as well as educational. Everything is done according to strictly scientifis metods, the latest and most approved machinery doing every operation.

CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL

For the past ten or twelve weeks the fifth and sixth grades have been having a contest in arithmetic. Two sides were chosen in each class, and all of the children have been working hard because the losing side has to entertain the side which wins. The entertainment will be next week.

On Friday, December 19th there will be a Christmas program in each room, beginning at 830 o'clock. Any visitors who desire to come will be welcomed, and after the Christmas exercises are over, the children will be dismissed for the holidays, which will last until Monday, December 29th.

On Friday, December 12th, the regular meeting of the P.-T. A. will be held at 2:30 p.m. All parents are urged to be present. Last month the second grade was given the half-holiday for having the most parents present.

Some undernourished children who are not able to have lunch in the lunchroom are being cared for by the P.-T. A. and by individuals in town. Not only the children who are benefitted but also the faculty appreciates this kindly interest.

BIGGER AND BETTER

THE NEW CHEVROLET SIX HAS MANY IMPROVEMENTS

The introduction of the new Chevrolet Six marks the most impressive forward step in Chevrolet's twenty-year record of constant progress and improvement. For this Bigger and Better Six offers new beauty, new luxury, new completeness and new quality—yet it sells at lower prices!

The improvements in the new Chevrolet Six begin at the smart new chrome-plated headlamps and extend throughout the entire car. The radiator is deeper and unusually efficient. Due to the increased wheelbase, the lines are longer and lower, giving an air of exceptional fleetness and grace. And the new Fisher bodies combine with this more attractive exterior appearance, a new degree of interior luxury.

The chassis of the new Chevrolet Six has also been refined and advanced in a number of different ways. The frame is heavier and deeper. There is a smoother operating, long lived clutch; a sturdier front axle; an entirely new steering mechanism; an easier shifting transmission.

And along with these improvements, Chevrolet offers a 50-horsepower, six-cylinder motor—four long semi-elliptic springs—four hydraulic shock absorbers—a safety gasoline tank—and an economy of operation not surpassed by any automobile.

The amazing success of this prescription called Thoxine is due to its quick double action; it immediately soothes the irritation and goes direct to the internal cause not reached by ordinary medicines. The very first swallow usually stops even the most obstinate cough.

Thoxine is pleasant tasting and safe for the whole family. Your money will be refunded if it does not give better and quicker relief for coughs or sore throat than anything you have ever tried. Put up ready for use in 35c, 60c, and $1.00 bottles. Sold by Upchurch Drug Company, Clanton, Ala.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

Only nine more days till vacation begins.

Alabama's football team took the week off, no work, just rest and plan for Alabama's invasion, which is the third one, to Rose Bowl.

Monday will find all of them back at work though. By the way, did you know that Alabama's backfield is comprised of four flatfooted men? Cain, Campbell, Suther and McRight all have flat feet.

Sington has made all of the All-American choices yet published and Suther has made several. What this correspondent can't understand is why Campbell don't get more recognition, when the entire backfield of Alabama is made around Campbell, and besides he plays safety, passes, calls signals sometimes, and tries for point after touchdown? He is the man when a few yards are needed.

Tom McKnight, head of the University news bureau, left last Saturday for Los Angeles to spread a publicity path in the wake of the oncoming Crimson Tide.

The University Glee club is on tour, having left on the first. They are giving concerts at Montevallo, Luverne, Atmore, Mobile, Montgomery, and Marion. They have been received with fervor everywhere, and who have heard them have been loud in extolling their praise for the boys.

The centennial edition of the Corolla, Alabama's Annual (which by the way, happens to be the largest college annual in the South) is rapidly nearing completion. All pictures have been made and are in the hands of the engraver.

The Capstone quintet have begun training for their defense of the Southern Conference championship which they won last year. Let us hope that they are as successful this year as last.

Everyone is busy making all they can for the last stretch before Christmas, for about a week after we return in January the mid-term exams begin and, oh boy! what a pain.

Only nine more days and all Clantonians will begin their pilgrimage to Clanton and vicinity to make a joyous Yuletide and we hope we shall all enjoy this much needed rest.

Mr. Julian Brown, Extension Horticulturist, from Auburn, was in the County two days this week visiting home orchard projects with County Agent, Stapp.

Experiments in the growth of sugar beets in the Manitoba province of Canada have proven highly satisfactory, with prospects that this will become an important industry. The American Sugar Beet Company of Denver Colorado, is reported to be considering installation of a sugar beet plant in Manitoba at a cost of $1,500,000.

Press dispatches from Washington indicate that one of the early acts of Congress will be to give the Federal Farm Board an additional $250,000,000 to continue the Board's program of work. This amount is half of the half-billion-dollar authorization included in the agricultural marketing act which created the board.

Home Economics Girls Display Work
(By Dorothy McKinnon)

The pupils of the home economics department marched on the stage Friday morning to show the school the difference between the modern and the old fashioned cooking dress uniform. The modern smock has many advantages over the plain white apron of yesterday. The long sleeves protect the dress sleeves, and cover the entire dress. The apron only protects the front of the dress. The head band is a new addition to the custome which keeps the hair in place. The two holders also protect the hands. The modern smocks are made in pastel shades, which are more characteristic. There are three classes of the home economics department, each class selected a different color, being green, pink, and yellow.

Students Become Real Salesmen
(By Elizabeth Stanley)

The Junior and Senior high school competed between each other during the contest put on by the Curtis Publishing Company for subscriptions to their magazines. A total of $31.90 was realized in all. Half of this amount went to the school, and was used in defraying the expenses of the football banquet. Lois Miller sold one-fourth of all the school. Lois, Inez Bishop, and Dixie Johnson received prizes because of selling the most subscriptions.

How To Keep the Home and Family Free From Disease
(By Mary Heard)

The most important thing in keeping the home and family free from disease is cleanliness. Warmth, moisture, and darkness are essentials for the development of germs. We should remember this and have plenty of fresh air and light in our homes at all times. All our curtains, rugs, etc., should be kept perfectly clean. Bed linen and clothes of the different members of the family should be kept spotless.

The four ways that disease germs enter the body are: Through the nose, wounds, insect bites, and by food that is eaten. The first three ways can be prevented by a disinfectant. The fourth can be prevented by using fresh food. And if the cook is very careful in the preparation and serving of the food as well as in washing the dishes. To build up a high resistance to disease a person should eat proper food, play hard, work hard, get plenty of sleep regularly, and avoid excesses in anything. In order to keep home and family free from disease we must do our part to keep the community we live in free from disease. We should do all in our power to get an efficient board of health, pure water, clean streets, and stores, proper sewerage, etc., all are factors for a better community.

Class Football Game
(By John Ezell)

Last Wednesday evening the most interesting football game of the season was played. The Senior II Tigers and the Senior I Bears, under the very efficient coaching of Paul Cox and "Dooney" Wagoner, put up a battle royal. Both teams were in fine shape for the game, as both had been practicing for several days and were confident of victory. The battle in the end was a one-sided affair of 6-0 in favor of Paul's "Tigers." The main purpose of this game was to get a line on the future foot ball stars. You can bet C. C. H. S. will have its share of victory in the years to come.

Football Banquet Last Friday Night At Baptist Church
(By Jane Roberts)

A most enjoyable occasion was enjoyed by those who attended the football banquet last Friday night at the Baptist Church. The church was beautifully decorated in our school colors, blue and gold. The place cards and souvenirs also were very atractive. After a delightful dinner course the captain and alternate captain were elected for another year. Robert Sumner was elected captain, and Herman Harris, alternate captain. Each one stood and accepted their offices, pledging themselves whole-heartedly to do his best to make next year's team a success in every way. Appropriate speeches were made by invited guests from the town. We wish to extend our heartiest thanks to the good ladies of the Baptist Church who served the meal in such a splendid and appetizing manner.

The following C. C. H. S. boys received letters in football this season:

Captain Paul Cox.
Alternate captain, Edwin Wagoner.

Mr. Stapp will be present to lead the discussion. Farmers interested are requested to get in touch with Mr. W. A. Gullege at Verbena.

UNION SERVICE HELD LAST SUNDAY NIGHT

A large congregation composed of representatives of all denominations in the city gathered at the Clanton Methodist Church Sunday night for a union service in greeting to Rev. D. W. Hasker, the new pastor of the Methodist Church, who comes here from Eufaula to succeed Rev. Childs.

The greeting to the new pastor was very cordial and hearty, not only by his own church, but all others as well. Brother Hasker has made a good impression upon the people here. His personality is striking, and indicates that he will find a very ready admiration in the hearts of the people of Clanton.

New Children's Crusade Led by 1,100 Scientists

At Call of President Hoover, Women Pioneers Rally to Cause of Childhood

Washington, D. C.—More than 700 years ago a children's crusade brought death to nearly 90,000 children.

The new children's crusade, led by the President of the United States and 1,100 scientific idealists, will bring more abundant life to hundreds of thousands of children when the plans for the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection come to fruition.

Making surveys of child problems under the direction of the President and his aides, Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur, chairman of the Conference, and Dr. H. E. Barnard, director, are many pioneers in work for children. A number are women.

One, Miss Julia Lathrop was the first chief of the United States Children's Bureau after its formation. She is a member of the Planning Committee of the Conference to be held November 19-22 here, and also of the Education and Training section.

A memorandum prepared by Grace Abbott, another pioneer, for the League of Nations in 1923 led to an investigation of the traffic in women and children in the western world. Since 1921 she has been head of the Children's Bureau. She is a member of the Conference Planning Committee and of the section on Public Health Service and Administration.

Miss Martha Van Rensselaer's name appears upon all the lists of America's greatest women. She is Director of the New York State College of Home Economics at Cornell, and a pioneer in work for farm women and children. She is associate director of the Conference and member of the Training and Education section.

Lillian D. Wald, founder of the Henry Street Settlement in New York City, and originator of the district nursing idea, is working with the Conference section on Education and Training.

Milk for Damages

A salesman and his wife were making a hurried automobile drive. On a very narrow road a cow was placidly parked. No amount of tooting of the horn could persuade the animal to give the travelers room to pass.

The husband proceeded to lead the cow from the road, and, returning to the car much perturbed, said: "That cow has delayed us and I'll probably lose the sale."

"If I were you I would milk her for damages," suggested the practical wife.

Christmas Tree Bugaboo

The question is often asked if the Christmas tree custom is not a wasteful drain on our forests, says the American Tree association. Foresters reply that the Christmas trees used by every person in the land could be grown on a few thousand acres of land and that their use has practically no effect on the present drain on our forests. Growing trees for the holidays is becoming an important industry.

Effective

When Gen. Primo de Rivera, the dictator of Spain, resigned, it was revealed that wireless had been used for antidictatorial propaganda.

Somewhere, apparently, there was a secret broadcasting station which sent out, at regular intervals, a brief but effective program. A voice would announce "General Rivera is about to speak," and then, over the air, would come the hehaw of a donkey.

Bread and Digestion

There has never been an accurate experiment made for determining the length and time necessary to digest bread. Different systems naturally require different lengths of time, and the age and composition of the bread must be taken into consideration. At one recent experiment a professor ate a certain amount of bread on an absolutely empty stomach. By means of certain tests and X-ray pictures it was decided that it took him about two hours to digest the bread.

Observe All Saints Day With Light and Music

In case any are further interested in the manner in which All Saints day is observed in Philippine cemeteries, we append the following additional characteristics of the annual celebration: The poor burn candles on the graves, while those who are financially able install electric lights. At night the cemeteries are seas of lights. Pictures of the departed persons are set up on the graves, and roving bands of musicians wend through the precincts and play pieces for them on the payment of 50 centavos (50 cents) by sorrowful relatives. The mausoleums of the rich are opened to the public, and long lines of persons course through them throughout the day and night.

The custom of playing lively rather than slow music in the cemeteries here is obscure, but it occurred during Spanish times. One story is that it originated during an appalling epidemic. People were dying by hundreds. The Spanish authorities, fearing the bad psychological effect of dirges, prohibited the playing of them. —North China Standard, Peiping.

Many Oxfords in America

Seats of classical learning have exerted their influence on our country's nomenclature. Harvard, Yale and Princeton divide honors in this respect with Oxford and Cambridge. Twenty-three states of the Union have Oxfords on their rosters. Oxford, Ohio, is, appropriately, the seat of a college, but a crossroads hamlet of 100 persons bears that name in Arkansas. California and Maine, Florida and Michigan and a middle western group of Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Wisconsin are among the other states that share in the name of Oxford, the glory of a vision of gleaming spires.—Exchange.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

POOLERS GET CASH FOR THEIR UNSOLD COTTON

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 9.—By sending checks to its members for unsold cotton in the pools of 1927-28, 1928-29 and 1929-30, the Alabama farm bureau cotton association has released $325,000 for circulation in general business channels of Alabama, it is announced by Allen Northington, Secretary-Manager.

"Release of the money should be a great help to the farmers and also to business in general at this time when cotton prices are low and there is a general economic depression," he said.

This settlement was made possible through co-operation of the Federal Farm Bureau and the Cotton Stabilization Corporation. Members received 15.64 cents per pound, basis middling white seven-eighths inch staple. This is a fraction more than 6 cents above present market quotations.

The cotton in the sttlement did not include any placed in the 1930-31 pool, but was cotton carried over from former years.

The Stabilization Corporation now has 1,225,000 bales of cotton which it is holding off the market, a fact which, in the opinion of cotton experts, has served to keep the staple price from sinking to even lower levels. The 1,225,000 bales represents cotton from all the cotton corporatives.

FIRST GRADED NUTS ARE SHIPPED BY THE CO-OP

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 9.—The first carloads of machine graded pecans ever loaded in Alabama were shipped from here to Memphis last week by the Central Pecan Growers Association.

The car held 100,000 pounds and went to the National Pecan Marketing Association. O. J. Wenzel of Jackson Mississippi, manager of the plant operations for the national association and is assembling nuts to be marketed for grower. The nuts are graded here under the supervision of J. B. Sylvest, marketing specialist for the extension service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The Alabama organization has received to date more than 140,000 pounds of pecans for marketing, and others are being pooled at the rate of from 5,000 to 10,000 pounds per day. More than 350 growers have nuts in the pool.

Liberal advances are being made by the association to its members.

NORTHINGTON ASKS THE BANKERS TO POOL TOO

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 9.—A move bankers and merchants can take to prevent further decline in the price of cotton is pointed out by Allen Northington, secretary-manager of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association in a letter mailed to Alabama bankers.

He said that a large amount of cotton was still in the hands of producers, and that he believes much forced selling would probably cause the market to go lower. To help alleviate the situation he suggested that it would be wise for banks, in view of depressed business conditions and also the very low price of cotton, to pool cotton they are holding as security for customers' indebteuness with the association, get the advance of 90 per cent offered and liquidate their customers, indebtedness to this extent.

Mr. Northington believes that if bankers and mechants will liquidate their cotton loans by pooling the cotton with the association, it will have a decided tendency to steady the market and prevent further decline.

Continuing Mr. Northington said: "We feel like where the producer can give you practically as much on their indebtedness by placing cotton with the association as they could by selling they should be entitled to an opportunity to take advantage of any advance we might later have in price. With improved mill conditions and also reduced acreage which we might feel sure will be brought above present low phices, it is reasonable to expect improvement in the market before next summer."

BETTER BUSINESS SITUATIONS ARE SEEN

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 9.—Encouraging information concerning the general business situation in Alabama is contained in the initial issue of the Alabama Economic Review, which is published by the bureau of economic research and the department of agricultural economics of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn. It is a monthly summary of the agricultural, industrial, and financial conditions in the State and nation.

The statement is made in the publication that "Alabama has suffered from the business depression less in many respects than the neighboring states."

This statement is sustained by statistics on bank debits, building contracts, iron oreproduction, coal production, lumber production, and the operation of cotton spindles.

Attention is called to the fact that "the recent wave of bank failures which has spread throughout the South and the West has not hit Alabama." It continues, "Neither did this state suffer from business failures during the third quarter of the year as severely as the country in general. Liabilities of the insolvent businesses of all types were smaller during the third quarter than for the preceding quarter."

The foreword to the publication was written by Bradford Knapp, President of Auburn, explaining its mission and how the work is done. It is being sent to a large list of readers in business, finance, agriculture, and education in Alabama. The mailing list contains the names of all the newspaper of the state. Many names are being added by special request.

GOOD PASTURES NEED GUARDING

One Mistake To Be Avoided Is Allowing Cattle To Graze Too Early In the Spring

In a country where land is as cheap and as plentiful as it is in the United States it is not surprising perhaps that we have not become the pasture experts our brothers claim to be on the other side of the water.

In Holland, for instance, land is worth anywhere from $500 to $1,000 an acre. To make that land profitable for pasturing requires no little skill especially where you have to pay in rental each year as much as land sells for in many sections of the United States. The sod has been pastured for centuries. The Hollanders nurse it and protect it as carefully as we protect our most important crops.

To show you the difference between good pasture land and poor pasturing in this country, an ordinary cow can get along very well on two and one-half acres of Kentucky or Canadian blue grass, or any other good permanent grazing ground. On the other hand it takes from 10 to 20 acres of our wild western ranges or unimproved prairie land to support the same cow.

One rule is never violated by careful pasture owners, that of allowing the cattle to go onto the grass too early in the spring. The grass must be allowed to get a good start before it is called upon to withstand the sharp hoofs of the cow. It is also very injurious to the sod to allow pasturing during the winter or the late fall when the ground is apt to be wet and soggy.

It is a little difficult to fix exact dates at which cows should go onto the pasture because of the different climatic conditions in various parts of the country. As a general rule, pastures are ready in the southern states about the middle of March. April 1st is a safe day for the majority of pastures in northern Oklahoma, southern Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee and states in the same latitude. From April 20th to May 5th takes in the north central states such as Nebraska and Iowa. Across the northern section of the United States it is frequently advisable to delay pasturing until the latter part of May or first of June.

One way to test the efficiency of your pasture is to see whether it is able to furnish sufficient feed through the normal grazing season. If your pasture gives out too early it may be that you are using it too soon in the spring.

These are minor points perhaps, but dairy animals should not be required to travel a long distance in order to secure their food. Therefore, it is highly desirable to have the pasture near the barn. Also, that it have a sufficient supply of good drinking water in it or near it.

Another mistake many farmers make is to shut off the feeding of the cows in the spring. That is a good way to cut down on their production because grass in the spring is mostly water. It cannot possibly contain enough of the necessary food value to maintain the normal diet of the producing cow. Therefore, you should continue the feeding of grain and hay or silage. As a matter of fact, even the best pasture is not a sufficient diet for dairy cows any time of the year. If your herd is producing twenty-five pounds (pints) of milk daily per cow on grass, you should feed about one pound of grain to every six or seven pounds of milk. A cow that is producing forty pounds of milk daily should have its pasturage supplemented by one pound of grain to each four or five pounds of milk.

This subject of feeding is so important in connection with the volume of milk secured from the herd that I feel too much emphasis cannot be placed upon it. The poorest economy in the world is to save money on feeding. Your cows will produce in direct proportion to the amount of correct feding.

ALABAMIANS URGED TO SUPPORT DROUTH BILL

Seth P. Storrs, Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries and chairman of the Alabama Drouth Relief Committee has issued a statement urging Alabamians to wire their senators and representatives to support the Aswell Drouth relief bill in the House and the Robinson bill in the Senate, providing for an appropriation of $60,000,000 to be loaned to farmers for the purchase of seed, feed and fertilizers.

Not only does Commissioner Storrs insist on the $60,000,000 appropriation but he urges that Alabamians ask their representatives in Congress to insist that the aid be extended to all farmers in Alabama and not be limited to the counties designated as being in the drouth area. He desires that the appropriation be made to Alabama as a unit instead of being made to certain counties in the state which have been listed as drouth stricken.

He explains that many farmers in all counties of the state need help. If the bill is passed and the appropriation made to only the drouth stricken counties farmers in the counties not so designated will not receive aid. He continues to insist that the aid be extended to all farmers of Alabama who suffered because of the drouth.

Mr. Storrs points out the fact that when the drouth relief legislation is passed that the loans will be made by the county drouth committees. He advises those applying for assistance to see the county agent or the probate judge.

FEDERAL INSPECTION OF ALABAMA TIMBER

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 8.—Two inspectors of the United States Forest Service, Mr. A. B. Hastings and Mr. H. J. Eberly, visited Alabama during the past week and made a tour of the southwestern part of the state in company with Colonel Page S. Bunker, state forester. The counties visited included Montgomery, Lowndes, Butler, Wilcox, Monroe, Escambia, Baldwin, Mobile, Washington, Choctaw and Sumpter. All of these counties are among those in which the forestral work of the state in cooperation with the United States Forest Service and the local communities is carried on, with the exception of the counties of Montgomery, Lowndes and Wilcox. Lack of adequate state appropriation has thus far prevented public assistance in forestry in these counties.

Mr. Hastings is chief of the federal office of state cooperation at Washington, D. C., and Mr. Eberly is district forestry inspector with headquarters at New Orleans. Both were gratified at the accelerated growth of young timber occurring on the nonagricultural lands of the commonwealth since the beginning of the state's efforts to develop this source of production. The progress made is an important consideration in the allotment of United States funds to the state under a cooperative agreement with the department.

Prior to the creation of the state forestry department in 1923 federal funds for forestral purposes had been consistently withheld from Alabama. With the establishment of a technical department vested with the responsibility of advancing timber production throughout Alabama under procedures and methods approved by the governnment, substantial allotments have been made to the state. At the present time of the total funds available to the Commission of Forestry for use among the farmers and other landowners of the various communities approximately half is furnished by the United States Government.

FIRST COAL MINED IN ALABAMA OVER ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

Key Industry, which Celebrates its Hundredth Anniversary, Spread Mighty Pay Roll Over State.

Alabama's coal industry celebrates this month its one hundredth anniversary.

In 1830, a full century ago, when Chickasaws, Choctaws, Cherokees, and Creeks still roamed through Alabama's then virgin wilderness—eleven years before the State's admission to the Union — Alabama's first coal was mined commercially, near what is now Tuscaloosa, and was floated down the Warrior river on a flat boat to Mobile. It is probable that the passage of this boat aroused but scant interest among Alabama's pioneer settlers. Little could they have realized, as they all stood upon the banks of the Warrior and watched the cargo drift by, that they were witnessing a significant event in Alabama's history—the birth of an industry which was destined to play, perhaps, the most vital role of any single industry in Alabama's economic progress during the ensuing century. Yet time has proved that this was to be true.

Coal Shapes State Progress

Commemorating the centennial of Alabama's coal industry, leaders are releasing some interesting data that throws a new light upon the part which coal has played in shaping our State's destiny. Early chronicles of coal producing companies now operating in the State have qualities of a peculiar historic interest—roots which reach deep, almost as their mines, into the bed-rock and substrata of Alabama history and legend. Early annals of producing companies reveal, for instance, that Alabama coal has had a close relationship with the United States army and navy, the Confederate States army and navy, the United States Senate and House of Representatives, the development of Alabama's railroad system, the growth of many Alabama cities, the building of many scores of varied industries and businesses, which have in turn contributed their share to Alabama's steady forward march throughout a century of amazing progress.

564,000,000 Tons Mined

Records show that since the first coal was floated down the Warrior river in 1830, that 564,000,000 tons have been mined in the State. Up to 1870 the tonnage has been estimated, as no official records are at all available for these first forty years. The first available statistics reveal that in 1870, 13,200 tons of coal were produced; in 1880, 380,000 tons; in 1890, 4,090,409 tons; in 1900, 8,273,262 tons; in 1910, 16,139,228 tons; in 1920, 17,391,437 tons, and in 1926 the maximum production of 21,508,812 tons. Last year the tonnage dropped, because of consumption of outside fuels, to 18,415,914 tons.

Removal of this treasure, which Nature stored in Alabama's hills, a million years or more ago, has furnished steady jobs to many thousands of Alabama workers. It is estimated that to mine the coal which Alabama has produced during the last century has required about 188,000,000 man days work.

$750,000,000 in Wages

Wages paid to workers in the industry during the past century are estimated to have aggregated well over three quarters of a billion dollars. In peak years, Alabama coal mines have provided around seven million man days work a year for 30 thousand employes, and an annual payroll of about $40,000,000. This huge payroll has percolated throughout the State, penetrating every section. Investigation shows that it is spent by wage earners and salaried employes of the industry for merchandise, food products, transportation, amusements and insurance, or is invested in securities and savings banks. Seventy cents out of every dollar received by the producer goes to labor. A goodly part of this is spent for farm produce, as shown by the fact that coal mining companies in the Birmingham district alone, buy annually in good years around five million dollars worth of products raised on Alabama farms, orchards and truck gardens.

Supplies Huge Freight Revenue

Closely parallelling the development of Alabama's coal industry has been that of Alabama's railroads. Officials of the leading roads have stated that the present splendid railroad system which networks the entire State, could not have been built except for the coal tonnage, which normally provides about 25 per cent of all the lines in the State. This does not include freight revenue from hauling mine supplies and machinery or revenue from the handling of coal-by-products. To haul the 564,000,000 tons of coal mined in Alabama in the past century, has required use of some 11,280,000 fifty-ton freight cars, and furnished regular employment to many thousand trainmen and other railroad operativese who, in turn, have spent their wages in the state.

Parent of Many Industries

Out of Alabam's coal industry, many other industries have been born—industries which feed on coal and industries which use the many valuable derivatives of coal. Alabama's great steel industry, pipe industry, pig iron industry, by-product industry, chemical industry—to name a few of many hundred—could not have sprung into existence except for the availibility of Alabama's huge coal deposits which are estimated at approximately eighty-seven and a half billion tons, enough to last for 2,500 years or longer. Without coal mining, it is easily conceivable that Alabama in the year 1930, would have shown but little industrial development since 1830. For, without coal mining, Alabama ores could have never been economically turned into merchantable products. Without coal mining Alabama's present railroad system would not have been built. Without coal mining Alabama would not rank today, fourth in the production of by-products derived from converting coal into coke, and without coal mining there would be no nearby markets for the products of the forests and the farms of the State.

These are a few of the reasons why Alabama places such high value on her coal mining industry and will join this month in celebration of its one hundrdth birthday.

"COLLEGE LOVE" NOW SHOWING AT WADESONIAN THEATRE

The management of the Wadesonian Theatre is especially pleased to announce that "College Love," the first full feature length, all sound and dialogue college picture to be screened anywhere will be shown Thursday (today) and Friday, December 11 and 12.

Produced by Carl Leammle, Jr., with the same youthful screen favorites who helped so signally to make the now famous "Collegians" series so outstandingly successful, "College Love" brings to the screen in full sound everything which makes life on the campus so fascinating.

"College Love" is a clean story of modern youth—of keen rivalry on the gridiron, showing a football game in sound; tells of the rivalry between two grid stars for the same beautiful co-ed, and the sacrifice of one of them for the glory of his alma mater.

Two glee clubs famous over the country sing in the picture the campus songs which urge their football warriors on to victory, and the entire film, directed by Nat Ross, the veteran of college pictures, is replete with all the colorful action of the campus.

George Lewis, Dorothy Gulliver and Eddie Phillips, who have become the veritable screen idols of college folk and their families through the "Collegians," the earlier and shorter series produced by Universal, play in the new feature film characterizations similar to those which broke entertainment records all over the world.

FOR SALE—White Giant Cockerels, only 5 or 6 to go. Will sell at $5 each. Foundation stock of these birds sold at $2 per egg and $4 per baby chick. Largest white chickens on earth. See some of their eggs at Upchurch's. V. J. Gragg, Clanton, Ala. 12-11-2tch.

New Prohibition Director Plans Thoroughly Military Structure for Agents

Washington, Dec. 12.—Prohibition Director Woodcock would like to take prohibition enforcement entirely off the front pages of newspapers.

He is planning now a thoroughly military structure for his enforcing machine, including an efficient rating system for agents. Just what he values as efficiency was indicated yesterday in the issuance of a citation to two Oklahoma agents who got their men, under difficulty, without bloodshed. But no Christmas drive, no cabaret raiding, for him. Just day in and day out pressure against commercial violators is the way he explained his objective.

Balance Struck

Today he reported court machinery handling federal prohibition cases had almost exactly balanced during November the activity of his agents in bringing cases to court, 5,255 cases being docketed and 5,242 terminated.

In the monthly report of his bureau was shown that on November 1 there had been 23,204 prohibition criminal cases on dockets in the 12 prohibition districts and at the end of the month the total was only 13 higher. Jail sentences totaling 2,094 years were imposed together with fines of nearly $477,000. The total of fines since July was placed at approximately $1,859,000. The second prohibition district, which includes New York, showed by far the heaviest activity. In it there were 1,441 arests, seven convictions by jury trials, 934 pleas of guilty, 149 acquittals and 7,467 cases remaining on docket on December 1.

Detailed Account

In a detailed account for this district it was shown 12 arests had been made in New York City "in connection with an advertising racket for the sale of liquor."

UNION-BANNER WILL BE DAY EARLY NEXT WEEK

Owing to the fact that Christmas Day is next Thursday, The Union-Banner will come out on Wednesday insead of the usual publication day. Therefore, all correspondence and advertising must be in just one day earlier than usual, in order that it may come out in the paper.

So, be on the lookout and help us to get out the paper and take Christmas with you on Thursday.

Former Local Pastor Injured In Wreck

The Rev. I. W. Chalker Is Seriously Hurt In Auto Accident Near Clayton

Ozark, Ala., Dec 11.—The Rev. I. W. Chalker, pastor of the Forest Avenue Methodist Church in Montgomery for three years, who was sent to the Ozark Methodist Church by the Methodist conference held in Mobile recently, was seriosly injured in an automobile accident on the highway two miles from Clayton about 7:30 tonight.

Mr. Chalker received a severe cut on the head when the auto in which he and Dr. W. S. Trice of Ozark, were riding, crashed into an embankment. After receiving first aid treatment at Clayton, Mr. Chalker was brought to an Ozark hospital where attaches said his condition was serious.

The minister was said to be in a semi-conscious condition late tonight. Several stitches were taken in the wound on his head. Hospital authorities said that X-ray pictures would reveal whether Mr. Chalker had received a fractured skull. He also suffered bad cuts on the arm and leg.

The two men were returning to Ozark from Phenix City when the accident happened. According to Dr. Trice, the automobile in which they were riding was rounding a curve, the sharp angle of which the driver failed evidently to realize, and the machine crashed into the bank. The car was badly damaged. Dr. Trice was uninjured.

Some years ago Rev. Chalker was pastor of Clanton Methodist Church. He has a great many friends here who will learn of this misfortune with much regret.

CLEVE LITTLEFIELD RETURNS FROM DEER HUNT

Mr. Cleve Littlefield reports a very interesting story of his trip to Hale County last week, where he was a member of a hunting party at the game reserve of Mr. Wedgeworth.

There were 17 hunters in the party Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, and a total of six deer were killed.

Upon his return Mr. Littlefield brought a large quantity of deer meat. This he divided with his neighbors in the Cane Creek settlement. At his home Friday he had a big dinner to which a large number of friends were invited to help eat the meat.

This is the second year Mr. Littlefield has attended the Wedgeworth hunt. He reports a much better time than last year. In addition to the thrill of killing a deer, Mr. Littlefield says the races were the finest he ever heard.

FARM MEETINGS HELD BY STAPP

Cash Crops Discussed With County Agent Stapp At Verbena and Clanton

About fifty farmers met with our County Agent, Stapp, at Verbena last Thursday afternoon in the interest of money raising crops other than cotton. About fourteen acres were signed up for sweet potatoes, and about the same number of acres for strawberries.

A similar meeting was held at Clanton last Friday with about 75 farmers present. The indications are that there will be a considerable increase in acreage set for strawberries by February. It is believed that Chilton County could be selling twice as many strawberries annually as we are without affecting the market in the least.

Much interest is being shown in dewberries as another money crop. The matter of getting acreage sign-up for dewberries will likely be taken up by all the strawberry associations at their January meetings.

The Clanton Berry Growers will hold their annul meeting for election of officers and discussions of matters of interest, on January 6th, at 1 o'clock p.m.

While no definite word has come to us regarding their plans, it has been understood that the strawberry associations at Thorsby and Jemison are making preparations to continue their activities in the future. The Thorsby association is the pioneer of the strawberry business in Chilton County, and in fact, one of the oldest organizations of berry growers in Alabama.

"THE WORLD'S GREATEST CHRISTMAS GIFT"

At the 11 o'clock hour Sunday, December 21st, "The World's Greatest Christmas Gift," will be the subject spoken on by Rev. W. H. Kamplain at the Verbena Baptist church. At night the pastor announces that there will be no sermon but the servince wil lbe given over to a Christmas program by the Junior B. Y. P. U. of the Verbena Baptist church.

Rev. Kamplain extends a cordial invitation to the people of Verbena and surroundinb territory to attend these services.

BAPTISTS URGED TO MAKE CHRISTMAS OFFERING

All Baptist Sunday Schools of Alabama are being reminded that the approach of Christmas again brings to those schools the opportunity to make the annual Christmas offering to the orphans home at Troy. There are over 200 children in the orphans home, and this Christmas offering from Alabama Baptist Sunday Schools constitutes the fund which takes care of the running expenses of the home for the coming year.

It is stated that the needs of the home are most urgent. In spite of the fact that times are hard, the orphans have got to be cared for. Therefore every Baptist is urged to have a part, even though it be small, in making this Christmas offering.

The Clanton Baptist Sunday School has adopted a goal and a plan for raising its Christmas offering to the orphans. The whole Sunday School collection for three Sundays, December 14, 21, and 28, will be used to make up the gift of the school to the home. In years past the Clanton school has given $200 as its Christmas offering. That amount will be the goal again this year.

When giving Christmas presents remember to make your extra gift to the school for the needy of your community.

Percy Pitts Tells Interesting Story About Big Deer Hunt At Allison Reservation

Hon. Percy Pitts, Chilton County's Representative in the Legislature of Alabama, returned last Thursday from the annual deer hunt on the reservation of Col. E. F. Allison, in Sumpter County. He came back all pepped up over the fact tha the killed a fine buck while on the hunt. Of course, we want our readers to have the plasure of hearing the story of Mr. Pitts about the hunt, and we prevailed upon him to write it for the Union-Banner.

Before you read the story we want to remind you that Mr. Pitts was very much impressed with something besides the deer hunt on this visit to Col. Allison's place. He dwells at length on the subject of game and forest preservation as he saw it demonstrated at the Allison place. It is something that is very important, though sadly neglected in our own county. We hope that the things Mr. Pitts says will impress our people to give more consideration to the preservation of our natural resources in the future.

His story of the trip, the hunt, the forest, and killing the buck, is as follows:

"On last Wednesday, I attended an annual deer hunt on the Col. E. F. Allison Reserve, at Bellamy, in Sumpter County, Alabama. There were 100 other invited guests, including about sixty members of the Legislature.

"The Alliison forest and game reserve, consists of approximately one hundred thousand acres of timber lands, and it is estimated that there are over three thousand deer on this reservation besides other game in similar proportion, including turkeys.

"After our return from the stands in the forest about 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, our distinguished host, Col. E. F. Allison, served the crowd with a delightful dinner, consisting chiefly of barbecue and camp stew. It was at this time that Col. Allison made an able and instructive talk on the subject of Forestry and Game Preservation. I personally enjoyed this feature of the day very much and then and there resolved to bring this message in part, pack to some of my friends at home. Judging from his statement, he has been preserving this forest for about twenty or thirty years, and protects the same from the ravages of fire. During his talk he pointed out several trees near the dining table, which were small saplings twenty years ago. Also stated that they had been protected from fire and given an opportunity to grow into stalwart pines.

"I could not help but think of our local county, where our people neglect our young growth of timber and where every year our forests are burned over in a careless and indifferent way, thereby, destroying thousands and thousands of dollars worth of young timber yearly. I trust that the people of this county and State will awake to the realization of the need of forest preservation and that we will all endeavor to presrve for the future, our forests. In other words, be constructive instead of destructive. We have so little timber left in this country that unless it is better preserved in the future than in the past, we will be in the same predicament the older countries such as France, are in, for fuel and timber.

"Col. Allison also warned all present to be good sportsmen with our game and to be 'huntsmen instead of Killers.' By observing the game laws and assisting in its enforcement we can only expect to preserve our wild life.

"I had the honor of attending this Annual Deer Hunt during 1928; however, didn't have the same luck that I had last Wednesday. We were assigned to our stands about 9:30 a.m. and the drive lasted until about 12:30. My stand was No. 19 on Curry Drive, and in less than ten minutes after I reached my stand, three large doe came by in shooting distance. Oh! what a temptation to violate the law. However, in about fifteen minutes after they passed, two doe and a large buck with long horns came by being chased by hounds. The buck was in the rear and the last deer to spy me, so I fired at him within 25 yards of where I was seated on my stand, and accidentally I presume, the shot was fatal. Being my first buck I was initiated at camp where my face and head were smeared with the buck's life blood.

"If we had more sportsmen of the Col. Allison type in Alabama, we would have plenty of growing profitable timber and game in abundance."

We commend this letter of Mr. Pitts to the people of Chilton County, and hope he will stay on the subject of conservation until every available agency in Chilton County is definitely enlisted in the movement to preserve our forest life, also game and fish.

Help the children to have the Christmas spirit by giving to the needy.

We May Yet See Senatorial Probe Of Recent General Election In Alabama

A dispatch from Washington in the Montgomery Advertiser Tuesday indicates that some special investigators from the National Capitol have been in Alabama making investigations of certain reports as to the conduct of the recent General Election in this State. The dispatch says a preliminary glance at partial findings by the examiners discloses them to be, according to Senator Nye, of a very serious nature which would indicate that the Senatorial investigating committee will be driven to further inquiry in Alabama.

Asked to amplify this suggestion, Senator Nye is credited with saying that the preliminary brief of the examiners who have been in Alabama would indicate that both expenditures and charges of manipulation of returns would be investigated. If further inquiry is undertaken, additional agents will be sent to Alabama, he said, and the committee would hold hearings in the State.

In discussing this matter with Probate Judge, L. H. Reynolds, of Chilton County, The Union-Banner has found that there has been addressed to Judge Reynolds an inquiry from one of the federal investigators, with particular reference to the handling of absentee ballots. We secured from Judge Reynolds a copy of his letter sent in reply to the questions asked by the investigator.

The letter of Judge Reynolds, addressed to Hon. P. L. Aarhus, at Birmingham says:

In answer to your letter of December 9, 1930, I am giving the information desired.

1. There were 119 applicants for ballots in the Republican primary of August 12, 1930, and there were 40 applicants for Democratic ballots in the same primary. The ballots in the primary were returned to the respective Chairmen of the Republican and Democratic Committees, J. N. Dennis being Chairman of the Republican Committee and J. B. Atkinson Chairman of the Democratic Committee. The ballots, as stated, are returned to these respective officials and the law requires no record to be kept in my office, or their being returned, and I have no record of the same.

2. The numbe of applications received by me in the general election of November 4, 1930 was 206, and the number returned was 131. The law required the ballots in the general election to be returned to me, which I have delivered to the respective voting places.

3. I have on file in my office all original applications received for absentee ballots.

4. I mailed ballots to all who made application provided they were qualified voters and who were on the qualified list, as provided by law. I might state that 21 applications were filed with me in the general election, whose names were not on the qualified list of voters, and I did not send ballots to them.

5. I keep and have now an official record of absentee ballots, showing the information asked in question 5.

I am glad, of course, to give you the above information and will furnish you all other information that you may desire out of my office.

L. H. REYNOLDS.

The absentee ballot business in Alabama elections is generally conceded to be a very slippery proposition. If current rumors are found to be substantiated by facts, there are several counties which will reveal very irregular practices in the carrying out of the absentee ballot provision of the law.

However this situation does not involve Chilton County. Judge Reynolds maintains that he has adhered strictly to the provisions of the law in handling absentee ballots, and that he has on file in his office, records showing that he has handled this matter as provided by law.

It is hardly probable that any kind of election investigation will find any irregularity in Chilton County. Judge Reynolds has had such rigid training in this matter until he is regarded as one of the few Probate Judges in the State whose knowledge of election laws is thorough.

FRED W. BAILEY ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

A report to Chief of Police, John Boockholdt, Monday morning from Danville, Kentucky, said that a man by the name of Fred W. Bailey, had attempted suicide, and was in a critical condition. Further details of the man's action were not communicated.

The statement, however, said that the man was in possession of a telegram which was sent to him from his wife in Clanton some weeks ago. Chief Boockholdt is making all possible effort to locate friends or relatives of Bailey. Anyone who might know anything of the man should communicate with Mr. Boockholdt.

A further checking up of the name revealed that last week some checks written by F. W. Bailey in Danville, Illinois, on a Clanton bank, came here for payment, and that such a name was not on the records of the bank.

COUNTY NEEDS BETTER STAPLE

Special Gin Days Will Be Observed By Ginners Next Fall

Mr. Stapp advises that farmers who plant cotton next spring should make their plans now to grow high yeilds of cotton with good staple, per acre.

In an effort to help get better stapled cotton in this county, Mr. Stapp has arranged with the Farm Bureau to get a carload of planting seed.

Mr. Stapp has arranged with most all of the gins in the County to observe special gin days next fall in order that farmers who get these seed can keep them from getting mixed with seed from short staple. For the convenience of the farmers, Mr. Stapp has arranged for the following people in the different sections of the County to take orders for these seeds.:

W. A. Gulledge, Verbena; Irby Deramus, Verbena; Polk Payne at Maplesville; J. P. Montgomery, Jemison; E. R. Piper, Thorsby; and Miss Zora Guy, Farm Bureau office, Clanton.

Mr. Stapp is very anxious for every farmer in the County to get at least enough of these seeds to be able to grow seed to plant his crop the following year. He thinks that he has made arrangements for enough of these seed for all of those who want to get a few, but says that in order to be sure farmers should tell one of the above named parties how many seed they want.

Mr. Stapp advises that if everybody will work together on this project that in two years there will be good demand for Chilton County cotton.

MR. HOLCOMBE HERE FOR CABLE-BURTON PIANO CO.

During the past week, Mr. J. H. Holcombe, of the Cable-Burton Piano Company, of Birmingham, was a visitor to Clanton in the interest of his house.

According to Mr. Holcombe, the Cable-Burton Company is making a definite objective to get in on some piano business in Clanton, as this is a territory where they have not heretofore done any business.

In beginning their campaign in the Clanton territory, Cable-Burton has contracted with The Union-Banner for an extensive campaign of advertising that will place before the people of this section some of the excellent propositions that are offered to people who may be intersted in a piano.

Mr. Holcombe is a man of very interesting personality. He has been connected with the piano trade in Alabama for many years, and he will make friends rapidly as he continues to come to Clanton.

We call special attention to the Cable-Burton advertising which will be found in The Union-Banner during the next few months. If you are interested in any kind of a piano proposition, drop a line to Cable-Burton Piano Co., Birmingham, and Mr. Holcombe will call on you promptly.

If you have an old piano you would like to trade for a Victrola, Mr. Holcombe is the man you are looking for. His house has an arrangement whereby they will take in your old piano and give you an Orthophonic Victrola on an even swap.

DATES SET FOR CHEST FUND DRIVE

Second Annual Drive For Needy Is Week of January 12 to 17

The directors of the Chilton County Chest have set the week of January 12th through the 17th as the time for the annual collection of funds for the unfortunate of Chilton County. The opportunity to help those who need our assistance has never been so great. There are hungry children in Chilton County who can never attain the full stature of manhood if they are not fed now. There are cold children who shiver in their scanty clothes, who must be warmly clad if disease and death are to be battled off. There are children to whom the minimum of education is being denied, not through lack of interest, not through laziness, but because they have no books nor clothes with which to go to school.

We all know what the general economic depression has done to the employment situation. There are strong able bodied men who have searched the country for work, who have postponed asking for assistance until they could no longer bear the sight of thinner children. There are brave mothers who have struggled to keep their families together, who love their children as dearly as any of us love ours, who have come to the end of their resources. They feel that they can no longer deny the necessities of life to their children, which they would find in an orphanage, and are asking the orphanages to take their children for care. Surely in Chilton County we do not want mothers and children to be separated, the most precious bonds of affection broken because of a lack of money only. Every orphanage in the state is full and has a long waiting list.

Cannot we, the more fortunate ones, come to the aid of these in distress and show the spirit of brotherhood, and the spirit of Christ who cared for the poor and needy?—S. J. EZELL, Chairman Finance Committee.

CHRISTMAS TREE FRIDAY NIGHT

State Third Largest Cotton Crop Report

1930 Value Is $85,000,000 as Compared With $122,000,000 Last Year

While an increased production of cotton this year in Alabama is shown over last year's report, the value of the crop in the state will be about $85,000,000 compared with $122,000,000 last year, according to a report released by F. W. Gist, state and federal statistician.

Due to almost no weevil damage, to good growing weather, and to intelligent fertilization, Alabama has made the third largest cotton crop in the history, Mr. Gist said. The United States Crop Reporting Board has estimated the crop at 1,495,000 bales of 500 pounds weight. This figure compares with 1,732,000 in 1914 and 1,695,000 in 1911, the two largest crops in the state's history.

The yield per acre this year is estimated at 188 pounds of lint, compared with 174 pounds last year, 154 pounds in 1928 and 196 pounds in 1926. The acreage harvested this year, therefore, is given as 3,801,000 which is next to 1914 in recent years.

All sections of the state increased its production over last year except the northern tier of counties, where the drouth was severe enough to interfere with both stands and growth. All the remainder of the state had weather which, while not too dry for cotton growth, was dry enough to control the weevil and insure uninterrupted fruiting. A very small portion of the southeastern crop was lost from beating rains, but the amount was not appreciable.

Only four or five counties in the state increased their acre-yield enough to make up for the lower price of this year.

Of the present crop, 1,381,000 bales were ginned to December 1.

CENTRAL SINGERS AT REFUGE

The Central Singing Society will sing at Refuge church next Sunday afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock. All singers are invited, as well as those who like good music.

The society met last Sunday afternoon at Walnut Creek, and the singing was very good. Besides six or eight home directors, there was one singer, Mr. John Deason from Bibb County, who directed two songs. We were glad to have Mr. Deason with us, and invite him and his friends back again.

Remember that the Central Singing Society meets somewhere every Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. We are always glad to have a class full of singers and a house full of listeners. Meet with us every time you can.

LONG WAIT COMING

FUTURE
CHRISTMASES Will Be SAFE

....as long as railroad securities are valuable!

For decades, the funds of widows and orphans, insurance companies, schools and colleges, hospitals, asylums, and many other public institutions, have been largely invested in railroad securities. When the railroads are able to operate profitably and earn a fair return on this capital and the interest is paid regularly, these families and institutions are safe. Let the value of such holdings seriously depreciate, however, and the income of thousands will be greatly impaired or entirely swept away.

The railroads have endeavored in every way possible to lower costs and maintain a reasonable rate of return, in the face of constantly falling freight and passenger revenue, aggravated by added tax burdens. The great rail transportation systems are among the most efficiently operated businesses in the world. Yet, during the period of 1920 to 1930, the rate of return on railroad property investment, for example, has averaged less than 4%!

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

The railroads are striving earnestly to hold their service to the present high standard, to provide steady employment for thousands of workers, to help carry passengers safely and surely, and the merchandise on which other forms of business depend, and to assure an income for the individuals and institutions who have entrusted their money to them. In this endeavor, the railroads deserve your cooperation and patronage. They are making a brave fight—against odds.

CALVES BECOME STURDY COWS ON SKIM MILK

Modern Methods of Feeding Enable Dairymen to Improve Standards by Raising Own Stock at Low Cost

The calf "industry," if it may be so called, is one of the largest in the country. It is estimated that 9,000,000 calves, in round numbers, are slaughtered each year in order to provide American tables with veal. Farmers and stockmen realize about $185,000,000 in receipts for the year's crop. Added to this number are the heifer calves which must be brought into the world every year to take the place of the worn-out milk cows.

We have discussed in previous articles the importance of good sires. The expense in both time and money in raising a calf is too great to make the mistake of starting with poor stock. Another mistake so many make, especially those who sell the whole milk to dairies or cheese factories, is that they buy cows to replace the discards. Usually the cows offered for sale have some defects, and the danger of introducing tuberculosis or some other disease into the herd is ever present.

Let us assume then that the best way to enlarge and improve the dairy herd is by raising our own calves. Shall the calf be fed whole milk, skim milk, or some substitute for milk? We know now that calves raised on skim milk, if properly handled, will grow into just as sturdy, healthy heifers as those nursed by the others. The whole question is that of method.

The chief difference between whole milk and skim milk is the butterfat or cream which has been removed from the latter. The water protein and sugar content are practically the same in both. Now fat is not essential for growth. It supplies heat and certain tissue necessary to the body. The benefit that the growing calf gets from the fat in whole milk can be obtained from corn meal or some other grain, and at a much lower cost. So many records are available to prove that calves raised on skim milk plus grain and hay equal those raised by the more expensive system that the question is not debatable. Farmers also become uneasy when the skim milk diet does not seem to put as much weight on the calf during the early months, as the whole milk diet. That is to be expected. But the time to compare results is at the end of the year or a few months after the milk feeding period is over. Then, if the proper system has been used, they will compete on equal terms in size, quality and thrift.

The calf should run with the mother one or two days, before hand feeding begins. The first milk from the cow after freshening contains elements valuable to the young calf. Some dairymen let the calves nurse only once or twice. A good way to teach the calf to drink is to put your fingers into its mouth and stick its nose into the pail of milk. For the first week about five quarts of milk a day is sufficient, in three feedings. Remember, the stomach is small and cannot hold much. Add a quart the next week to the daily amount. Eight or nine quarts a day is about the limit. Overfeeding is one of the commonest causes of ailment. Wash and scald the feed buckets and feeding utensils every day.

For the first two or three weeks, mix the mother's milk and skim milk. Gradually increase the percentage of skim milk. It should be both warm and sweet, so as not to upset the digestion. At about four weeks try to feed a little grain. Linseed oil meal, ground oats, corn meal, and wheat bran mixed are used.

About this time the calves will begin to eat a little hay, if it is placed in a rack nearby. Until three months of age hay is better than pasture grass. Clover or alfalfa are a little too rich.

I would caution you regarding the condition of the milk fed to the young calf. If you take your whole milk to the dairy and haul the skim milk back for feeding, it may sour on you. Another thing, in the dairy process your milk becomes mixed with milk from other herds, and it may contain germs. Pasteuriziation by the dairy will avoid that. Or, if the dairy is not equipped, do it yourself. Heat the milk to 150 degrees Fahrenheit and hold it there for 30 minutes and it will be safe.

The most satisfactory plan is to have your own separator and feed the skim milk to the young calf soon after it comes from the mother.

It does not seem necessary here to caution you regarding clean, dry, warm pens for the growing calves, and plenty of good drinking water. Most breeders like to have their calves come in the fall. They can be fed on skim milk, hay and grain during the winter and be ready for grass in the spring. The weaning age is about six months.

CHEVROLET MOTOR CO. AIDS RETURN OF PROSPERITY

Talking about the return of prosperity, advocating "buy now" campaigns and advising what others should do to restore the normal flow of business, are not harmful gestures, but they are not nearly so effective as actually doing something.

Chevrolet Motor Company, one of the General Motors units, is performing, not merely talking.

While others are talking about better business, Chevrolet is going after it.

The tenor of all the addresses at the Knoxville division conference of Chevrolet dealers yesterday was that of confidence and aggressiveness. It is to be expected that other automobile manufacturers will have to go after business in the same way if they keep up with Chevrolet.

Instead of reducing their forces of salesmen, Chevrolet is employing more salesmen. Instead of waiting for business to come back to them, Chevrolet dealers are going out after it. And, best of all, GMAC, the powerful financing institution allied with General Motors, is manifesting a most liberal attitude toward new motor sales of Chevrolets. GMAC believes in the American people and consequently is willing to finance their purchases of Chevrolet cars on terms that can be met without difficulty.

Knoxville, as the headquarters for a large division served by Chevrolet Motor Company and GMAC, is exceptionally fortunate in having these institutions as virtually local enterprises. All sales of Chevrolet automobiles for a large area are cleared through the Knoxville office and the financing of all installments purchases in this territory handled by GMAC, also are cleared through the Knoxville office of that institution.

It may be forecast that there will be an enormous volume of sales of Chevrolet automobiles this year, because the selling organization of that company is not looking backward upon the wreckage of a depression, but is looking forward across the inviting field of new business that awaits harvesting by those who go after it. —Knoxville Journal.

IN MEMORY OF LITTLE BETTY BELLE ROBINSON

Last Saturday morning, Dec. 13, near 2:30 o'clock, the death angel visited Mr. and Mrs. Lonza Robinson and crried away from their arms, their darling babe, Betty Belle.

She had been ill for some time and her condition was not stated. She bore her sufferings well. She was 1 year and 9 months old. Betty Belle always welcomed everyone with a smile until her ilness pulled her down so low. We feel a vacant place which none other can fill. She was loved and is missed by all who knew her. She leaves her daddy and mother, 2 sisters, and 3 brothers at the home from which she has departed to return no more, and countless relatives to mourn her loss. But Betty Belle is only sleeping, and we know that she has gone on to heaven to beckon us to follow. It is hard to say good-bye, but there is one consolation, Betty Belle cannot come back to us but we can go to her someday, when the Lord is ready for us. If she could only know and say, I'm sure she would say, "Weep not dear Mother and Daddy, for I am only sleeping and all is well. Teach brothers and sisters, so you all may live to meet me on that blissful shore, where all your hardships and heartaches will cease and will be joy forever more."

She was buried with a cactus bud in her hand. That bud imitated little Betty Belle.

She was only a bud ready to open. Her life would have been so sweet to her. She was sunshine in the home, but the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh. It was his will that she must go. She was laid to rest in the Cane Creek cemetery, Sunday afternoon, Dec. 14.

Tom Thumb Wedding

The fifth and sixth grades are working to raise funds for new desks in their room. Last Saturday night their teacher, Miss Betty Baldwin, presented the Tom Thumb Wedding at the Methodist Church.

The church was beautifully decorated in smilax, ferns, and roses. The marriage vows were read by Donald Calfee in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride, little Hazel Thomas, was adorable in a dress made with tight bodice and long full skirt. She was given away by her father, William Oden.

The bridesmaids wore pink and green organdie dresses and carried bouquets of radiant roses. The four little flower girls wore pink and green dresses and carried pink and green baskets. The maid of honor, Louise Grooms, was beautiful in a dress of lace and green chiffon.

The groom was Lamar Williams, while his best man was Lloyd Smith.

Before the ceremony Mary Jo Suite sang "I Love You Truly," and Evelyn Lecroy, "When You and I were Young, Maggie." Mary D. Potts of Maplesville played for them. She also played the wedding march.

Banquet for Football Team

The girls of the home economics III Class, and teacher, Miss Cora Belle Maddox, were hostesses to the football team and the faculty Thursday evening, December 11, at six o'clock.

The Christmas spirit was revived in the decorations and favors, while the football spirit was revived in the lively jokes, yells, songs, and hearty dinner. The center table decoration was a miniature Christmas tree, from which radiated tiny football players. The place cards were small foot balls; the favors at each place were tied in Christmas packages, and the mints cups carried out the color scheme.

Marvin Durbin, captain of the team, acted as toastmaster; and despite his duty as such, he got his share of chicken and dressing. So did "Fatty" Poole, who admits he had never had enough chicken before. That was the quickest crowd of football boys we've ever seen—while they were eating. But they did not eat all the time. Speeches and toasts were in order, and they were made to the principal, Mr. Griffin, who has backed the teams wholeheartedly since it became a team four year ago. The toastmaster expressed the gratitude of the entire team to Mr. Paulk, who has coached them for the past two years, and who has pulled them out of the hole to a glorious victory. Then everybody sang a toast to Mr. Paulk. Other toasts were made to the home economics girls and Miss Maddox, the cheer leaders, and the entire student body whose spirit has kept the team from ever seeing defeat on its own field.

Cards were placed for the following:

Marvin Dunlap, Captain; Luther Mims, James Burnette, Clarence Faulk, James Deason, Homer Morgan, Pierce Griffin, Van Williams, Sidney Griffin, Crit DeRamus, Crayton DeRamus, Manager, J. P. Poole, Hannon Owen, Elmer Ratliff, Parnell Ratliff, Will F. Martin.

Members of the faculty present were: Misses Celia Cumbee, Betty Baldwin, Ethel Mize, Cora Belle Maddox, Bonnie Clyde Griffin and Messrs. J. D. Griffin, and Ellis Paulk with the cheer leaders, Dorothy Manning, Mary Clay Turner, Bazolean Williams, Nellie Hayes and Clara Mae Calfee, had charge of the program.

If you ask us, it was a jolley good crowd that had a jolley time.

The ninth grade has just finished a group of short stories which they wrote in their English class. The three best stories selected by the entire class will appear in the next week's Banner. In addition to the stories there will appear the qualities that these ninth grade boys and girls like to see in their friends.

The tenth grade English class is composing a modern newspaper based on George Elliot's Silas Marner, which they recently studied. They hope to print this paper in the banner soon.

COTTON ACREAGE REDUCTION PLANNED

The program of the Southern Cotton Reduction Association for growing a small cotton crop in 1931 and for the four years following, has been endorsed by Alabama bankers, it is announced in a dispatch from Birmingham, in the Birmingham News one day last week.

It is stated that the plan was outlined to the executive and agricultural committees of the Alabama Bankers Association, by J. E. Garrett, president of the Southern Cotton Reduction Association, at a conference in Birmingham.

There are some features of the proposed plan that seem to be very interesting to the cotton farmers, especially since the plan proposes to begin operation at the point where the farmer secures the necessary money to finance his cotton crop.

And the big thing about the proposal is its purpose: To reduce the amount of cotton in the South. If it can make that purpose bear fruit in actual performance, it will be the accomplishment of the one and only thing that will ever bring relief to cotton growers.

We gather the following impressive details from the proposed plan as outlined by Mr. Garrett:

It provides for bankers to refuse loans unless the farmer agrees to reduce his cotton acreage in 1931-1935 by 25 per cent. The banks agree to aid the farmers in growing other crops and stocking their farms with cattle and hogs.

If a farmer refuses to agree to the cotton reduction plan, the bank with which he deals is to decline to extend him credit, and this information is to be passed on to other bankers of the county. Other banks are also to refuse credit.

Every farmer obtaining a loan from a bank will be riquired to sign a statement setting out the total number of acres he cultivated in 1930, and the total number of acres he had in cotton in 1930.

The plan also provides that no land owner or tenant will be required to reduce his cotton acreage to less than fifty per cent of the cultivated land he owns, or less than fifty per cent of the land rented that is in cultivation.

We have not seen any indication that this plan has yet been considered by the banks of Chilton County. But it will likely be taken into consideration by them if it is to be the policy of the Alabama Bankers Association to cooperate with the Cotton Reduction Association.

There will doubtless be some objections raised by the cotton farmers. However, it seems to us that the general purpose of the movement is good, and that the attainment of the ends desired, namely, to reduce the amount of cotton produced, is a right objective. If the banks can bring this about by adopting and enforcing the plan, we hope they will not hesitate to do it.

State Capitol News

Dr. A. F. Harman, State Superintendent of Education, outlining the needs of public schools of Alabama before the Montgomery Rotary Club in a recent address, estimated that the schools will need approximately thirty million dollars annually during the next administration to place them on the plane they should be. Approximately twenty-five million is now being spent on the public school system in Alabama annually. Dr. Harman said that the state could not afford, in the interest of its children, to fail in the support of public education. He added that to place Alabama where it should be with reference to public schools, would require an additional four and a half million dollars annually over and above that which is now expended. This need, Dr. Harman said, is based on the present seven months term and on the estimated daily average cost of approximately one hundred and fifteen thousand dollars. Dr. Harman estimated that it would require seven hundred fifty thousand dollars annually to dispense with the much discussed incidental and matriculation fees, this without increasing the length of school terms a single day.

Transportation is being made, Dr. Harman declared, at the cost of more than one and a half million dollars per year out of funds originally intended for instructional purposes. The present Equalization and Attendance Funds will have to be increased approximately six hundred thousand each annually. The amount of the Equalization Fund is now nine hundred thousand and the Attendance Fund eight hundred fifty thousand annually.

In addition Dr. Harman said the rural school building, repair and equipment fund, in order to function properly, should be increased six hundred thousand dollars per year—to nine hundred fifty thousand.

The remainder of the four and a half million, he asserted, should go to institutions and to other causes to be named later.

Dr. Harman also said that the time has come in Alabama when we ought to begin to establish some kind of measure or dependable estimate as to the returns on our educational investments. "The people of the State of Alabama, as a rule, have been generous in their support of public education," he said. "The percentage of the income of the people of this state invested in education, according to the latest available figures, is the same as the average for the United States. It follows that in order to have a system of schools above the average for the nation, Alabama not being a rich state, must spend over the average of its income. It is vital that we begin to establish fairly dependable estimates of the returns from the investments."

The speaker also declared that public education should be kept free from entangling alignments. "We have done a very good job at this in Alabama, the outstanding exception being in the office of county superintendents of education," he said. "There are some twenty-two counties now in which the county superintendent of education is elected by the people rather than selected on a strictly professional, non-political basis."

In conclusion, Dr. Harman said that there is need for an era of mutual understanding and good will between the people professionally engaged in education on the one hand and the people who must pay the bills on the other. This need exists, he said, with particular reference to the State Department of Education, which ought to be resorted to as an organization for guidance and leadership in the technical aspects of education.

STRUGGLE FOR THE TREATY NAVY

Naval construction will be one of the great subjects of struggle at the coming session of Congress. A program bringing the navy up to the strength agreed on at the London conference will be proposed by the administration and will be opposed by the picifists. Division will not be on party lines, for there are advocates of the treaty navy among the Democrats and there are advocates of a trust-to-luck navy among the Republicans. Now is the time to fight out the question, for a program of large or small proportions must be adopted providing construction until 1936 or later.

Facts of the situation seem to leave no room for controversy. A navy of certain strength in each category of ship has been found by agreement with the other principal naval powers to be necessary to defense of the United States against any other navy or any probable combination of navies, the British and Japanese navies being limited on the same principle. To attain this strength, the United States needs several aircraft carriers, a number of cruisers, destroyers and submarines, after scrapping many of the two latter classes which are obsolete. Cost of the program may reach a billion dollars, but it would extend over at least six years and would include large arrears of construction due to almost entire suspension of cruiser building from 1922 to 1928. Financial benefits of reduction and limitation would not begin to accrue until this program was completed, but they would then be considerable, for annual expenditure on replacement of old ships would be less than hitherto and the large number of new ships would defer many replacements. Deferment of these benefits is the penalty to be paid for past neglect of construction.

Pacifists sweep aside these considerations, class all expenditure on new ships as militarism and waste, and dwell on the total prospective outlay without regard to the period over which it will be spread or to the fact that much of it is for deferred expenditure which should have been made in former years. They would take the Kellogg treaty as adequate defense forgetting the number of broken treaties with which history abounds, forgetting also the value of a strong American navy, together with others of peaceful nations, in enforcing observance of the Kellogg treaty. True economy consists in preparing for defense in peace time. If we wait until war is upon us, then embark on a great construction program, as we did in 1916, we shall spend in two or three years much more than we have saved in the years of parsimony. A time when Europe chafes at the peace treaties and when Soviet Russia rattles the sabre is no time for disarmament by example.—Portland Oregonian.

OFFICES FOR EVERYBODY

Jouett Shouse, in charge of the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee, in Washington, comes out in favor of a five hour day for government employes.

This proposal will involve an increase of one-half in the number of gvernment employes. It is estimated that one American employe in ten is on the government payroll. Public expenditures now amount to thirteen billion dollars annually, or about one-seventh of our national income. The American people must work about one day each week to pay the cost of government. Public expenditures are increasing at the rate of a half billion dollars a year.

As a means of relieving the American people it is now proposed to increase the number of government employes by half in order that the same work now being done may be accomplished. The people are to be helped by making them work a day and a half each week to pay the cost of government. They are however, to be permitted to retain the remaining time to work for themselves.

Would it not be well to put everybody on the public payroll and reduce the hours to say one a day? This would solve the problem of furnishing work for everybody, the only trouble being that there would be no taxpayers left to pay the freight. Whenever the politicians run out of taxpayers they will be compelled to declare a moratarium.

Palestine will grant loans to farmers, says a cable dispatch. Hope they turn out better than they did in the United States.

They have started a "buy a load of wheat" movement in Canada, which is all right if they will tell the purchaser what to do with his wheat.

So far as we can learn even the most ardent internationalists don't claim that the League of Nations is about to cure the world-wide depression.

European nations want navies measured on a dollar basis because they know it costs us more to build ships since we pay real wages to our workers.

The Republicans were not defeated. They were merely liquidating the inflated majorities of 1928.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

All reports coming to us from the nations to the south of us indicate that Uncle Sam's relations with Latin-America are steadily growing more cordial. The recent Nicaraguan election, held under American auspices at the request of the Nicaraguans themselves, has created a profound impression everywhere. Our relations with Chile and other South American nations are said to be more cordial than they have been for years.

The fact that this is true is all the more surprising in view of insidious efforts which have been made in the past to bring about ill-feeling between the United States and Latin-America. This effort has been well organized and has extended over a period of years and its inspiration has been not in the Western Hemisphere but in Europe. Any observing American who has traveled in the countries to the south of us has sensed this effort. European nations from the beginning have controlled the avenues of information not only between Europe and Latin-America but between the United States and South America. As a result, for years, most of the foreign news and information appearing in the newspapers of South America has been colored in an effort to estrange the sentiment between the two Amricas. News froms the United States has been distorted to show that we are a nation of idle rich and of money-grabbing traders, that we had no ideals except finance, and that our purpose toward Latin-America was to exploit it whenever and wherever possible and to maintain an impedialistic attitude toward all the other nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Unfortunately these European propagandists were not without assistance in our country. There has been a group of so-called liberals in the United States which has been busy shouting imperialism against our government whenever it has been necessary to intervene in Latin-America not only to protect the lives of our citizens and their property, but in the interests of the people of the revolution-torn land itself.

So long as our own newspapers and our own people paid little attention to Latin-America this anti-American propaganda, inspired in Europe, was permitted to go on without interruption. This propaganda was not inspired by pure malice toward the United States. It had a carefully planned objective. The purpose of keeping the relations cool between the United States and Latin-America was to prevent Uncle Sam from getting a share of the trade with these countries.

Up until the World War the scheme worked pretty well. But after the war our trade with Latin-America grew by leaps and bounds in spite of the barriers placed against it. Now it is greater than the trade of the two leading trade nations of Europe combined. Increasing trade has brought a reawakening interest between the Northern and Southern Hemispheres. Newspapers of the United States and press services are exchanging material with Latin-America direct, instead of permitting the news to go back and forth through London and Paris. There has been a greater exchange of visitors and tourists—in short we are getting better acquainted with our neighbors. Another important fact is that the number of ship lines between the United States and Latin-America is increasing, and as these lines and their direct commerce increase our relations will become more intimate and more cordial. All of whichc will be for the benefit of all American nations.

INTERNATIONAL FRIENDSHIPS

The tour of South American universities by a Yale Debating Team last summer, under the guidance of Assistant Professor Ernest J. Hall, was a distinguished success. Perhaps its most helpful result was the establishment, all along the route, of new additions to an inter-university movement for better understanding between the young men of different countries. Obviously, the more of this the better. The international singing organization which Marshall Bartholomew, '07 S., has been organizing, comes to something the same end. Both movements point towards amity and common interests between nations, each in its own sphere.

Just now, when South America has been torn by disturbing economic and political causes and is not yet out of the throes of civil wars, and when the United States is not understood so well as, north of the canal, we wish it were, such movements towards international understanding are very much to be supported.—Yale Alumni Weekly.

The returns show that the next Congress will have a Repocratic House and a Demopublican Senate.—St Louis Post-Dispatch.

In this country, candidates quit running when elected. In South America, it's different.—Toledo Blade.

"I am willing," said the candidate after he had hit the table a resounding whack with his fist, "to trust the people."

"Say," interrupted a little man in the audience, "I wish you'd open a grocery store in this town."

"INSURE" INSURANCE

The fire insurance industry renders to both individuals and businesses an invaluable service and, like all other private endeavor, it must make a profit in order to exist.

The National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, whose duty it is to regulate the industry in its own interest and the public intesert alike, has said that the companies are entitled to a profit of five per cent and that this profit is necessary to security. Yet the average underwriting profit earned in a five-year period by 204 companies reporting to the National Board of Fire Underwriters, was but 1.12 per cent.

This unsatisfactory showing may be laid to two causes—our immense fire waste and the fact that insurance is one of the most regulated and taxed of all businesses. Legislators cannot prevent fire, but they can see that the industry is given fair treatment. It has made a remarkably fine record of service and its rates to policyholders are now the lowest in many years.

Insurance is bound up in almost every possible human activity. In the words of M. A. Freedy, Insurance Commissioner of Wisconsin, 'Except for the stabilizing effect of insurance in the form of establishing credit, this country should be in a state of chaos commercially by reason of the lack of confidence and security so necessary to the successful conduct of any business. Insurance in some form or other is so interwoven into our economis and business life that it is comparable to the circulatory system of the human body and may well be said to be the life-giving substance to our successful existence and growth."

Those who are interested in the future growth and prosperity of America should do what they can to "insure insurance" against a crisis rought on by unfriendly treatment.

BUSINESS AND CONGRESS

Mr. F. Abbot Goodhue, president of the International Acceptance Bank and of the American Acceptance Council, is of the opinion that the business and industrial depression is past the crisis and that from now on a steady improvement may be expected. He does not make this statement from a desire to be optimistis, but because he believes it to be true. He says that 1930 will be written down in this country as a year of readjustment after the unparalleled business activity and unbounded speculation of the previous year. He belives that a wholesale lesson has been learned, for the time being at least, and that with the country back once more on a bedrock foundation we shall go steadily forward. Confidence has been regained, which means that business has largely overcome its hesitancy.

Mr. Goodhue looks for gradual recovery of commodity prices, lessened unemployment and an improvement in earnings. Although the situation is still disturbed by political unrest in Europe, the Far East and South America, and by economic conditions throughout the world similar to those that have fallen upon us, our own recuperative powers can no longer be held in check. Business and industry have weathered the storm and have set their sails toward prosperity, which they will reach the more speedily if let free to pursue their own course. The danger just now is that they will encounter all sorts of legislative buoys, placed with good intentions but leading into wrong channels.

Congress and other legislative bodies are prone to believe that what has been lost can be regained by the adoption of legislative devices. In their desire to give encouragement and relief, various proposals are likely to be advanced, most of which will carry appropriations which mean more taxes. Mr. Coolidge was sound as usual when he said in one of his recent articles, "If business can be assured of reasonable freedom from governmental interference and increased taxes, that will do more than all kinds of legislation to relieve depression. It will be the part of wisdom to give business a free hand to supply its own remedies. This is no time to take counsel of the legislative visionaries."—Hartford Courant.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Well, what do you think? The remarks I made last week in this column actually got me a mess of chitlings. When the phone rang just before noon Friday I answered. The voice of a lady said "I want to talk to the Man on the Corner." This is The Man on the Corner speaking to you, I assured her. "Have you had dinner yet," she asked. "No," says I. "Don't eat," she said, "until I get there. I am bringing you some chitlings."

I didn't have to wait long until Mrs. Jim Scroggins drove up in front of the office. A fellow could afford to wait a long time for anything as fine as the chitlings she brought. In fact, I think I would be waiting yet if she had not showed up. Yes, Mrs. Scroggins, we thank you mightily. And for a fact, I am more certain than ever now that rather than miss the chitlings, I would throw away all the rest of the hog.

You notice I said "we" thank you. That means, to my sorrow, that somebody else besides myself was in on the eating of the chitlings. All the boys in the office seem to like chitlings as well as the Man on the Corner. And we all join in the expression of thanks to Mrs. Scroggins.

I wonder what our banks are going to do about joining in on the cotton acreage reduction plan of the Cotton Reduction Association. Seems to me that the proposition is worthy of our honest consideration. The thing we need in the cotton business is to cut down the amount produced.

I have heard some severe criticism of the farmers because they do not voluntarily reduce cotton acreage, and thereby curtail the production of cotton. I am not inclined to blame them so severely for that. The farmer will doubtless show the right kind of response to a reduction when he is convinced that it is sincere and in good faith, and universally applied to all the cotton growing sections of the country. I believe the banks can bring such a program about and come as near to accomplishing the result as any agency we have.

Discussing the plan of cotton reduction with Mr. Jasper Dennis, whom I regard as among our best posted farmers, he said he was very favorably impressed with the plan, and hopeful of its good results. "The place to start such a movement," said Mr. Dennis, "is at the top, with the big farmer, the big business men, the bankers." I believe he is right. Starting at the top will serve to make the little farmer more confident of the sincerity and good purpose of the movement.

Optimism prevails in the ranks of the strawberry growers of this section. In spite of the shortage of last year's crop, our berry growers realized better returns from their berries than they did for their cotton. I notice that the Verbena district plans to get into the berry business. That means expansion, and that more farmers will have something else to bring in a little cash besides depending solely on cotton.

District Attorney, Grady Reynolds, was in Clanton a while last Saturday afternoon, loafing around and discussing current topics with his friends. I was impressed with the unusualness of Grady Reynolds hanging around, even for a few minutes, doing nothing.

Mr. Reynolds stated that the Department of Justice of the Federal government is getting lined up with the incoming Sheriffs of Alabama, looking to a combined and co-operative effort of law enforcement between the state and county and federal officers.

Percy Pitts tells an interesting story about his deer hunt on the Allison reserve last week. He was lucky to kill a fine buck. The story of Mr. Pitts emphasizes the subject of conservation more than the mere matter of killing a deer. He tells me that he expects to talk conservation here until the people of Chilton County become more interested in preserving and protecting our natural resources and game.

The point Mr. Pitts is driving at may be briefly stated thus: The people of Chilton County ought to be on guard against the ravages of fire which destroy our forests every year, and keep down the growth of timber. At the same time the fire is destroying young timber, it also destroys wild game, birds, etc. It is a shame the way we allow our woodlands to suffer from fire destruction.

I went out the Lock 12 Road a few weeks ago, and I observed that the whole world from Cane Creek to Yellow Leaf seemed to be on fire. A strong south wind was blowing the flames into a seething madness which swept down everything before it. What chance has a wild animal or a bird, or a pine seedling to survive such fires?

Had a letter this week from Mr. Wallace C. Edler, who now lives with relatives in Seattle, Washington. He did not tell me much about himself; talked mostly about business. His friends in Chilton County hope he is enjoying his stay in the Northwest.

The last time I saw the baby buggy, Frank Foshee was rolling it down the road toward South Clanton.

Friends of Miss Ollie Louise Gentry extend congratulations and best wishes on the occasion of her graduation as a nurse at the end of her training period at Central Alabama Hospital. It takes a lot of grit and determination for a young girl to go through the required course of a nurse. But it is an accomplishment that is worthy of the work and the effort necessary to get there.

Since he has been in charge of the Central Alabama Hospital it has been an ever present ambition of Dr. Gragg to maintain a training school for nurses. There are many good reasons why such a school is worth while and advantageous. But I accuse Dr. Gragg of being chiefly interested in it because it gives him an opportunity to teach school.

There are a great many folks in Chilton County who know of Dr. Gragg's school-teaching proclivities. Away back before he took up the study of medicine, lots of people thought Mr. Gragg had settled down to school teaching as a life career. He might have thought so himself, I don't know. I do know I went to school to him many summers and winters. I was proud of him and loved him as a school teacher, for the same reason that I am proud of him and love him as a doctor. He was always a man who played the game fair and believed in doing things.

A mutual friend of Dr. Gragg and myself, who lives in Kentucky wrote me a letter just after the election. He said, "I hoped Dr. Gragg would be successful in his race for the State Senate; but somehow I am inclined to think it was best for himself and for the community of Clanton that he was not elected. I expect the best service Dr. Gragg can possibly render to the county of Chilton is to stay right where he is with the hospital and his medical practice, and not become hampered with political impediments." I am inclined to think our friend has very correctly summed up the situation.

CHRISTMAS Greetings from GOODYEAR

We come to the close of the year 1930 with thankful appreciation for the many friends and users of Goodyear Tires. We want you to know that we appreciate your business in the past. And we face the future with confidence, knowing that we shall continue to have for our customers and friends the best value known to the world in automobile tires, and that value backed up by our unexcelled service.

Why—

More People Ride on GOODYEAR TIRES Than Any Other Kind.

Reading the advertisements one would say the tire makers are scarcely in agreement as to who produces the finest tires. But it seems to us the people who buy tires have definitely settled that question.

For fifteen years now it has been true: "More people ride on Goodyears Tires than any other kind." This is a preference with which the tire makers have had little to do; the people have decided it for themselves.

An endorsement so widespread and so unprejudiced as this surely must have great significance for you as a tire buyer. It simply means that millions of car owners, over a period of years, have found in Goodyear Tires those factors of value which you yourself are seeking.

It means that every question of performance, traction, long life, service and price is satisfactorily answered in Goodyear Tires: It must mean also that such questions are not equally satisfactorily answered in other tires, or such other tires would more closely rival Goodyear in popularity.

We invite you to think this over as you come to solve your tire problems of the future.

Our Special Offer
From Now to January First

In order to show our appreciation for the loyal patronage of our friends and customers during the year 1930, we have determined to bring this year's sales to a close with a special appreciation offer, in which we give

Ten per cent Reduction From Our Regular Prices

on every Goodyear tire or tube which we sell from now until the first of January, 1931. As you know, our prices on Goodyear Tires are already as low as the prices on any standard high grade tire. While this offer lasts we will make a further reduction of ten per cent from the regular selling price.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS FROM GOODYEAR

Dief Expresses His Appreciation For Splendid Business Given To Goodyear During the Past Year.

Readers of The Union-Banner this week will find a full page advertisement in which L. E. Diefenderfer takes pleasure in expressing the greetings of this Christmas season to the friends of Goodyear Tires throughout Chilton County.

Dief has been pushing Goodyear Tires in Clanton for many years. He has found a popular response from many hundreds of automobile and truck drivers, who have come to know and appreciate the superior value and unexcelled service of Goodyear Tires.

In his advertisement, Dief says: "We come to the close of the year 1930 with thankful appreciation for the many friends and users of Goodyear Tires. We want you to know that we appreciate your business in the past. We face the future with confidence, knowing that we shall continue to have for our customers and friends the best values known to the world in automobile tires, and that value backed up by our unexcelled service."

As a special offer from now to January the first, Dief says "In order to show our appreciation for the loyal patronage of our friends and customers during the year 1930, we have determined to bring this years sales to a close with a special appreciation offer in which we will give ten per cent reduction from our regular prices on every Goodyear tire or tube we sell from now until the first of January, 1931. While this offer lasts we will make a further reduction of ten per cent from the regular selling price."

CHILTON COUNTY TRAINING SCHOOL

Friday, December 12, was a red letter day at the County Training School. More than 350 students, farmers and their wives were present to witness the fourth annual session of "Our Farmers Conference." Among the visitors present were Miss L. V. Battle, home demonstration agent of Autauga County; Mr. S. W. Boynton, county agent of Dallas County, Selma, Ala.; Mr. W. Hughes, county agent, Autauga County; Mr. R. E. Commack, state supervisor of agricultural education, Montgomery.

Everybody present was benefitted by the wholesome instructions coming from the speakers of the day, and seeing the many exhibits including livestock, poultry, farm and home products, we are taking this method of thanking our farmers and friends for their cooperation in making this conference a success. We appreciate the many prizes given us by the merchcants and business enterprises of Clanton, and especially do we appreciate Mr. C. E. Stapp, county agent, and the Peoples Savings Bank for their gifts and the interest they have taken in negro farmers.

May I add that the Farm Bureau is an organization for farmers, and I Urge that you become a member for your own benefit.

L. C. JOHNSON, Principal.

GRADUATING EXERCISES FOR MISS OLLIE LOUISE GENTRY

The Central Alabama Hospital announces graduating exercises for the nurses training school, to be held at the Clanton Baptist Church Monday night, December 22, at eight o'clock.

At this time a diploma will be awarded to Miss Ollie Louise Gentry, who has completed her course as a graduate nurse, and who has already received her certificate from the Alabama State Board.

Miss Gentry is the daughter of Mr. Emmett Gentry, of Jemison. She has been taking training at Central Alabama Hospital for the past four years, and has completed her course with distinction. In successfully passing the State Board, Miss Gentry received special commendation from the chairman of the State Board of Examiners, who insisted that she continue her studies with a special post graduate course in New York City at one of the country's widely known training schools for nurses.

At the graduating exercises next Monday night a suitable program will be carried out, including music and addresses by some local people of prominence.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend the commencement exercises.

COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVE FOR CHILTON COUNTY

In another place in this paper you will find an announcement of the second drive for chest funds for Chilton County. Last year the drive was put on for the first time. It is true that we have not been able to give the amount of relief that we would like to have given because the funds were not sufficient but on the other hand many families have been taken care of who were in dire need of food and clothing and in many instances medical aid.

Thirteen families whose fathers were in the penitentiary would have suffered more if it had not been for this fund. One might say that a case of this kind did not deserve consideration but the fact remains that the children at least, are not responsible for any misdeeds of the fathers and in nearly every case the mother is not responsible. We have families whose fathers are dead who received aid from this fund. A great number of people who were unable to buy anything for Chrsitmas last year and to whom Christmas would have been a source of embarrassment and heartaches were made glad because of the visitation of Santa Claus made possible through this fund. The Child Welfare Superintendent worked until after midnight delivering food, etc., to such families on last Christmas Eve night.

This year because of the financial depression over the entire country the number of the latter type of cases referred to above has so increased as to make it impossible for one person to begin to get around to the most needy cases in the county to give aid. Because of this we are asking that the teacher or teachers in every school ask the children to bring to school next Friday, December 19th, a contribution in the form of unperishable foods, clothing, or anything else that might be used to make the hearts of everyone happy on Christmas morning. The teachers are being asked to take charge of this and distribute it according to the needs of the community. Perhaps it would be a good thing for the teachers to ask the trustees of the respective schools to join with them in the proper distribution of whatever might be received from the pupils.

No one can realize as fully as a public man the number of needy cases today. The reader may think that he or she is in such circumstances as to justify them in not giving but please remember that there are hundreds of people today who are actually going without enough food and more cases where they do not have enough clothes to keep their bodies warm and properly protect them from the winter.

WAY BACK MEMORIES

Look back in remembrance that life spent was, Aunt Nannie Moore, as we all called her. Tho it is sad to know but sweet to remember. Her body now lies sleeping in the cold grave, beneath the feet that trods her pathway. Year after year I have known her, and to know her was to love her. Since I happened to live in her midst, I'll attempt to tell of the good things she often said in my presence. She said, "It is our duty to scatter flowers in each other's pathway." To recall the fact she was a true Christian, loyal to her church and community. Her faith was on the happiness and success of human lives in mental attitude towards others.

She Joined the W. M. S. when it was first organized with a new spirit that she would serve her master better than ever before. She often remarked, "Why haven't we been better servants all this time." She asked me to never let this work die. She said, "You have made it so easy for us all to help in this great cause and it is the only way I can contribute, by giving my Saturday's eggs." It is easy to give where love for Christianity lies, and it is the duty of every human to give a tenth of their earnings.

Aunt Nannie leaves a husband, 4 sons and a host of friends to mourn her loss. We loved her, but God loved her best, and called her home. Let each one strive to meet her come.—Alpine W. M. S., President.

Based upon returns made to the State Tax Commission, coal production in Alabama during the first nine monts of 1930 dropped 10 per cent below that for the same period of 1929. The reduction for the entire country was 13 per cent.

LOST—One boy's (8 years old) gray overcoat; lost last week between High School and Grammar School. Finder please notify Mrs. C. B. Cox, Clanton Phone No. 2. 1c

Merry Christmas

1920—1930

AT Mid-Night Wednesday Week The Curtain Will Ring Down Upon The Year 1930

As the old year ends, Alabama is still feeling the effects of the nation wide depression. But on the horizon, as the new year dawns, there is a rosy tinge which gives promise that the sunshine of prosperity will soon be beaming down once more.

Looking backwards thru the clouds that have hovered over Alabama and the nation for the past twelve months our vision is obscured. The broader outline of our progress is blurred by the mist which has settled temporarily above our land. But the clouds are breaking up. Soon again we'll see the panorama of our progress once more in true perspective. Soon again we'll catch the vision of our future, equally as clear and equally as bright.

When the clouds break up and the fog bank of depression lifts, we'll see a panorama of the most amazing decade in the history of Alabama spreading clear before our eyes. We will see with new amazement what a miracle the past ten years have wrought. For who would have believed in 1920, that in ten years time our population would have increased 12.7% or 300,000? Or that new industries employing 18,000 people would have poured into our state, and that the value of our manufactured products would have increased by $125,000,000?

This is the true picture of our past—not the picture of the past twelve months which has been a mere interlude in Alabama's progress—but the picture of the past decade which ends at mid-night Wednesday week. If we look with the same clarity at the picture of the present, we will see that fundamentally conditions in our state are just as sound today as during any peak year.

There is today in Alabama, the same amount of power, the same amount of coal, the same amount of clay, and other raw materials and fertile farming lands as during any year that we have passed thru. For the past twelve months Alabama has been laying the foundation of a business revival that is bound to come soon. Soon again the country will be hungry for the many products Alabama makes and grows. Soon again the wheels of Alabama industry will be turning busily. Soon again we'll be enjoying fruits of better times.

This company greets the new year with renewed confidence and faith in Alabama's future and extends to every citizen in this great state its best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a big share in returning prosperity.

NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

The October production of cement in the southeastern district of the United States showed a decline of 13.3 per cent against a decline of 13.8 per cent of the entire country, according to the Alabama Economic Review, published by the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn.

In his annual message to congress, President Hoover asked for $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 to accererate construction for unemployment relief. He recommended also a fund for distressed farmers in the drought area.

Addressing a group of bankers at South Bend, Ind., Alexander Legge, chairman of the Federal Farm Board, tlod them that many of them will fail if they "allow farmers to continue their overproduction." He presented other facts showing that agriculture is vital to the banker and that bankers should have a keen and active interest in it.

NEW PUBLICATION STARTED AT AUBURN

Auburn, Ala. — "The Alabama Economic Review" is the name of a new monthly publication launched by the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn. It is "a monthly summary of agricultural, industrial, and financial conditions." It will be sent, free, each month to those who are especially interested in the contents, according to Dr. J. W. Scott, head of the department of economics.

Rev. James S. Holland of Tallassee was in Clanton Saturday and Sunday. He filled his appointment at Liberty Hill church.

America consumes more than three billion pounds of milk sugar annually in one form or another. This sugar is consumed as a part of cheese, butter, and especially of whole fluid milk. Large quantities have long been used in making and coating pills; but a more recent use of lactose or milk sugar is in compounding and modifying milk for infant feeding and as a part of acidophilus milk for intestinal treatment of adults.

During the third quarter of 1930 the Alabama Economic Review, published by the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, reported 88 business failures with liabilities of $1,527,718. This was 18 more than for the same period in 1929. Although there were more failures in Alabama, there was an actual decrease of liabilities amounting to $250,000.

The week's program follows:

Saturday—Agriculture economics feature, Prof. J. D. Pope; The agricultural situation, P. O. Davis; Inspirational talk, Rev. Bruce McGee.

On December 9 the Senate, without a roll call, passed a bill providing for $60,000,000 for food, seed, fertilizer, and cattle in the drought-stricken sections.

During the four weeks ending November 1, 1930, there were 541,165 freight cars loaded in the southern district against 631,833 loaded the same period in 1929, this being a reduction of 14.3 per cent, according to the Alabama Economic Review of Auburn.

Lesson for December 21

TIMOTHY: THE INFLUENCE OF HOME TRAINING

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:1-3; Philippians 2:19-22; II Timothy 1:1-6; 3:14-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living for Christ in Our Homes.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Religious Training in the Home.

I. Timothy's Parentage (Acts 16:1).

His father was a Greek and his mother a believing Jewess. On his mother's side, at least, he had a godly ancestry. Frequently the influence of the mother makes the son. A pious mother and a pious grandmother were back of Timothy. How thankful to God ought those to be who have been blessed with a godly ancestry. Christian heredity and training are vital elements which go to make up Christian life.

II. Timothy's Training (I Tim. 1:5; II Tim. 3:14, 15).

His wise and faithful mother and grandmother carefully nurtured him in God's Word. He knew the Scriptures from childhood through their training. The faith which came to him through his grandmother and mother did not come through the laws of heredity, but through careful training and teaching.

Three factors were involved in his training:

1. Godly ancestors. Those who have been blessed with godly ancestors should thank God for them. Those who are to be the parents of the coming generation should see to it that their children are not handicapped by a wrong life and wrong teaching.

2. A Christian home. The young of the human race must remain for the longest period under the influence of their parents. Unending existence and exalted destiny demand long and careful training. The goodness and wisdom of God are vitally reflected in this provision for humanity.

3. A diligent study of the Holy Scriptures. Timothy not only was taught the Scriptures from childhood, but was commanded diligently to study them (ch. 2:15). No home training or hereditary influence can possibly take the place of personal study of the Bible.

III. Timothy's Call (Acts 16:2, 3).

While on his second missionary journey in company with Silas, Paul found Timothy at Lystra near Derbe. Perhaps he had been converted on Paul's first missionary journey, but hearing a favorable report of him by the brethren, Paul circumcised him so as not to offend the Jews, because his father was a Greek. This was in harmony with the decision of the Jerusalem council. It was a case where conciliation was possible without compromise of truth. From this time to the end of Paul's life, Timothy was his devoted companion.

IV. Timothy's Character.

1. Of a retiring disposition (II Tim. 1:6). He had received a gift from God at the hands of the apostle but it needed to be stirred up; that is, fanned into a flame. Such a temperament would mature in touch with a great personality like Paul. Each Christian has a gift from God's hand. It is highly important that the God-given gift be stirred up.

2. Courageous (II Tim. 2:1-8). Having been stirred up and freed from the spirit of fear, he deliberately identified himself with Paul in his sufferings and trials. Courage is greatly needed in doing the Lord's work.

3. Faithful (Phil. 2:20). Timothy tarried in the difficult field of Ephesus through many years. He was the only man of the proper fidelity to minister to the Philippians. The secret of his faithfulness in such a position was his fidelity to God's word.

V. Timothy's Ministry.

1. As a fellow missionary with Paul (Phil. 2:22). Paul testified that Timothy, as a son with a father, had served with him in the gospel.

2. As pastor of the church at Ephesus (I Tim. 1:3, 4). Here Timothy labored for many years, tactfully meeting the difficulties of that great church. The secret of his ministry, as that of all Christian ministers, was that he had implicit confidence in the Scriptures as God's Word, and that he diligently studied them so as rightly to divide them in meeting the needs of those to whom he ministered. This is the only way to meet the needs which arise in the difficult field of a pastor.

Humility

Humility is not only a virtue in itself, but a vessel to contain other virtues—like embers which keep the fire alive that is hidden under it. It emptieth itself by a modest estimation of its own worth, that Christ may fill it.—Thomas Adams.

Working With God

READY-MIXED FEEDS KEPT ON HIGH BASIS

"The standard and grade of mixed feeds sold in Alabama are kept on a high basis," says Seth P. Storrs, Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, who reports that 5,890 inspections of feed establishments were made and 1,362 samples of feed collected by inspectors during the past year to assure a continuation of high quality feeds.

Regarding the work of the State Department of Agriculture in assuring high quality feeds, Commissioner Storrs makes the following statement:

"The purpose of the inspection of commercial feeds is to insure to the consumer feeds containing the food constituents advertised by the manufacturer and to protect the consumer from the use of inferior or injurious feeds. All such commercial feeds are required to be branded before sold and a statement of the contents of such feeds carried on the package showing the percentage of crude protein, fat, carbohydrates and the percentage of fiber, together with the source from which such food ingredients were obtained.

"Inspectors examine and take samples of all mixed feeds sold in the states and these samples are analyzed by the state laboratory. All such feeds are required to come up to the standard of food ingredients advertised or claimed by the manufacturer. With the condemnation of understandard feeds, together with the prosecutions for violations, the standard and grade of mixed feeds in the state are kept on a high basis."

DAIRY RATIONS ARE NAMED BY AUBURN

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 15.—A list of "essential and economical rations" for dairy cows in Alabama has been named by F. W. Burns, livestock specialist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, in response to requests from numerous farmers and dairymen for such information. Those feeding cows a mixed hay, such as peavines and sorghum or Johnson grass, are advised to feed one of the following rations:

1. 100 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds cottonseed meal, and 4 pounds salt; or (2) 100 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds velvet bean and pod meal, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds cottonseed meal, and 4 pounds salt; or (3) 150 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds cottonseed meal, and 3 1-2 pounds salt.

Where the hay or roughage consists of Johnson grass, cottonseed hulls, or another non-legume product, one of the following rations should be fed:

1. 150 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, 200 pounds cottonseed meal, 5 pounds salt, and 5 pounds slaked lime; or (2) 100 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds velvet bean and pod meal, 100 pounds wheat bran, 150 pounds cottonseed meal, 5 pounds salt, and 5 pounds slaked lime; or (3) 100 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds wheat bran, 150 pounds cottonseed meal, 4 pounds salt, and 4 pounds slaked lime.

In either of these rations wheat shorts may be substituted for wheat bran, and high-grade peanut meal for half of the cottonseed meal if warranted by prices. Blackstrap molasses is about equal to corn when used in a limited amount. It is much cheaper.

Mr. Ervin Williamson has moved from Birmingham to Clanton.

930,127 QUARTS FOOD CONSERVED IN 1930

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 15.—During the summer and fall Alabama farm women and girls in the 40 counties having home demonstration agents conserved 930,127 quarts of food, of which 500,000 quarts were canned fruits and vegetables, the remaining 430,127 quarts being dried fruits, vegetables, jellies, preserves, and meats.

In reporting this achievement Miss Helen Johnston, state leader in home demonstration extension work of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute called attention to the fact that it was attained in spite of the drouth which curtailed production of fruits and vegetables. These products will be used, in the main, as home supplies of food products but some will be sold. Curb markets provide an opportunity for the sale of surplus products of this kind.

Canning meats received special attention of the county home demonstration agents. Result, 30,636 quarts of beef, pork, and chicken were canned by the steam pressure method. For use in canning and other products, farm housewives in Alabama have bought during the last three years 500 steam pressure canning outfits.

Canning meats has two advantages. One is a saving in money; and the other is better health, Miss Johnston explained. Canning enables the housewife to have delicious meats available any day in the year, whereas lack of canning results in too much meat at one season and too little at another.

The preservation of fruits, vegetables, meats, and other food products is only one of several important lines of work conducted by the home demonstration agents.

On Saturday night the Helen Keller Literary society of Thorsby Institute gave its Christmas program. The first part of the program was a carol and candle lighting service which was different from anything ever given before and was lovely. This was planned by Miss Thoroman, the music teacher. Kathyrn Foss and Lola Martin, dressed in white flowing robes, lighted the candles in candelabra and windows. Then the girls, dressed in white, entered, singing carols, and sang several different carols. Miss Arthur sang "O Holy Night" beautifully, and Katheryn Foss and Lois Thompson sang a duet, "A Virgin Unspotted." that was very much enjoyed.

After this "The First Christmas," a one act play was given under the direction of Miss McKee and Miss Thoroman. The first scene showed the Shepherds out on the hillside watching the sheep. The sheep were restless and the shephers were disturbed about the sheep and the huge star which hung in the East. The shepherds were awakened by a bright light and a voice saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace good will to men." A chorus chanted the words of the voice. The shepherds took their families and went to worship the babe in Bethlehem. The three wise men also went to Bethlehem to worship Him and give gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh. The play was unusually well done. The costumes and scenery added much to the effect.

The Tuesday morning chapel with Miss Thoroman in charge was a very enjoyable one. The girls' churus sang, "The top of the morning to you," and the girls trio sang, "Going Home." The trio consisted of Katheryn Foss, Lois Thompson and Edna Lee Wilder.

Tuesday night the dormitory Christmas tree was held. Santa Claus brought lots of presents, and one felt the Chrismas season had really begun.

On Tuesday at two o'clock, Thorsby Institute closes for its Christmas vacation. It reopens December 31st.

The addresses of the teachers durthe holidays will be: Miss Jenkins, 303 Hill St. LaGrage, Georgia; The Misses Leech, Stoddard and Fairbank, Thorsby; Mr. Sutlive, Blakeley, Georgia; Miss Thoroman, 5001 Linden Ave., Norwood, Ohio; Miss McKee, Lineville, Alabama; Mr. Maddor, Jemison; Mr. King, Plainville, Ill.; Miss Klingelhoofer, Mascoutah, Ill.; Mis Arthur, Midland City, Alabama.

The Christian Endeavor of the Thorsby Congregational church held its regular meeting Sunday, December 14, at 6:30.

The topic was, "How to make others happy." Catheryn Stallings, was the leader. The Bible reference, Eph. 4:31; 5:-2 was read by Gerald Smith. A poem was given by Mayme Johnson. The society sang an appropriate song after each verse except the last when Miss Klingelhoofer sang a solo. Topics were given out on how Christmas is celebrated in different lands.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE AT JACKSON

The Fourth Southern Baptist Sunday School Conference will be held at Jackson, Mississippi, January 13-16, 1931. This is an annual event promoted by the Baptist Sunday School Board, under the supervision of I. J. Van Ness, Secretary.

Assurance comes from the Baptist Sunday School Board headquarters at Nashville, that the conference at Jackson this year will be an outstanding event in Baptist history. A quota of 4,500 people in attendance outside of Jackson has been set. This number will be made up of Baptist workers and leaders from every section of the Southern Baptist territory.

Thousands will go to Jackson by automobile. Seventeen organized committees in the city of Jackson are making ample preparation for taking care of the visitors. Hotel reservations are already being made, and there is evidence that the city of Jackson will be taxed to its limit in acommodating the delegates.

An outstanding attraction of the conference will be the address of George W. Truett, of Dallas, Texas. He comes fresh from the experiences of an extended trip, as denominational representative, to South American countries. Dr. Van Ness, of the Sunday School Board, has planned a program of general sessions and divisional conferences that will likely outdistance any former activity of the type.

It is easy to get from here to Jackson, Mississippi, by auto. There should be a good representation of Baptist Sunday School workers from Chilton County to attend this conference.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

In New Mexico and Arizona there are about forty thousand Navajo Indians, mostly self-supporting by means of the sheep industry. Their culture is much higher than that of their white neighbors of the lower class. The Indians of the Southwest are generally quite contented with their manner of living and many observers think that their customs should be encouraged by the government rather than hampered.

Three billion pounds of fish is the harvest in the United States waters for last year. One hundred and twenty-five thousand commercial fishermen are engaged in the industry. Their income for 1930 was over $116, 000,000.

Certain American editors, who always take the European side of every important question are now beginning in a subtle way to oppose an adequate naval program. It is interesting to observe how cleverly they handle the subject.

Twenty five million dollars will be spent in the next three months on river and harbor improvements, mostly on the Mississippi and Missouri rivers.

A few innocent people old enough to know better are still taking seriously our various institutions of international affairs.

The bonded indebtedness of the United States is less than 4 per cent of its total assets. This country has today all resources it possessed two years ago. There is plenty of money available for every sound business enterprise. Somebody should inform Uncle Sam of these facts and tell him to cheer up.

Did you ever hear of the American Civil Liberties Union denouncing the arrest and conviction of any helpless Russian in Russia who had the temerity to disagree with the soviet government?

Bilious, Dizzy, Drowsy Feeling

"WHEN I was a child, if I did not feel well, or if I had a cold, my mother gave me Black-Draught," says Mrs. Orpha Hill, of Wofford, Ky. "When I was married, it became a family medicine in my own home, as it was in my mother's.

"I take it for headache and especially for constipation. When I get bilious, my skin gets yellow and I have a very bad taste in my mouth, and a drowsy feeling all during the day. My eyes burn and I get dizzy, or my head is 'swimming.' When I take Black-Draught, it seems to drive the impurities out of my system and I feel fine. I am seldom without this reliable remedy."

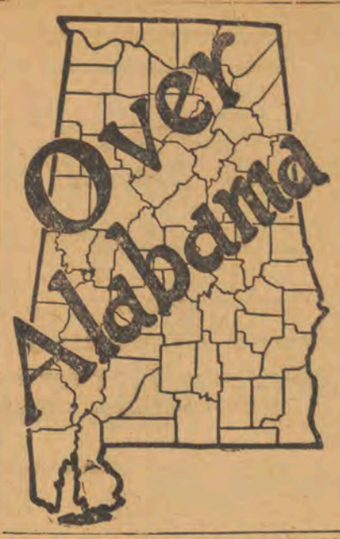
LIMITED RECRUITING IN UNITED STATES MARINES

The United States Marine Corps Recruiting Station, 1927 1-2 Second Ave., Birmingham, Alabama, announces that limited recruiting has been opened up in this district. Only specialists 21 years or over and sixty five or more inches in height will be accepted at the present time. The specialists are named as follows: bandsmen, electricians, plumbers, butchers, cooks, bakers, carpenters, horseshoers, painters, masons, gardners, auto mechanics, and truck drivers.

Recommendations from former employers will be required in each case.

CHEVROLET PRODUCTION SETS NEW HIGH RECORD

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 15.—Concrete evidence of improvement in the automobile industry was disclosed here today with the anonuncement that production of the Chevrolet Motor Company in November set a new high record for the month.



Unit output in November was 47,257 passenger and commercial cars as compared with 46,125 in the same month last year, which was the best previous November. The December schedule is set for 60,000 cars.

The November car shortage has resulted in the December schedule set at about 20,000 cars higher than any previous December in the company's history, according to W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager. The company's twenty domestic production plants now have 28,500 men at work to meet the insistent clamor of dealers for cars following the highly successful introduction of the new 1931 line on November 14, Mr. Knudsen stated.

Future plans call for a gradual further monthly step-up until the spring demand sees the manufacturing plans operating at capacity, Mr. Knudsen explained.

Chevrolet is one of the few volume manufacturers to achieve a very satisfactory record during the past twelve months. That the company was enabled to do this is interpreted here as a distinctly favorable omen for all industry. The motor car industry is the largest user of many basic commodities, and unusual activity on the part of the Chevrolet Motor Company, which builds approximately one-fifth of all cars produced means a decided stimulus to many lines of trade.

We still prefer sixty cent turkeys to thirty cent turkeys. For when turkeys are sixty cents a pound everybody buys them, and when they are thirty cents a pound nearly everyone is broke.

RECREATIONS MAY AID FOREST GROWTH

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 15.—Aid to timber growth can be rendered by recreationists during the holiday season through being careful with fire in the woods, says Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. Ranking closely with premature utilization of young timber as a deterrent to profitable forestry is the frequent burning over of certain sections of Alabama's woodlands.

Many people will resort to the woods during the next few weeks in search of agreeable outdoor recreation. It is well known that the more people there are in the woods, the more fires there will be. While this is obviously true in a relative sense, the actual number of ignitions may be kept at a low figure if the people are careful to extinguish every match that is lighted and to refrain from dropping live cigarette butts on the forest floor.

Southern forest regions have much longer fire seasons than those of the north and the west. The frost killed ground vegetation requires warmth as well as moisture in order to decay promptly. During most winter seasons there is plenty of rainfall for this purpose, but the weather is so cold that the dead grass and leaves cannot rot until the warm spring and early summer furnish heat to permit the necessary bacterial action.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

Tomorrow, the 19th, at noon the Christmas holidays begin here at the University and the Chilton County students will start for home to spend two weeks in a joyous vacation and forget the drudgery of school.

On the same day the Crimson Tide Special heads for Rose Bowl in far off California. And with it goes hundreds of ardent admirers and the good wishes of every Alabama student.

We hope that captain Clements and Company will have as good success on the coast as they have had bowling over the best competition that the southland could produce.

We read with interest the report of the Chilton County High School banquet for the football team and earnestly hope that some of the seniors may be on the Crimson Tide Freshman team next year.

And we offer congratulations to captain Robert Sumner and Alternate captain, Herman Harris and hope them the greatest success at C. C. H. S. in 1931. Lets go Chilton.

Alabama's basket ball team started the year off with a bang with a 45 to 15 victory over Birmingham Y. M. C. A. team. Coach Crisp made frequent substitutions to try out new men under fire, they responded quite satisfactorily.

Crimson Tide roll on to victory—Clanton here we come.

Merry Christmas and a happy New Year everybody.

AND NOW WE HAVE VIRGIN DIAMONDS

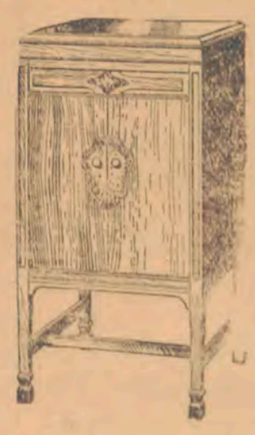
Phrase Coined By Diamond Syndicate As Trade Name Now Important Factor In Diamond Purchases.

December 15.—Long have we heard of virgin gold, virgin soil and virgin snow, long has the word been a favorite of poets—but it remained for a diamond syndicate to introduce Virgin Diamonds.

According to the Virgin Diamond Syndicate, Virgin Diamonds are genuine diamonds, right from the mines, so named to distinguish them from those stones which have previously been on the market.

"Diamonds," says Mynherr Van Guilder, "like people, have 'pasts.' Once a stone comes from the mines, it goes on through the ages accumulating a reputation.

"Because of their value, ere diamonds are long on the market, they usually figure in scandals of one sort or another. Eventually they find their way to 'fences' and pawnshops. Soon they are again in legitimate jewelry channels.



"So much sentiment is attached to engagements, weddings, birthdays, Chritmas and those other gift occasions when diamonds are given, that most people naturally prefer a diamond of known origin, a stone that—never before—has been worn. Sentimental, of course, but who of us would care to give a loved one a second-hand gift with an unsavory past?

It was to fill this demand that the Virgin Diamond Syndicate was organized some years ago and the phrase "Virgin Diamonds" was coined. Only selected rough, direct from the mines, is used. It goes, from the skilled hands of the cutter, to Authorized Virgin Dealers all over the country—and from them to you, the first, after thousands of years, to own and to wear this precious gem.

Upchurch Drug Company, well known jewelers of this city, have been selected as local representatives of the Syndicate.

COAL and COKE CREATE PAYROLLS and PROSPERITY

And Are the Most Economical of All Fuels for Power Purposes or Home Heating!

THERE are only three forms of power available to Alabama industry:

ELECTRICITY delivered over a copper wire.

NATURAL GAS delivered thru a metal pipe line.

ALABAMA COAL AND COKE delivered in a railroad car.

Of these three forms of power only ONE employs a vast labor army to produce and distribute. That is Alabama's own natural fuel—ALABAMA COAL OR COKE.

Electricity is generated largely at a hydro-power dam, which can be operated with a handful of men. It is automatically distributed by transmission lines. Little labor is required to transport it. Less labor is required to produce it.

The same is true of Natural Gas. It is pumped through pipe lines from Louisiana. No Alabama labor is required to produce it. And when pipe lines are once laid, no Alabama labor will be needed to deliver it. Only a few meter readers will be required to collect the toll and send it from the state.

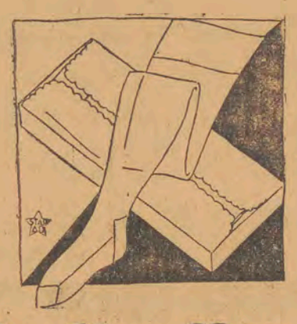
COAL AND COKE alone of all these power forms create mighty payrolls year after year. These payrolls are the backbone of Alabama's prosperity and progress.

COAL AND COKE create payrolls these three ways:

FIRST, IN PRODUCTION—It takes more than 26,000 Alabama men a year to mine and prepare Alabama's normal coal tonnage. To these 26,000 Alabama workers Alabama's coal industry pays normally the huge sum of $34,500,000. About 2,500 more Alabama men are employed by by-product industries which convert a big portion of this tonnage into coke.

SECOND, IN DISTRIBUTION—It takes 400,000 railroad cars a year to haul Alabama coal from mine to consumer and about 160,000 cars a year to haul Alabama coke from ovens to the market. This gives steady work at good pay to many thousand trainmen, enginemen, railway clerks and other railroad operatives.

THIRD, IN THE CONTRIBUTION WHICH IT MAKES TO OTHER STATE INDUSTRIES—Alabama's coal industry is a big buyer of Alabama lumber, brick, cement, iron, steel and other products made in Alabama. Its purchases keep men employed in the industries and businesses which make or sell these products. Alabama's coal and coke contribute indirectly to the building of payrolls in our steel mills and car building plants, as coal is hauled in railroad cars built largely out of Alabama steel and which roll over track laid largely with Alabama rails, and on Alabama ballast.



The commercial coal industry is virtually the only basic Alabama industry which is entirely owned by Alabama citizens, financed by Alabama capital and operated by Alabama labor.

Every time an industry or home deserts Alabama's natural fuel—COAL OR COKE—it makes business worse, not merely for the coal industry, but for every citizen who lives in or makes a living in the state.

Think twice before substituting natural gas or electricity for coal or coke. Think of the State! Think of yourself! When you use any substitute fuel you are actually endangering your own community—AND YOUR OWN JOB!

CLANTON POST TO SPONSOR FOREST

Meeting First Monday Night Will Consider Conservation of Natural Resources

It is announced by the officials of the Clanton Post of the American Legion that the ex-soldiers of Chilton County will adopt an active sponsorship of forestry and game preservation in Chilton County during the next year. It may be said that it is the hope of the Legionaires who are instituting this movement that the action which they are now taking in the support of forest conservation may become permanent and universal policy for all of the people of the county in the future.

At the meeting of the Clanton Post on the first Monday night in January, Hon. Massey Edgar, prominent conservation exponent, of Washington County, will be here to speak on this very important subject. Mr. Edgar is head of the Washington County Post of the American Legion, which organization has had splendid success in their own efforts along this line.

The meeting here on the first Monnight will be held at the courthouse, and it is hoped that a good representation of citizens, especially of the business men and county officials and city officials, will be present.

The Legionaires should have the hearty support of all citizens in this effort. Forestry and game preservation is a matter of very great importance to the County of Chilton. We have the vast areas of wild lands in our county which are suffering great financial losses every year by destructive forest fires. Our people can prevent this loss and destruction if they will only become interested and learn how much can be saved in the value of our natural resources by such attention.

DEPARTMENT RULES SYRUPS BE LABELED

All syrups when offered for sale in Alabama must be labeled, announces the Alabama State Department of Agriculture and Industries, which said that "dealers purchasing syrups for re-sale which is not labeled will be held liable as all such syrup will be suspended from sale when found on their premises."

In releasing a prepared statement regarding this work, George Marsh, head of the division of Agricultural Chemistry, explained that labeling will enable farmers to improve the sales of their syrups as the consumer will know exactly what he is getting when he makes the purchase. Mr. Marsh said that an elaborate label is not necessary but that proper labeling is essential. He will furnish details.

LINEN SHOWER FOR MRS EZELL

It has been the custom every year for the Missionary society of the Clanton Baptist Church to give to Mrs. Ezell some suitable Christmas present.

This year they decided to make it in the form of a linen shower. Accordingly all members of the circles responded to the invitation of Mrs. J. P. Hayes, president of the society, and came to her home at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon bearing various and sundry gifts of linen for the wife of our church pastor.

It might be said in justice to Mrs. Ezell that the people of Clanton love and honor her, not merely for the fact that she is the wife of our pastor of the Clanton Baptist Church. She has qualities of leadership and a spirit for Kingdom service that are all her own, and she does not depend alone upon sharing the glory of her illustrious husband. Doubtless, Sam Ezell would say that should be glory enough for any mere woman, but happily his good wife insists upon making her own mark, and in doing so, Mrs. Ezell has made herself a high place in the Baptist women's work, not only in Chilton County, but throughout Alabama as well.

AIRPLANE BECAME NEW TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

During the coming year, newspapers and magazines throughout the United States will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the date when the airplane was first recognized as news.

It was in 1906 that Collier's Weekly commissioned Jimmy Hare, its famous photographer, to become the world's first airplane photographer, and that the magazine's owner-editor, Robert Collier, became himself the first airplane corespondent and special writer on aviation.

Collier became the first private flyer and owner of an airplane, and his journalistic interest in the Wright Brothers led him to join with August Belmont and others in the formation of the Wright Airplane Company. He was one of the founders and first presidents of the Aero Club of America. He furnished the plane used for the first air mail, and was himself the first pilot to deliver naval orders to a warship.

Twenty-five years ago, although the Wrights' obscure experiments at Kitty Hawk had been going on for three years, the world first awoke to the realization that human flying was not, after all, a physical impossibility.

The Collier trophy, awarded annually for the greatest development in aviation, was founded by him in 1911. Its recipients since that time include Glenn Curtiss, Elmer Sperry, Sterling Burgess, Grover Loening and Charles L. Lawrence. Curtiss received it for his automatic stabilizer, Sperry for his gyroscopic control, and Burgess and Loening for work with flying boats, and Lawrence for the development of the air cooled engine. Last year the trophy went to the National Committee on Aeronautics for its development of motor cowling or steam-lined facing which added many miles per hour to stock speeds.

ALCOHOL POISON DEATHS INCREASE

Investigation Is Made By Bureau of Federal Government

Wash., Dec. 19.—Numerous reports of death from alcoholic poisoning have caused the industrial Alcohol Bureau of the Treasury to take steps to determine the source of the beverage which it believes to be synthetic wood alcohol manufactured and sold without government supervision.

Commissioner Doran, in a letter to Senator Phipps, called attention to the reports, saying the mixture sold as industrial solvent and anti-freeze solution was not "amenable to any federal statute."

"As to this matter material, namely, methanol, not now under government control, I believe there is presented a very serious problem and its seriousness lies in the fact of its wide sale and ready accessibility of the general public through thousands of filling stations and garages," Doran said.

"Knowing as I do that some people drink a denatured alcohol mixture, regardless of its repulsive fatalities due to this synthetic wood alcohol."

Use of the solution increased with the coming of cold weather and brought larger numbers of reports of deahts. The reports came from New England, the Middle Atlantic States, the South Atlantic States and Ohio and other points in the Middle West.

Doran issued orders that effective Jan. 1, alcotate—the newly discovered denaturant — must replace wood alcohol in the formulae for rendering alcohol unfit to drink.

BEAN—PETERSON MARRIAGE SOLEMNIZED AT THORSBY

On Saturday evening, December 20 at 7:00 o'clock, Miss Jewell Bean was married to Mr. Russell C. Peterson. The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Mead, the latter being the sister of the bride.

Rev. Joseph E. Each, pastor of the Thorsby Congregational Church, read the ring ceremony in the presence of only a few close friends and relatives.

The groom is the charming daughter of Mrs. R. H. Bean of Thorsby. Mr. Peterson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Peterson of Thorsby, and is an employee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company at Council Bluffs, Iowa. For the present they will make their home at Thorsby.

Mrs. Daly Miller has returned to her home after a week in the Central Alabama Hospital.

Emergency Road Work Brings Relief To 1,100 People In The County

A preliminary report obtained form the Commissioners Court of Chilton County Tuesday morning shows that the emergency road working program of the County has resulted in the graveling of many miles of county roads in the last few weeks, and has made available $8,800 in cash, which is ready to go out to over 1,100 people in the county, who will spend that money in providing necessities for their families.

This means that over $8,000 will be put into immediate circulation in the business channels of the county, thereby helping business to a considerable extent, as well as securing many necessities of food and clothing to families who are in need.

Everybody at the courthouse was busy Tuesday writing the more than 1,100 county warrants which were necessary in order to make it possible for those who have done work on the roads to get their money in time for Christmas.

The Commissioners Court issues the following statement in regard to the matter:

"In summing up the road work under our special program of graveling the roads of the county, and thereby giving employment to men who need work, we find that many miles of road have been graveled. For this work we have spent $8,800, which goes to about 1,100 men who have been engaged in the work for the past few weeks.

"We feel that we can say that the county has received full value in work for every dollar of this money, and we have sought to give the work to men who need it to provide the necessities of life for their families. We hope that our original purpose of bringing immediate relief to many people of our county has been carried out, and we believe it has to a large extent. The work has been as nearly possible distributed in every beat in Chilton County.

"When this court was in session Monday, a man came before us and stated that he had a wife and five children who were actually hungry. He begged us to give him a job, and said he had walked many miles hunting work. He said he lived on the place of a man who is in good circumstances with perhaps many hundred dollars in the bank. We sent the man to a certain bridge to go to work.

"It occured to us that perhaps the man on whose place this man lived could give that needy family at least enough work to keep them in something to eat, if he would only stop long enough to think and figure out the situation. In fact, we feel like saying that a great part of the distress and unemployment in our county has been caused by men who are able to give employment shutting down and turning everybody away.

"We urge everybody who has a house to repair, a ditch to dig, a fence to build, or any kind of work that could be done at all, to have it done now, and give the jobs to people who need the work. It will be an advantage to the man who has work done, because labor is cheap. And above all else, it will enable men to provide bread and clothing for their families.

"Your Commissioners Court hereby extends Christmas Greetings to everybody in Chilton County. We wish that everybody might be just as happy and comfortable as possible, and to this end we have done our very best to serve you in the past.—L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate, A. P. Vinson, J. P. Bean, T. A. Maddox, J. L. Burnett, Commissioners.

CHRISTMAS PLAY AT CHESTNUT CREEK

Next Sunday night, December 28, there will be a Christmas play at Chestnut Creek Church, at Coopers. Everybody has an invitation. It is the real Christmas story. Admission free.—Louanna Calloway.

Local Distributors Present Syrup Flavors Blended By Bill Heer

Bill Heer, master blender of syrup flavors, presents to Clanton four blends which he describes as the masterpieces of 47 years spent in his interesting and unusual specialty.

The story of how Bill Heer perfected each of these four flavors will be told to women of Clanton through an extensive advertising campaign in the pages of this newspaper.

The syrups themselves are manufactured in the great modern factories of the Staley Corporation under the watchful eye of Bill Heer. They are distributed through Taylor Wholesale Grocery Company and will be offered by all leading grocery stores througout the county.

Flavors from the Old South

Bill learned the art of blending syrup flavors in the old South nearly 50 years ago.

"In those days," says the master blender, "we cooked our syrups over open wood fires in great iron kettles—and each one of us had his own special blends that he worked out himself."

"Maybe the most important part is how to select the very choicest ingredients—by sampling each one. But then comes the knack of blending at just the right times and temperatures to bring out the mellow flavor and velvety smoothness of perfect syrup."

He Samples Every Batch

When Bill Heer accepted the job of blending Staley's Table Syrups, he asked for an absolutely free hand, and got it.

Today he alone has the power to select ingredients. He samples and tests each one—accepts or rejects it according to his own infallible judgment.

A sample from every batch of Staley's Syrup must pass the test of his educated palate at each step in its making.

"The Staley blends that you buy from your grocer today are the same secret blends we perfected in the old days," says Bill Heer. "Folks certainly must enjoy them, judging by the way they keep coming back for more. I guess they appreciate it's mighty hard to find syrups as fine as these, nowadays."

UNIVERSITY TO PUBLISH CENTENNIAL EXTRA

In connection with the Centennial Celebration at the University of Alabama, which will be held next May, the Crimson-White, the student newspaper of the institution, has completed arrangements to issue a big Centennial Edition, which is expected to be the largest, most complete and interesting publication of its kind ever issued by any college newspaper.

Publication of this issue has received the sanction of the university authorities as the official centennial newspaper, and it will contain much historical data about the history of the university during the one hundred years of its existence, including a complete history of the institution, a vast amount of feature material about outstanding events and personalities in the University's history. It will be profusely illustrated with photographs and drawings of scenes and outstanding people of "then and now." In addition to the historical matter, it will also contain complete information about the university as it is today, every phase of activity being completely covered, as well as considerable feature matter of interest about the state of Alabama and its various cities, depicting their progress and growth during the past century.

The edition will be printed in magazine form on a special book paper, in order to give it permanence and make it more attractive, and it will be something to be saved for years by all who receive a copy. It will be published about a week in advance of the centennial celebration, in order to give it statewide distribution in advance of the event to attract visitors to the university for the celebration. Copies will be mailed out to alumni all over the state, and other copies will be available for centennial visitors at the university.

LEGION HEAD TO VISIT ALABAMA

Will Be Entertained At Montgomery On 11th and 12th of January

It is with pleasure that Alabama and all members of the Alabama Department look forward to the visit of National Commander, Ralph T. O'Neil, January 11th and 12th. An extensive program of entertainment has been planned and one which will enable all types of Legion membership to have part in knowing the highest official of the Legion, the largest patriotic organization in the world.

Ralph T. ONeil was elected Commander at the closing session of the Twelfth National Convention in Boston, October 9th. He is an attorney of Topeka, Kansas and has been active in National affairs of the Legion for several years, having served as National Vice-Commander in 1927; he was Commander of the Kansas department in 1926; Chairman of the Legion's National C. M. T. C. Committee in 1929 and was member of the National Defense Committee in 1930.

Commander O'Neil served with the 11th Infantry, 5th division during the World War, from August 1917 to July 1919. He was promoted from 1st lieutenant to captain in the Argonne Forest in 1918. He received Divisional Citation for service in action, and while in the A. E. F. he was on the Vosge Sector, Toul Sector, St. Mihiel Offensive and the Argonne drive.

The Post commanders and Adjutants and Legion Auxiliary Presidents and Secretaries will meet in Birmingham Sunday, January 11th. While in Montgomery on the next day "Dyke" O'Neil and his party will be the guests of Governor Graves and the Montgomery Post No. 2. At the Montgomery meeting every ex-serviceman in the state is extended a cordial invitation to be present; a banquet is planned by the Montgomery Post at a price well within the range of the pocket-book of all ex-servicemen. Governor Graves as well as those in charge of this feature, are anxious that every person who can be present, not to pass the chance of meeting and knowing such an outstanding national figure as our National Commander.

Legionaire Governor, Bibb Graves will entertain the Commander and his party at luncheon at the Governor's mansion at noon, Monday. Every member of the Alabama Department and all exservicemen in the state should meet the Legion's Commander, "Dyke" O'Neil.

Remember the chest fund drive January 12-17, 1931.

Do not fail to think of the poor and destitute of Chilton County.

ALABAMA HOST WAR VETERANS

Confederate Reunion At Montgomery Will Be Held Next June

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 17.—Most of the members of the Alabama Legislature have voluntarily pledged themselves to work with the committee which is arranging for the annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans and kindred organzations to be held in Montgomery, Capital of the Confederacy, June 2, 3, 4 and 5, 1931.

Alabama will be official host of the Veterans, who probably will hold their last get-together sessions during the reunion. Montgomery was selected because it was here that the Confederate States became a governmental entity. It was here that Jefferson Davis became the first and only president of the Confederacy. It was here that the order to fire on Ft. Sumpter was issued, starting the war between the States. It was here that the last reunion of the Veterans probably will be held.

The Legislature will be asked for an appropriation of $50,000.00 to help defray expenses. For several years Legislatures of the State entertaining the Veterans have made appropriations. The Federal government will make an appropriation to pay expenses of the Marine Band to Montgomery for the reunion and the War Department will furnish all of the tents, cots, bedding and field ranges, needed for the Veterans and their attendants.

F. J. Crampton, President of the Montgomery Chamber of Commerce and a civic leader of State reputation, has been named General Chairman of the reunion committee and he will have associated with him, leaders in various business and professional activities. His committee believes this will be the greatest reunion ever held and will attract more citizens of other states than any other because of Montgomery's historic connection with the Confederacy. All railroads will grant special rates and citizens of the state will be given an opportunity to visit the first Capitol, the first White House, of the Confederacy, the building from which the order to fire on Ft. Sumter was telegraphed. The fact that the reunion probably will be the last, due to the physical infimities of the men who offered all and gave much in defense of Southern ideals, is expected to bring a greater number of citizens of foreign states to Montgomery than have attended reunions in the past.

"This is a reunion in which the entire State will be a host," said Mr. Crampton. "It is not a Montgomery affair. We want to show the Confederate veterans that the cradle of the Confederacy apprecites their services to the Southland. We want also to show those who live beyond the Mason and Dixon line that the people in the heart of the old South are standing with other loyal Americans in defense of the ideals that have solidified the people who make up the United States of America."

MR. AND MRS. MIMS ARE GOING TO CALIFORNIA

We understand that Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mims are leaving Christmas morning for an automobile trip to California. It is stated that they will attend a convention of the Foursquare Church in Los Angeles. Incidentially, of course, being a perfectly good football fan, Mr. Mims will take advantage of the opportunity to see the Alabama-Washington game at Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

MRS. AMANDA BYRD DIED WEDNESDAY

Mrs. Amanda Byrd, age 74 years, died last Wednesday at the home of her son, J. L. Byrd, at Eclectic. Mrs. Byrd had been in ill health for several months, and when she contracted a slight case of pneumonia a few weeks ago, her physicial condition was not sufficient to resist it.

The body was brought back to Providence in Beat 16 by Diffly, of Montgomery, and was buried Thursday. The funeral was conducted by Rev. W. W. Robinson and Rev. M. J. Parrish.

Mrs. Byrd is survived by her husband; four sons, J. L. Byrd, of Eclectic, W. H. and G. W. Byrd, of Montgomery, and Will Byrd, of Ensley; three daughters, Mrs. O. S. Davis, of Montgomery, Mrs. R. M. Robinson, of Providence, and Mrs. W. C. Robinson, of Clanton.

For several years past Mr. and Mrs. Byrd lived in the Providence community, near Clanton. Last September they went to Eclectic to spend the winter with their son, John L. Byrd.

INDEPENDENT GROCERS' ALLIANCE of AMERICA

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE AT JACKSON

The Fourth Southern Baptist Sunday School Conference will be held at Jackson, Mississippi, January 13-16, 1931. This is an annual event promoted by the Baptist Sunday School Board, under the supervision of I. J. Van Ness, Secretary.

Assurance comes from the Baptist Sunday School Board headquarters at Nashville, that the conference at Jackson this year will be an outstanding event in Baptist history. A quota of 4,500 people in attendance outside of Jackson has been set. This number will be made up of Baptist workers and leaders from every section of the Southern Baptist territory.

Thousands will go to Jackson by automobile. Seventeen organized committees in the city of Jackson are making ample preparation for taking care of the visitors. Hotel reservations are already being made, and there is evidence that the city of Jackson will be taxed to its limit in acommodating the delegates.

An outstanding attraction of the conference will be the address of George W. Truett, of Dallas, Texas. He comes fresh from the experiences of an extended trip, as denominational representative, to South American countries. Dr. Van Ness, of the Sunday School Board, has planned a program of general sessions and divisional conferences that will likely outdistance any former activity of the type.

It is easy to get from here to Jackson, Mississippi, by auto. There should be a good representation of Baptist Sunday School workers from Chilton County to attend this conference.

MT. PLEASANT NEWS

School closed here last Friday for the Christmas holidays.

An entertaining little Christmas program was given by the elementary grades. Following this "Ole Santa" made his appearence and distributed the many gifts and presents which had been so neatly arranged on a beautiful Christmas tree. Many parents were present for the program.

A hearty response was made last Friday morning by the entire student body and faculty of Mt. Pleasant school, in contributing clothing and food, which was distributed among the needy families of the district; sugar, flour, meal, potatoes, canned fruit and numerous other things were given. Mr. W. B. Crowe, a trustee and loyal patron of the school, loaded his car to capacity and brought the food and clothing to the welfare worker, Mrs. Stapp. She divided the items and Mr. Crowe spent several hours in distributing them to the various needy families.

The Junior I and II classes of Mt. Pleasant school sponsored by the faculty, gave a reception in honor of the Jr. III class on last Friday night, December 12, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mastin.

Many games and contests were given, and a delightful time was had by everyone present. Those present were: Julia Edwards, Eunice Holley, Grady Minor, Renfroe Price, Vera Jones, Lawson Belle, Gladys Belle, Verner Belle, Millard Belle, Ilar Massey, Lucile Price, Mabel Gillespie, Mazie Logan, Carl Pate, J. P. Culp, Hiram Littlejohn, Virginia Littlejohn, Kathleen Smith, Curtis and Cecil Trawick, Woodrow Price, Dorothy Jones, Annie Chambers, John William and Chester Jones, Mildred Littlejohn, Ertice Riggins, Ethel Traywick. Those of the faculty who were present are as follows: R. B. Johnson, Misses Mildred Rainey, Olys Bean, Evelyn Littlejohn. Mrs. Frank Mastin served as hostess. Refreshments were served. Curtis Traywick and Julia Edwards were prize winners in one contest and Lucile Price and Ethel Traywick were winners in another contest.

The school regrets the loss of one of its popular Jr. I boys, who transfers to Collins Chapel Jr. High. We wish him well in his work there.

CHEVROLET PRICES HAVE DECREASED LATELY

How extensively automobile prices are receding in the face of constantly improving quality, is aptly illustrated by comparison of prices of the new Chevrolet six as against in 1928 when the old four cylinder car was built.

Following the extensive reductions at the time the 1931 line was announced. The six today ranges from $475 to $650 for the nine different passenger models, while the four cylinder car at the time of change from four to six cylinder ranged from $495 to $715 for seven body types. In other words, the six with its two extra cylinders, is priced lower throughout the line—except for the phaeton, which is built primarily for overseas market—than was smaller, less economical and less refined car.

A model-by-model price comparison reveals that every model popular in the domestic market is at least $20 dollars lower today than was the corresponding four cylinder car, and that the price differential varies as much as $120 in favor of the new 1931 sport coupe which replaced the old four-cylinder sport cabriolet in the 1928 line.

The 1931 roadster, at $475, is $20 lower than the roadster of the 1928 line. The coach, now $545, is $40 lower, and the present six-cylinder standard coupe lists at $535, or $60 less than its four-cylinder prototype of two years ago. At the top of the four-cylinder price range stood the convertible landau, priced at $715, while today the special sedan is the aristocrat of the six-cylinder line and lists at only $650, or a reduction of $65. Similarily, the present coupe at $575 represents a reduction over the four-cylinder sport cabriolet of $120.

Receding prices do not tell the complete story, anyway. While the prices have come down, quality have consistently climbed, and many accessories which formerly were extra are now included as standard equipment such as wire wheels and shock absorbers which formerly cost the buyer $40 and $25 respectively.

While the six, when it was first publicly displayed in December, 1928 was priced slightly higher than the four, increasing volume coupled with improved manufacturing methods and lower commodity prices have made possible several price reductions which bring the average Chevrolet level today considerably lower than the prices at which a Chevrolet, either four or six, has ever sold.

FERTILIZER COST LOW IN GROWING COTTON

It cost Alabama farmers an average of only 1.93 cents per pound on the cotton produced this year to pay for the fertilizer used under cotton, reports F. W. Gist, federal and state statistician of the Department of Agriculture, who gives figures showing that the cost of fertilizers per acre for the state was $3.63 and that the value of the cotton produced was $17,86, making a net value of cotton above fertilizer cost of $14.23 per acre.

Concerning the low fertilizer cost per acre, Mr. Gist said:

"It is obvious to all students of cotton growth that it will be an economic mistake for the farmer to undertake to reduce the cost of producing cotton by reducing the amount of fertilizer used per acre."

CORN CROP LOWEST IN THIRTY YEARS

The 1930 corn crop is the smallest since 1901, according to an official report from the United States Department of Agriculture. It is 520 bushels smaller than the 1929 crop and only 88 per cent of the 1924-28 average. While crops of oats and barley are somewhat larger than last year, the supply of the three principal coarse grains is only about 89 million tons as compared with the moderate supply of 100 million tons last year.

Many Alabama farmers are making plans to grow more corn and feed crops in 1931.

"I suffered intense pain in my head and back. At times I would have to hold to something to steady myself, so as to do my little work. I was worried about my condition.

BEAN — PETERSON

An interesting wedding of the Christmas season was that of Miss Jewel Bean, attractive daughter of Mrs. R. Bean of Thorsby, Ala., and Russell C. Peterson of Council Bluffs, Iowa, which was impressively solemnized Saturday evening, December 20, at 7 o'clock.

This pretty event took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Clyde Meade, on Wisconsin Ave., in Thorsby, in the presence of only members of the two families and a few intimate friends.

Rev. J. E. Each, pastor of the Congragational Church, read the ring ceremony.

An altar of real holly and cedar, through which scintillated a myriad of electric lights, made a lovely background for the wedding party.

The bride entered with her brother-in-law, Mr. Clyde Mead, who gave her away (in marriage). She was lovely in a navy blue georgette modeled on soft silhouette lines with a very long skirt. She carried an arm bouquet of carnations.

Miss Pauline Bean, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing a charming pale blue chiffon georgette frock made with deep bertha and long flared skirt. Her flowers were pink and white carnations. Mr. Elbert Hall served as best man. Little Helen Louise Mead and Marion Joyce Howard held the ribbon for the bridal party and were dressed to match the color scheme.

The bride's table was centered with a large wedding cake in white and green which held a little bride and groom. Miss Dessie Robinson presided at the punch table. Mrs. Clyde Meade entertained following the ceremony with a reception for the wedding guests.

During the reception the young couple slipped off for a short wedding trip.

They will be at home for the present with the bride's mother, Mrs. R. Bean.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Self of Birmingham, Mrs. Roland Miksell of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mead of Calera, Ala.

The bride is an attractive young girl, having been graduated from Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Ala.

About a year ago, John D. Rockefellow, Jr., quietly bought a section on Riverside Drive in New York, facing the Hudson river, which for years had been almost exclusively devoted to homes for wealthy New York residents. The tract comprises 12 acres. His object was to provide a grand music center, for opera and music schools, etc.

Mr. Rockefellow later found out that in the increase of the radio on music productions, his plans could not be carried out. So he arranged to turn over his property to a corporation who will devote it to radio uses of the future. This corporation with a capital of $250,000,000, will proceed as fast as possible for use of The National Broadcasting Company. The main unit will be a forty story building of wide dimensions, which will house the broadcasting as it may develop within the next few years. This will be surrounded by other small buildings devoted to the use of radio development as needed.

The Freshman class made a little self denial offering of a dollar and fifteen cents to the Golden Rule Foundation. They saved the money by going without different small treats.

The A. T. Chart Bible Class took an action Sunday, which they urge other classes to adopt. They instructed the President, Mr. C. A. Peterson, to write to the two Alabama senators in the name of the class and urge them to use their influence to secure the entrance of the United States to the World Court.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

Calvin Coolidge says that we have no desire to interfere in European affairs and that it certainly would be difficult to secure an agreement from us to become involved in their disputes. How untimely this observation must sound to those tools and dupes of foreign propaganda that are now urging the government to become entangled in European quarrels.

The Health Commissioner of New York says that the common cold is the most formidable enemy of the public health and that it takes more money out of the worker's pockets than any other sickness. He thinks that our schools and other public institutions should exercise more care in preventing the spread of this highly infectious disease.

The highest freight rates in the history of the country and the worst service ever experienced is the record of our government's operation of railroads about ten years ago, and after it was all over the American taxpayer had to shoulder a deficit of many hundreds of millions of dollars caused by the carelessness of government management. We must admit, however, that any large government operation will furnish a number of fat jobs for the friends of the politicians.

Petitions to the President on questions of our foreign relations would be more impressive if a large proportion of the singers were not persons who generally take the European side of every question where there is a conflict of intrests between the United States and Europe.

According to a report of the Department of Commerce, 92 per cent of those Americans, able and willing to work, are gainfully employed at the present time.

About half of the presidents of our leading universities seem to think that the United States would be much better off if it should become again a European province.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO ENCOURAGE EMPLOYMENT

At present basic industries are in the same boat so far as overproduction is concerned. Agriculture, mining, oil and others are suffering from a depression due to supply exceeding demand.

Copper mines are seeking to curtail production and reduce surplus stocks. For a large part of this year metal prices did not allow operators to "break even."

The public should support the effort of mining to establish itself on a sound basis, as it has supported similar efforts of the oil industry and agriculture. Stagnation of a great basic industry benefits no one and destroys steady employment. Mining states should cooperate in a sound mining program and hasten an industrial revival by means of reasonable legislation and taxation.

USELESS LAWS CAUSE LAW DISRESPECT

A recent statement brings out the fact that it will cost twice as much to maintain California prisons for the next two years as it did for the past two years.

All over the nation state governments—as well as the federal—are perplexed by the growing cost of prisons, which is, of course, the obvious result of the increasing number of prisoners. Many penitentiaries are crowded to the point where officials are desperately seeking to find a place to put the steady flow of new inmates. The upshot of the matter will be that the public will be taxed to build more institutions, as has already been done in various localities.

Many causes have been blamed for increasing crime but authorities have stated that the American crime problem will never be solved until our legal system is revised, unnecessary, restricted laws weeded out and we return to more strict enforcement of basic laws.

There are thousands of persons in prison today because of acts which in themselves are not crimes but which a "new" law makes a crime. the mania for law-making in this country has been the greatest wholesale manufacturer of criminals and the principal cause for disrespect for law. More laws to restrict individual rights and liberties will mean more law breaking.

GOOD ROADS FOR 1931

In a great many states effort is being made to accelerate public works building as a cure for unemployment.

Roads are the leading factor in any program of this kind. Their construction gives work to thousands of needy persons at good wages—and the cost of the work is returned many times over to states and communities. Good roads are not an expense but an investment which pays a high rate of dividends.

At present, particular attention is being paid to rural roads. It is a rare farmer who is assured of a year-round weatherproof artery of communication between his farm and a main highway. Increased farm road appropriations not only remedy this, but provide a living to the the multitude of farmers and farm employees who face an economic crisis resulting from the unsettled marketing conditions for farm products.

New York, California and other states have pointed the way. A move is on foot to increase the federal government's apropriations. The farm-to-market road movement should take a long jump forward in 1931.

One of the most recent innovations is to employ gas for drying insulating board. This method costs only about one-third as much as if the board was dried by steam produced from coal and the process is entirely automatic. Almost every day brings with it a new use for gas.

UNEMPLOYMENT RETURNS BY CLASSES AND SEX

The Director of the Census announced today the unemployment returns for Alabama by classes and sex. The unemployment inquiry, which was made last April as a part of the population census, covered all persons usually working at a gainful occupation who were not at work on the day preceding the enumerator's call. These returns are presented in seven classes, based on the worker's status, such as "out of job," "having a job, but on layoff," "unable to work," etc.

The most significant group, designated in the tables as Class A, is made up of persons out of a job, able to work, and looking for a job. These persons numbered 21,441, forming 8 per cent of the total population. The total included 17,461 males and 3,980 females.

The next most important group, designated as Class B, comprises persons having jobs who are on layoff without pay, excluding those sick or voluntarily idle. In this class there were 3,551 persons, 6,873 males and 1,678 females.

The remaining returns were grouped into five classes, as follows: Class C, persons out of a job and unable to work, 2,298; Class D, persons having jobs but idle on account of sickness or disability, 5,745; Class E, persons out of a job and not looking for work, 991; Class F, persons having jobs but voluntarily idle, without pay, 1,817; Class G, persons having jobs and drawing pay, though not at work (on vacation, etc.), 1,657.

Voice of the People

FROM ROCKY MOUNT COMMUNITY

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to the school situation in this community. I see there are other things traveling here before daylight, besides bootleggars and varments, and that is the school bus; and I don't see for what reason except to satisfy two or three individuals, while thirty or forty poor little children go trodding along through the mud. I guess that is why we have a great and just God to mete out justice hereafter, as we cannot get it here on earth.—J. A. KELLY, Jemison, Alabama.

THE VALUE OF THE MERCHANT MARINE

It is a common sense proposal that Admiral Robinson made, that of enrolling the officers of American merchant ships into the naval reserve with pay. In various ways the government has already helped strengthen our none too prosperous merchant marine, but no form of subsidy would return greater benefits than that suggested by the admiral. To enroll these experienced seamen in our naval reserve, and to hold their interest by a small addition to their wages would be a sound method of increasing and improving the nation's naval strength.

While it was the dreadnaughts that fought the great battles of the World War, it was the merchant shipping which actually played the largest part in the allied blockade of the Central Powers. The trawlers that laid mines and swept dangerous channels, the launches and yachts that hunted submarines, the hundreds upon hundreds of tramps and liners that carried troops and supplies of war over thousands of leagues of water were really the backbone of the allied naval arm. A striking example of this type of service is to be found in the work of the Tenth British Cruiser Squadron, so called, a group of transformer merchant ships which patrolled the North Sea waters day and night for four years, transmitting the news of their steady vigil to Jellicoe's battleships that lay at Scapa Flow.

By virtue of the naval treaty, our fleet has been stabilized at equality with Britain's but that nation is far ahead of us in the reserve power inherent in merchant strength. Both in numbers and quality the British merchant marine outmatches ours, a fact which we cannot afford to ignore even from the point of view of peaceful pursuits. Owing to the unusual emphasis placed for so many years upon the development of our inland empire our merchant shipping suffered a decline. Now that it is apparent that our destiny lies also beyond our borders, no step should be neglected that would add to the size and efficiency of the merchant fleet. It is a foundation stone of our peace-time prosperity and a valuable bulwark in time of war.

DETERDING ON MOSCOW

Sir Henri Deterding, head of the Dutch Shell Oil Company, in a recent London interview declared what many Americans have long been asserting—that the prime factor in the production of world depression, including American depression, is the economic program of Soviet Russia, coupled with the fear engendered by the Soviet program of world wide revolution promoted by her incendiary agents in all non-communist governments throughout the world. Sir Henri Deterding calls attention to the fact that Soviet Russia has been put on a starvation basis by the Moscow masters, thus destroying the great potential consuming power of 140,000,000 people, who, under a responsible government not at war with the rest of the world, could absorb much of the output of western, including American, industry while steadily improving their own condition. The major trouble in the economic world today, Sir Henri Deterding correctly states, is not over-production, but under-consumption. He declares that but for the support of American and British capital and expert knowledge, the Soviet system would collapse in three weeks, removing a menace to the entire world and the principal cause of world depression.

COLLEGES AND NATIONAL LOYALTY

Senator-elect James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois makes a constructive criticism of many American colleges and universities in stating that athletics, society and fads constitute too large a share of their educational program, and adds the following suggestion that is worth thinking over:

"The modern college sends extremely few men out as scholars of the form of their republic or students of constitutional government, prepared to meet the invasion of socialism, communism or anarchy, as each may assail fundamentals of the republican democracy of the United States."

There is a growing impression that a good many colleges and universities are more efficient in undermining the faith of students in the fundamentals of the American form of government than in training students to defend them. No institution of learing in a country like ours which does not send its students into the world with an increased spirit of loyalty to America and what America stands for, and which as an institution does not unequivocally defend the American form of government, has any right to support from actual Americans or freedom from taxation as an educational institution.

"How long have you been working for the firm?"

"Ever since the boss threatened to fire me."

"Don't you love driving on a moonlight night like this?"

"Yeah, but I thought I'd wait till we got farther out in the country."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Europe continues to be the hotbed for the development of all sorts of political rumors, some of which concern the United States. The past week or two has sent us a new crop and some of them would be rather disturbing if true. So disturbing were the possibilities of some of them that Secretary of State Stimson felt it necessary to issue a firm and vigorous denial. Among the stories sent out from European capitals were tales to the effect that the United States through Ambassador Hugh Gibson, at the Geneva conference had voted the United States into an agreement for preserving certain armament provisions of the Versailles treaty. Another rumor was to the effect that Uncle Sam and the French government, possessing three-fifths of the world's gold supply between them, had formed a financial alliance and would henceforth refuse to lend money to nations which did not agree to disarm. This latter story was evidently directed against Italy, the inference being that Italy, who has been insisting on naval parity with France, would be through French-American cooperation be compelled to accept something else. The first story, regarding the Versailles treaty would particularly have affected Germany which still has hopes for changes in comparative military strength.

Both of the rumors turned out to be untrue as nearly everybody, with the exception of a few ultra-internationalists, expected that they would. The story concerning the peace treaty grew out of the fact the Mr. Gibson at Geneva supported a French motion to reassert the integrity of the arms limitations of previous treaties. But Mr. Gibson stated specifically that his action was only governed by his consideration of the London and Washington naval treaties. To gather from such a statement that Uncle Sam would help enforce various clauses of the Versailles treaty, which he even refusd to sign, were somewhat far fetched to say the least.

In denying the story that through Mr. Gibson's statement the United States was changing its policies regarding participation in European politics growing out of the Versailles treaty, Secretary Stimson also took occasion to deny another story to the effect that he had informed the German Ambassador at Washington that if the former allied nations failed or refused to reduce their armaments according to existing treaties, this would be no excuse for Germany to disregard treaty obligations and start arming. Mr. Stimson also took occasion at the same time to deny the tsories of an economic and financial agreement between the United States and France, and he denied also that he had been approached concerning a $100,000,00 or $150,000,000 loan to Italy. Taking it all in all, it was a good day for sweeping denials and Mr. Stimson made a good job of it.

The American people will be pleased to know that this latest outpouring of European rumors concerning our willingness to mix in European politics is without foundation. The American people do not want our time-honored international policy of attending to our own business changed in the least. They realize that conditions in Europe are more chaotic now than for several years and that an expedition into the maelstrom of European politics would be more dangerous and less conductive of good to ourselves or to Europe, than such an expedition would have been even three or four years ago.

In 1920 the American people voted in tremendous majorities to keep the foreign policy of George Washington and the founders of the republic, and they have voted the same way on various occasions since then, whenever the issue has been paramount in a political campaign. Any politician or statesman who thinks they have changed their minds on this important subject is due for a rude awakening. The denials of Secretary Stimson as noted above were timely and in keeping with American tradition.

WHAT IS NEEDED

What we need sorely is a renewal of the stalwart self-respect, the vigor and clear-heatedness which marked our foreign policy under Washington and John Adams, under Jackson and Lincoln, under Cleveland and Roosevelt. The vast and rapid expansion of our foreign trade and financial commitments, the multiplication of our foreign contacts and responsibilities do not justify unnecessary involvements in the political complications of Europe. On the contrary they demand urgently, perhaps more urgently than ever in the past, a clear sighted and cautions regard for American interests and the resolute maintenance of American independence of judgment and action.—Chicago Tribune.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION OUTSTANDING PROBLEM

In an address before the American Bar Association, Austin J. Lilly, general counsel of the Maryland Casualty Company, said that compulsory automobile liability insurance is impractical and that its constitutionality is doubtful.

It is generally known that in Massichusetts—the only state yet to adopt unconditional insurance of this kind—the result has been chaotic. Courts have been crowded, claims faked and it is said that thousands of cars operate without insurance paid up. If compulsory insurance really reduced accidents, the public might overlook its other advantages.

A reckless or incompetent driver is certainly not going to become less dangerous because he has an insurance company behind him to pay for the results of his recklessnes or incompetence. The opposite must be expected.

In a number of states, financial responsibility laws by which the licenses of drivers are suspended if they fail to satisfy judgments against them, have been passed. These seemed workable but in California it was recently held that a law of this kind was unconstitutional in that it discriminated against persons of small means. We have yet to find a satisfactory way to compensate the victims of automobile accidents, make the highways safer and, at the same time, protect the interests of the great majority of drivers who are careful and responsible.

The first practical step toward accident prevention should be the passage of uniform state laws requiring rigid examination before granting drivers' licenses.

Remember the old-fashioned woman guest who used to volunteer to wipe the dishes after dinner was over?

Daily bulletins from Prof. Einstein saying how he hates publicity indicate that the professor must have a good press agent.

The Postmaster General recommends two and a half cent letter postage. This will be all right with us if it will discourage the mailing of bills on the first of each month.

Some automobiles priced at $25,000 each were on display at the New York auto show. And we will bet that some fellow will be nervy enough to buy one at the price, at a dollar down and fifty cents a week the rest of his life.

ANOTHER CONFERENCE

George L. Harrison, governor of the federal reserve bank of New York, is in England, conferring once more with Mr. Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England. As usual, the subjects of discussion have not been revealed. The discussions, according to the two men, concern "nothing out of the ordinary."

Maybe so; but we confess to a certain sense of uneasiness, if not of alarm, every time these international financial conferences whose purposes are unstated occur. We cannot forget that it was after just such a meeting that the reserve bank lowered its discount rate, cheapened money in this country and threby gave an impetus to the wave of speculation from which the country is now suffering the bitter consequences. That meeting was arranged in order to bolster the British monetary situation. Prematurely, in the belief of many economists, British finances had been restored to a gold basis after the war. Because of relatively higher interest rates in this country, the tendency of gold to flow to our shores from England was marked. It was with the idea of correcting that tendency that at the request of Mr. Norman our discount rates were lowered. The consequences, needless to say, have been harmful, not only to this country but to the whole world of commerce and industry. By the time our reserve officials realized that a mistake had been made it was already too late to apply the brakes. We were in the midst of an era of inflation to be followed by an equally violent deflation.

We do not maintain that the stability of American business can be maintained without any consideration of the situation in foreign lands. We have a great and growing foreign trade which depends for its continued prosperity upon buying power overseas, but foreign trade at a liberal estimate is only 10 per cent of the whole. Our reserve officials in the past have jeopardized the 90 per cent for the sake of the 10 per cent, and have failed even of their own limited ojective, for our foreign trade has suffered of late even more than our domestic trade.

American credit policies must be dictated not by the presumed needs of foreign currencies but by the requirements of the United States. This sounds like an axiom whose acceptance should be universal in this country. The unfortunate fact is that the axiom has been disregarded. It may be disregarded again.—Chicago Tribune.

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

The date of this paper, Thursday, is Christmas Day. The Man on the Corner therefore extends Christmas Greetings to all who may chance to read this column. In spite of every besetment, of every dark cloud that smears the blue of life, we all come regularly into that happy time of the year, Christmas, when the cheering rays of good will and friendships pierce the darkest places and shed such a glorious light.

I think it is impossible to keep the human heart from responding in some measure to the spirit of Christmas. And my firm belief in that conviction makes me glad. As I see all kinds and classes of humanity going up and down the street, in and out of the shops and stores, pursuing some motive and some purpose, moved by some impulse of the Christmas spirit, I wonder at the thought of what may be the intent of each and every one of those people.

Every living person is to me a story, a wonderful romance. I would like to see every life unfolded in its response to the spirit of Christmas. Every child who looks for Santa Claus bears in its heart a theme that has power enough to move the world. Every gentle hand that hangs a Christmas wreath in the window performs some unknown and unrevealed purpose of heart that would stir the emotions of the age.

At the very minute I wrote this I looked out of my window and saw an old farmer going down the street bending under the weight of a box of Christmas oranges. If I could tell you the thoughts in the heart of that man and the purpose which moved him, I would be able to tell you the whole story of how God's love operates in the souls of men from the beginning unto the end of all time.

I had a cup of coffee last Saturday morning at Matt's with my friend, C. Reese Mullins. He said he was feeling like a young colt in a clover patch. "I spent last night at home," he said. I thought, my goodness, that's nothing. A man of your age ought to spend every night at home. But then he talked on some more, and I found that he meant he spent the night at his old boyhood home at Jumbo. He had gone to see his aged mother who is sick. Then I saw through the whole business of why Mr. Mullins was rejoicing and feeling so fine.

He was living in the days gone by. He had had an experience that caused him to forget lots of the present day worries. If I could go back to the old home and spend one of these nights with my mother, there is no telling whether I would get back to myself at all or not. I think I would prefer not to get back, and just stay on with her forever.

At last Clanton has in sight a fine crop of young doctors coming on. I have often thought it is time we had some physicians in the making. Those we have in service will give out some day, and we will need recruits to take their places. In this connection I think of Sam Upchurch, Charles Moore, Lamar Calloway, Jesse Sam Gowan and Arthur Johnson, all of whom are back home from college to spend the Christmas holidays with home folks and friends. I hope when they finish college they will not go off somewhere else to seek fame and fortune. Some of them at least can find a place for themselves here at home.

The Commissioners Court of Chilton County has played Santa Claus this year to the tune of $8,800 distributed to over 1,100 men in all parts of the county, who have been employed on the county roads during the past few weeks. The Court met Monday to pay them off, and the whole courthouse was busy Tuesday getting the warrants ready so the men could get their money in time for Christmas.

There are three outstanding things about this emergency program of the Commissioners which I consider as very commendable. First, the roads of the county need the graveling that has been done. Second, it has been possible to get the work done at low prices. And third, and perhaps best of all, it has enabled men who were out of a job and had no money to get a job and provide something much needed by their families.

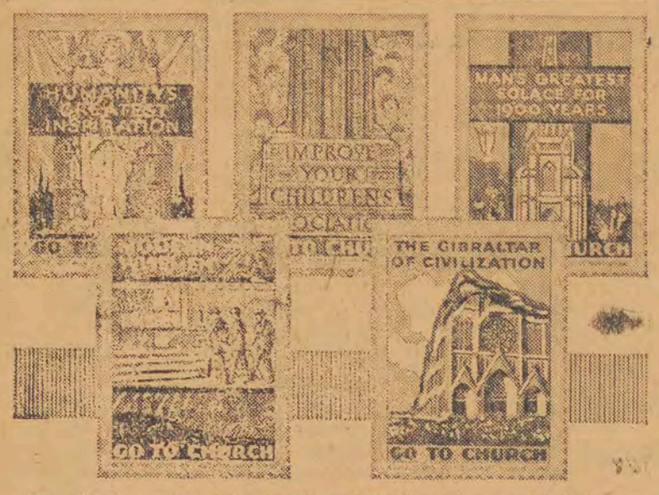
We have no way of telling how much good will be done in our county by the $8,800 that is going into the hands of over 1,100 men who have been at work on the roads. Doubtless a vast majority of these men have families. It is perhaps true that the money obtained by each of the 1,100 will bring some measure of relief and comfort to as many as three or four persons. That will help a great deal.

Eight thousand dollars released into the channels of trade in Chilton County is not to be sneezed at right now, either. It will help business up a whole lot; for it goes without saying that practically every man of the 1,100 who gets some of this road money will spend it immediately for something to eat and wear.

The Commissioners Court is so pleased with the results of their emergency relief and road work program so far that they are considering the matter of continuing it for another month after the Christmas holidays. I think it should be continued. There is yet much work that ought to be done on the roads, and certainly there will be need for the money and the work among the people.

I notice that the Chilton County plan of road work for relief of the needy and unemployed has gained wide attention throughout Alabama . It has been discussed by many newspapers in the different counties.

An Iowa girl and a Missouri boy have been adjudged the two healthiest youngsters in America. And what we would like to know is whether they have had their tonsils out.



I learn that W. M. Polk will not be home from the hospital until about the first of January. His friends are anxiously inquiring about his condition all along, and hope that he may soon be restored to his usual good health.

To express it in football language, when Senator Nye kicked off, Jimmy Davis grabbed the ball and went through the insurgent line for a touchdown.

Sweet Forbearance—Sambo—"Look heah, woman, you know you all done marry me jus' for mah guv'ment insurance!"

Lila—"Ah knows dat, honey, but ain't Ah been willin' to let you die a natural death?"

NATION-WIDE "GO TO CHURCH" MOVEMENT NOW UNDER WAY

The Nation-wide "Go to Church" Movement, which is considered by its founders as the greatest and most comprehensive "Go to Church" appeal ever made to the American people, will continue until every person in the country has had the opportunity to participate. While primarily inspired as a means of making the general public more church-conscious and increasing church attendance, the Movement incidentally represents a great potential source of revenue for all churches participating. It also serves to bring revenue to ministers' retirement or pension funds, missionary and extension societies, or other denominational funds of which the public seldom hears about.

HAPPY BREAKFASTS

To start the day properly, breakfast should by rights be the happiest meal of all. In too many households, however, it is a mad scramble and dash as the different members of the family swallow their food quickly and streak off to school or to the duties of the day, leaving mother behind feeling exhausted and flurried to start with!

Most of this is due to mismanagement and bad training. Inflexible system, order and regularity will overcome much of this early morning confusion. Well-planned, interesting and tastefully served breakfasts will do the rest. Don't always serve the same thing for breakfast and show the family, at least two or three times a week, that it is worth a little effort to give the day a good send-off by serving a delicious hot bread, fresh from the oven.

How about a quick coffee cake, for example? This is how it is made:

2 tbsp. fat	1 egg
2 cups self-rising flour	3 tbsp. sugar
	¾ cup milk

Cut or rub the fat into the flour; beat the egg with the sugar and rub it, add it to the milk. Add this liquid to the flour, spread the batter in a greased pan until one-half inch thick, cover with a top mixture and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for fifteen minutes.

The top mixture consists of four tablespoonfuls butter, one tablespoonful self-rising flour, one-half cupful confectioners' sugar, one teaspoonful cinnamon, two dozen raisins or currents. Rub the butter into the flour, sugar and cinnamon. Press the raisins into the coffee cake batter at regular intervals, and sprinkle this mixture over the top.

The aroma of this delicious breakfast bread floating upstairs is better than a dozen gongs or shoutings to get the family down to breakfast on time!

To start the day right, breakfast should be a happy meal. A delicious hot coffee cake, fresh from the oven, will make the breakfast the happiest occasion. The homemaker using ready-prepared or self-rising flour can have such a coffee cake for her breakfasts.

And not only coffee cake, but all sorts of delicious hot breakfast breads, such as waffles, griddle cakes, doughnuts and hot rolls are easily and quickly made by the use of self-rising soft wheat flour. And in addition, it saves from 25 to 40 per cent of one's time in mixing them when time is the essence of success with the morning meal.

Self-rising flour is only soft wheat flour to which the miller has added pure mono-calcium phosphate and bicarbonate of soda, which is really baking powder, and salt for seasoning. So it is after all a ready prepared pre-leavened flour, ideal for breakfast use.

OUR CHILDREN

They are idols of hearts and of households,
They are angels of God in disguise;
His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses,
His glory still gleams in their eyes.

Oh, those truants from home and from heaven,
They have made me more manly and mild;
And I know now how Jesus could liken,
The kingdom of God to a child.
—Dickens.

THORSBY LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. L. Self of Birmingham and Mrs. R. A. Mikesell of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Peterson. They were here for Russell's wedding. Mrs. Mikesell left Sunday night with Mrs. Self to go back home. Leroy Peterson went along with Mrs. Self to come back with her Wednesday to spend Christmas at home.

Willis Peterson is spending Christman at Helena with Ralph Roy.

Garland Conway spent Sunday night with Richard Peterson.

There are many children in our county who are thinly clad and some who do not have a change of clothes.

"Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye did it also unto me."

CHEST FUNDS GREATLY AIDED WELFARE WORK DURING THE PAST YEAR

Up to November 1, 1930, the child welfare superintendent handled 247 cases with 198 families represented and 607 children involved. The parental status of these families is as follows: Deserting parent, 30; mother dead, 17; unmarried mother, 16; father dead, 32; complete orphans, 13; invalid parent, 12; insane or feeble-minded parent, 8; father in prison, 13; both parents living, 57. The following problems were found in the above cases: delinquency, poverty, insanity, neglect, health, immorality, crulety and to a certain extent school attendance.

In the majority of these cases they were given help through the chest funds. Food, medical service, clothes, books, etc., were provided in many cases as far as the funds were available.

The chest funds have been partly instrumental in the cripple work being done in the county. Ten children have had operations or corrections made in order that they may be more normal and more able to be useful citizens when grown. In several instances the chest fund has provided the first clothes for a new born baby to put on as it has arrived into the world which without, it would have had nothing. The chest funds have supplied food to children where there was nothing at all in the kitchen for them to eat or nothing to prepare for them to eat.

Every indication is that the calls of real need will be greater this year than during the past. There are hundreds of families in Chilton County who are without work and who are unable to secure work regularly whose children are not getting the proper food to keep their bodies strong enough to fight off diseases. It will take every person in Chilton County who can do so, to help these less fortunate children and families to be self-supporting.

CHHISTMAS TREE AND PROGRAM AT CONCORD

The Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. of Concord will present a Christmas play in connection with a Christmas Tree program at the church Wednesday night before Christmas. Everybody is invited, and there will be no charges of admission.

PROVIDENCE BEAT 16

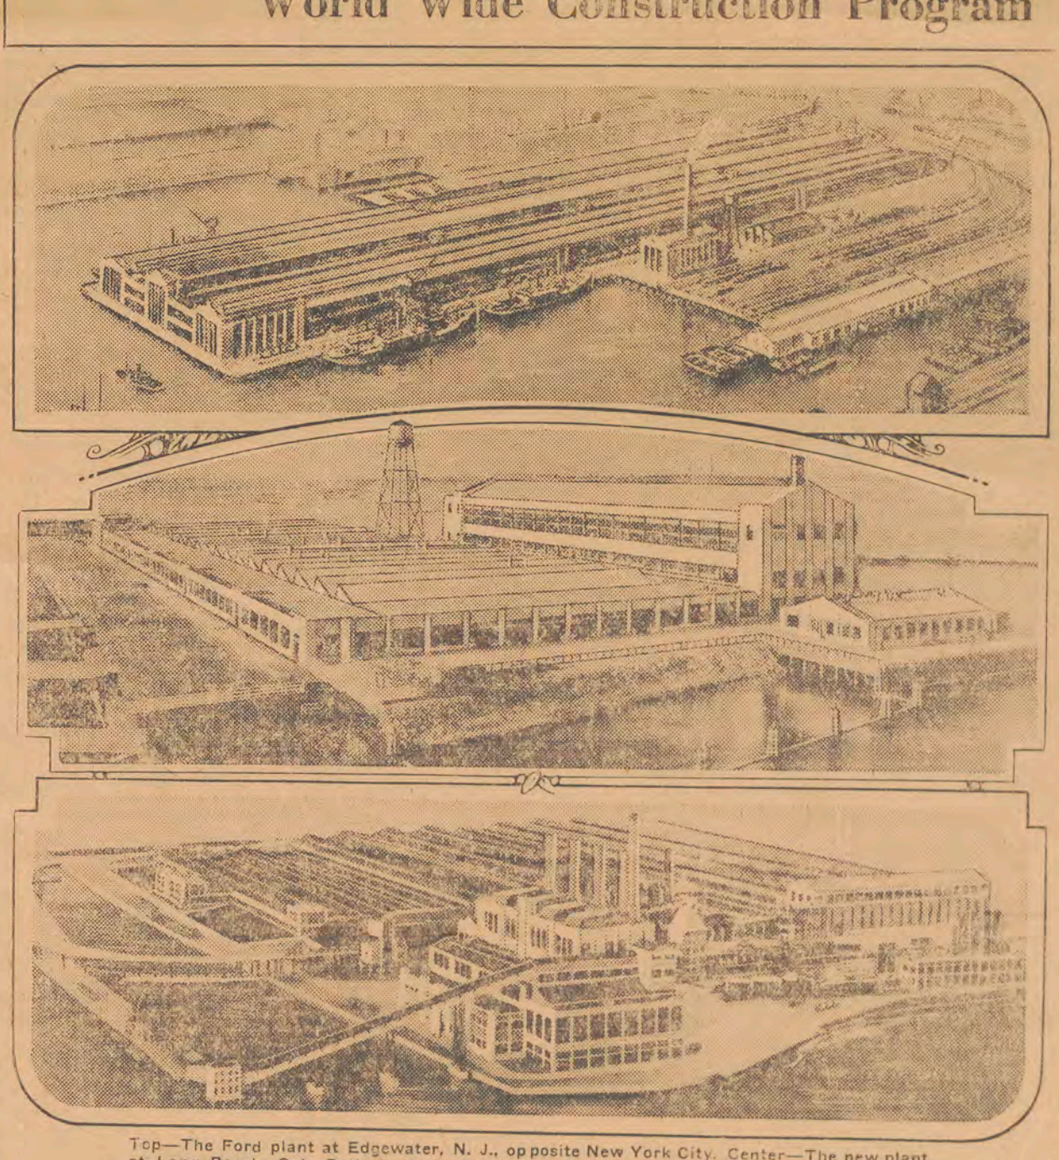
On last Tuesday, December 17, at 2:30 o'clock, the death angel visited the home of Mr. W. M. Byrd and carried away the spirit of his darling wife. She was taken with pneumonia, and was confined to her bed two week, but bore her suffering with patience.

She was a Christian woman, loving wife and mother. She joined the church at the age of 18 years and lived a consistent member until her death. To know her was to love her.

She was the mother of 11 children. Four of which have preceded her to the grave; 31 grand children, and 4 great-grand children. She was 71 years of age when death came.

She was buried at Providence, December 18. Rev. W. W. Robinson and Rev. M. J. Parrish conducting the funeral.

We can only say to the bereaved: weep not, for our loss is heaven's gain. We might say as one of old did say. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord.



The wise thing for us to do is to follow the teachings of mother, and the Lord, so that when we come to cross the valley of the shadow of death we can smile as she did and be numbered with the first to rise from the dead, and meet her again to part no more.—One who loved her.

Origin of "Charity"

"Carus" is the Latin for "dear," and "caritas," the abstract noun from it, means "dearness." St. Jerome, who translated the Bible into Latin avoided the use of the ordinary Latin word for "love," which is "amor," because of its worldly associations. He substituted for it, wherever the Greek or Hebrew would naturally have required it, one or other of two rather colorless words, of which "caritas" is one. Being colorless, "caritas" was capable of taking the color of its Biblical surroundings and came to mean the specifically Christian love of one's neighbor, and especially of the poor. The English word "charity," derived from it, perhaps owes its sense particularly to the great passage about charity in I Corinthians. 13.

Ford Shows Faith in Future by World Wide Construction Program

Top—The Ford plant at Edgewater, N. J., opposite New York City. Center—The new plant at Long Beach, Cal. Bottom—A model of the plant being built at Dagenham, England.

THE Ford Motor Company's faith in the future of business, and especially in the future of the automobile, is evidenced by the fact that it is spending more than $60,000,000 for new plants and improvements in the United States and in foreign branches and associated companies.

The company has nine new plants under way throughout the world, while plans are being formulated for several others not yet announced. Wherever possible the new plants are being erected on sites accessible to both rail and water transportation so that, with each form of transportation supplementing the other, substantial savings will be effected.

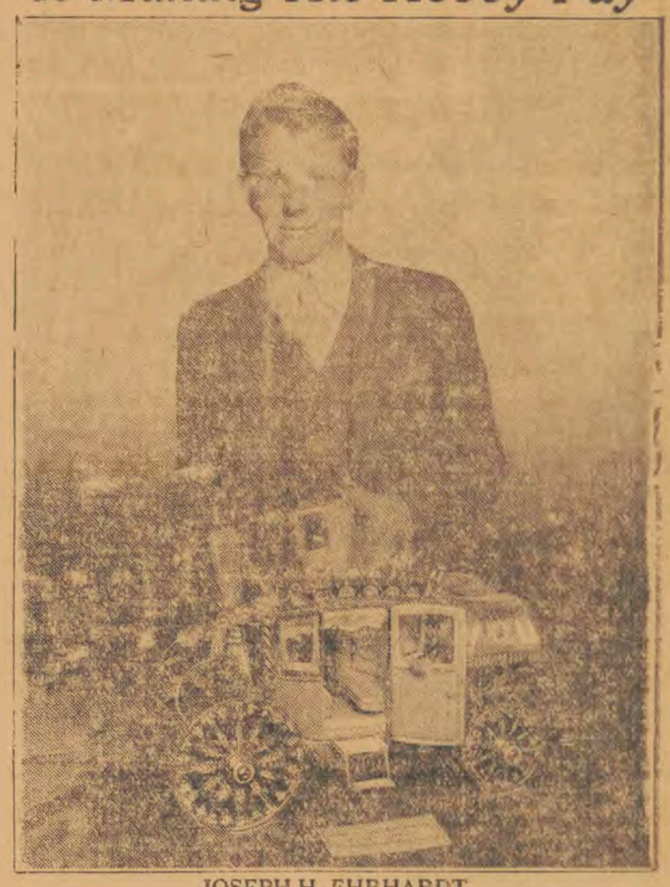
Five of the new plants are in the United States, as follows:

Long Beach, California—This plant, recently completed to serve Southern California, has a capacity of 400 cars a day. Operating at capacity it employs 2,600 men.

Edgewater, New Jersey—The Edgewater plant, one of the company's largest assembly branches, has just been completed to serve New York City and surrounding territory. It has a capacity of 600 cars a day and employs 6,000 men.

Richmond, California — Work was started recently on a plant at Richmond, to be completed next year. It will have a capacity of 400 cars a day and will employ 2,400 men. It will supply cars to the San Francisco area.

Buffalo, New York—This plant will have a capacity of 400 cars a day and will employ 2,500 men.



Seattle, Washington — A site has been acquired and plans for a plant are being drawn.

A new manufacturing plant being erected at Dagenham, England, eighteen miles from London, to supplant the present works at Manchester, will be completed next year. It will be the largest automobile factory in the world outside the United States. Its capacity will be 200,000 cars a year.

An assembly and manufacturing plant is being built at Cologne, an assembly plant at Antwerp, and a service plant at Stockholm. Two branches—one at Perth, Australia, and one at Port Elizabeth, South Africa—were completed.

In addition the Ford Motor Company is spending several million dollars to increase the power capacity of the Rouge plant at Dearborn, Mich., and several million more in miscellaneous improvements.

He confidently expects to continue his education on one of the four-year scholarships offered to members of the guild.

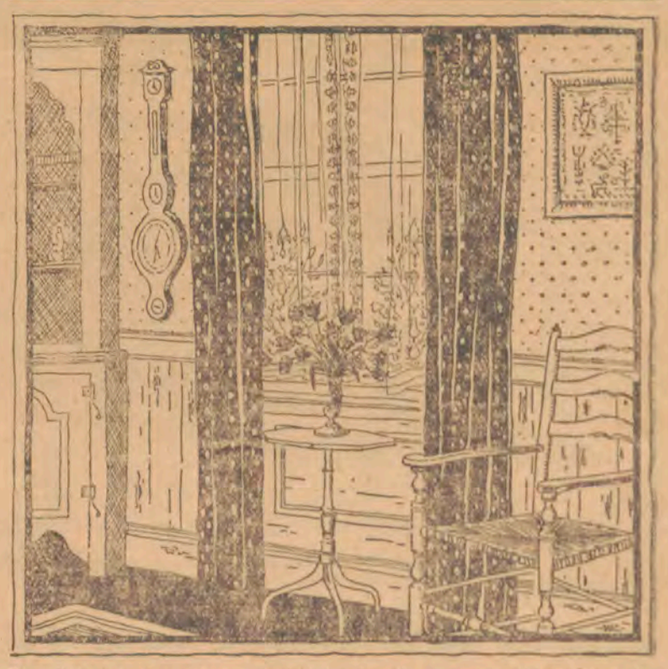
At a meeting of the official board of the Methodist Church the latter part of the week, Mr. C. E. Stapp was elected chairman, J. D. Armstrong was re-elected as secretary-treasurer. The board made a close survey of the needs of the church and decided that a budget of $5,000 would be needed to meet all the oblagtions of the church for the year.

A quiet wedding occured at the Methodist parsonage on last Thursday morning when C. T. Cline and Mildred Vann were united in wedlock by Rev. D. W. Haskew. Both parties were from Birmingham.



Professor L. D. Haskew and wife will arrive in the city Friday afternoon to be guests in the home of their parents, Rev. and Mrs. D. W. Haskew for a week. Professor Haskew is the principal of the high school at Greensboro, Georgia.

Everyone will have a chance to help the poor at home on January 12-17.

Hints on the Colonial Home

The Colonial atmosphere created by furniture and wall-treatment is carried out in curtains echoing the framed sampler at the right.

THE vogue for Colonial atmosphere in the typical home of today calls for much care in the selection of furnishings if the simple charm of the early American fireside is to be achieved.

The choice of the major furnishings has been much simplified. A gate-leg table or a butterfly, a ladder chair or a Windsor, a secretary or a spinet desk may be selected from well-styled and authentic reproductions and will be quite at home with any treasured "antiques."

It rests with the accessories, however, to achieve the final touch. They must be consistent throughout, or the entire effect of the room is lost. Pewter vessels and blue Willow-ware on the shelves, hooked rugs, a banjo clock, a framed sampler will all help to achieve an interior of distinction.

Pictures must be carefully chosen. The shops are now showing excellent copies of the rare Currier and Ives prints and one of these, framed in dark wood or maple, may be hung to advantage. Silhouettes, in square or oval frames, are also good.

Curtains constitute an insistent problem of the Colonial home. Recently there have appeared new patterns in lace curtains designed to carry out the simple Colonial home atmosphere. Lurelle Guild, authority on early American antiques, is said to have created the designs from his own collection of old samplers. They are all in natural color suggestive of the real "unbleached" linens of old, and combine effectively with over-draperies of chintz, cretonne or toile. Chintz, however, is just a bit smarter, particularly in the new semi-glazed finish.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

CORN CROP IS REPORTED AS SMALLEST SINCE 1901

The 1930 crop of corn is the smallest to be harvested in the United States since 1901. The total crop is estimated at 2,094,481,000 bushels, according to a report issued on November 10 by the Board of Crop Estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The estimate for this year's production is 20 per cent less than the estimated production in 1929 and 22.4 per cent less than the average crop during the previous five years. Yields have improved, however, during the past month as a result of more favorable weather for maturing the crop, so that the present estimate is 47,765,000 bushels higher than the estimate made a month ago.

C. E. Stapp, J. Mell Martin, Billey Smith and W. M. Wyatt attended a Kiwanis divisional Conference in Selma Wednesday.

FOOD CONSUMPTION ADVANCES RAPIDLY

From 1889 to the five-year period 1922-27 all important foodstuffs, except cereals, registered advances in consumption, a survey by the department of commerce reveals. Per capita consumption of sugar rose 44 pounds, milk 150 pounds, vegetable oils 10 pounds, while eat showed practically no change.

"STAY OUT OF THE CITIES" IS TENNESSEE WARNING

"Stay out of the cities," is the warning issued by the University of Tennessee to farm laborers and tenants of the state. The advice is equally appropriate everywhere. The university statement, issued by Charles A. Keffer, director of the agricultural extension service, says:

The country is in the midst of a widespread business depression. Everywhere factories are shutting down and fewer and fewer jobs are in sight for working people. Times are hard. Cities and towns are overrun with unemployed and they are faced with a task that will tax their resources in providing for their needy during the coming winter. Every person or family moving from the country into these cities and towns will only add to the seriousness of the situation.

"In the cities, even in prosperous times, there is always a dependent, impoverished group, professional beggars, who accept help as a matter of course. But in the country in ordinary times, this element scarcely exists in the population. The very few families of this class are taken care of by the county.

Farmers Desperate

"This year things are different. Many self-respecting workers who earn a living for themselves and their families by working as farm laborers are out of employment. Indeed, as a result of the drought, not a few farm owners are in desperate straits. Such people cannot find work, because other farm owners have no money with which to pay them; work is harder to find in the towns than in the country, so that moving to towns cannot help them. They cannot beg.

"What is to be done? In every farming community there is work well worth the doing that does not demand immediate attention and is deferred in the hope of more prosperous times. Fences and farm buildings can be repaired, sloping lands that are in danger of erosion can be traced, wood-lots can be improved y converting the poorer trees into fire wood; pastures can be vastly improved by moving weeds and brush and roadsides can be cleared weeds.

Duty To Community

"And on many farms that are in need of such work, there is a store of unsold wheat and corn and potatoes. Every neighborhood numbers among its citizens men too proud to beg, who would gladly exchange work for food. Wheat and corn can be ground in the nearby mill, and thus made into food stuff. True, the mill may not be equipped to make the finest flour, but cracked wheat is a good cereal and wholewheat bread is wholesome.

"The farmer who has a store of wheat and corn has a duty to his community in seeking out his less fortunate neighbor and giving him work, if that neighbor will take his pay in food for his family. He will not only help the worker over a hard time, he will keep a supply of labor at hand, ready for the better times that are sure to come."

ALABAMA CROPS BRING 151,519,000 DOLLARS

Due to drouth and the lower prices of farm commodities, the aggregate value of crop production in Alabama in 1930 is about $55,000,000 short of the value of the 1929 crop, reports F. W. Gist, federal and state statistician, who said "the heaviest reduction is found in cotton, of which we produced more but which was worth nearly forty million dollars less."

"We are short about eight million bushels of corn, 400,000 bushels of oats, 1,400,000 bushels of sweet potatoes, and some truck crops," he said. "We grew more peanuts and cowpeas, more syrup, and more fruit and pecans but less satsumas. This crop was grown on about 300,000 more crops acres than the 1929 crop."

Total acreage for Alabama in 1930 was 8,561,000, with crops valued at $151,519,000. This compares with 8,277,000 acres in the same crops last year with a total value of $206,528,000.

SCALES TESTED TO ASSURE ACCURACY

During the past year 35,877 scales, weights, pumps, measures, packages, and samples were inspected, weighted or collected by weights and measures division of the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries, reports H. S. Holloway, chief of the division. This compares with 22,694 in 1928-29.

This year's work included the inspection of 10,749 general scales; 578 wagon and truck scales; 15,331 scale weights, 81 cotton poises; 3,959 gas an doil pumps; 5,179 measures; 6,043 packages weighed; 5,687 gasoline samples, and 2,675 kerosene samples collected. In addition the division re-sealed ten 50 pound weights and six 500 pound test weights used in testing wagon and truck scales.

"The purpose of the department doing this work is to insure fair and honest distribution of commodities," Mr. Holloway said. "This service protects both the producer and consumer."

Mr. Wallace Cox of Pike Roads was a visitor to Clanton one day this week.

Lesson for December 28

REVIEW: THE PATTERN OF CHRISTIAN LIVING

GOLDEN TEXT—Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How Jesus Wants Us to Live.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Some Examples of Christian Living.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Lessons from the Lives of Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Fellowship with Christ.

For senior and adult classes two good methods of review may be used: The first may be designated character study of the principal persons mentioned in the lessons of the quarter; namely, Zacharias and Elisabeth, Mary, Simeon and Anna, Peter, Thomas, Zacchaeus, Stephen, Saul, and Timothy. In using this method assignment should be made the week before. The second method may be designated the summary method in which the salient facts should be noted followed with the leading teaching. In this case also, assignment should be made a week ahead.

Lesson for October 5.

The parents of John the Baptist were noted for their godliness. Zacharias means "Jehovah hath remembered." Elisabeth means "covenant maker." Every indication is that this pious couple wrought together for God. John the Baptist was a great man. Much can be expected of a child born of such parents and brought up in such a home.

Lesson for October 12.

God chose Mary to receive the greatest honor ever conferred upon a human being. To fill this place of honor meant exposure to suspicion as well as much suffering and hardship.

Lesson for October 19.

The ability of Simeon and Anna to discern the Messiah was due to a special revelation of the indwelling Holy Spirit, not merely because they were pure in heart. The grace which they possessed is available to every believer.

Lesson for October 26.

The believer experiences a vital conflict going on within. This conflict is due to the fact that he was once born of the flesh and afterward born of the Spirit. Victory over the flesh is to be obtained through the power of the indwelling Holy Spirit.

Lesson for November 2.

Peter through over-weaning confidence fell, even denying his Lord. The occasion of his denial was the sifting to which Satan subjected him. Through the prayer of Jesus Christ he was restored.

Lesson for November 9.

Thomas is everywhere presented in the Scriptures as of a skeptical mind, but he was an honest doubter. The Lord is pleased to be put to the test. No honest skeptic has ever remained in darkness.

Lesson for November 16.

The centurion's faith in Christ brought healing to a very dear servant. Genuine faith links man with Omnipotence.

Lesson for November 23.

A noble young ruler failed to get eternal life because his heart rested on earthly riches. Christ demands man's whole heart.

Lesson for November 30.

Zacchaeus did not allow difficulties to keep him from seeing the Lord. The sight of the Lord moved him to repentance. This is always true. He proved the genuineness of his repentance by making restitution.

Lesson for December 7.

Stephen, while called to minister in the temporalities of the church, witnessed of Christ in the energy of the Holy Spirit. He sealed his testimony with his blood. To those who are faithful unto death a crown of life shall be given.

Lesson for December 14.

The sight of Jesus Christ transformed Saul, the savage persecutor, into a most ardent witness for Christ.

Lesson for December 21.

Through the faith of a godly mother and grandmother, Timothy was nurtured for God. Careful home training is rewarded with pious children.

In Communion With God

As long as we dare to think that the secular life must be a separate existence from the spiritual, that earthly engagements cannot be fulfilled in uninterrupted communion with God, just so long are we living outside the purposes of God, contradicting the majesty of our true nature, and denying the efficacy of the gospel of the Lord Jesus.—Prebendary H. W. Webb-Peploe.

The Faith in God's Elect

Neither fear, neither danger, neither yet doubting, nor backsliding can utterly destroy and quench the faith of God's elect, but that always there remaineth with them some root and spark of faith, howbeit in their anguish they neither feel nor can discern the same.—John Knox.

Victory

Victory over sleep in the morning-watch may mean victory all day.—Lee.

POULTRY

IT ALWAYS PAYS TO PRODUCE QUALITY EGGS

Alabama poultrymen as a whole are familiar with the requirements for economical production, but at present the grades and market class of eggs are not well known by the producer. The consuming public is anxious to secure the best and is willing to pay in accordance, yet many producers stick to the old idea that an egg is anything with a shell around it and pay little attention to the consuming public. Consequently, many eggs that are no good are sold to consumers and the consumption thereby curtailed. This, of course, will jeopardize those who are trying to establish a reputation by marketing good eggs.

In most of our larger markets, or where special trade has been developed, eggs are sold by grade and both the distributor and consumer know just what specifications are necessary for the different egg classes.

The producers, in the majority of cases, knows nothing of egg grades, and many times cares less, and here is what happens: the distributor buys the poultryman's eggs, sorts them into different market classes, and probably discards many that are unfit for consumption, paying the poultryman a price that will permit him to derive a profit. This man is often unjustly criticised by the producer even though he is rendering a service. The distributor cannot make good eggs out of the bad ones he receives.

1. Feed hens properly on a well balanced ration.
2. Produce infertile eggs (the losses through the marketing of fertile eggs alone cost Alabama producers $15,000 a year).
3. Keep large, roomy nests with clean nesting material.

DAIRYING

WHEN THE CALF BECOMES A "VEALER"

Many Classifications Are Now Used In Judging the Meat of Young Calves

To sell, or not to sell, that is the question. If Shakespeare had been a dairyman he might have soliloquided in some such fashion when the question of what to do with his new born calves came up.

The owner of pure-bred stock has the problem pretty well solved. He has a market for all the calves he does not want to keep. But the owner of the average dairy herd must dispose of his excess stock. The market for veal is a big one in this country. Nearly one billion pounds of dressed veal are produced every year, which is quite an industry in itself.

To the average customer of a butcher shop veal is calf meat. But when you get into the subject you find out differently. There are different grades of calves and many classifications of calf meat. Government officials found that out a few years ago when they attempted to call the offspring of a cow under one year of age a calf. Technically they were correct, of course. Even today in some sections of the country animals under one year are sold as calves at so much a head.

Go into stockyards and you will hear buyers discussing vealers, veal calves, range calves, dairy calves, etc. In the dressed meat coolers of the packing plants you will again find many different names for the carcasses hanging there. Although to the inexperienced one they may all appear to be just veal. There is a split veal, grass veal, calf carcasses and others.

First, let us define our terms and then we will discuss the business side of calf raising. The Department of Agriculture has set up two classifications. The "vealer" is a young calf which in most instances has been fed on whole milk and may be anywhere from three weeks old to three months. The carcass of such a calf is very light, almost white in fact. The bones are soft and red. There is very little fat and the lean meat is fine and smooth grained. It is called "veal" by the government. The term "calf" is applied to animals around six months of age which have the effects of age and exercise. The meat from the "calf" is darker, more like the red of beef, the bones are hard and white and the fat more abundant . It is called "calf carcass." In other words a "vealer" is a young milk-fed calf and a "calf" is a slightly older animal that has been to pasture and has been raised on other foods in combination with milk.

Now the question of whether you should sell your surplus calves at an early age is an economic one and depends entirely upon conditions, the season of the year, the markets, and other factors. There is one simple rule you can always depend upon. When the cost of milk is low and the price of veal is high, raise veal. When the conditions are reversed, that is when milk is valuable and the market is off on veal, better keep the calves for beef or milk.

In raising calves for veal on a whole-milk diet it takes about 10 pounds of milk for each 1 pound of veal. Calves weigh around 90 to 100 pounds at birth. The market has the best demand for vealers that weigh from 150 to 175 pounds. It is very easy to figure then about what it will cost to get the calf ready for market. A 100-pound calf that is sold as a vealer when it reaches 150 pounds will require 500 pounds of milk. It may take as much as 750 to 1,000 pounds of milk before the vealer is sold. These are things to be taken into consideration when the calf is born.

I might add that 100 pounds is a pretty good weight at birth. Brown Swiss and Holsteins are the largest at birth and will average from 90 to 100 pounds. The Jerseys are the smallest and will average 55 to 60 pounds for both sexes. Male calves will average heavier than the females, and the first and second calves are lighter than those which follow when the mother is in the prime of life.

I would also like to make it clear that the figures I have given both as to the age and weight of vealers and calves are not fixed. The things that will determine whether you are selling veal or calf carcass is the condition of the meat itself.

CHEVROLET OCCUPIES POSITION OF HONOR

When the doors open next Saturday on the 31st National Automobile Show at Grand Central Palace, New York, the Chevrolet Motor Company will occupy the position of honor on the show floor for the fourth consecutive year.

Each year the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce awards first place at the national automobile shows to that member company doing the largest volume of business during the previous twelve months.

The award is one much coveted within the industry, for in addition to the distinction it conveys it also carries with it the right to first choice of exhibition space at the national automobile shows at New York and Chicago.

Back in the days of the four cylinder Chevrolet this honor first fell to the company. Since that time the margin between the leader and the runner-up has measurably widened, even since the change-over from a four to a six.

TALLADEGA STATE PARK

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 22.—The first State Park legally established in Alabama was recently set aside by Governor Graves under the Act of September 6, 1927. The tract is located on the banks of the Coosa River in the southwestern part of Talladega County. It possesses marked science values, and at the same time is readily accessible to foresters. The area included is four hundred twenty one acres.

It is situated about a mile east of Owen's ferry on the bend of the river south of Bullock's Islands.

The State Parks movement in Alabama has been gathering strength for several years. No tangible results have been attained, however, until the passage of the state land act by the Legislature which placed the promotion and jurisdiction of State parks under the Commission of Forestry. The management of natural and woodland park areas is very similar to that exercised over woodlands devoted to forestral purposes, differing only in final utilization.

The area set aside for the Talladega State park will be kept as far as practicable in wild and natural condition. Expenditures toward its improvment will be quite limited subject to funds that may be made available by Legislative action or by private contributions.

SAVE YOUR COUPONS FOR ORPHANAGE AT TROY, ALA.

One of Alabama's best known institutions is practicing thrift in a manner that is as unusual as it is interesting. Wishing to acquire equipment that has been needed for a long time, this institution is collecting Octagon soap coupons, thus making it possible for all those interested in the welfare of such a worthy cause to help without inconvenience other than sending to this institution the coupons from their soap.

The Baptist Orphanage at Troy, is asking friends to send in coupons so that it may more quickly acquire a much needed refrigerator. Coupons sent to this institution will be furthering a cause worthy of every Alabamian's support. The Union-Banner is only too glad to indorse such a worthy thrift plan and urges all those who have been throwing away wrappers from their Octagon soap to save them and mail them to the above entioned institution. Here is an example of thrift that bespeaks careful and economical management.

During the present business depression when housewives are refraining from the purchase of many things they really need, no better and simpler plan could be employed than to save Octagon coupons for household articles. Nearly every conceivable article may be "purchased" in this manner, and without need for change in the family budget.

FIRST OF POSTAL MATCH SERIES BEGINS

Washington, D. C.—Approximately 500 rifle, pistol and revolver shooters, representing 35 states, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii and Canada, are competing in the first of a series of four monthly indoor postal matches conducted annually by the National Rifle Association, Washington.

The competitors will shoot their targets on their own ranges and forward them for official scoring to the rifle association. The targets shot in the first of the series must be in the hands of L. Q. Bradley, manager of the competition division of the association, before January 1. They will be checked by Ollie Shriver, official scorer of the organization, and there results announced early in January.

The second of the series will be held during January, the third, during February, and the fourth and last, during March. Gold, silver and bronze medals, aggregating $5,000 in value, will be awarded the high scorers. The postal matches are held each year by the National Rifle Association to give its members an opportunity to shoot in competition without leaving their own ranges.

The entry list for the matches now in progress indicates the continued growth of interest in target shooting. The number of entrants for the next three matches is expected to increase considerably, reaching the highest mark in the last of the series.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

By Dan Smith

Troop Meeting Friday, December 19

In order to have Mr. Seigwald, scout executive, with us at a troop meetings, the meeting was held Friday night instead of Thursday night.

Lamar Calloway, a former boy scout himself, was also present at this meeting. While waiting for Mr. Seigwald to arrive, Mr. Calloway drilled us on a few requirements of the second class test. The interest shown by the scouts proved their eagerness to advance from tenderfoot class to second class ranks. Mr. Calloway drilled us on using the deaf and dumb sign language in talking. This was done by letting one scout talk with another scout. After this he asked us questions about the compass and had us to say the sixteen principle points of the compass. He also drilled Joe Hall Johnson and Wesley Danforth on the proper use of the knife and hatchet. About this time Mr. Seigwald arrived on the spot, bringing with him a Mr. Thomas, who had a contraption which looked strange to the scouts when they first saw it, but after Mr. Thomas had told them that it was used to practice tieing knots, we rested more easily.

Mr. Thomas announced that there would be a contest in tieing knots between the two patrols. Here the fun began. This contraption that Mr. Thomas brought with him was put down a hundred yards from a line. This line was the starting line. After the rules and directions were told to the two patrols, the Wolf and the Kangaroo, the members were lined up and each fellow was told to tie a certain knot. The idea was to run from the starting line to where this contraption was, tie the knot assigned to you, run back and touch teammates hand, who did the same as you.

After each member of the Wolf patrol had tied his knot the Kangaroos lined up and began their knot tieing. The two patrols were timed and Mr. Seigwald said that the time at the Jambow was one minute. When the two patrols had finished the time was checked and the winning patrol was announced, which of course was the Wolf patrol, whose time was three minutes and ten seconds. It seems that the one minute record made at the Jambow is in a dangerous position.

After this contest out first court of honor was held, a thing to be long remembered by this troop. The two patrol leaders, Joe Moore and Dan Smith, were the first to appear before the court. Mr. Seigwald asked us questions on first aid and the proper use of the knife and hatchet, then we were drilled in tying bandages.

We also played a game called boxing the compass, the boy scouts present formed a ring and each fellow represented one of the 16 principle points of the compass, then Mr. Seigwald would tell us to move four places to the hight and then he would see if each fellow was in his right position.

After this the troop was dismissed by repeating the scout oath

Monday morning between the hours of ten and one o'clock a group of boy scouts assembled at Lamar Calloway's home to pass the fifth requirement of the second class test, which to go one mile in 12 minutes at scout's pace, which is 50 (or 25) paces running and 50 (or 25) paces walking. Doing this alternately, the following scouts pased this requirement:

Dan Smith, Phillip Nelson, Hal Broadhead, Lawrence Gerald, Jr., John Thomas Marlor, Donald Poe, Joe Moore, Arnold Poe, Wesley Danforth, Grady Reynolds, Morgan Reynolds.

PAPER OUT EARLY AGAIN NEXT WEEK

Next Thursday will be another holiday—the first of the New Year. No mail carriers will go their rounds on that day. Therefore your Union-Banner will come to you a day early, Wednesday, December 31st, 1930.

Jos. E. Cobb of Jemison was in Clanton Tuesday. Mr. Cobb will become County Commissioner next month, succeeding to the place held by John Bean for the past four years.

UNITY MINUTES WIN ANOTHER PRIZE

Mr. Grady Harris, clerk of the Unity Baptist Association, came around to the Union-Banner office last Saturday, wearing a big broad Christmas smile on his face, and bearing a dandy Christmas package under his wing.

When he had expressed himself with a few greetings, compliments and explanations, he placed the package on the desk, and the little story, briefly told is this:

Again this year Mr. Harris, as the Clerk of the Unity Association, won second prize among all the Baptist Associations of Alabama, for the minutes which were printed for them by The Union-Banner. It will be remembered that Mr. Harris was awarded first prize last year.

To show his appreciation for the work of the printers in getting out his Minutes, Mr. Harris brought the Christmas package, which this time was a nice box of candy.

All of us thank you Mr. Harris. We are glad that you were able to win a prize again with our work.

WILL SING AT POPLAR SPRINGS

The Central Singing Society will meet at Poplar Springs next Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Everybody come.

The fifteenth session of the society was held last Sunday afternoon at Refuge; it is interesting to note that not a single afternoon has been missed since the society was organized the first Sunday in September. The weather has been somewhat disagreeable part of the time, but there have been plenty of stand-bys to carry on even under unfavorable conditions. Let's stay with it, folks, for there is no better way of spending Sunday afternoon than singing the good old hymns.

"WHO CAN'T AND WHO CAN BE SAVED" SUBJECT SUNDAY

Rev. J. Robert Bean will fill his regular appointment at Friendship next Sunday and Sunday night. At 11 o'clock his subject will be "Who Can't and Who Can be Saved." At 6:30 in the evening the pastor will preach from the subject: "The Day of the Lord."

Rev. Bean writes that he is well pleased with the attendance at both services last fourth Sunday, and extends an invitation to all to come out and hear him. Christmas will be over by Sunday, so let everybody come to preaching. Bro. Bean says: "If I preach the Gospel, tell everybody; if I don't, tell me."

COUNTY AGENTS ARE TO MEET AT AUBURN

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 22.—For a special study of the present agricultural situation and to plan their work for the winter and spring the county demonstration agents of Alabama will spend December 29 and 30 in a special meeting at Auburn. It was called by Director L. N. Duncan and District Agents J. T. High, Emmett Sizemore and R. G. Arnold.

To present data concerning the agricultural situation and outlook economists from the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington will come to Auburn for the meeting. J. D. Pope, economist for the experiment station, Auburn, will collaborate with them.

The data presented will include facts about cotton and other cash crops as well as feed crops and also livestock. In this way the county agents will be equipped with the very latest and also authentic information which they will use in making recommendations to farmers about planting crops or changes in livestock production during the year.

Returning from Auburn the county agents will call meetings of farmers, bankers, and merchants and obtain their cooperation in making recommendations for their respective counties.

In calling the meeting Director Duncan pointed out that everyone is concerned with what farmers do this year, and that the Extension Service workers are working "over time" to render the maximum service.

It is hoped that every pastor in the county will tell his congregations of the need of the county.

FUTURE CHRISTMASES Will Be SAFE

....as long as railroad securities are valuable!

For decades, the funds of widows and orphans, insurance companies, schools and colleges, hospitals, asylums, and many other public institutions, have been largely invested in railroad securities. When the railroads are able to operate profitably and earn a fair return on this capital and the interest is paid regularly, these families and institutions are safe. Let the value of such holdings seriously depreciate, however, and the income of thousands will be greatly impaired or entirely swept away.

The railroads have endeavored in every way possible to lower costs and maintain a reasonable rate of return, in the face of constantly falling freight and passenger revenue, aggravated by added tax burdens. The great rail transportation systems are among the most efficiently operated businesses in the world. Yet, during the period of 1920 to 1930, the rate of return on railroad property investment, for example, has averaged less than 4%!

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

The railroads are striving earnestly to hold their service to the present high standard, to provide steady employment for thousands of workers, to help carry passengers safely and surely, and the merchandise on which other forms of business depend, and to assure an income for the individuals and institutions who have entrusted their money to them. In this endeavor, the railroads deserve your cooperation and patronage. They are making a brave fight—against odds.

BEAN—PETERSON MARRIGE

An interesting wedding of the Christmas season was that of Miss Jewell Bean, lovely daughter of Mrs. R. H. Bean, and Mr. Russel C. Petterson, which was solemnized Saturday, December 20 at seven o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Meade, sister of the bride, in Thorsby, Alabama.

Rev. Each, pastor of the Congregational Church of Thorsby, read the ring ceremony in the presence of only close friends and relatives.

Preceding the ceremony, a program of love songs was given by Mr. Carl Chambers, accompanied by Mrs. Chambers, who later played the wedding march.

The home was beautifully decorated with improvised altar of holly, real holly berries and cedars, making a lovely background through which electric lights played.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Pauline Bean, who acted as maid of honor. She wore blue chiffon georgette with a deep bertha collar and a long circular skirt, and carried an arm bouquet of carnations.

Mr. Elbert Hall, friend of the groom, served as best man.

The bride's brother-in-law, Clyde Meade, gave her in marriage.

The bride was beautiful in unusual blue dress made of georgette and fashioned along the lines of the new silhouette with the long flared skirt and accessories to match. She carried an arm bouquet of carnations.

Little Helen Louise Meade and Marion Joyce Howard held the tulle. They were very cute in their little dresses to match the decorations.

After the ceremony there was an informal reception. The bride's table was centered with a large wedding cake in green and white with a little bride and groom on it. Miss Dessie Robinson served punch.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Self of Birmingham, Mrs. Rolland Miskell of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Meade of Calera. During the reception the young couple slipped off on a short wedding trip.

They will be at home for the present with the bride's mother, Mrs. R. H. Bean. Their friends wish them a happy life forever and ever.

FIRE AT HOME OF LONZ PARRISH

As Rudolph Moates came into town Sunday morning about four o'clock, he discovered a fire at the home of Lonz Parrish. The alarm was given, and after some difficulty the fire department got into action and succeeded in putting out the fire before it had done very much damage.

Firemen who got to the station house first report that a peg had been driven into the keyhole of the lock on the station house door, and they were delayed somewhat in gaining entrance to the place.

Mr. and Mrs. Parrish were not at home. They had been in Selma for a couple of days. The doors of the house were fastened, and the firemen had to force their entrance to get at the fire.

The blaze was raging in the kitchen of the home, and the damage was confined to that part of the house.

EMERGENCY CAMPAIGN FOR ATHENS COLLEGE

Five thousand dollars has already been guaranteed by the citizens of Athens toward the Emergency Campaign being carried on by Athens College, and friends in Birmingham are putting up another $5,000 it was stated by Dr. E. R. Naylor, president of Athens College, in a recent interview.

The Board of Trustees voted to carry on the campaign during the winter months for the purpose of raising $50,000 to liquidate some outstanding bonds issued by the college. The drive is to culminate on March 1, when these bonds fall due. Presiding elders, preachers, and all members of the North Alabama Conference are standing back of the campaign. Pledges are coming in easily and if the drive continues as satisfactorily as it has started, it should be brought to a successful close at an early date.

CONCORD — BILLINGSLEY

Our pastor, Rev. Larce Headley, filled his appointment Sunday and delivered a wonderful message, both Sunday and Sunday night.

Sunday morning he talked from Mark 8: 36-37. "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" or, "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

Sunday night he had as a subject "The love of God." The service was well attended both Sunday and Sunday night, and the Christian Endeavor program was very commendable.

CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.
M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.
